A Thrilling Story of CENTURY ONE OF CHURCH HISTORY

HERE is a new story of "Mormonism," told with a completeness and charm that will thrill Latter-day Saints with a pride of achievement and at the same time win the admiration of the critic, be he friend or foe. In a COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH, B. H. Roberts has done a masterful piece of research and has set down the record of Century One—1830 to 1930—in a brilliant appraisal of momentous events. The reader with a sentimental interest will be fascinated with this narrative of truth stranger than fiction; the reader who approaches the new work with the critical vision of the historian will find it fair in statement, authentic in fact, copious in detail and sound in judgment.

A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH was written by Elder Roberts at the instance of the First Presidency of the Church, with a commission to make it exhaustively complete, from the remotest beginnings to the close of the Centennial Conference of April 6, 1930. The final volume ends with an account of the Conference itself, making the history technically inclusive of all that happened in Century One of the organized existence of the Church. Thus it is a fitting commemoration of one hundred years of struggle and achievement.

This monumental work is not to be confused with any former history, journal or chronicle. Though its nucleus is the history of "Mormonism" published a few years ago in AMERICAN, running serially for six years through that magazine, yet this History is NEW—new in its wealth of material, new in method of treatment and new in its physical representation of the book maker's art.

One Hundredth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

The One Hundredth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, April 6, 7, 8 and 9, 1930. This being the centennial anniversary of the organization of the Church, and special and appropriate services having been arranged for the celebration of this notable occasion, (including the presentation of the Pageant, "The Message of the Ages") the number of saints who had come to the city from all parts of the Church for the purpose of attending these services was far greater than at any previous conference.

The proceedings of all of the sessions of the General Conference were broadcast by radio over Station KSL of Salt Lake City.

The weather was ideal during the entire Conference.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH PRESENT

Of the First Presidency: Heber J. Grant, Anthony W. Ivins and Charles W. Nibley.

Of the Council of the Twelve: Rudger Clawson, *, George Albert Smith, George F. Richards, Orson F. Whitney, David O. McKay, Joseph Fielding Smith, James E. Talmage, Stephen L. Richards, Richard R. Lyman, and Melvin J. Ballard, †.

Presiding Patriarch: Hyrum G. Smith.

Of the First Council of Seventy: Brigham H. Roberts, J. Golden Kimball, Rulon S. Wells, Joseph W. McMurrin, Charles H. Hart, Levi Edgar Young, and Rey L. Pratt.

Of the Presiding Bishopric: Sylvester Q. Cannon, David A. Smith and John Wells.

OFFICERS AND OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Church Historian and Recorder: Joseph Fielding Smith, and the following assistants: Andrew Jensen, Brigham H. Roberts, ‡, and Junius F. Wells.

Presidents of stakes and their counselors were unusually well represented from all the stakes of Zion.

Patriarchs, Bishops of Wards and their counselors, and a very large number of high priests, seventies, and elders, from all parts of the Church. Members of the Board of Education, and general, stake, ward and mission officers of the auxiliary organizations.

*Reed Smoot was absent, in Washington, D. C.

†John A. Widtsoe was absent, presiding over the European Mission.

‡A. William Lund was absent, presiding over the British Mission.

Mission Presidents: James H. Moyle, Eastern States; Noah S. Pond, Northern States; Arthur Welling, North Central States; Samuel O. Bennion, Central States; Miles L. Jones, East Central States; Charles A. Callis, Southern States; Elias S. Woodruff, Western States; Joseph W. McMurrin, California; William R. Sloan, Northwestern States; Charles H. Hart, Canada; Rey L. Pratt, Mexico; Levi Edgar Young, Temple Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

In accordance with instructions previously issued by the First Presidency of the Church, the following program was carried out in all the wards and branches of the Church, commencing at 10:00 a. m., Sunday, April 6th, except in such wards and branches where arrangements had been made for the people to assemble in their local chapels and listen, by means of radio equipment, to the services as they were broadcast from the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City:

"We thank thee, O God, for a prophet." (By choir and congregation.)

Opening prayer.

"An angel from on high." (Duet and chorus.)

Address of the First Presidency. (A copy of this address had been sent in advance to each ward and branch in the Church, and was read by one of the elders. This same message was read by President Grant at the meeting in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, at this same hour.)

"The Spirit of God like a fire is burning." (By choir and congregation.)

One or two brief addresses.

Sustaining the General Authorities of the Church.

Hosanna Shout. (In unison by the congregation.)

"Praise to the man who communed with Jehovah." (By choir and congregation.)

Benediction.

The first session of the Conference was held at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, April 6th, 1930.

The attendance at the meeting in the Tabernacle was limited largely to officers of priesthood quorums: the Aaronic priesthood members being seated in one group, and the Melchizedek priesthood being divided into groups of high priests, seventies, and elders. The building was crowded to capacity, every seat being taken, and the aisles and doorways and every other available space occupied.

For the benefit of those who could not be accommodated in the Tabernacle, loud speakers were installed in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall and on the Tabernacle grounds.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of Prof. Anthony C. Lund, furnished the music for this session of the Conference.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet."

Elder Hyrum G. Smith, the Presiding Patriarch of the Church, offered the invocation.

"An angel from on high" was sung by Cyril Martin and Ida Hepworth, the choir and congregation joining in the chorus.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

My heart is full of gratitude beyond my power to express as I look upon this wonderful audience of the priesthood of the living God, together with officers of our organizations, assembled here in conference in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

I am about to read to you an address by the First Presidency of the Church, copies of which have been sent to all wards, stakes and missions in all countries where we have organizations of the Church. At this hour all over the world this message will be read to our people.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS TO OUR BELOVED BRETHREN AND SISTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD:

On this, the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Church, we salute you, and pray that the blessing of God our Father, and the grace and love of Jesus Christ, our Lord, may abide with you forever.

We preface our message to you by reference to the following scripture:

"Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God. I am the life and the light of the world. I am the light which shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not."

As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so was the Son of God lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him shall not perish, but have eternal life.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, through its presidency, reaffirms the truths set forth in the above scripture, and calls upon its members in all parts of the world to rededicate their lives to the service of the Master and the establishment of his kingdom upon earth.

From the beginning of time, as we count it, to the present, God our Father has, at divers times, both by his own voice and the voice of his inspired prophets, declared that he would send to earth his only begotten Son, that through him, by means of the resurrection, of which our Lord was the first fruits, mankind might be redeemed from the penalty of death, to which all flesh is heir and by obedience to the law of righteous living, which he taught and exemplified in his life, be cleansed from personal sin and made heirs to the Kingdom of Heaven.

In songs of praise the Psalmist declared his coming. In ecstasy the prophet Isaiah looked forward to the day when he would manifest himself among men, and, by foreknowledge which came from the Father, announced the details of his death and the dire consequences of his crucifixion.

The Redeemer himself declared, notwithstanding the apparent failure of his mission and ministry as it applied to the generation to which he brought the message of salvation, that at a period of time then in the remote future, a period designated as the latter-days, the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, he would again reveal himself, would re-establish his Church upon earth, and come to reign in triumph and majesty over his people.

In humility, and with full consciousness of the responsibility involved, we bear witness to the people of the world that with the appearance of the Father and the Son to the Prophet Joseph Smith, in the early spring of 1820, the greatest gospel dispensation of all time was ushered in, a dispensation of light, radiating from the presence of God, illuminating the minds of men, increasing intelligence and knowledge, which is the glory of God, and by the application of which the past one hundred years have been made the Miracle Century of the ages.

The increase of scientific knowledge, invention, industrial development; the harnessing of the forces of the universe and adapting them to the comfort and convenience of man, have reached a degree of perfection not dreamed of by people who lived when the past century was ushered in.

In 1830 Abraham Lincoln attained his majority. He was still pursuing his studies by the light of a tallow dip, or pine knot, because there was nothing better to be had; and it was under these circumstances that he prepared himself to become the foremost citizen of his country, thirty years later.

Since that time our system of education has undergone a miraculous change. The log or little brick school-house of a century ago has been supplanted by temples of learning, in which our children enjoy conveniences and comforts that the wealth of kingdoms could not, at that time, have provided. They have maps of the world before them, books treating all known subjects, teachers better informed upon the subjects taught, heat provided; and when they require light they touch a button and the electric current does the rest.

Agriculture, the foundation upon which the very existence of the human race is builded, was still in a primitive condition. Men harvested with a scythe or sickle the grain which grew in their fields, and threshed it with a flail.

A man now sits upon a machine, and at one operation, reaps, threshes and sacks ten acres of grain, with less fatigue than he formerly harvested one.

Women carded and spun the wool and wove the cloth with which they and their children were clothed.

The cards, spinning wheel, and loom have passed. They are now to be seen only as heirlooms or sacredly cherished souvenirs.

Possibly no other human agency has greater influence upon civilization and the development of the people of the world than that which provides quick and easy transportation of people and things from place to place. By it individuals, communities, and nations come to know each other better, exchange of commodities is made possible, and the commerce of the world is maintained.

For this purpose roads made by men thread the world. We travel over them now on bands of steel, in luxurious motor cars, in floating palaces, or through the air.

Only yesterday these roads were mere trails, blazed by fearless, intrepid men, through unknown forests, over snow-clad mountains, across trackless deserts or uncharted seas.

In fulfilment of the words uttered by inspired prophets, thousands of years ago, the wooden boats in which we sailed the seas at the beginning of the past century have been supplanted by floating palaces of steel, in which we ride the waves or navigate the ocean's depths in safety.

For silver the Lord has given us gold, which has become the basis of exchange throughout the civilized world; while iron takes the place of wood and stone in construction.

By the application of scientific methods, which have been revealed during the past century, the profession of medicine and surgery has brought to the people of the world relief from the most dreaded diseases, which devastated communities and at times threatened the very existence of mankind.

Undoubtedly the greatest miracle of the century is the accomplishment by which the human voice, with the personality of the speaker, may be indefinitely preserved and reproduced with every detail of originality.

Whether uttered in the frozen arctics, or from the jungles of the tropics, without visible means of conduct, the human voice instantly circles the earth, thus overcoming the hitherto insurmountable barrier of both time and space.

Contemplating these accomplishments of the past century, to which but brief reference has been made, we are led to exclaim:

Great and marvelous are thy ways, O Lord
From eternity to eternity Thou art the same!
Thy purposes fail not, neither are there any who can stay Thy hand!

THE CHURCH

The Annunciation. As the glory of the Lord shone round about shepherds, who kept watch over their flocks by night upon the hills of Judea, and the angel of the Lord announced to them that there had been born that day, in the city of David, a Savior, who was Christ the Lord, the light of the Christian Dispensation burst forth upon the world.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

The heavens were illuminated by the glory of the Lord, the heavenly host shouted hosannas as the Babe of Bethlehem, the Son of God, the Only Begotten of the Father in the flesh, he who was to become the Savior of mankind, was born into the world.

From the time of his birth to the day of his crucifixion, Satan, that old serpent, the devil, the enemy of all that is good, he who by his wiles and deception tempted our first parents and brought death into the world, sought the destruction of our Lord.

Kings persecuted him, because they knew and feared his power. The learned and wealthy spurned him, because of his humble birth; while the ignorant, not understanding, left him in derision.

The personal ministry of Jesus was of short duration. But thirty-three years elapsed from the time of his birth to the day of his crucifixion, and but a small portion of this time was devoted to his ministry. From the time of the delivery of his great sermon on the Mount, but three years elapsed until his death.

During the brief period of his ministry he effected the organization of his Church, selected twelve apostles, upon whom, with Peter at their head, he conferred the keys of the priesthood, and to whom he made plain the organization of his Church and the doctrines of his Gospel, by obedience to which mankind may be redeemed and brought back into the presence of God. This accomplished, he declared his mortal mission completed, and went to his death with the sublime prayer upon his lips that his Father would pardon those who were responsible for his crucifixion. In their ignorance they knew not what they had done.

THE FIRST CENTURY OF THE PRIMITIVE CHURCH

During the first century of the Christian Era, Octavius, Caligula, Nero, Vespasian and his son Titus, all of whom were bitter persecutors of the Church, occupied the throne of Rome.

Pagan Rome had become the mistress of the world. From the time of the crucifixion of Jesus, persecution of the Christians had been merciless and wicked beyond expression. During the reign of Caligula and Nero, who were more brute than human, Christian men were slain without mercy, while their wives and daughters were carried away to Rome, to be sold to the highest bidder, or distributed to a depraved soldiery.

Men, women, and children were cast into the great amphitheater at Rome, to be torn by wild beasts or fight for their lives, for the entertainment of these inhuman monsters. Christians, their bodies covered with combustibles, were made to stand upon the walls, to be burned, in order that light might be provided for the spectacle below.

To deprive Christians of life was not sufficient. Every cruel means of torture that the human mind could suggest, which might add to the suffering of the victim, was applied.

The falling away which had been predicted by the prophets had come. The man of sin, the son of perdition, was revealed, who opposes and exalts himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. (2nd Thessalonians 2:3-4).

Thus centuries passed, centuries during which darkness covered the earth and gross darkness the minds of the people, centuries during which Satan, in an orgy of Pagan idolatry, ruled the world.

A NEW GOSPEL DISPENSATION

The opening of a new gospel dispensation was not a thing of chance. Jesus Christ, through his messenger, had declared to John while he was upon the isle of Patmos, that an angel would come flying through the midst of the heavens, having the everlasting Gospel to preach to them that dwell upon the earth, calling them back to the worship of God who is the Maker of the heavens and the earth, the sea and the fountains of water. The Redeemer himself had declared that before the time of his glorious appearance, to assume his rightful place among his people, the Gospel of his kingdom should be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, before the coming of the end.

As the time of the restoration of the Gospel was clearly indicated, so was the gathering place of those who would accept the truth definitely declared. The prophet Isaiah had said that it should come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house would be established in the top of the mountains, and be exalted above the hills, and that people from all nations would flow unto it. Many people, he declared, would go and say: "Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob." For what purpose? That they might be taught the way of the Lord, and learn to walk in his paths.

At the time of the calling of Abraham, the Lord entered into covenants with him and his posterity, in which he promised that Palestine should be theirs for an everlasting heritage. This promise was repeated to Isaac, and confirmed upon the head of Jacob.

Prior to his death our father Jacob called his twelve sons to him, blessed them, and defined the future of their posterity, adding little to that which had before been promised, until he laid his hands upon the head of Joseph and not only conferred upon him the blessing and heritage of his fathers, but also declared that his heritage prevailed above that of his progenitors, unto the utmost bounds of the Everlasting Hills, to a land choice above all other lands, a land rich in the blessings of the earth, of the heavens above, and the sea beneath.

Upon Ephraim, the younger of the two sons born to Joseph during his sojourn in Egypt, he sealed the heirship to the blessings and promises conferred upon his father.

While Satan held the world in spiritual darkness, by means of priestcraft and idolatry, he shackled the masses with the chains of kingcraft, and thus held the world in both spiritual and civil bondage.

As the time of the end drew nearer, God's Spirit descended upon men, impelling them to break the shackles of idolatry and priestcraft with which they were bound.

When John Wycliffe, John Huss, and William Tyndale, (all of whom suffered martyrdom for their faith) Martin Luther and others, gave the Holy Scriptures to the people of the world, and in the strength of Israel's God declared the truth, the beginning of the end had come.

When the people of Great Britain wrung from King John the Magna Charta, when Oliver Cromwell later cut off the head of King Charles the First, and the Covenanters of Scotland took up arms against the then dominant church, the morning star of hope arose, heralding the sunshine of a brighter day.

The coming of Columbus to America had been foretold centuries before he sailed from the port of Palos, in Spain. The Spirit of the Lord was upon him, was his guide and protector in his great adventure, and led him to the shores of a new world.

It was not by chance that the Puritans left their native land and sailed away to the shores of New England, and that others followed later. They were the advance guard of the army of the Lord, predestined to establish the God-given system of government under which we live, and to make of America, which is the land of Joseph, the gathering place of Ephraim, an asylum for the oppressed of all nations, and prepare the way for the restoration of the Gospel of Christ and the reestablishment of his Church upon earth. It was under these circumstances and others of which the Lord was the author, that the stage was set for the raising of the curtain upon the opening scene of the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times.

As the Christian Dispensation was ushered in, the glory of the Lord shone round about the shepherds who kept watch over their flocks by night upon the hills of Judea, while the voice of the angel of the Lord declared the Babe of Bethlehem to be the Savior of the world.

So also the glory of the Lord overshadowed Joseph Smith, and God himself, in the glory and majesty of his person, with his Only Begotten Son, Jehovah, revealed himself in vision, and with his own voice designated Joseph Smith to be the instrument through whom the greatest gospel dispensation of the ages was to be ushered in.

There was nothing of ostentation, pageantry or dramatic display: it was a simple, solemn occasion, superlatively glorious and impressive beyond expression.

The voice of the Lord, which had been silent for ages, was heard again. Again that divine message, so oft repeated, was delivered: "This is my Beloved Son. Hear him!" The personality of the Father and his Only Begotten Son was again revealed that mankind may know them as they are.

Of his first vision Joseph Smith says:

"After I had retired to the place where I had previously designed to go, having looked around me and finding myself alone, I kneeled down and began to offer up the desires of my heart to God. I had scarcely done so when immediately I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame me, and had such an astonishing influence over me as to bind my tongue so that I could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around me, and it seemed to me for a time that I was doomed to sudden destruction.

"But, exerting all my power to call upon God to deliver me out of the power of this enemy which had seized upon me, and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction—not to an imaginary ruin, but to the power of some actual being from the unseen world, who had such marvelous power as I had never before felt in any being—just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me.

"It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy which held me bound. When the light rested upon me I saw two personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!"

When the Apostle Paul appeared before King Agrippa and Festus, the Roman Procurator, he declared that Jesus Christ, who had been crucified upon Calvary, was risen from the dead; that he lived and had appeared to him in a cloud of light, calling him to be his messenger to the Gentiles. Festus, in amazement, cried out: "Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad." But Paul replied—"I am not mad, most noble Festus, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness."

In like manner Joseph Smith, an obscure country boy, fifteen years of age, when he related to certain sectarian ministers of the neighborhood that he had received a heavenly vision, was made the victim of ridicule and bitter persecution.

Men flew into passion as they declared that it was all from the devil, that there were no such things as visions and revelations in these days; that all such things had ceased with the Apostles, and that there would never be any more of them.

Satan again manifested his power and determination to frustrate the will of Christ, that he might maintain his dominion over the world and continue to hold captive the souls of men. From that hour he raged in the hearts of the wicked, until he finally encompassed the death of the Prophet; not, however, until he had accomplished the work which the Lord had sent him into the world to do.

Like Paul, Joseph Smith, during the three years intervening after his vision, steadfastly maintained that in vision he had seen the Father and the Son, and had heard the voice of the Lord.

On the evening of September 21, 1823, he had retired as usual to his bed room for the night, a night fraught with events of which he had not dreamed, events of supreme importance to him and to the people of the world. He says:

"While I was thus in the act of calling upon God I discovered a light appearing in my room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noonday, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside, standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor.

"He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant. His hands were naked, and his arms also, a little above the wrists; so, also, were his feet naked, as were his legs, a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open, so that I could see into his bosom.

"Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light, but not so very bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him I was afraid; but the fear soon left me.

"He called me by name, and said that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Moroni; that God had a work for me to do; and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues, or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people."

This messenger revealed to Joseph Smith that there was a book deposited, written upon gold plates, giving an account of the ancient inhabitants of America and the source from whence they came, and that the plates would later be delivered into his hands to be translated and published to the world.

On the twenty-third day of September, 1827, the plates containing the record of the Book of Mormon were delivered to Joseph Smith who, by the gift and power of God, translated the characters which were engraven upon them.

The Book of Mormon does not in any degree conflict with or take the place of the Holy Bible, but is the strongest corroborative evidence in existence of the divine origin of that sacred record. It has been before the world for more than a century, during which time no statement contained in it, whether it refers to the civil history or the religion of the people who kept the record, has been proved to be untrue.

As the translation of the characters engraven upon the plates on which the Nephite record was kept proceeded Joseph Smith discovered that the doctrine of baptism was taught and practised by the Nephite people. Desiring to better understand this principle he did as he had done before, went with Oliver Cowdery, his scribe, into the woods, and engaged in earnest prayer. The following is quoted from his own words:

"While we were thus employed, praying and calling upon the Lord, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us he ordained us, saying:

"Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness."

"The messenger who visited us on this occasion and conferred this priesthood upon us, said his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James, and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchizedek, which priesthood, he said, would in due time be conferred upon us."

With this ordination, and the restoration of the Melchizedek

Priesthood which was later conferred as promised, the fulness of the keys and authority of the Priesthood of Almighty God, which had for centuries been lost to mankind, was restored and has remained with the Church in unbroken succession until the present time.

With the restoration of the priesthood the way was open for the preaching of the Gospel, the administration of the ordinances pertaining thereto, and the organization of the Church.

On the sixth day of April, one hundred years ago today, Joseph Smith, with five others who had accepted the message of the restored Gospel, met at the home of Peter Whitmer, Sr., at Fayette, Seneca County, New York. The sacrament of bread and wine was administered and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints organized.

In his sermon on the Mount the Master declares that a tree is known by the fruit which it produces. We do not gather grapes from thorns nor figs from thistles. A bitter fountain cannot bring forth good water, nor does a good fountain bring forth bitter water. By this unchangeable law we ask the world to judge the accomplishments of the Church during the past century.

It was after his resurrection that the Master commissioned his disciples to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to all people, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

In like manner have the disciples of Christ in the present dispensation, his Apostles, High Priests, Seventies, (who are his especially chosen ministry) and the Elders of the Church, carried the glad tidings of the restored Gospel to every part of the civilized world during the century past, and wherever the message has been proclaimed there have been honest souls who have accepted it and gathered to Zion, in fulfillment of the words of the ancient prophets.

The mountain of the Lord's house has been established in the top of the mountains, and people from all nations have flowed unto it. Through the blessings of the Lord upon their labors the desert has been subdued and made to blossom as the rose. Solitary places have been made glad because of them. Cities have been established, springs of water have broken out which have given life to the thirsty land, music, and the voices of children are heard in the streets where desolation and silence had reigned for ages.

Temples have been erected in which the work of redemption has been done for an innumerable host of the living and the dead.

Many thousands have been brought from the poverty and distress of the old world to this blessed land of Joseph, to become wealthy and be made happy as they have participated in the blessings which the Lord our God has pronounced upon it.

Looking backward to the organization of the Church, which occurred under the most humble and, to the world, obscure circumstances, and following its history through persecution, poverty, and distress, can it be denied that a great and marvelous work has been accomplished, that the promises of the Lord have been fulfilled, and his power to accomplish that to which he sets his hand to do, manifested?

Let glory and honor be ascribed unto God our Father, through Jesus Christ, his Son, forever, for he is the author of it all.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE

The future, as outlined in the predictions of the ancient prophets and confirmed by modern revelation, is pregnant with hope for the Church.

Jesus Christ our Lord said:

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."

With the present momentum with which the people of the world are moving forward in the determination of truth in every field of human endeavor, the outlook for the future passes beyond the vision of human comprehension.

Jesus Christ, referring to the time when he would manifest himself in the latter days, declared that whereas he manifested himself to his own people in the meridian of time and they rejected him, in the latter days he would come first to the Gentiles, and then to the house of Israel. He says:

"When the time of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fulness of my gospel. But they receive it not; for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men. And in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

"At that time, saith the Lord, I will remember the covenant which I have made with my people who are of the house of Israel, and will send my gospel to them."

"And it shall come to pass that I will establish my people, O house of Israel, and I will remember the covenant which I have made with my people, and I have covenanted with them that I would gather them together, in mine own due time, that I would give unto them again the land of their fathers for their inheritance, which is the land of Jerusalem, which is the promised land unto them forever, saith the Father.

"And behold, this people (the Nephites) will I establish in this land, (America) and it shall be a new Jerusalem. And the powers of heaven shall be in the midst of this people; yea, even I will be in the midst of you. And then shall be brought to pass that which is written:

"Awake, awake again and put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the Holy City. For thenceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean: For thus saith the Lord: Ye have sold yourselves for naught, and ye shall be redeemed without money."

From the words of the Prophet Daniel we quote the following:

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

John, the beloved disciple of our Lord, says:

"I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away: And I John saw the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

"And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying: Behold the tabernacle of God is with man, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God.

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

"And the Lord shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

With this glorious vision of the future, to which we look forward, we exhort our brethren and sisters to put their houses in order, that they may be prepared for that which is to come.

Refrain from evil; do that which is good. Visit the sick, comfort those who are in sorrow, clothe the naked, feed the hungry, care for the widow and the fatherless. Observe the laws of health which the Lord has revealed, and keep yourselves unspotted from the sins of the world. Pay your tithes and offerings, and the Lord will open the windows of heaven and pour out blessings until there shall not be room to contain them. Be obedient to the laws of God and the civil laws of the country in which you reside, and uphold and honor those who are chosen to administer them.

To the people of the world we send our blessing, and bear witness to them that God lives, that Jesus Christ is his Only Begotten Son, the Redeemer of the world. We call upon all men to come unto him, that through his grace they may attain to eternal life and an inheritance with him in the kingdom of his Father.

The First Presidency.

PRESIDENT ANTHONY W. IVINS

In spite of my efforts at self-control I have been overcome with emotion as I have looked upon the faces of this large congregation of men, with a few women, the like of which, so far as we are aware, has never before been seen in the history of the world.

CHANGES WROUGHT IN LAST CENTURY

Looking backward, as we have all undoubtedly done, contemplating the changes which have come to the world since the organization of the Church, one hundred years ago, the absorbing thought which has come to me is one of gratitude because of the fact that it has been my destiny, with you, my brethren and sisters, to have been a participant in its marvelous activities.

I have gone back over the long and winding road, which the people of the world have traveled since we have record of their existence, with its well marked sign-boards which tell us that if we will follow them they will lead us back to the presence of God from whence we came, but from which we have strayed and gone far afield, until the road has brought us to where we are today.

GOD'S DIRECTING HAND

In it all I appear to see the hand of divinity constantly directing, and hear the voice of our Father who is in heaven calling us back to the straight road, and frequently, unconsciously to them, impressing the minds of men, impelling them resistlessly onward to the accomplishment of a divine purpose, the redemption of the human family, that they may achieve eternal life.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Of the method by which this was accomplished we have little knowledge: we do know, however, that the earth was created, because we find ourselves here upon it.

And, "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them."

And he gave man dominion over the earth, and all that is upon it, and commanded him to subdue the earth, and make it fruitful. He made plain the fact that this could only be accomplished by effort, by the sweat of the brow; that being endowed with reason man was to think, to strive, and thus find out truth and apply it, in order that the earth might be brought under subjection to his will. For the intelligence and will of man is a part of godliness which the Father has bestowed upon all of his children, and will, if properly applied and developed, make man like unto his Creator.

Of the antediluvian people who occupied the earth upon which we dwell we know but little. Their history, covering a period of 1,500 years, is told in the Bible on a dozen small pages.

Of the new race of men which descended from Noah, our ancestor, we have more definite information. It is a fact, however, that there is much of obscurity and doubt surrounding their early history.

It is these latter people that I have followed with greater interest, because it is to them that we more directly trace our ancestry, and it was with them, through Abraham our father, that the Lord entered into a new covenant which is now in course of fulfilment.

According to the best available information the expansion and development of the sons of Noah and their posterity had its beginning along the upper reaches of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers, and extended south from that point to the plains of Shiner, in Mesopotamia.

We are told that Ham, the son of Noah, begat Cush who was the father of Nimrod, the founder of Babylon, which became the greatest city of its time, while Asshur, the son of Shem, established his people on the Tigris, and built the city of Nineveh.

Egypt was occupied by the descendants of Ham, through Pharaoh, the son of Egyptus, who was the daughter of Ham.

Assyria, the Asshur of the Hebrews, of which Nineveh was the principal city; Chaldea, of which Babylon was the capitol; and Egypt, among the earliest nations of which we have record, are all closely associated with the Israelitish people, each having exercised a powerful influence upon their character and history.

It was from Chaldea that the Lord called Abraham, and entered into covenant with him in which he promised that he would make of him a people, by comparison as numerous as the stars of heaven, or the grains of sand upon the seashore. Abraham was at the time a childless man, one hundred years of age.

COVENANT WITH ABRAHAM

To properly comprehend the occurrences of the past century one must be familiar with the covenant entered into by the Lord with Abraham and the history of the Israelitish people from that time until the present. The Lord declared that covenant to be eternal, everlasting, which means that it would not end until the promises made had been realized. In part the covenant declared that through Abraham and his seed all nations of the world should be blessed.

It is through the descendants of Abraham that the Holy Bible has come down to us, the book which has done more to civilize and stabilize the world than all others which have been published. It has given to us the fundamentals of our system of government and the laws under which its affairs are administered. From the family of Abraham the Lord has raised up his ancient and modern prophets, and most important of all, Jesus Christ, his Only Begotten Son, through whom redemption from death and salvation in the kingdom of our Father is made possible to mankind. What have we that is of indispensable value to humanity which has not come to us through the Israelitish race?

During the past weeks I have been thinking of these things and associating them with the secular history of the world. By this method alone am I able to reach satisfactory conclusions regarding the contents and meaning of the scripture, and my studies justify the statement which I now make: In Abraham and his seed all nations of the earth have been blessed.

With the birth of Jacob the Israelitish race had its real beginning. Jacob who was first called Israel; Jacob who was the father of twelve sons, and to whom the promises made to his grandfather, Abraham, were reconfirmed, and greatly enlarged. In order that I may be properly understood, permit me to make this brief observation:

THE HISTORY OF THE CHOSEN RACE

It has become common usage to associate the word Israel with the Jewish people only, which is a great error. While it is true that all Jewish people are Israelites, it is equally true that there are Israelitish people that are not Jews.

Judah, with whom the tribe of Benjamin united, was but one of the twelve tribes at the time when ten of these tribes revolted during the reign of Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, and under Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, established an independent kingdom, with their capitol city at Samaria, in northern Palestine.

I have gone with Jacob and his sons into Egypt, been with them in their prosperity in the land of Goshen, while Egypt was under control of the Hyksos, or Shepherd Kings, their own kinsmen, and in their distress and servitude after the native princes of Egypt came down the Nile, defeated and drove out the Hyksos, and repossessed their native land.

I have followed them in their exodus from Egypt under the great prophet Moses, and in their forty years sojourn in the wilderness. I have been with them in the conquest of the promised land, in their final ascendancy to a great kingdom under David, and rejoiced with them during the peaceful reign of King Solomon, when Israel realized her golden age.

In sorrow I have seen the return of this chosen people from the worship of the God of their fathers to the worship of idols, which brought dissolution and final subjugation by surrounding nations. I have seen the Ten Tribes carried away captive by the Assyrians, while Judah suffered the same fate at the hands of the Babylonians, and was later scattered by pagan Rome to the four corners of the earth.

To one who does not understand it may appear that the promise made by the Lord had failed. Israel had possessed the promised land as he had said that they should, but through transgression had lost their heritage to other nations, notwithstanding the fact that the Lord had declared that heritage to be eternal.

Has the promise made to Abraham failed? Are the Ten Tribes of Israel lost to the world forever? Is Judah to be forever a wanderer without a country which he can call his own? Emphatically, no.

"Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd does his flock.

"For thus sayeth the Lord: Behold I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coast of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child, and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither.

"They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them. * * For I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first born."

Thus has the Lord spoken through his chosen prophets, and his word will not fail.

Centuries before, while the Israelitish people were still in possession of the promised land, the Lord through his prophets had predicted their downfall, that they would be scattered among all nations, but would ultimately be gathered and restored to their promised heritage. The time for the realization of this latter promise is near at hand.

Babylon, at the time of the Jewish captivity, was referred to by Daniel the prophet as having dominion over all the earth. Nebuchadnezzar its king was called the King of Kings. The kingdom was thought to be so strong that it would never be overthrown. The Lord, however, had long before decreed its fall, and his prophets had declared that Babylon should become as Sodom and Gomorrah and that it should never be rebuilt or inhabited again.

The opening scene of the great drama which was to bring to pass the redemption of the house of Israel occurred when the Medo-Persian army, under Cyrus, effected the conquest of Babylonia, during the reign of Belshazzar, the son of Nebuchadnezzar, and established the powerful Medo-Persian kingdom in its stead.

I have been with Alexander of Macedon as he crossed the Hellespont from Greece, and with his comparatively small army fought the battles of Granicus, Issus and Arbela where he utterly destroyed the great Medo-Persian army which Darius had collected, and established himself as master of Asia from the Mediterranean sea to the mouth of the Nile, a country fifty times larger in area and population than his own.

I have been with the Roman legions as they swept through Asia, destroying the smaller kingdoms which Alexander had set up, and in their campaign in northern Europe, which made them masters of the then known world.

I have been with Mark Anthony and Octavius at Actium, where they struggled for the mastery of Rome, and have seen that mighty empire crumble and fall.

These have all been turning points in the affairs of the world, which have entirely changed what might otherwise have been its history. It was not the will of the Lord that despotic rule should be permanently established and maintained upon the earth. This was proven in modern times when Napoleon met his Waterloo, and in our own day when ambition prompted a crowned head in Europe to seek the establishment of world dominion.

In all of this I have seen the finger of the Lord pointing to a time when: The God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, or given to other people, but will stand forever; when he will establish peace upon earth and good will among men; when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

A CHOICE LAND

Oh, my beloved brethren and sisters, I beseech you to study the word of the Lord, as it is contained in holy writ. You will then know that the present is inextricably associated with the remote past to which I have referred as it is to the future which is before us. You will know that you have been given a land which is choice above all others. You will discover that the ancient prophets saw this land of America, and declared its destiny. You will know the conditions upon which our nation is to be perpetuated, or, on the other hand, because of our lack of faith in God, take its place among those mighty nations to which I have referred and pass into oblivion.

Where much is given much is required. This is the land of Joseph, it is the land of Zion, a land choice above all other lands. The Lord our God has decreed that whatsoever nation shall inhabit it shall be free from bondage, free from all other nations, if they will but serve the God of the land, which is Jesus Christ. These are not my words, but the words of the Lord, our God. They are binding upon us, as they have been binding upon other great nations which have occupied the American continent in times past. They imply more than a tacit or perfunctory profession of faith in Christ our Lord. We are to render service to him.

TRUE SERVICE

When asked what the word service implied the Redeemer answered: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. Thou shalt do no murder. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Honor thy father and thy mother, and love thy neighbor as thyself." Simple requirements embodying the fundamentals of perfect Christian life.

If we love the Lord it will be a pleasure to serve him. We could not, if we love him, be guilty of murder. The fact that murder is of almost daily occurrence is evidence that this great commandment is not properly observed. Next to murder the Lord has declared that the contamination of the fountains of life through the promiscuous intercourse of sexes is an abomination in his sight.

STANDARDS OF THE LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints stands irrevocably committed to the observance of sexual purity. It recognizes no double standard of morality. It demands the same standard of virtue from its men that it does from its women members, and recognizes no circumstance or condition which justifies sexual association except in virtuous and legal wedlock. This the Church recognizes to be not only approved of the Lord but in direct compliance with his command.

KEEPING THE LAWS OF GOD AND OF COUNTRY

"Thou shalt not steal."

Any person who knowingly deprives another of that which rightfully belongs to him, without giving value received for it, is guilty of theft, no matter what the process may be by which the transaction is made.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness."

The frequency with which this commandment is disregarded by men and women who appear in our courts under oath to tell the truth, is evidence of needed reform.

If we would only put into practice these simple requirements, and we could do so if we would, what a glorious place this world of ours would be in which to live.

You may ask—Why call attention to these conditions while you provide no remedy for them? The remedy is simple, and can be made effective.

Paraphrasing the words of Abraham Lincoln: Let every member of the Church, from its president, its priest or pastor, to the humblest member, and every citizen of the United States of America, from the highest elective or appointive officer, to the humblest citizen, here and now highly resolve that the faith in God manifested by our fathers, who bequeathed to us the priceless heritage of liberty which we now enjoy in this chosen land, shall not perish from the earth, but endure forever. This done we are secure, without it we have no guarantee.

I am not prophesying evil of my country. I love it. I love its people, and believe in them. I do not believe that they will carelessly surrender the God-given principles of liberty and justice bequeathed to them into the hands of aliens who would trample them under foot, and turn back the wheels of human progress to the dark ages, from the ignorance and bigotry of which we have been rescued by the hand of the God of our fathers.

I know that there are those who will not agree with me in my conclusions. Neither have they believed the words of those who have taught these things in the past.

MORONI'S WORDS APPLICABLE NOW

When the Lord commanded Moroni to write the things which are contained in the Book of Mormon, which is the sacred record of the hand-dealings of the Lord with the Nephite people, Moroni said:

"Lord, the Gentiles will mock at these things."

The reply was:

"Fools mock, but they shall mourn, and my grace is sufficient for the meek, that they shall take no advantage of your weakness."

I can think of no words of conclusion more appropriate than the words of this chosen prophet of the Lord:

"And now I speak unto all the ends of the earth—that if the day cometh that the power and gifts of God shall be done away among you, it shall be because of unbelief.

"And wo be unto the children of men if this shall be the case. * * *

"And I exhort you to remember these things; for the time speedily cometh that ye shall know that I lie not, for ye shall see me at the bar of God, and the Lord will say unto you: Did I not declare my words unto you, which were written by this man, like as one crying from the dead, yea, as one speaking out of the dust? * * *

"And again I would exhort you that ye would come unto Christ, and lay hold upon every good gift, and touch not the evil gift, nor the unclean thing."

These last words of Moroni I commend to you for your consideration, my brethren and sisters.

BLESSINGS UPON ALL WHO SEEK RIGHTEOUSNESS

May the blessings of the Lord be upon you. May his protecting hand be over you, and the guidance of the Holy Spirit direct you and abide with you and all who seek to establish righteousness and justice upon the earth; that God's kingdom may be established and his will be done on earth as it is in heaven. This is my humble prayer, my brethren and sisters, in your behalf and in behalf of all the world. Amen.

The choir rendered the anthem, "Hosanna! Hallelujah!" words and music written by Evan Stephens for this occasion:

Hosanna, Hallelujah!
With heart and voice uniting,
Hosanna, hallelujah,
In joyous accord,
We sing to the Lord,
Hosanna, hallelujah,
We sing to the Lord.
Hosanna, Hallelujah, Amen.

Sing, O ye ransom'd,
Ye ransom'd of the Lord,
Ye who the Gospel received and kept his word,
Yea, ye pure in heart rejoice,
Ye who know the Shepherd's voice.
Sing, O sing ye with joyful heart and voice.
Sing ye with gladness,
With gladness and rejoice.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

President Grant announced that he would present to the congregation the General Authorities of the Church, and that they would be voted upon by the various orders of the priesthood separately and also by the entire assembly.

The President then read the list of General Authorities as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH

FIRST PRESIDENCY

Heber J. Grant, Prophet, Seer and Revelator and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Anthony W. Ivins, First Counselor in the First Presidency.

Charles W. Nibley, Second Counselor in the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Rudger Clawson

COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Rudger Clawson

Reed Smoot

George Albert Smith

George F. Richards

Orson F. Whitney

David O. McKay

Joseph Fielding Smith

James E. Talmage

Stephen L. Richards

Richard R. Lyman

Melvin J. Ballard

John A. Widtsoe

PRESIDING PATRIARCH

Hyrum G. Smith

The Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles and the Presiding Patriarch as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

FIRST COUNCIL OF SEVENTY

Brigham H. Roberts

Jonathan G. Kimball

Charles H. Hart

Rulon S. Wells

Levi Edgar Young

Joseph W. McMurrin

Rey L. Pratt

PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Sylvester Q. Cannon, Presiding Bishop

David A. Smith, First Counselor

John Wells, Second Counselor

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

Heber J. Grant

As Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The order of voting was by groups as follows:

First—The First Presidency.

Second—The Council of the Twelve and the Presiding Patriarch.

Third—The First Council of Seventy.

Fourth—The Presiding Bishopric.

Fifth—High Priests.

Sixth—Seventies.

Seventh—Elders.

Eighth—Aaronic Priesthood (Priests, Teachers and Deacons).

Ninth—The entire assembly.

As each group arose, in response to the request of President Grant, they were asked by him: "Do you sustain the General Authorities of the Church whose names have just been read, in the positions mentioned? If so, raise your right hands." In each instance, following the response, an opportunity was given for any who cared to vote in the negative to do so.

The voting throughout was unanimous in the affirmative.

Immediately following the sustaining of the General Authorities, the entire assembly arose to their feet, and under the leadership of President Heber J. Grant, gave the Hosanna Shout, waving their handkerchiefs while doing so.

The words of the Shout are as follows:

Hosanna! Hosanna! Hosanna!

To God and the Lamb

Amen, amen, and amen.

Hosanna! Hosanna! Hosanna!
To God and the Lamb
Amen, amen, and amen.

Hosanna! Hosanna! Hosanna!
To God and the Lamb
Amen, amen, and amen.

The waving of the white handkerchiefs in almost perfect unison and the shouting of praises to God and the Lamb by the thousands of people assembled in the great tabernacle, was perhaps the most thrilling and impressive religious solemnity that those present had ever witnessed.

The congregation then arose and sang the first and last verses of "America."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We have received many telegrams of congratulation on this occasion, but we shall not attempt to read any of them this morning.

PREDECESSORS GREAT AND GOOD MEN

It has fallen to my lot, although a very weak, humble instrument in the hands of the Lord, to succeed the wonderful men who have presided over this Church—the Prophet Joseph Smith, than whom no greater man I believe has ever graced the earth; that marvelous pioneer, Brigham Young; that mighty champion of liberty, John Taylor; that exceptional converter of men to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Wilford Woodruff; Lorenzo Snow, an extraordinary man at eighty-five years of age, who in three years lifted the Church from the slough of despond financially to a place of financial standing; and that man, beloved by all who knew him, one of the outstanding men of all the world, Joseph F. Smith, the greatest preacher of righteousness I have ever known.

BLESSINGS PRONOUNCED UPON GENERAL AUTHORITIES

It is my right and privilege as the President of this Church to extend a blessing to the people, and with all my heart and soul I bless my counselors for their devotion to me and to the Church. I remember with gratitude my counselors who have passed away. I rejoice in the wonderful labors and the devotion of each and every one of the men who are members of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, also the Presiding Patriarch of the Church. I pray God to bless them for their integrity and their devotion, for their labors at home and abroad among the people.

I pray God to bless the Seven Presidents of the Seventy, the men who stand at the head of that great body of priesthood, whose duty and obligation it is to carry the Gospel to the ends of the earth.

I pray the blessings of the Lord upon the Presiding Bishopric of the Church, who preside over all the Lesser Priesthood—the Priests, Teachers and Deacons of the Church.

BLESSES BRETHREN OF PRIESTHOOD

I pray God to bless this wonderful gathering of High Priests, such a gathering as I am sure cannot be found in any other part of the wide world. I pray God to bless the Seventies, and the Elders. I pray that he may bless all the members of the Lesser Priesthood; that he may richly pour out his blessing upon them in their youth, that there may be planted in their hearts a love of God and a desire to serve him as they grow to manhood; that they may feel to walk in the footsteps of their faithful parents. All of us who have been born in the Church, almost without exception, have been born of parents who have given their lives and the best that is in them for the work of God.

One of the most earnest prayers of my heart all my life has been that I should be able to live to be worthy of such a father and such a mother as were given to me.

I pray that the blessings of the Lord may attend all of the general officers of our Church, all of whom are devoted to this work.

GRATITUDE FOR RELIEF SOCIETY ORGANIZATION

I pray for the blessings of the Lord upon the officers and the General Board of the Relief Society. My heart goes out in gratitude and thanksgiving to God for the organization, through the Prophet Joseph Smith, of that wonderful society.

I thank the Lord for my association with Eliza R. Snow, Zina D. Young, Sarah M. Kimball, Aunt Emmeline B. Wells, Bathsheba W. Smith, Clarissa S. Williams and Sister Robison, who have stood as officers of the Relief Society. I am thankful indeed for what they have accomplished, for their wonderful work and example, and I pray God's choicest blessings upon them.

DEVOTION AND SACRIFICE OF THE MOTHERS

It is our sisters who carry the burden of the work. We talk about the missionary work of the Elders who go forth to proclaim the Gospel; we talk about the great pioneer work of the early settlers of this country, but I wish to say here that it is the mothers at home who are making the sacrifice for the boys to go into the mission field. It is the mothers who stand the hardships far more than the men. Men are engaged in many activities, and without the devotion and absolute testimony of the living God in the hearts of our mothers this Church would die. May God bless the mothers of men, is my most humble prayer; and I do bless them in the name of God our Heavenly Father and in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer.

INVOKES BLESSINGS UPON AUXILIARY WORKERS

I pray for the same blessing upon the officers of the General

Board of the Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Association, and upon the Primary Association, the Sunday Schools and the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. I also pray for the blessings of the Lord upon those devoted workers in the Genealogical Society. It is wonderful what is being accomplished in the temples through the energy of these people who are working along that line. .

BLESSINGS INVOKED UPON THE CHOIRS

I pray for the blessings of the Lord upon our choir and its officers, and upon the music committee. I pray for the blessings of the Lord upon the choirs throughout the Church. There are no other people in the world in proportion to their numbers who have so many who pray to the Lord in beautiful songs.

PRESIDENTS OF MISSIONS ACCOMPLISHING MARVELOUS WORK

God bless the Presidents of Missions, one and all. They are marvelous men, those who are active today and those who have served in the past. It is pleasing to contemplate the love and the confidence they have inspired and the inspiration that they have given to those over whom they preside.

PRESIDENCIES OF STAKES AND BISHOPRICS OF WARDS

I pray God to bless the wonderful men who have given so much of their time as Presidencies of the Stakes of Zion. Many of the men occupying these positions give nearly as much time to their Church work as they do to their ordinary affairs in life.

I pray for that same blessing upon the wonderful men who are Bishops and Bishops' Counselors. I ask for the blessing of the Lord upon those who preside over the quorums of priesthood throughout the Church.

THE MISSIONARIES AND THEIR ACCOMPLISHMENTS

I pray for the blessings of the Lord to be abundantly with those who have been sent forth to proclaim the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, to lift up their voices in testimony that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Redeemer of the world, the Savior of mankind, and to bear witness that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the true and the living God, inspired of God to restore again to the earth the plan of life and salvation.

Oh, how my heart goes out to those young men and young women who go forth with this testimony burning in their very hearts for the spread of the truth. And I thank God that they have brought honest souls from all over the wide world, from every denomination under heaven, to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. May God bless them and bless their parents who are making sacrifices to send them forth to proclaim the Gospel. Oh, how I do rejoice that I do not know of one son or one daughter in all Israel who has gone out into the world to proclaim the truth, that has come home to announce the truth is in some other land. Thank God for the truth and the power that goes with these young men and young women as they go forth to proclaim the restoration again to the earth of the plan of life and salvation, the Gospel of Jesus Christ that you and I have received.

PRAYER FOR AND APPRECIATION OF PATRIARCHS

God bless the Patriarchs. I thank the Lord for Patriarch Perkins, a noble man in St. George, who gave me a patriarchal blessing as a little child, foretelling my life in one small page of longhand writing, which has been fulfilled to the very letter. I thank God for John Rowberry, who gave me a blessing to the effect that I should be taken from Tooele and be made one of the leading officials of this Church: and who promised Francis M. Lyman that his name should be chronicled among the Apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ in these last days. God bless our Patriarchs and inspire them in their splendid work.

A PRAYER FOR THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

I echo the prayer that was offered in the opening of this meeting, that God will bless the President of the United States and his cabinet, and all the officers of our great country. How I do rejoice in that statement contained in the Book of Mormon to the effect that this is a land choice above all other lands and that no king shall reign here. Let us be true and loyal to this land of liberty. In no land in all the wide world could the Gospel of Jesus Christ have been established except in this beloved America of ours.

BLESSES GREAT BRITAIN AND OTHER NATIONS

God bless that liberty-loving country, Great Britain. May he bless Canada, our neighbor on the north, which is like one of our own family. May the blessings of the Lord attend our people on the south, in Mexico, who are struggling for their rights and their liberty. May peace dwell in that land.

BLESSINGS INVOKED UPON HONEST-HEARTED EVERYWHERE

I pray that the blessings of Almighty God may be and abide with all the members of this Church, every faithful, diligent Latter-day Saint. May we be able to preach the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ by the honesty, the uprightness and the truthfulness of our lives. If we do this, then we are sure of a final triumph.

I rejoice in all that we have heard here today. I rejoice and I am sure that the Prophet and the Patriarch of the living God who sealed their testimonies with their blood will rejoice at this wonderful gathering. Oh, how I did pray, how I did supplicate the Lord, that Joseph F. Smith, the son of the martyred Patriarch, might live to occupy today this position that I am occupying. Never until the night before he passed away did I give up the hope that he should have that privilege. But it has fallen to my lot without my seeking to occupy this position. By that spirit of blessing which he possessed, I bless you one and all, and all Israel, and every honest-hearted soul in all the world who is trying to do good, and I do it in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of the world, and by the authority of the living God, the priesthood that I hold. Amen.

The choir rendered the "Hallelujah Chorus" from the oratorio "The Messiah."

Elder Joseph R. Shepherd, President of the Logan Temple, offered the closing prayer, and the Conference adjourned until 2:00 p. m.

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference was resumed at 2 o'clock with President Grant presiding.

The music for this meeting was furnished by the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of Prof. Anthony C. Lund.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn, "Praise to the man who communed with Jehovah."

Elder Edward J. Wood, President of the Alberta Temple, offered the opening prayer.

The hymn, "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning," was then sung by the choir and congregation.

PRESIDENT CHARLES W. NIBLEY

In looking over this vast congregation, composed largely of the priesthood of the Church,—this greatest of all gatherings—my soul is subdued and I feel my own weakness, my own inability. Nevertheless, I am proud indeed to be numbered among you, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I feel it a distinct honor to be able to assist in some small degree in the furtherance of this great work.

THE SIXTH DAY OF APRIL

I would like to call your attention (I think Brother Wood mentioned it in his prayer) to this beautiful Sabbath day, this sixth day of April, nineteen hundred and thirty. Where would you go in all the world to find a more perfect day than this? The Lord, by his overruling providence, has given it to us, and all thanks and honor and praise be given to him.

A wonderful day, the sixth day of April! Many notable things have occurred on it. The organization of the Church for one great and notable thing. The Prophet Joseph recites in his own story that it was early in the spring of 1820, one hundred and ten years ago, when he went into the woods to pray. I like to think of that also as being on the sixth day of April. We have no definite knowledge of it, but I believe it in my heart and in my soul. And while I have no warrant in revelation for so stating, I believe with all my heart and soul that the sixth day of April was the birthday of the Lord Jesus Christ, our Savior and Redeemer. Certain it is that the New Testament tells us that the shepherds were tending their flocks on the hills of Judea when the glory of the Lord fell upon them. More likely was it in the spring of the year than on the twenty-fifth day of December, which is celebrated as the birthday of the Savior; yet we go on celebrating that day, and it is all right to do so, inasmuch as that is the day the world generally accepts. But I repeat it is my individual opinion, firmly fixed in my mind, that the sixth day of April is the birthday of the Savior of the world. I further like to believe that the resurrection of the Redeemer, which marked his triumph over death and the grave, also occurred on the sixth day of April, though I have no definite proof.

Another notable event that occurred on this day is part of the history of this glorious country of ours—the United States of America. The Lord says in the revelations given through the Prophet Joseph Smith that he raised up wise men for the very purpose of framing the Constitution, which guarantees liberty to all. It was born on the sixth day of April. It had previously been adopted by the Constitutional Convention and submitted to the various States for ratification. While it was intended that the returns should all be in by the fourth of March, it was not until the sixth day of April that the electoral votes of the different States were counted by the Senate and House then in session. And on the sixth day of April George Washington was declared to be the President of the United States. So the nation had its real birth at that time.

Another thing that happened on the sixth day of April: Our nation, in 1917, declared war on Germany, and with all its heart and soul it went into that war. What for? To fight for liberty, to fight against the principle of force, which is Satan's principle, which principle is championed wherever Satan rules. This nation in a short time, with two million men overseas, and with two million more under arms in training, helped to settle the matter; and thus victory was achieved through the action of our government, which government has always stood for liberty and for the blessing of mankind.

I say again that it is my individual opinion—we have no revelation for it—that the Prophet Joseph Smith received his first manifestation on the sixth day of April. It was the greatest vision ever given to mortal man; for both the Father and the Son plainly manifested themselves before his eyes and spoke to him. I believe that that was on the sixth day of April, and I believe, although I have no warrant in revelation for it, that the sixth day of April is the birthday of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

THE MOST OUTSTANDING ACCOMPLISHMENT

Now, looking back over the one hundred years that have passed, I have tried in my mind to think what is the most outstanding work that has been accomplished. Of course we as Latter-day Saints know that the spiritual force, the power of the priesthood that is with this work and in this work, is greater than the temporal. But men who have not been touched with the power of the Holy Ghost, cannot see the kingdom of God. Like Nicodemus they cannot comprehend it. They have not taken advantage of the means of entering it. But temporal things they can see and understand; and to my way of thinking, the great outstanding, beneficent, splendid work that has been accomplished by this Church in the last one hundred years has been the gathering of the poor, not the rich, for we have had scarcely any rich among us. One in a hundred was possibly well-to-do when gathered, but I should say not more than that. The poor have had the Gospel preached to them, and the poor have been gathered to Zion. Gathered to Kirtland, Ohio, in the first place; gathered to Missouri; then driven from Missouri, after which the gathering place was at Nauvoo, Illinois, from 1839 until 1845 and 1846. The gathering in from the States of this Union and from nearby countries to the places I have mentioned occupied from fourteen to sixteen years. The balance of the one hundred years that have passed and which we are commemorating, have been spent by the saints here in the valleys of the mountains. And this gathering has gone on all through that period, even up to the present time.

How has this been accomplished? It has been accomplished by the Church, the power of this Church, the influence of this Church, by the people of this Church, the poor helping the poor to get here to this land of Zion, consecrated and dedicated for the gathering place. For did not Isaiah say that in the last days the mountain of the Lord's house should be established in the top of the mountains, and that all nations should flow unto it? This has been truly a wonderful work.

THE PERPETUAL EMIGRATION FUND

In the early days of our settlement here the Perpetual Emigration Fund was established, and many were helped here through that fund. And let me say in passing that the widows and the orphans were not forgotten. President Brigham Young said we would dedicate our lives to see that every poor faithful saint,—widows, orphans and all—was gathered to Zion. That work has gone on until tens of thousands and their succeeding generations, amounting now to hundreds of thousands, have been aided and helped.

It would interest you if you were to go into the books of the Perpetual Emigration Fund and see some of the names of families who were beneficiaries of that Fund; rather distinguished, now perhaps, but very poor then—so poor that they had to be helped by that Fund, and yet they are now some of the richest among our people. Some of their children unfortunately have forgotten. It is a bad thing to forget. It is a good thing to remember what the Lord has done for us. And the Lord accomplished that work, and this is the Zion of the Lord to which they came.

TO BUILD UP ZION

I recall, away back in 1869, when I went on my first mission, we met over in the old Seventies' Hall. President Young instructed us in these words: "Now when you Elders get out in the world and see conditions there and think of the good things we have here at home, you may get to praising our country too much. Don't do that. This is what I would like you to promise the people who gather to Zion: plenty of hard work and persecution."

So there was no allurements or inducement to come for better circumstances, but only to build up Zion. And this has been Zion all the while. Isaiah said concerning it:

"For the Lord shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody."

The Lord was to do this. To whom? To Zion. Do you know of any other people called Zion upon the face of the earth? Do you know of anything more beautiful than this verse of Isaiah's? I am going to take the liberty of reading it again:

"For the Lord shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places."

HER WASTE PLACES COMFORTED

Were there waste places here when our pioneers came? Was there anything here but waste and desert and wilderness? There were no paths. Go around in other countries where there is food for wild game and you will find trails—for jack-rabbits at least. You will find a trail for the deer, you will find tracks. There was not anything of the kind here. For it was so much of a waste and so much of a wilderness and desert, and so barren, that there was scarcely any game except way back in the mountains. It was in very deed a trackless waste, a wilderness. There were no streets, no paths, no trails, no anything,—just a desert. Yet the prophet of the Lord a few days after arriving here, putting down his cane right on this block, prophesied, "Here we will build the temple of the Lord."

"For the Lord shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her deserts like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody."

Is the voice of melody here today? Is there any place in the world where there are sweeter singers and more of them in proportion to the population than right here? Is there any more of thanksgiving and the voice of melody anywhere else in the world according to numbers, than there is here in this land? This is Zion. The Lord will comfort Zion and all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness like Eden and her desert like the garden of the Lord.

Another verse by the same Isaiah and with respect to the same Zion:

"And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

This is the word of the Lord concerning Zion. This is the Zion of our Lord.

THE LORD HAS DONE IT

Time will not permit me to speak further in respect to this one great outstanding, wonderful work that the Lord has accomplished with Zion—the gathering of the saints from all parts of the earth. He has brought it about. He has overruled it. It is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves. Do not forget that. The sacrifices that our parents have made have been most wonderful. The Lord was with them. My heart sorrows when I think of my own parents, the poverty and sacrifice that they had to undergo in so many different ways; and I glory in the fact that they failed not nor faltered, but stood firm through it all. They gave of their lives for my sake, so that the path is easier for me, and I am blessed more in living and trying to live to help on in that great work. All praise be unto the Lord for his goodness and mercy and blessings.

BLESSINGS THROUGH OBEDIENCE AND SACRIFICE

I praise the Lord for the association of my brethren, for the privilege of meeting with the saints, for the enjoyment I have in laboring for this great cause. I know it is the work of God. I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. I know that this people will be blessed far more than they ever have been blessed, far more than they could hope to be blessed, if we will only, as our President has said, keep the commandments of the Lord, pay our tithes, and sacrifice something for the kingdom of God. It is sacrifice that brings forth the blessings of heaven, let me tell you, and the man or woman who is not willing to make some sacrifice cannot claim the blessings.

May the Lord help us build up his kingdom, glorify his holy name, and remember that in this great hundred years past what a wonderful work of gathering to Zion has been accomplished. Such a beneficent, blessed piece of constructive work, the greatest contribution to tens of thousands of the poor that have been so thoroughly blessed by it, must be recognized by all men, and acknowledged as a good work. Amen.

PRESIDENT RUDGER CLAWSON

My brethren and sisters: This is an historic occasion. In view of the great celebration of the centenary of the Church now in progress, my thoughts of late have turned to the prophecies of old. Many of the predictions of the ancient prophets have been fulfilled to the letter so far as time has gone, others are in process of fulfilment.

I am reminded of a very remarkable incident that occurred in the very early years of the earth's history. This incident has been briefly referred to by my brethren who have already spoken, but I have been looking at it from a little different angle.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR DREAMS A DREAM

It would seem that Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, dreamed a dream which made a profound impression upon his mind, but strange to say, upon awakening, he was unable to recall the dream, and the interpretation thereof. So he called for the wise men of Babylon, the magicians, the astrologers, the sorcerers and the Chaldeans, and he commanded them to bring back his dream and give the interpretation thereof. If they would do this he promised them gifts and rewards. But if they failed he warned them that they would be cut to pieces and destroyed.

They said to him, "O king, live forever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will shew thee the interpretation."

The king said, "The thing is gone from me."

AN UNUSUAL REQUEST

Thereupon the wise men were very much agitated, and they said to him:

"O king, thou hast required of us an unusual thing. There is no man upon the earth who can show the king this matter. It is only the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh, that can bring back your dream."

For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and sent forth a decree that the wise men of Babylon should be destroyed.

This was a very critical time for Daniel, the young Hebrew prophet, and his three brethren who were numbered among the wise men of Babylon. Daniel sought an interview with the king and plead with him for further time, saying that he would get the interpretation of his dream. His request was granted.

THE KING'S DREAM MADE KNOWN

Now, mark you, by the prayer of faith the king's dream was made known to Daniel of the Lord, and the interpretation was given. Once more Daniel was conducted before the king and he said to him:

"We will bring back your dream, O king, and we will give you the interpretation thereof."

And so he said:

"Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee, and the form thereof was terrible.

"This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass,

"His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay."

And then, the prophet said:

"Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

"Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

"This is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king."

THE INTERPRETATION

He said:

"Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

"And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the heaven, hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold.

"And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

"And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron."

This fourth kingdom was represented by the feet and toes of iron and of clay.

"Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure."

And he said further:

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."

THE FULFILMENT

The Christian world of today is witness of the fact that the very things which the great image stood for have occurred so far as time has gone. History certifies to the fact that King Nebuchadnezzar was the head of gold. The Medes and Persians, an inferior kingdom to Babylon, were the arms and breast of silver. The Macedonian kingdom, under Alexander the Great, was the belly and thighs of brass; and the Roman kingdom under the Caesars was the legs of iron. For mark you, later on the kingdom, or empire of Rome, was divided. The head of the government in one division was at Rome and the head of the government in the other division was at Constantinople. So these two great divisions represented the legs of iron. Finally, the Roman empire was broken up into smaller kingdoms, represented by the feet and toes of iron and clay, and as there were ten toes on the image we might well conclude that the following ten kingdoms stand to represent the toes: Italy, established in 496 A. D.; France, in 753; England, 853; Germany, 806; Holland, 922; Portugal, 1138; Persia, 1139; Austria-Hungary, 1159; Spain, 1171; Greece, 1829 A. D.

THE STONE CUT OUT OF THE MOUNTAIN

The stone cut out of the mountain without hands, representing the kingdom of God, was established April 6th, 1830, with six members, and is known as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Thus the work of the Lord in our own time, designated by revelation as a marvelous work and a wonder, had a very humble beginning, but it has grown apace. Today the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has a membership of about 700,000. It cost the best blood of the nineteenth century to establish this work on the earth. Its founder, the Prophet Joseph Smith, and his brother Hyrum Smith, the Patriarch, were martyred for the cause of truth, in Carthage, Illinois, in 1844. The Latter-day Saints have passed through the fire of persecution and have stood the test of one hundred years. Never was the prospect brighter for our people than it is today. We sincerely believe, and, I may say, have every assurance, that this Church will stand forever. It is indeed the Church of the Son of God, the Redeemer of mankind.

ITS ORGANIZATION

Within its organization will be found a line of general authorities, consisting of a First Presidency of three, a council of Twelve Apostles, a Presiding Patriarch, a First Council of Seventy and a Presiding Bishopric. There are in the Church also numerous quorums of High Priests, Seventies, Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons, by which and through which the affairs of the Church are conducted and the Gospel preached to the saints and to the world and the ordinances of the Gospel administered for the salvation of souls.

For the knowledge I have and of which I humbly testify that Jesus is the Christ, and that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God, I am truly thankful and feel to praise the Lord.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters. God bless the people of the Latter-day Saints, and prosper his work, and bless those who preside over and direct the affairs of his Church is my prayer, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

An original dramatic poem, written especially for this occasion, will now be read by its author, Elder Orson F. Whitney.

Elder Whitney then took the stand and read the poem, which follows:

THE LIFTED ENSIGN—A CALL TO ISRAEL

"And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth."—Isaiah 11:12.

Characters Impersonated:

ELIAS :: EPHRAIM :: JUDAH

ELIAS:

A voice that crieth in the Wilderness:

"Make plain and straight the Highway of our God!"

One Hundred Years, on Time's swift pinions flown,
 Since raised the Ensign for the Gathering—
 One hundred years, and still the standard waves,
 Summoning the chosen from world-wandering,
 Calling the covenant people from afar,
 To greet the coming of their God and King.

Children of Jacob, Isaac, Abraham,
 Sheep of the flock the Shepherd comes to fold!
 How have ye answered to his beckoning call?
 What have ye done his pathway to prepare?

Give answer, Ephraim, from thy mountain height,
 Where streams the signal seen and sung of yore—
 First-born of God in these, Earth's final days, Speak thou, and let the winds thy story tell!

EPHRAIM :

I hear thee, and with joy I answer thee:
 'Twas mine to welcome the return of Truth,
 Of old from Error's wide domain withdrawn;
 Mine to unshroud the buried mystery
 Of mighty nations, whispering from the dust;
 Mine to unfurl the Ensign, and to sound
 O'er sea and land the tidings wonderful;
 Flooding the world with truth and righteousness,
 Thrusting the sickle in the golden grain,
 Reaping a ripened field, and garnering
 The earliest sheaves of Israel's harvest home.

I've toiled and wept and bled to bring once more
 The fulness of Christ's Message unto men;
 To build redemptive Temples, that the dead,
 Obedient to law in spirit realms,
 Might with the living share in joys divine.
 More wouldst thou hear?—
 There's more I fain would tell.

ELIAS :

Tell on!—tell on! Truth wearies not mine ear.

EPHRAIM :

Expelled by tyranny from Freedom's ground,
 I tracked the lone untrodden wilderness.
 Here 'neath my virile touch, once barren wilds
 Now sing for joy and bloom delightfully.
 I've planted Zion's outposts, firm and strong,
 Rock-fortressed by the everlasting hills,
 Where Faith expectantly doth bide the hour
 When Zion's self from Eden's soil shall rise, Thrilled by the glad acclaim: "The Bridegroom comes!"

Nor all my ministries on Western shores,
Nor all my sympathies with next of kin.
Have I not stood on ancient Olivet,
And offered prayer to heaven for Judah's weal?
Have I not combed the universe and drawn
The choice of nations to this favored land,
Where homing tribes shall shout to trembling hills,
And lift hosannas to the listening skies
That light the towers of New Jerusalem?

By these and kindred works my faith is shown.
Thus have I answered to the Shepherd's call.

ELIAS:

And answered well. And He whose day now dawns
Shall crown thy valor with a recompense
As boundless, endless as eternity.
Now, Judah, tell thy tale! 'What deeds of thine
Are strewn as flowers along Messiah's way?

JUDAH:

Messiah?—Him I see not in the man
Whom Christians name the Christ, their holy one.
I see not in their God my fathers' God,
Whose covenant abides with Abraham:
Who spake to Moses in the fiery Mount,
And gave the Law to govern Israel.
Blind am I to what Ephraim beholds.
Perchance the air is purer, view more large,
On yonder height where stalwartly he stands,
Than in the misty vale where I respire.
Thinkst thou I err, his thought interpreting?

But I am with him in the war for right,
For justice and the freedom of the world.
And to this cause give I a willing hand,
And pledge my friendship, faith and loyalty.

ELIAS:

Thou sayest well—yet well might'st say far more
For Israel's God, Jehovah, Lord of All,
Who gave the Gospel as He gave the Law,
And died that endless death might vanquished be.
What limit to His merit or His claim?

JUDAH:

Plead not with me my ancient faith to change—
Older than aught by Christians deemed divine;
Pure as the snowy peaks of Lebanon,
That pour reviving streams o'er thirsty plains.
What nobler doctrine than the Decalogue?
What higher law than Justice can'st thou name?

ELIAS :

Is Justice more than Mercy—more than Love?
 No need to change thy faith, but build thereon.
 If thou the Perfect Law wouldst comprehend,
 Its loftiest, purest, heavenmost height attain,
 Add unto justice the pure love of God —
 Sweet Charity, of graces all the crown.

JUDAH :

Justice—not Mercy—is the Jew's demand.
 And tell me, when did Christian charity
 Mean justice for the wronged, down-trodden Jew?
 Mercy, forsooth! what mercy have they shown,
 Who slaughter 'neath the banner of the Cross?
 Too much we hear of love and charity,
 From lips of hate, from hearts of cruelty,
 Boasting a leader whom they follow not,
 Prating of love, but never practising.
 This Jesus, whom they laud, not emulate,
 Good man—e'en great perchance. But why a God?
 Joseph and Mary's son, a common Jew,
 Who sat at feet of rabbis famed for lore,
 And learned from them, yet brought forth nothing new.
 Why should the knee of Israel bend to him?

ELIAS :

Sat He at no man's feet for power to save
 And lift up fallen worlds. His wisdom came
 From heights more distant than the unseen stars,
 Fresh as the morning dew upon the flower;
 Pure as the snow—so white on Lebanon
 Till tainted by the soil through which it flows—
 Truth by tradition's muddy stream unroiled.
 The sapient rabbis, famed for antique lore,
 Might well have learned from Him—but would not learn.
 The wisest of the scribes and pharisees,
 Astounded, routed were, and put to shame
 By One who spake as no man since or ere.
 Old was his doctrine—truth is ever old—
 Old as its parent spring, Eternity,
 Old upon earth, from Adam until now.
 Yet seemed it new to them;—and this the cause,
 The chief and primal cause of that great crime
 Which on the cross He pardoned and forgave.
 Man—merest man will die a friend to save.
 Who but a God, to save both foe and friend?
 And very God was He, though human-born,
 Divinely-gotten Child of Deity.

But why waste words upon those recreant Jews,
Those pseudo Christians—false that mask as true?
The salt can lose its savor—so with them—
Unworthy parts, bespeaking not the whole.
Why dwell upon these human happenings?
Lift thought and argument to higher planes.

JUDAH:

Amen! say I. And now to me make plain—
To me, who am so dull—this mystery:
What need had Israel of this Nazarene?
Why came a Christ, great Moses having come?
And why a Gospel when the Law was known?

ELIAS:

What need of Christ—the Lord—since Moses came?
Moses to Christ was but as part to whole,
Preface to book, mere river to the sea,
And all the dispensations of the past,
When heaven hath gladdened earth with spirit showers,
Are but as streams that to one Ocean flow.

Why separate the Gospel from the Law—
Greater and less—container and contained?
Why part God from his prophet messengers,
Sent from Above to voice and work his will,
And preparation make for mightier things
Than e'er were known among the sons of men;
Completing what creation's morn began,
When Gods in glory launched a universe?

JUDAH:

But Abraham—the solemn Covenant—
Jehovah's sacred promise to His own:
"In thee and thine all men, all nations blest"—
Spoken these words upon the idle wind,
That now they be as though they ne'er had been?

ELIAS:

'Twas Christ made covenant with Abraham,
Jesus, Jehovah—for the twain are one;—
Then gave Himself that covenant to fulfill;
And mixt His people with earth's alien tribes,
That all—not Israel only—might be blest,
Nor least and last of nations fail to share
In blessings showered through him upon the world,
Sprinkled, as rain, with his believing blood;
Peopling the arid wastes of unbelief
With souls responsive to the clarion call
Shaking the seas and isles and continents,
And gathering what was scattered ages gone.

JUDAH :

But Moses—what of him? Lived he for naught?
Sayest thou his mighty mission was in vain?

ELIAS :

Nay ; but to round his glorious ministry,
And link the lesser with the greater part,
Making effectual all that went before,
In this, the dispensation last of all,
Came he the Keys of Gathering to restore ;
Lest Ephraim's rallying standard wave in vain
O'er Joseph's land and Zion's, known of old
By seers and prophets from thy household sprung,
Whose sacred words flow down the centuries
To find fulfillment in this ample age,
Where past and present, sire and son must join,
Perfection reign, and all in Christ be one.
Ephraim his part hath played, and thou no less,
In God's great drama—"Marvel and Wonder" named.
Wherefore, complete thy story, well begun.
What hast thou done His pathway to prepare?

JUDAH :

His pathway!—his, the peasant carpenter,
Whose body, stolen from the tomb, long since
Hath crumbled and returned to native dust?
Granting, for argument, he is to come,
Why should I strew with palms his earthward way?
Why for his coming should my soul prepare?

ELIAS :

Because He is thy Father and thy Friend,
Because He is the God of Israel—
Buried yet risen Savior of mankind,
Author and Giver of the life divine.
What hast thou done that He on earth may reign?
Silent? Then wouldst thou choose one speak for thee,
Who ne'er unfriendly was to thee or thine,
But sympathetic in thy sorrows all?
For thou hast borne the brunt of martyrdom,
Alike in Christian and in heathen lands,
Enduring long and suffering patiently,
While lesser breeds have trampled thee and spurned.
Driven—despoiled—tortured and trodden down,
Drinking the bitter cup, Captivity,
Yet still, through groaning, pain-racked centuries
Honoring Jehovah's name, Jehovah's law,
Spreading the knowledge of the living God
Amid the shrines of Baal and Ashtoreth.

Why 'twas thy hand the instrument became
Of purpose heaven-ordained ere earth began,
Whereby, through sacrifice and death, came Life,
To rescue and redeem a fallen world,—
No mortal knoweth. Only this men know:
Christ did not cast thee off. He that forgave
Is still thy Friend—as are true Christians all;
For none love God who hate what God doth love.

Forth in these modern days thine eager hand,
To build anew the old Jerusalem,
To raise once more her walls, oft leveled down;
To gather in thy sons and daughters fair,
And sow a sterile land with fruitfulness;
Redeeming thus thine ancient heritage,
That Zion's King may sit on David's throne.
Not all thy sons thy wearied arms uphold,
Not all are Hurs and Aarons in the strife.
Summon thy worldings from the tinsel show,
Where folly reigns and ruin works its will.
Teach them to play a better, nobler part,
And walk with thee the greater "Great White Way."

Rouse all that slumber beneath sordid spells,
Or unto gods of dust low homage pay;
Bid them to bring their gold and jewels rare,
Their heaped up stores of precious merchandise,
Their wealth, like Pelion on Ossa piled,
And beautify the Holy Place of Him
Whose law shall yet from Zion's land go forth,
Whose royal edict from Jerusalem.
For Israel o'er Amalek must prevail,
And repossess in full the Promised Land.

Ah! Judah, couldst thou see what Ephraim sees—
Thy monarch in that lowly Nazarene,
Long-symbolized by the oft-slain paschal lamb, Prophetic of the Sacrifice Supreme.

Would thou couldst see what ancient seers discerned,
What spirit-quicken'd eyes may now behold—
Messiah in that Prophet first-of-all,
The Moses of a mightier Exodus
Than e'er was dreamt of in rabbinic lore;
Deliverer of a captive universe,
In bondage to the powers of death and hell!

And thy Deliverer in a day to come,
When hostile legions thunder at thy gates,
When half thy city hath become a spoil,
As written in the scroll of prophecy.

Then shalt thou see and feel His wounded hands,
 Then shalt thou fall and worship at His feet;
 And all that fight 'gainst Jacob's, Judah's God,
 Shall be as dust and ashes whirl-wind-blown,
 As flying chaff before the hurricane.

JUDAH:

What confirmation hath this mighty claim?
 How can I know if such great things be true?
 If I be blind, who will my sight unscale?

ELIAS:

He who makes blind to see and deaf to hear!—
 Harken to Him and whomso'er He sends.
 Bow to the sceptre of the Son of God,
 The Gospel of the High and Holy One,
 And by that Gift which maketh manifest
 Thou'lt clearly see and of a surety know
 The message Ephraim brings thee is divine,—
 Old and yet new, the Everlasting Truth,
 Pure from the presence of our fathers' God.
 Fresh from the fountains of Eternity.

JUDAH:

Why Ephraim? Why his proud pre-eminence,
 Towering amid the tents of Israel?
 Why should his word or thine determine all?

ELIAS:

Because it is the word of Israel's God,
 Whose servant I, as I would fain be thine;—
 The God of Moses and of Abraham,
 The God of patriarchs and prophets all,
 The God of Israel free and Israel chained;
 God of the humble and the pure-in-heart;
 God of the just, in every age and clime;
 The Christ of Bethlehem and Calvary,
 The King of Kings, the crucified and crowned.
 Come, weary-laden, He will give thee rest,
 And thou shalt tread the rose-strewn path of peace.

EPHRAIM:

Heed, Judah! heed Messiah's messenger,
 Harken to me, thy brother and thy friend.
 No more doth envy of thee sour my soul,
 Nor doth thine anger vex me, as of yore.
 Forgiven as I forgive, clean, clear I stand,
 And I am sent Good Tidings to proclaim.

No man-made creed—no dogma vague, unsound—
The Ancient Faith, pure, simple, sweet, sublime,
The Gospel in its plentitude of power,
The Gospel in its fulness—this I bring.

ELIAS:

Judah! 'tis Ephraim calls—he loves thee well,
His hand extends, his heart, to welcome thee.
Why stand aloof? Why doubt and hesitate?
Jerusalem and Zion are as one.
See Japheth launch his ships to people them!
The Gentile, all unknowingly doth serve
The cause of Him who summons Israel
To Joseph's land, to Judah's hills and vales.
Behold them in their flight from Babel's doom,
Borne on the shoulders of the Philistine?

Be not outstript in such a glorious race.
Judah, arise! Put on thine ancient might,
Expand thy soul, enlarge thy sympathy;
Join hands with Ephraim, and bring to pass
All that the prophets and the seers foretold!

JUDAH:

Thy speech I can believe most kindly meant,
Thy motive pure and generous and just.
But who can change the course of destiny?
Who void what Great Jehovah hath decreed?
'Tis conscience guides me, and high Heaven alone
Doth hold, of that mysterious lock, the key.

Yet something tells me we shall meet again.
God grant it be as friends! And so, farewell.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn, "High on the mountain tops."

ELDER BRIGHAM H. ROBERTS

Of the First Council of Seventy

My dear brethren and sisters: I am going to read my remarks on this occasion in the interest of brevity, but chiefly in order that I may know when I am through. I warn you, however, that I read very much worse even than I speak. If I do not present all I would like to say on this occasion I shall still be very happy, because I am going to ask leave "to print" the parts that must be omitted in my verbal remarks. In this, too, I shall be happy, because the printed parts of the speech are already set up by the printers, and those parts constitute six large volumes, each from five hundred and sixty to six hundred pages per volume, making in all over 3,400 pages. That work, with the verbal remarks I am now making, will constitute my discourse at this first centennial conference of the Church, covering one hundred years of organized existence.

Of course you will surmise by now that I am making reference to the Comprehensive History of the Church, Century I, which the Presidency of the Church has directed to be published as one of the features of this centennial conference; and which they directed me about a year ago to prepare. I can now report that five of those volumes are printed and bound, and that the sixth will be printed and bound by the middle of April or at farthest by the first of May.

I would not have you think, however, this history of a hundred years has been wholly prepared in the time limit of a year. Its present publication is rather the culmination of many years—I might say of a life-time of work. Under circumstances quite remarkable—but too full of detail to speak of now—an opportunity came to me to write for a New York magazine what its publishers called a detailed “History of the Mormon Church.” To make space for it they changed the magazine from a bi-monthly to a monthly periodical; enlarged its size, and at the same time changed its name from “The American Historical Magazine” to “Americana.” “The History of the Mormon Church,” as the article prepared was then called, ran through six years of that publication, beginning in 1911, and ran at an average of forty-two pages per number. After its publication in that form, two years more were spent in verifying its numerous references and improving its arrangement; and now another rather strenuous year has been devoted to its final preparation for the press.

I will ask you to remember that this publication is not mine beyond the mere matter of construction. The publication of it both in the first instance and now was made possible by action of the Presidency of the Church, by President Joseph F. Smith, and now by President Heber J. Grant. From first to last the Presidency will have advanced for the publication as it now issues from the press at least $100,000; and they propose to have it sold at such prices to the people—as I understand it—so nearly the cost of producing it, that I am doubtful if they will ever recover from the sale of it the money they have advanced for its production and reasonable interest upon it.

Permit me to say that financially this work means nothing to me. Its publication and sale will not bring me one dollar for its preparation; if it did I should shame to speak of it here as advertising my own wares. But this is not so, the work is not mine financially, I could not have financed it, neither shall I profit financially by it. My work in connection with it has been given in the ordinary service of my regular work in the Church, prompted and sustained through all the years by my deep love of the subject, and my desire to leave on record one sermon on the New Dispensation of the Gospel. And I am grateful to those who have made possible the production of my discourse that requires six large full volumes to contain it. In my remarks, then, I am just reporting a work which the Church has undertaken and has brought to what I venture to think is a successful termination.

Some may question the need of so voluminous a work. Six volumes! Why could not the history of a hundred years of the New Dispensation have been written in one volume, or at most in two? For some purposes that might well be. But I desire to say a word of justification for the largeness of this work.

In the first place you have to deal with an immense subject. You have to consider the first century of the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. That is the dispensation of all dispensations; the one which will gather into itself all the dispensations of God's revealed will through all the ages, from the days of Adam until the present time; the dispensation when God will "gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and in earth, even in him" (Eph. i). The history of this dispensation then is some contract. In it the ends of the earth meet. It comprises in a way, the history of the world and of the human race. It will have to deal with all true philosophy and all true religion, and the contact of these with false philosophies and false religions and the struggle for existence between the two—the false and the true. Of course, I have not attempted in my puny six volumes to go into the treatment of all this vast field. My work covers merely the first century of this New Dispensation; but even so the work, as you see, is necessarily a large one, and needs scope for its treatment; room for the consideration of its mighty themes and the correlation of them with past, present and future. So that the very largeness of the theme alone would justify and demand a large work. I have found the scope of six volumes inconveniently narrow in places for an adequate treatment of some phases of the great subject in hand. There are other considerations also which justify the employment of so large a treatment of the subject besides mere largeness of it.

A few years ago a critic of some standing in the Christian world—he was secretary of a large group of so-called Christian churches—conceded that "the Mormon church is possessed of elements of great power. These elements are founded in its principles of centralized power, and in its social program." He said, "there is no real menace in the Mormon Church to our (i. e. United States) political institutions;" dangers along that line were past. And then:

"Mormonism has reached the zenith of its supernatural visions, is receding, gradually fading in the Mormon consciousness itself. The time spirit will cure it of its abnormalities. It will die amid its own worshippers."

"The way to oppose Mormonism is not to throw mud upon it. A campaign of detraction only helps it to grow. The thing to do is to treat it with candor and fairness. * * * It must fall of its own weight, if it is so to fall at all."

Then he treats us to this reflection with its implication:

"Our little systems have their day;
 They have their day, and cease to be;
 They are but broken lights of Thee,
 And thou, O Lord, art more than they."

This critic is Wm. Oeschger, Secretary of the Nebraska Christian churches (State Journal, Nebraska, Nov. 24, 1918).

At a public meeting in Reading, Penn., a lady submitted the following question to me:

"In view of the fact that the drift of the world's thought is away from acceptance of the miraculous, what is to be the future of Mormonism?"

The question is a thoughtful one. It is a fact that the trend of the world's thought is away from acceptance of the miraculous. It is also true that Mormonism had its birth in what men call miracles; in such miracles as are said to tax the credulity of the mind of man to accept, and of modern man in particular. In view of these premises, then, what is to be the future of your faith, Latter-day Saints? The future of Mormonism? Is it the case of an inflowing tide that has carried a ship far up a gently sloping shore, and that now the tide ebbing, leaves the ship beached on the shore, to become a helpless derelict that in time must perish?

Another suggestion: A recent writer, as late as January, 1930, discusses what to him are the necessary limitations of Mormonism. Permit me to say that this writer knows his subject, and our protagonists will not find it the easiest task in the world to meet all his criticism. This writer concedes that of the whole group of religious movements in America that arose about the same time that Mormonism had its origin, Mormonism alone has survived; that is, in any way worth while, and is today a really "going concern." Then he asks, this being so, "Why then has not God's kingdom overspread the Republic?" His answer is: "Simply because it is self-limited." And he argues that matter of self-limitation of "Mormonism" in this way:

"The quest for the perfect American religion could be successful only on the lowest level of intelligence. Piety and business could only be completely fused by means of a creed too ridiculous for any widespread acceptance. * * * The doctrines of Mormonism are indispensable to its system."

The critic is right on that point. "The doctrines of Mormonism are indispensable to its system." Mormonism must be wholly accepted or wholly rejected. Its doctrines, and the whole-hearted acceptance of them is indispensable to membership in its system. The miraculous visions of Joseph Smith, the miraculous visitation of Moroni, and the miraculous translation of the Book of Mormon, the fact of direct and continuous revelation from God, all must be accepted or Mormonism can have no standing; nor can anyone have a standing in Mormonism without acceptance of these doctrines. Then our author proceeds:

"If they [meaning the doctrines] are altered or rejected in any particular, the system must collapse!"

Nothing more true was ever said of Mormonism than that; and I hope Latter-day Saints appreciate the fact of it. Then our writer launches his thunderbolt:

"And they (the doctrines of Mormonism) compose a body of belief almost incredibly absurd. Mormonism made a formidable effort to include all the imbecile dreams that were contemporary with its rise. It was and it remains, at once, millennial restorationist and perfectionist. Fossilized in its canons is nearly every metaphysical, theological and liturgical insanity of the American pentecost. It epitomizes the religious nonsense of a full half century. It was too fundamentally a reaction, as creeds of restoration must necessarily be, so that it retains notions long since discarded by its competitors. A body of beliefs as absurd and grotesque may exist on a small scale here and there, in Los Angeles or Zion City, but none so grotesque is accepted by any number comparable to the Mormons."

And these "absurd" and "grotesque" miraculous doctrines, it is argued, will constitute the limitations of Mormonism, and confine its acceptance to a few. That is to say, according to this view Mormonism may become a tolerated, minor sect, but never will be a world movement—God's kingdom, overspreading the republic and the world. To recur to my Reading, Penn., lady's question—for involved in that, by implication, is the same argument and conclusion as in this American Mercury writer's discussion—"In view of the trend of modern thought away from acceptance of the miraculous, what is to be the future of Mormonism?"

Which is it to be, Latter-day Saints, a limited but tolerated sect, or a world movement? A beached ship on the shore—derelict of the receding world-thought-tides, or the kingdom of God overspreading the nations? What is to be your answer, Oh Church of Latter-day Saints, to these criticisms and this prediction based upon your alleged self-limitations, which are relied upon as marking your defeat as a world movement?

Again what is to be your answer? My answer is—Your history of one hundred years will be your vindication; will effectively prove your claims to the world movement character of your religion and your church. Not a sect, but the universal religion founded upon Jesus Christ—his Gospel and the New Dispensation of it, the complement and fulfilment of all that has gone before, and prophecy of what shall be hereafter. To make this appear, however, your historic statement, your history must not be merely a recital of events. The events must be coordinated and so linked together that the rationale of successive events shall be made apparent; and how they link in with the world movements which but spell out God's purposes struggling to get expressed. All this requires ample space—every word of six volumes!

Above all, your history must be honest and fearless. Not mere eulogy of what may be your own side, and a convenient silence, or a half concealment of the facts and consequences that make against you. If it be the duty of the drama and acting to so hold the mirror up to nature as "to show virtue her own features, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure," still more is it the duty of history to so mirror truth and only truth. All this that your History may command the respect of mankind. In our case the History must be so full and frank and fair that truth and the spirit of truth shall be what sunlight is to the atmosphere, so permeating it as to be in and through it an everywhere present spirit of truth, as the Spirit of God is everywhere present through his creations. Such a presence that can no more be separated from your History than sunlight can be plucked from the atmosphere. Such a statement of, and such a treatment of the great truths brought forth in Century One of the organized existence of the Church of the New Dispensation; and so related to what must be the grand purposes of an All-wise and All-loving and Just and Merciful and Righteous Heavenly Father, that the truth will stand vindicated and self-evident to the minds of the men of good will by the mere statement of it, largely enough accepted to make it the dominant kingdom of truth. Here a doctrine of our first prophet, Joseph Smith, helps us:

"Every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God has such an influence over the mind that it is convincing without other testimony. Faith cometh by hearing."

That is to say, Truth has a native power of its own, and if stated clearly and fully it will be its own witness.

"No," said Joseph Smith, so sure was he of this principle—"No, I don't want anyone to tell I am a prophet, or attempt to prove my word." He was confident of the self-evident truth of the spoken word. This being true, our cause shall suffer little from the threat of self-limitations, and the menace of unbelief because of our doctrines being "absurd" or "grotesque," since the truth of them may be established by a clear and effective statement of them; the truth being its own witness. Tell your story, preach your sermon. Write your History in the very spirit of truth; and the spirit of truth will rise up to confirm it: "its own convincing power will be its witness."

I have so tried to write your history.

As to whether Mormonism will be merely a tolerated sect, or a world movement, the veritable kingdom of God to spread over all nations, it but remains for those who are the members of this Church which God has founded, who constitute its priesthood and its membership; it only remains for them to keep the vision splendid before them with which this work began; and I predict a world movement, not a sect will be its character.

God, who at sundry times and in divers manners made known his plans and purposes with reference to man's earth life, such revelations being known as dispensations of his Gospel, has in these last days made known that these successive dispensations have come through the ages as an intermittent stream flows through a valley, fed at times from side streams coming in from right and left. Sometimes the river may become wholly dry; then the river springs up again to flow for a time copiously, with life-giving force, only to sink again from view. But finally God, fulfilling his purposes designed from the first, opens the heavens and gives such floods of rain that so start the stream from all its sources, that it shall never again run dry or spread out and be lost in desert sands. It will constantly widen and deepen until ultimately it will merge with the ocean, which is its home. So God's dispensations shall be gathered and flow into one, the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. Your dispensation and mine, meaning the one in which we work; God's dispensation, really, in the which he will gather together in one "all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth, even in him."

This, then, is the message of our Church voiced from Century One of our organized existence to the world—the incoming of the final dispensation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

"Hear, O Heavens and give ear, O Earth, for God hath spoken!" The veil between heaven and earth has been rent from top to bottom. Heaven's pavilion is taken up, and God the Father and Jesus Christ his Son are revealed anew.

God's plans and purposes in all the dispensations are made known, there has been a unifying of the truth of all the dispensations of God to menward.

The everlasting covenant, of which the blood of the Christ is both sign and seal, has been renewed.

A true priesthood, which is God's power and authority given to man, which becomes God working through men, has been conferred on man in regular order of succession.

The Church of Jesus Christ has again, and for the last time, been set up and made the depository of God's truth and the fulness of it; and has been given the mission of proclaiming that truth and the fulness of it to every nation and kindred and tongue and people. Also to this Church has been given the high mission of perfecting the lives of those who receive its truth.

The gathering of all Israel has been proclaimed, and the restoration of Judah to Jerusalem with commandment to resume his national life.

Joseph, son of Jacob, his place as prince in Israel has been made known; and to him has been given the gathering of the tribes, to receive their blessings at the hands of Ephraim, preparatory to going to their own and final lands of inheritance.

The Record of Joseph in the hands of Ephraim, the Book of Mormon, has been revealed and translated by the power of God, and supplies the world with a new witness for the Christ, and the truth and the fulness of the Gospel.

The Zion of God, the capital of the empire of the Christ in the new world, the place of it is revealed, and for many years proclaimed and will not be moved out of its place.

Elias who held the keys of God's Church in the days of Abraham and blessed him, has restored the patriarchal powers and graces of the priesthood, to link together the families of men in patriarchal order, from now to the time of the end.

Elijah, translated to heaven without tasting death, and therefore made the man of two worlds, heaven and earth, and by that token capable of working in each and both, has restored the keys of the long promised priesthood that turns the hearts of the children to the fathers, and the hearts of the fathers to the children. In this first century of existence for the Church, and in consequence of this, Elijah's, mission, more than seven millions of baptisms for the dead have been performed, and more than fifteen millions of ordinances (including the baptisms) have been performed for the dead. Seven temples have been erected in various parts of the land of Zion, for a continuance of this holy work, and more will yet be builded. Think what that work may be when there are a hundred temples instead of seven!

Stakes of Zion are multiplied in the land of Zion, in Canada, in Mexico, in the midst of the Rocky Mountains, and also along the Pacific slope; and soon, as our first Prophet declared, and but three months before his death, on the Atlantic seaboard likewise would stakes of Zion be organized, naming specifically stakes of Zion to be established in Boston and New York, and other great cities. The Atlantic ocean but washes the shores of Zion land on the east, as the Pacific ocean washes the shores of Zion land on the west; and the great interior valleys of the Mississippi and his mighty tributaries, will also be places for stakes of Zion, and the Gulf slopes—the south-land—as well.

Zion is lengthening her cords and is strengthening her stakes, and multiplying her altars to the true God by the erection of temples, stake houses, and chapels throughout the land. It seems to me that the chief activity of our President, Heber J. Grant, in late years, has become the dedicating of places of worship throughout and in all parts of the land of Zion.

And these things will increase more and more. And while, as the prophets of the Book of Mormon foresaw, the possession of the saints upon the land of promise would be few, and scattered upon all the face of the promised land (I Nephi, chapter xiv:12), yet will they be multiplied until they shall become a mighty people; and from among them will arise those who shall be able to move in upon and redeem Zion, the centerplace thereof, and fulfill God's word and purposes as to the mission of the capital city of the Christ's spiritual, growing empire in America.

May men truthfully call this a work of narrow limitations? The business and work of a merely tolerated sect—one of the broken lights of God? Or is it the beginning of a world movement for the decreed fulfilment of all the purposes of God? A world movement, I say, for the completion of God's purposes with reference to the establishment of Zion, the salvation of men, the redemption of the earth and the fulfilment of all the words of the holy prophets since the world began!

A PRAYER

And now, O God, the Eternal Father! Here as to an altar, I bring this work of mine, and dedicate it unto thee and to thy cause. If there is any way of excellence in it, I am sure it is of thee, and unto thee belongs all glory and all praise and honor. As thy dear Son, the Christ, in the council before the world began, when accepting the mission to redeem the world, said, "Father, the glory be thine;" so now, in this so infinitely smaller matter, but I trust in that same spirit, I say in the presence of all these people, Father, the glory be thine for this work accomplished.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The bouquet of beautiful flowers to my left was sent to me by Mr. Gus L. Becker of Ogden. With the flowers came a letter in which he states that during his forty years of residence here he has discovered that we are a God-fearing, honorable, upright people.

The bouquet just behind me was sent by the various General Boards of the auxiliary associations. It is composed of one hundred roses.

A solo and chorus, "I have seen my Maker face to face," was sung by Rilla Wilson and the choir.

After the closing prayer was offered by Elder Henry H. Blood, President of the North Davis Stake of Zion, Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, April 7th.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The meeting began promptly at 10 o'clock a. m., Friday, April 7th, President Heber J. Grant presiding.

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Provo Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of Gerrit de Jong.

Opening selection by the choir and congregation, "O say, what is truth?"

Elder Lewis Anderson, President of the Manti Temple, offered the invocation.

A sacred solo, "I sought the Lord," was sung by Anna Hinckley.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I had hoped yesterday to have time to read a number of telegrams that we have received. I had also hoped to hear from the Presiding Bishop of the Church, who presides over all of the members of the Lesser Priesthood—Priests, Teachers and Deacons—but it is a difficult matter of course to concentrate one's thoughts and stay within a limited time.

CABLE MESSAGE FROM ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

We shall not attempt to read the many telegrams that we have received from individuals, including leading business men in the United States and in Europe, but I would like to read a cablegram from one of the absent members of the Twelve Apostles. It is from Liverpool, dated April 4th:

"First Presidency: The Church members of the European Missions number nearly thirty thousand with the missionaries about seven hundred strong, unitedly express joyous gratitude for the blessings of the Gospel and the present prosperity of the Church, and extend to you and the whole Church felicitations upon this happy occasion. May the Gospel, true to its divine purpose and history, spread over the earth to make multitudes glad through righteousness.

John A. Widtsoe."

FELICITATIONS FROM GOVERNOR OF WYOMING

We have a telegram from Governor Frank C. Emerson of Wyoming.

"Heber J. Grant, President, Mormon Church, Salt Lake City, Utah.

"Please accept my felicitations upon the centennial celebration of the founding of the Mormon Church. From the time of the arrival of Brigham Young and his band of courageous followers in the Salt Lake Valley the Mormon people have had a leading part in the welfare and development of this western country. We appreciate their contributions to the progress of the commonwealth of Wyoming. It gives me pleasure to designate Honorable L. T. Oldroyd, our

Commissioner of Agriculture, to represent Wyoming upon this auspicious occasion.

Cordially yours,

Frank C. Emerson,
Governor of Wyoming."

OTHER TELEGRAPHIC CONGRATULATIONS

"Salt Lake City, April 5th, 1930, President Heber J. Grant: The Knights of Columbus of Utah extends congratulations on the centennial conference and wishes your people a successful meeting.

Vere L. McCarthy, State Deputy.

Dr. J. J. Galligan, Master of Fourth Degree."

A cablegram dated Capetown, South Africa, April 6th, arrived before the conference meetings yesterday. They had held their services over there on the 6th of April and we received the word after they were over. It is from Don Mack Dalton, President of the South African Mission:

"Our services had great spirit. We join you in remembrance and reverence. Missionaries well."

From Holger M. Larsen, Copenhagen, Denmark:

"Elders and Saints in Denmark send congratulations on this centennial anniversary."

From Edward P. Kimball, Dresden, Germany:

"Missionaries and Saints German-Austrian Mission greet you in love with Hosanna."

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Presiding Bishop of the Church

I rejoice, my brethren and sisters, in the splendid gathering of the saints this beautiful morning, and the wonderful gatherings that were held yesterday. I rejoice in the favor that is granted to me, in common with you, to take part in the exercises of this remarkable conference. I feel deeply grateful to the Lord that I am privileged to live in this day and age, and to enjoy the confidence of my brethren of the General Authorities, and of you, my brethren and sisters, the presidencies of stakes, bishoprics of wards, and all the members of the Church, so far as I may be worthy of that confidence. I can assure you that I desire to live to be worthy of it. I desire to serve you, because everyone who is called to any position in this Church is a servant of the people.

EXTENT OF PRIESTHOOD MEMBERSHIP

When the priesthood were gathered here yesterday, and when it was not possible for all to attend who desired to obtain seats, I was thinking of the problem that was before us—the First Presidency and those of us who had the seating of this building in hand—as to how we could accommodate those who desired to be here. There are 150,000 members of the priesthood of the Church. Of course not nearly all of them could be here on that occasion, although many of them would have liked to come. Of those who are presiding officers of the stakes and wards and of the various quorums of the priesthood, there are fourteen thousand—practically double the seating capacity of this building, as at present. There is room for only six thousand in the body of the hall. Consequently it was necessary to cut down, very extensively, the number allotted to each stake of Zion. As a result, a large proportion of those who were seated here are the presiding officers of the stakes and wards and other high priests, as well as seventies and elders. There were not as many of the Aaronic priesthood as we should have liked to see, and as could have been seated here, had there been room for them to be seated. I am sure that there could have been two or three times the capacity of this building of Aaronic priesthood members who would have been glad to be here on that occasion, because they appreciated the memorable occasion, and what a tremendous influence it would have in their lives to take part in this centennial celebration.

FRUITS OF THE GOSPEL

I desire to read to you two or three quotations. One of these I was reminded of by the message of the First Presidency yesterday. When the Savior was delivering that remarkable Sermon upon the Mount, among other things he said:

“By their fruits ye shall know them. Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

“A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.”

I am reminded also of the wise man Solomon, who had been trained up in righteousness by his father, King David, and had become king of Israel under the most prosperous conditions, but who went astray and was led into transgression by reason of the luxuries he enjoyed. Toward the close of his life, after having tasted the bitter as well as the sweet of life, he wrote the book of Ecclesiastes, and in the closing verses of that book he makes the following declaration:

“Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man.”

Now there is one other quotation I would like to present to you, and that is from one of the Lectures on Faith, contained in the fore-part of the book of Doctrine and Covenants:

A religion that does not require the sacrifice of all things never has power sufficient to produce the faith necessary unto life and salvation.”

GROWTH OF THE CHURCH

Frequent reference has been made already to the humble beginning of this work. I am reminded of its commencement in the pleasant homestead of Peter Whitmer, in the township of Fayette, located in that beautiful western section of New York state—a section of rolling hills and lovely lakes. While those six men were met together I believe they appreciated to some extent the tremendous power that was in the work; but whether or not they visualized its growth and development from that time to this is a question. When we think of those humble conditions in that obscure village, and then realize that today there are approximately seven hundred thousand members in the Church, located in all the states of this Union, in Canada and Mexico, in South America, in practically every civilized nation and on the Pacific islands, we comprehend what a remarkable growth it has had. Yet in all its development it has not lost in the least that humble faith and devoted spirit which characterized its beginning. When we sense also that in the hundred years that have elapsed since the beginning of this Church the most remarkable developments have occurred in the progress of civilization, and with those developments the Church has kept pace. It has met and helped to solve the problems of humanity and has presented divine truths which have changed and molded the spiritual thought throughout the world for good. The doctrines declared by the Church have been constructive in their nature. They have not tended to cause doubt or disbelief in the hearts of men. On the contrary they have helped to bring men to a realization of the fundamental truths which have been declared by prophets and seers in all dispensations.

EFFECTS OF "MORMONISM"

"Mormonism," it is said, and well said I think, enters into every phase of the lives of its members. It molds their characters in conformity with these principles. It enters into their habits and influences them. It affects their physical beings and their mental development. It affects their hearts and their desires toward their fellow men.

What are some of the effects of "Mormonism?" What have been some of the effects in all the years that it has existed? I would like to discuss with you for a few moments a few of the practical things that may be evidenced in the lives, the habits and the characters of the Latter-day Saints. There are various things by which the faith and sincerity of the people may be measured. Particularly, there are three ways that I should like to consider with you wherein the devotion of the Latter-day Saints has been evidenced in their lives. It is said, as was stated by President Nibley yesterday, that "sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven." It is declared in the quotation I have read that any religion that cannot require the sacrifice of all things never has power sufficient to produce the faith necessary unto life and salvation. If Abraham had not had the faith necessary to conform to the command given him of the Lord to sacrifice his own son, Isaac, undoubtedly he would not have been able and worthy to receive the great blessings which our Eternal Father gave to him. His obedience to that command, even though it was not required at his hands, proved his devotion, his loyalty, and his entire and complete faith in God.

The Latter-day Saints who have accepted the Gospel in faith, and with a real desire to serve the Lord, have conformed to the principles of the Gospel, even though they might require what would appear to be sacrifice on their part; and yet I am sure that we all appreciate the fact that every sacrifice is a blessing in disguise. It is a means of progress and development for every one of us.

RESTRAINT OF PHYSICAL APPETITES

One of the ways whereby men may evidence their faith, integrity and sincerity in their religion, is by restraining and controlling their physical appetites, in conformity with the principles which are offered for their welfare. In the Word of Wisdom the Latter-day Saints have the finest set of rules that is to be found, I think, anywhere, affecting the physical being of the people, and also affecting their mental progress and development.

Not long ago a member remarked to me that he had been in the East and had met a prominent business man in New York, who had inquired of him regarding the Mormon people. Among other things this local man had told him of the Word of Wisdom and of the stipulations and requirements contained therein. The man said to him: "Do your people observe that set of principles and instructions?" He replied: "Not entirely, but to a considerable extent." "Well," said the man, "if your people conform to those instructions, they will become the finest people in the United States or anywhere else in the world, in physical vigor and in mental development." The Lord has said to us that these instructions are given for the weak and the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints, and when the Lord says that to us, it ought to be sufficient, whether it be in the way of a suggestion or a commandment. It means that when the Lord gives a commandment it is intended for the progress, the welfare, and the blessing of those to whom it is given.

FAITH, PRODUCES WILLING OBEDIENCE

During all these years, the Latter-day Saints have, in large measure, observed the Word of Wisdom. There are some people who complain that no church has any right to direct what one shall or shall not eat or drink. On the other hand, if we accept the proposition that spiritually we are the sons and daughters of God, that these bodies are created in his image, that the Holy Spirit should enter and be a part of our tabernacles and inspire us, and that the Lord expects of us that we shall be physically sound, it is by all means important that we should learn to control and regulate our appetites and desires and keep these bodies clean in order that we may be entitled to enjoy the Spirit of the Lord and draw near to him. But there is no compulsion in this or any other principle of the Gospel. We have our free agency. If we obey, we gain the benefits and the privileges accruing therefrom.

RESULTS OF OBSERVANCE OF WORD OF WISDOM

Now what has been the result of the observance of the Word of Wisdom on the part of the Latter-day Saints? I cannot tell you in so many words, but I can quote to you some of the statistics that come into our office with regard to the vital conditions among the Latter-day Saints. We cannot say, for instance, how many members of the Church have cancer. But we can say how many members of the Church die of cancer, and that is a very important thing among people today, because cancer is a serious disease; and so with various other maladies. The death rate among the Latter-day Saints for the last few years has averaged about 7.5 per thousand. The average death rate of the United States registered area, which includes the most progressive states, is 11.4 or more per thousand. In other words, the Latter-day Saints' death rate is only about two-thirds of the death rate throughout the United States.

ANALYSIS OF RESULTS

Let us analyze that a little farther, as to the causes of death. Among other things we find that in the matter of what are known as epidemic, endemic and infectious diseases, the death rate in the United States is more than double what it is among the people of this Church. The Lord has declared to us that scourges should come over the earth, and that if we will observe his commandments we shall escape those scourges. Not entirely, probably, because we are all subject to death. In a measure, we are all subject to diseases. But as I see it, through the observance of the Word of Wisdom, we are promised at least partial escape from many of these scourges. In the matter of diabetes, which is also a disease of some considerable concern among mankind, the death rate in the Church is approximately half that of the United States average.

EFFECTS OF NARCOTICS

It is recognized that tobacco and spirituous liquors are causes, at least in part, of cancer, and in this respect we find that the death rate in the Church as compared to the United States is less than half. In the matter of nervous diseases, it is recognized also that certain stimulants affect the nervous system. The death rate from diseases of the nervous system in the Church is less than half that of the United States. In the matter of kidney and kindred diseases, which are also affected by the use of stimulants, the death rate throughout the Church is about one-fourth that of other parts of the country. The death rate from diseases of the heart and circulatory system in the Church is approximately one-half that of the United States average.

Are not these records ample evidence to you that the observance of the Word of Wisdom is worth while? Are not these the fruits of a good tree? Of course, we ought to observe this or any principle because the Lord has made it known to us. That ought to be sufficient, but when we examine the effects produced we find that we are fully justified, from a material standpoint, in observing it.

RESISTANCE TO MORAL TEMPTATIONS

There is another way in which men and women can demonstrate their faith and sincerity and that is by resisting immoral tendencies, by refusing to do those things which we have been advised are vicious and contrary to the word of the Lord, as affecting relations between the sexes. The influences of today throughout the world are such as to undermine moral standards. Virtue and chastity are apparently not considered of great concern. The Latter-day Saints recognize the fact that strict morality is of the utmost importance. We have been taught to abhor immorality and unchastity. The Lord has declared to us that those who practice sexual transgressions will degenerate, and cannot retain the Spirit of the Lord, which is the spirit of life and truth and virtue.

BENEFITS OF HIGH MORAL STANDARDS

Now what are the evidences as to the benefits of the observance by the Latter-day Saints of high moral standards as compared with other people? I would like to take the opportunity to give you certain government statistics. The Church does not keep record of births out of wedlock, but the government records for Utah and Idaho, where the majority of the Latter-day Saints live, as compared with the rest of the United States, show that the illegitimate birth rate in each of these two states is less than one-third. And that is true also of still-births out of wedlock. Is that any evidence to you as to the benefits of the observance of the declarations of God and the teachings by the leaders of this Church with regard to the proper relations between the sexes?

THE MARRIAGE RELATION

Then taking the other phase of that relation, that is, marriage, the Latter-day Saints have been taught continually that marriage is a sacred obligation, and that it should be undertaken, not only for this life but for eternity as well. Mutual respect and consideration between husband and wife, and continuance in the marriage relation, are, likewise, evidences of the faith and uprightness of the members of the Church. The bearing of children and the proper training of those children is enjoined as a responsibility that every married couple should undertake. The proper training of children, as well as the bringing of them into the world, is of great importance.

MARITAL STANDARDS

What are the results of this training among the Latter-day Saints, comparatively? We find that the marriage rate throughout the Church as compared with the government statistics for the nation, is about 43% greater. The birth rate throughout the Church is about 45% higher than that of the United States generally. The infant mortality rate in the Church is approximately 62% that of the United States. It is interesting to note, further, that the divorce rate throughout the Church is only about 40% of the United States average, and that the divorce rate of those who were married in the temple is only about 18% that of the United States, or about 43% of the total divorces in the Church. Isn't that evidence also of the real benefits derived from the observance of these divine instructions? Those who are married properly, who have taken upon them these covenants in the temples and have seriously and with due appreciation of the responsibility, promised to maintain this bond in affection not only for this life but for eternity, have been so impressed with this obligation that they are able to live together in love and joy and peace.

FAITH EVIDENCED BY LIBERAL GIVING

There is one other way that I would like to refer to briefly whereby, it seems to me, the faith and sincerity of the members is clearly shown. It is said that a man's pocket-book is very near to his heart. I am told that Michiavelli, a diplomat engaged in Italian affairs of state in the middle ages, a keen, wily schemer, and politician, expressed this statement—whether it be true or not—"You may kill their fathers, you may take away their wives and daughters, you may destroy their brothers, and they will forgive you, but you dare not touch their pocket books." That indicates his idea, at least, as to how precious one's pocket book was. But when men and women will give liberally and consistently of their means and of their time for the welfare of their fellow men, it is surely an evidence of their faith and sincerity. The true Latter-day Saints have been and are giving liberally and devotedly through the observance of the law of tithing and the making of donations for the poor and for other purposes. They have shown, I think, a remarkable spirit of giving of their means, and of their time and labor, because they understand that these are commandments of the Lord.

INDIVIDUAL GROWTH

What are the results? Well, in an individual way, the result has been to overcome sordid selfishness, produce loyalty and exhibit more positive faith in God and his work in the hearts of those who have observed these things. Brotherly kindness has increased. Financial integrity has been promoted. Individual honesty has been strengthened, and the cooperative spirit developed. Men become more charitable. The finer qualities which make for character, and enhance peace and joy and love in the earth are brought out. The spirit of service which makes for greater community welfare is being encouraged.

Then, in a spiritual way, what are the effects? The tremendous missionary work that the Church has carried on, the preaching of the Gospel to mankind everywhere, has been made possible not only by the observance of the principle of tithing, but by the giving of time and additional means individually by the missionaries and through their parents.

MATERIAL PROGRESS

Again, in a material way, what has been produced? The building of a great number of community buildings, of temples and of ward and stake meetinghouses. Further, there is the large Church educational program, and the extensive service rendered in the care of the poor. I think there is no other people anywhere that is doing as much proportionately, in the way of erecting fine places of worship and social centers. Also the effect is to develop in the members the spirit of thrift and the desire and determination to meet their obligations manfully and provide for their needs. The Church is undertaking to qualify its people as a whole to secure greater equality and mutual consideration so that everyone, as far as possible, shall properly develop. It causes everyone to seek to increase his or her earning capacity; not only for their own welfare but that they may be able to help the Church in larger measure and to be of greater usefulness in the community. All of these things result therefrom.

RENEW OUR COVENANTS

Now, in that which has been presented here, it is not intended to boast of the Latter-day Saints. The desire has been to show that the observance of these principles produces lasting blessings in the lives of those who have faith. My brethren and sisters, we have reached the end of this first century of the Gospel restoration gloriously, and stand on the threshold of the second, which is fraught with even greater events than have occurred heretofore. Shall we not here and now renew our covenants with the Lord, and solemnly pledge ourselves individually and unitedly to serve God and keep all his commandments, to prepare for sacrifice and bring forth the fruits of right living? May the Lord help every one of us to do this, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

President Heber J. Grant read the following letter and message from Elder Reed Smoot:

March 29, 1930.

"President Heber J. Grant,
47 East South Temple Street,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dear President Grant:

"As you are aware, it is impossible for me to attend the April Conference. I regret it more than words can express. I enclose you a short statement, which I would like to have you present to the Conference if agreeable to you.

"May God's blessings ever attend you and may the coming Conference be one of the great epochs in the history of the Church is my desire and prayer.

Your brother,

(Signed) Reed Smoot."

Apostle Reed Smoot, who is unavoidably detained by his duties in the nation's capital, sends greeting to this conference his most cordial good wishes and a message in these words:

ANNOUNCEMENT OF TRUTH IN THE RESURRECTION

Ages ago, when the Son of God, in mortal tabernacle, stood before a human judgment seat in the city of Jerusalem, the Roman procurator asked him, "What is Truth?"

That query has been of vital significance to mankind in all the succeeding ages, and was never more vital than at this very time and on this present occasion. Only a few days after the scene in the Roman court, visitors to an empty sepulchre, seeking to view the body of the crucified Jesus of Nazareth, were accosted by a heavenly messenger who said concerning him: "He is not here: for he is risen." The angel's words were the announcement of a wonderful Truth, of paramount importance to all mankind. The resurrection of the Redeemer and Savior of the world had come to pass.

TRUTH REVEALED THROUGH JOSEPH SMITH

More than one hundred years ago, to specify as to time and place, in the spring of 1820, near the town of Palmyra, state of New York, there came a divinely manifested vision to a young man, Joseph Smith, who was of Israel's birthright heritage and who earnestly sought the truth. That vision was the appearance of God the Eternal Father and his Son, the resurrected Jesus of Nazareth. Pointing to the other heavenly Personage, God gave witness: "This is my Beloved Son, hear him." It was the divine revelation in this age of the resurrected Christ. It was the Truth. Multitudes in Palestine and adjacent countries had no knowledge of or belief in the resurrection on the day of its first announcement, but its truth has permeated the ages since then and has brought life, and hope, and joy, to myriads of our fellowmen. Multitudes in this and other lands had no knowledge of or belief in the revelation of the resurrected Redeemer to the young man Joseph Smith on the day of its occurrence, but its truth today is permeating people in all lands, and will grow to a perfect knowledge in the due time of the Lord, because that revelation is God Almighty's Truth, and will prevail.

Some years later, in May, 1829, there came the restoration of the Lord's priesthood authority to administer the required ordinances of the Gospel; and in the next year there followed the publication of the divinely revealed word known as the Book of Mormon and the event of which we celebrate the one hundredth anniversary at this April Conference, namely, the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ, for the accomplishment of God's great purposes among men in this latter-day dispensation, known in scripture as the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. Further organization and divine revelation succeeded this event, until April 3, 1836, when the revelation of the fulness of the Gospel was completed by the appearance of other heavenly messengers with the keys of their respective dispensations, the culminating one being the promised coming of the Prophet Elijah with the keys of the priesthood authority which he held, and that prophet's announcement to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery that "the keys of this dispensation are committed into your hands, and by this ye may know that the great and dreadful day of the Lord is near, even at the door."

More than twelve years before this latter date, on September 21, 1823, God had promised to Joseph Smith, through an angel, that he would send to him the prophet Elijah, with the mission to "plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers." Among millions of our race today, outside of membership in the Church as well as with those inside, this prediction is being verified in a truly wonderful manner. These millions are seeking to know of the promises made to their fathers; and truly in the world today there is wide turning of the hearts of the children to their fathers in genealogical research through records of ages ago. These facts and many others bear indubitable evidence that the revelation of the Gospel to the Prophet Joseph Smith and others in this age is God's Divine Truth. To this fact I bear my most solemn testimony on this occasion.

PERSONAL DESIRES

It is my earnest, sincere desire that in my calling my preaching shall be, as the Lord directs, "the warning voice, in mildness and in meekness." To be qualified for the work all engaged therein are required to show forth hope, charity, and love; to "remember faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence;" and to beware of pride and a cold haughtiness such as weak humanity often is prone to.

My desire also is to convey to my brethren and sisters, and to all my friends, a message that to me seems of great worth on this particular occasion. Thousands of years ago, when Israel was before Mount Sinai under the leadership of their great Prophet Moses, God gave to Israel statutes and commandments, with promises of great blessing if these were kept, and predictions of punishment for wrong doing if disregarded; for Israel had taken upon them his name. Among those commandments was one which carried a peculiar and remarkable promise. That commandment was:

BLESSING IN KEEPING THE SABBATH

"Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary. I am the Lord."

The promise for obedience was that their enemies should not prevail against them, but Israel would prevail. This command and promise are recorded in the twenty-sixth chapter of the book of Leviticus in the Old Testament, second, seventh and eighth verses. All during the thirty-three succeeding centuries when Israel has remembered to keep God's sabbaths and reverence his sanctuary, the promised blessing has attended them in that obedience. It also is manifest in the nations whence we gather Israel today, wherever the command relative to the sabbath and sanctuary is observed. That observance is of great moment to the saints at this time, if they would receive the divine blessing. It is momentous and needful because it is divine Truth.

My word and message to my fellowmen everywhere today is that the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ set forth in his revealed scriptures is the plan of salvation and of peace to the world; that while it is commendable in men to seek peace by every honorable means, the great peace for humankind comes only through the potent, sacred, divine mission of the Man of Galilee, whose mission is God's Eternal Truth. God bless you all, in Jesus' name.

A solo and chorus, "Let all on earth their voices raise," was sung by Lavar Isaacson and the choir.

ELDER JONATHAN G. KIMBALL

Of the First Council of Seventy

I am very grateful to the Lord that I am permitted to be present on this occasion. I feel that I am among my friends, and have always tried to feel that way. I have only one great big desire and that is to live until I have fulfilled and completed my mission here upon the earth. The revelations tell us that if we desire to serve the Lord we are called to the work. I have a burning desire in my heart to follow in the footsteps of my father, and to be loyal and true and faithful, and to be found among the number that sustain God's work and uphold the hands of his holy priesthood.

I realize, in part only the great responsibility that is resting on the Presidency of this Church and the Council of the Twelve and all those who take part in this great work. I believe Joseph Smith is one of the greatest prophets that has ever lived. I believe in his prophecies and revelations. While I may be among the number that would like to rush things on a little, to see how they are coming out, in Jackson County and all that, I am sure that all will be literally fulfilled in the due time of the Lord.

Whenever the Lord wants to speak to his people he knows whom to talk to. I have known President Grant during my labors in the First Council. I have slept with him and talked with him, but I haven't slept with him since he has been President of the Church. I know of no better man. I am not one of those who cater to men. I sustain them and uphold them, but I have learned that they are human. I sustain and uphold, with all my heart and soul, President Heber J. Grant as the prophet of God. It was only two months ago that a young lawyer—I suppose he considers himself one of the brilliant young lawyers—undertook to criticize severely the President of the Church. I was somewhat disturbed. I said, "I am going to take out my watch and give you five minutes to name a better man." I haven't heard from him yet. I want to say to you, in full faith and confidence, no man has ever earned his place as the prophet of God, through loyalty, faithfulness, devotion and sacrifice, more than President Heber J. Grant.

I realize that this is a serious work. I have had more joy and more happiness—real joy and happiness—when in the service of the Lord, when standing before the people and testifying of the truth of this work, than at any other time. True it is I may have said things that would have been better unsaid. Unfortunately, I have tried to say some things that haven't been understood, but I know that this work is true, as well as I know anything. If there is anything I know, as far as my testimony goes, it is that this is the work of God; that God is our Father; that Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of the world. Joseph Smith is and always will be a prophet of the living God, and his prophecies and revelations will come true. I know it is needful to have a little joy, a little peace and happiness in this world of ours, which is full of sorrow, death and misfortune. I get a good deal of joy sometimes from very simple things. I couldn't help but think this morning of one man talking over the radio, getting a hundred fifty thousand dollars a year. No one ever gave me a nickel for any joy that I ever gave him. I think we need a little cheer, a little helpfulness, and a little encouragement. I have a matter that I would like to read to you. It will take me only a few minutes.

"It is a very old, old story; but it never needed retelling so much as in this present hour: His name was Joseph, and he was carried away from home, and found himself in Egypt, a strange new land. Because he was good looking and intelligent and a hard worker he rose rapidly until he became prime minister. Except the king, there was no other man in Egypt more influential or more celebrated."

His relatives learned with interest of his rise. They followed into Egypt, and with his help they too prospered and were likewise influential. It looked as though they were permanently provided for, as though nothing could happen to dislodge them. But in a single generation—yes, in a little fraction of a generation—the unbelievable occurred. The people who were so contented, so free from all concern, were hurled from their high position into the bitterness of slavery. The thing that had happened to them is recorded in a single sentence, "Joseph died." That has not been the case with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Joseph the prophet died, but the Church has continued to progress and advance and will until it completes its mission. A new generation has arisen. "A prophet in the wilderness was still crying, but there was no one to heed—there was scarcely anyone to listen—material force was in evidence in its might." It seemed so foolish to rely on so slender a thing as divine support. It ought to be self-evident to a pagan that arrogance and earthly power can vanish over night, for all that is not built upon God shall fall. To trust to material standards of strength brings calamity—material force, as apart from God and opposed to him, cannot succeed.

A new generation has arisen. The people seem so content, so free from all concern; but like the Jews in the days of Joseph, they can be hurled from their high position into the bitterness of slavery.

We older men think our story should be told of our pioneer fathers and mothers, and the faith of our ancestors; and we write a book, preach a sermon or two and think our task is ended. This new generation that have arisen have discovered over night that a new world has been born and that the United States of America is about to assume the responsibility of saving the world and they are content and satisfied.

At no time in the history of this great nation has there been greater danger than for this new generation. The danger comes from ease, idleness and luxury, as there never was a time when the people were spending their means as prodigally as now and ever reaching out after material things.

The prodigal dollar seems to be swallowing all that is great and noble in the nation.

To my mind the Mormon people are becoming content and self-satisfied—they show evidence of falling down in their spiritual efforts. It seems to me, a great deal of that which has been gained by faith, adversity, sacrifice and years of hard work is being let loose of. Our fathers and mothers died for the faith and we are living on the faith of our pioneer ancestors. But behold, another generation has arisen, and in the very instant of our self-content the silence is broken by our being hurled from our mighty purpose. Joseph Smith, the mighty prophet, was chosen of God to send forth the message of salvation to the children of men. He was martyred, but that was not the end.

Brigham Young rightfully succeeded him; and his followers with him fled to the Rocky Mountains. Brigham Young led the way for the first trekkers of adventuresome spirits in the year 1847 who were the original builders in what Daniel Webster christened the "Great American Desert." On entering the Salt Lake Valley divine intelligence at once manifested itself in all his deliberations. "This is the place." There beats in the heart of this great man, a leader, a prophet of God, a great load of care—the destiny of his people.

One has to believe to understand the destiny, object and purpose of this people. The leaders understood and believed. They knew—God revealed it to them. President Brigham Young and his followers said, "We will make this barren waste bloom and furnish clean unsullied wealth for thousands of poor people from all over the world, who have been crushed under the Juggernaut of our Christian civilization—we are going to plant them under the shadow of the Rocky Mountains, we will create an Eden out of the desert; we will lay out town-sites and cities and build churches and schoolhouses and raise wheat and vegetables. God's children shall be converted to the Gospel of Jesus Christ and be given land. They shall have a chance for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. They shall know their toil will bring them some returns so that they can have a home and a hope for the future.

It was a big thought, a great idea, manifested by divine intelligence. He was a prophet. He had a vision of the future. The great leaders did not want the land and water for themselves; they wanted men to be God's agents—stewards for God—and hold the land in trust as a sacred inheritance. This land was to belong to the lowly of the earth and to be saved for the hewers of stone and the drawers of water. These valleys in the mountains were to be made to bloom and blossom for the poor-whose hope is the land that gave them birth and life and would receive them in its bosom when they died and made a safe return to the Father of all.

Just take the time to think of the thousands of acres of lonely thirsty land waiting for centuries, to be reclaimed from the ruins of ages. They saw in vision green fields and farms just as Joseph Smith prophesied it would be. "It is the place" where you'll find all the things your souls are hungering for; where the people will own big farms, with green fields of wheat and alfalfa with purple blossoms and long rows of fruit trees and vegetables. All will be most beautiful in a desert. It was a vision, a dream come true. Nobody was there to despoil their dream.

A new generation has arisen. Think of your pioneer fathers and mothers who built better than they knew. Think of the men, women and children toiling in sweat shops, with little food, families without money, without hope and without fuel, facing cold winters in these great cities, who have been gathered to a barren empire which our ancestors have transformed into an Eden. A land of liberty—a home for the oppressed of God's children, where they can have life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and worship God according to the dictates of their conscience. The stranger has found his way amongst us and many of us have sold our inheritance for a mess of pottage and are seeking elsewhere, hoping for more ease, more idleness, more luxury. In this once lonely sage-covered, wind-swept valley there should be erected a granite monument and written thereon this epitaph:

"Who seeks for heaven alone to save his soul, may keep the path, but will not reach the goal; while he who walks in love may wander far, yet God will bring him where the blessed are." (Henry Van Dyke.)

On an occasion in San Francisco, on March 16, 1924, young Elder Larkin handed this to me. On that occasion J. G. Kimball prophesied that "before many of you go to the other side, you will all have burning desires in your hearts to return to the places where the leaders of the Church have counseled the saints to settle and you will give anything for a home there."

God bless you. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH.

I am honored this morning in being permitted to worship with this wonderful congregation, to find myself numbered among those who are considered worthy to assemble in the name of the Lord. I desire sincerely that the time occupied by me may be profitable to you; and will, therefore, appreciate an interest in your faith and prayers, that I may be led to say the things that will be helpful.

I rejoiced exceedingly during the sessions of yesterday and last evening, and there wells up in my soul a feeling of thanksgiving to him from whom all blessings flow. I am one of those who believe in the teaching of the Bible, that "man was created in the image of God." Last night, as I beheld the beautiful pageant portraying the various ages of the world and conditions that have existed, I felt to thank my Father in heaven that my lot has been cast in this day and with this people.

THE WAY PREPARED

In the Bible we read, in the third chapter of Amos:

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."

I believe that, and I believe that all down through the ages, as recorded in holy writ, the Lord has vindicated that statement. The preparation for the ushering in of the Gospel of Jesus Christ in this latter dispensation was indicated in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, and repeated again in the days of the Apostles, and then the foundation was laid for the organization of the government of the United States by men and women who believed in the divine mission of Jesus Christ. The stage was not set hastily; it was preparing through hundreds of years. We who live in this marvelous age may look back and see that throughout the centuries our Heavenly Father has fulfilled his promises to his children, and the people or nation that has observed the laws of God and honored his commandments has been blessed; while those who have been recreant to their opportunity have suffered calamity and in many cases entire destruction. Our Heavenly Father prepared the way for the coming of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which was to precede the second coming of our Lord.

HIS PROMISES FULFILLED.

The Doctrine and Covenants contains several revelations given by the Lord before he organized his Church. Among them was this one—and I call attention to it as evidence that the Lord fulfills his promises. In February, 1829, one hundred and one years ago, this revelation was given through the Prophet to his father. By the way, this revelation was given at a time when the people of the world did not believe in new revelation, when they did not accept the idea that God could speak again from the heavens, and those who believed that he could or would were ridiculed. But the Lord did speak, and this is what he said:

"Now behold, a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men.

"Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day.

"Therefore, if ye have desires to serve God ye are called to the work."

This was before the Church was organized, before the priesthood had been so widely conferred and when men were called to the work in an orderly way.

"For behold the field is white already to harvest; and lo, he that thrusteth in his sickle with his might, the same layeth up in store that he perisheth not, but bringeth salvation to his soul;

"And faith, hope, charity and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualify him for the work.

"Remember faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence.

"Ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

GOD'S CHURCH.

A hundred years ago yesterday the Lord commenced this work. He had predicted it himself, and had called attention to the fact that it was to be a marvelous work. No man could have fulfilled that prediction, but our Heavenly Father has fulfilled his promise; and in the year 1830, on the 6th day of April, he organized his Church. I would like to emphasize that, as I believe with all my heart that it is his Church, not the Church of Joseph Smith or of Brigham Young or of John Taylor or of Wilford Woodruff or of Lorenzo Snow or of Joseph F. Smith or of Heber J. Grant; for while these men have been his faithful representatives upon earth, it is not their Church, but it is the Church of the Redeemer of mankind.

THE LABORERS IN THE VINEYARD.

At that time he gave certain information. I shall not take time to read that (Section 21) but I call attention to the fact that in it the Lord said:

"For behold, I will bless all those who labor in my vineyard with a mighty blessing, and they shall believe on his words, which are given him through me by the Comforter, which manifesteth that Jesus was crucified by sinful men for the sins of the world, yea, for the remission of sins unto the contrite heart."

I call attention to the fact that he made a promise that he would bless all those who labored in his vineyard, and since that time thousands of men and women have gone into the world to advocate the truth. I have met and visited with hundreds, yes, and with thousands of them myself, and I have never heard one bear any other testimony than that the Lord had blessed him and given him great joy when he labored in his service.

I was thinking today of the Smith family, chosen by the Lord to be instrumental in beginning this work. I checked over in my mind the number of the descendants of Asael Smith, the Prophet's grandfather, who have given a portion of their lives in the mission field. I find that in that family alone more than two hundred years of faithfulness and devotion in advocating the Gospel of Jesus Christ have been thus spent. It is marvelous when you think of what has been accomplished, and how the Lord has fulfilled his promise.

THE WORDS OF THE BOOK.

One hundred and one years ago this very day, Joseph began the translation of the Book of Mormon, and Oliver Cowdery became his scribe. We have a copy of that wonderful book here upon the pulpit. Hundreds of thousands of them have been distributed in the world. Ridiculed though it was at the time, it contains a special promise. I will read that promise. The Prophet Nephi said, as you will find in the thirtieth chapter of the second book of Nephi:

"Now, I would prophesy somewhat more concerning the Jews and the Gentiles; for after the book of which I have spoken shall come forth and be written unto the Gentiles and sealed up again unto the Lord, there shall be many which shall believe the words of the Book."

That statement was in the manuscript in the hands of the printer, and was there with the knowledge of Joseph Smith and his associates who assisted in translating the record. At that very time the people in the neighborhood of Palmyra and Manchester had already declared that they would not buy the book, that its publication would be a failure if they could make it a failure, and the copies that were to come from the press would be wasted. Had that book been written by Joseph Smith himself I am sure that passage would have been deleted, that "many shall believe the words of the book." But it was the word of the Lord, through Nephi. Has that prophecy been fulfilled? What are the facts? The book has been translated and published in fifteen different languages, and is translated in several other languages. Approximately a million people have believed it and accepted it as a sacred record. It has been generously distributed among the children of men. In a hundred years nothing has been discovered that would set aside the statements that are contained therein, and the things that have been uncovered by archaeologists and others have demonstrated the truth of the historical facts contained in the Book of Mormon. One hundred years have passed, and surely many have believed the words of the book. The prophecy has been fulfilled. Our Heavenly Father caused that it should be written, and he always fulfils his promise.

THE LORD WORKING AMONG THE NATIONS

In the same chapter we find the following:

"And it shall come to pass that the Lord shall commence his work among all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people, to bring about the restoration of his people upon the earth."

Has he fulfilled that promise? If there be anybody in this house past seventy-five years of age who will take the time to think of what has occurred since the Book of Mormon was first published, he will discover that almost every implement, almost every convenience now enjoyed by mankind, has come since the Book of Mormon issued from the press in the year 1830. We are witnesses this day that in a hundred years this world has made progress along most lines greater than in all the previous centuries since the earth was created and our first parents came upon it. The Lord said he would commence his work among the nations. Man had had his trial; men for thousands of years had worked at it. But when the Lord set his hand and when he began to quicken the minds of men by the inspiration of his holy power men began to work out wonderful inventions that have changed the entire condition of this world. I say to you that after a hundred years we are living in a new world. But the work of the Lord has only just begun.

Oh, how my soul thrilled last night as I beheld the pageant that was presented before us of the ages that have passed. It was called most forcibly to my attention that we who live in luxury today do not appreciate what our forbears have passed through. The scene of our pioneers toiling across the plains touched my heart, and tears dimmed my eyes as I thought of them under the burning sun's rays and in many cases in the snow; and remembering that my own father was born on the way, I asked myself: Am I living to be worthy of the sacrifices that were made by men and women such as these? I hope I am. I hope I appreciate this blessing.

GROWTH IN A CENTURY.

This is our Father's work. In a hundred years we have made great progress. Do you realize that in a hundred years after the organization of the Church with six members there has been more than one hundred thousand people converted for each one of those six whose names appear as the organizers of the Church? One hundred thousand for each one in a hundred years. Multiply that by our present membership, and if we should do as well in the next hundred years, considering our present membership, do you know what it would mean? Not three fourths of a million people, but more than seventy billion people would be members of the Church of Jesus Christ. Can you not see how a marvelous work and a wonder has been going forward? Can you not see how we as individuals have only contributed our mite, but the multitude has united, and the word of the Lord has been disseminated among the children of men; not in a militant way, but in kindness and in love, with a desire to bless all mankind.

GRATITUDE FOR BLESSINGS

If I interpret the spirit of this conference it is a spirit of love, a feeling of thanksgiving to him who is the author of all our blessings.

I stand here today one of the humblest among you, profoundly grateful to my Heavenly Father for my membership in this Church, and for the knowledge that he has given to me of its truth, for my association with these men who are my close companions in life, and for the privilege of mingling with the members of this Church throughout the land. I, too, am thankful for the friendship of great and good men and women throughout the world, who have not yet understood the purpose of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and how I hope and pray that because of our upright lives, by reason of the continued development of this work and of the power of truth as it has been made manifest in the last hundred years, these too may be made to understand, and that they with their children and their children's children may become members of the fold of Christ and receive an inheritance in his celestial kingdom.

God grant that we who have been so bountifully blessed may hold up the hands of the servant of the Lord who presides over us; that we may help him not only by our faith and prayers but by loving kindness as opportunity offers; that we may march under the banner that he shall hold aloft as God continues to sustain him as President of the Church, as the prophet of the Lord in these latter days.

I know that God lives. I know that Jesus is the Christ. I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the living God, as I know that I live; and I bear you witness of it in humility and in loving kindness, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

ELDER RULON S. WELLS

Of the First Council of Seventy

My heart has been filled to overflowing and I have been greatly thrilled with the spirit of this great occasion, this great celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Church. I rejoice this day over the glorious truths that have come to light in the restoration of the Gospel of our Redeemer.

Those who were present at the pageant last night must have been impressed with the magnitude of this work. The story told in symbol contemplates the "Message of the Ages," the work of the Lord. It had its beginning before the foundations of this earth were laid. It has been one great struggle between good and evil, a great struggle for the liberty of the children of God. This work contemplates an exercise of free agency, of liberty. It is for the purpose of making men free and securing unto them their inalienable rights, which they, of necessity, must exercise in order to obtain eternal life. There can be no salvation in compulsion. There can be no reward through compelled obedience. But when men elect in the free exercise of their agency to serve God instead of serving mammon, thereby do they comply with the conditions of salvation.

This Gospel is a plan of liberating mankind from bondage. "The whole world lieth in sin, and groaneth under darkness and under the bondage of sin" (Doc. and Cov. 84:49), but the truth from heaven has a mission to perform, namely, to liberate us and make us free. It is no wonder that the Latter-day Saints have espoused the great cause of human liberty, that they regard this great government of which we form a part as having been inspired of Almighty God, that they regard the Constitution of our land and that instrument that preceded it, known as the Declaration of Independence, as being inspired of the Almighty for the salvation and the protection of the children of God. We rejoice in being citizens of this great republic, the freest country in all the world. Its principles, the very foundations upon which it has been established, are set forth in that Declaration of Independence, wherein it is stated that "all men are created equal and that they have been endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Let it not be felt that these rights are given to us by any government. Not so. We live not because a government has given us the privilege to live; we live because God gave us life. We are free not because any government has given us our liberty—we are free not because we have received that power and that right from any human source; we are free because God made us free.

The Lord inspired the fathers of our country, our Revolutionary fathers, with this same spirit of human liberty, this right of free agency. This great struggle for liberty did not begin on this earth; it began before the foundations of it were laid. The Lord devised the plan whereby we might be liberated and made free and independent. The Lord designs that we shall be so. There was war in heaven before the foundations of this earth were laid. And what was that great conflict over? It was a struggle for the liberties of the children of God.

What is freedom? What is liberty? Does it mean license to do evil? No, indeed it does not. To be free means to liberate ourselves from the bondage of sin. We, in this country, boast of our human liberty and we have great reason to be proud of the liberty that we enjoy under our Constitution; but after all is said and done it is only a measure of civil liberty, but the greatest measure to be found among all the governments of the world. We sometimes boast of being in the land of the free, the home of the brave. Nevertheless, we are not free until we have overcome evil—until we liberate ourselves from the bondage of sin.

The Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is destined to make us free. It is the truth revealed from heaven that will make all men free if they will only render obedience to it. This plan of free agency was opposed by the enemies of God, foremost among whom was Lucifer, even in that primeval day when the plan of life and salvation was first promulgated among the children of God, when it was made known that they could come upon this earth and receive bodies of flesh and bones and live this earth life, in the exercise of their free agency.

"To live and to be free,
To worship God alone,
As conscience guideth me,
As my own heart is prone.
These are rights God-given;
He gave them all to me.
They emanate from heaven—
E'en life and liberty."

There is none in all the world who feels more deeply than we do the import of our popular national hymn:

"Our fathers' God! to thee,
Author of liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light,
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King!"

What a blessed boon is liberty. The free agency of man! The right to live upon the earth with a knowledge of good and evil. Blessed are we if we choose the good and reject the evil, provided, of course, we do so of our own volition, in the exercise of our free agency. Many there were even in the very beginning who opposed this plan. We are told in holy writ that one-third of the hosts of heaven followed Lucifer in his rebellion against God and were cast out of heaven. That war begun in heaven, is continued here on earth. To follow the enemies of God means to follow them into slavery, but to serve God means freedom, and we are under necessity of choosing whom we will serve—God or the adversary of our souls, the arch enemy of God. Many there have been in all ages who have endeavored to enslave mankind—to dominate the minds and consciences of men. All such are enemies of God. They have instituted despotic governments and have ruled with an iron hand. They have established state religions and punished non-conformists as heretics and even burned them at the stake. All enemies of God are they who seek to destroy the free agency of man or to deprive them of their inherent—their inalienable rights of life and liberty, the right to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. The establishment of a state religion is an abomination in the sight of God. Think of poor afflicted Russia now under Soviet rule. How they have suffered in the past under the despotic rule of the Czar, and dominated by a corrupt hierarchy—an established state church, enslaving and oppressing them!

The people of that land had good reason to rise up against such conditions and all sympathy should be extended to them in their struggle for liberty; but no sooner have they liberated themselves from this condition of thralldom till the Soviet seeks to plunge them into the still more deadly slavery of atheism. These Soviet masters are still greater oppressors and tyrants than any who have ever preceded them, for they have even undertaken to prevent them from serving God in any form whatever, and when men cease to serve God, at that moment they begin to serve the devil, which means slavery. Such rulers have no conception of human rights. What they need is a Thomas Jefferson to write into their constitution a provision like this: The Soviet shall make no law respecting the establishment of any religion, nor prohibiting the free exercise thereof. They have surely broken down the establishment of a state religion, but they have also undertaken to prevent the free exercise of any religion—to deprive their people of their inherent rights. Tread lightly, ye powers that be, for this is holy ground. Even in our own land there are some who seem to think that our Constitution is unfriendly to religion. On the contrary, it is intended to encourage and protect all religions. It simply means "equal rights to all, but special privileges to none,"—no state religion, but no interference with any. This is holy ground. To congress it says "hands off."

How grateful we ought to be for those champions of human liberty that have arisen in our own land—for George Washington, “the father of his country,” who led our forces in establishing this free republic, founded upon the principles of human liberty; for Abraham Lincoln, the great emancipator, who under the inspiration of the Almighty, carried on the fight to preserve unto us these sacred rights that they might not perish from the earth; for Woodrow Wilson, who led the American forces in the greatest struggle of history for human liberty, and that these principles that we love so dearly shall be extended to all mankind. The influence of these great champions of human liberty will be felt by the inhabitants of this world throughout the ages which are to come.

Let us, then, as Latter-day Saints, rejoice in the precious boon of liberty secured unto us by that great palladium of our inherent rights, the Constitution, and manifest our loyalty to it by obedience to it and the laws which have been enacted in carrying out its provisions. Let us also rejoice in the free agency of man which permeates the Gospel of Jesus Christ and manifest our appreciation of it by our obedience to that Gospel which is the “Truth that will make us free.” This I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

“The glory of the Lord shall be revealed,” from the oratorio, “The Messiah,” was sung by the choir.

Elder George F. Whitehead, President of the St. George Temple, pronounced the benediction, and the Conference adjourned until 2:00 p. m.

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2:00 p. m.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

The music for this meeting was furnished by the Provo Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Gerrit de Jong.

The choir and congregation sang “Come, come, ye Saints.”

Elder David K. Udall, President of the Arizona Temple, offered the opening prayer.

The choir sang the anthem, “As the hart pants after the water-brooks.”

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

MEANING OF IMMORTALITY

At a time when Moses was caught up into an exceeding high mountain and face to face talked with God, an account of which is given in the first chapter of the Book of Moses, in the Pearl of Great Price, the God of heaven and earth made use of this very significant and impressive expression:

“Behold, this is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.”

Immortality and eternal life as here used by the Lord, I understand to mean exaltation in the celestial kingdom. That represents the aim and object—the end in view, with the Lord, in all his works. To obtain an exaltation was the end we had in view in the beginning. It should be so with us now and throughout our life.

The cobbler seemed to understand this principle who on being asked, "What is your vocation or business?" answered, "My business is to serve the Lord—I mend shoes for a living."

THE PLAN OF SALVATION

The purpose of our existence in this life then is to prepare for eternal life in the world to come. The Lord in the beginning instituted the plan by which this might be accomplished. The plan provided is the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, including the work of a Savior, and Jesus Christ is the Chosen One. No other plan has the Lord provided for man's salvation; and any other plan that might be presented from any source would be rejected of the Lord, and should be by us, also, just as was the plan proposed by Lucifer in the beginning.

Next to our own salvation, of importance and interest to us, is the salvation of those whom the Lord has given to us—our own flesh and blood; and then the salvation of others—the living and the dead.

The greatest service one can render to his fellowman is that of assisting him to obtain salvation. Such is the character, directly or indirectly, of all our church work, including the work of the home ministry and that of the ministry abroad. It is pure religion and undefiled. Its importance calls for our very best efforts, as individuals and as a church.

EARLY PERSECUTIONS

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has lived through a century of varied experiences, and has passed through much tribulation. It has builded cities and temples from which its members have been driven by ruthless mobs—self-styled enemies of the Mormon people. Our Prophet Joseph and his Patriarch brother, Hyrum, were murdered in cold blood by a brutal mob, for their religion's sake. Many of the saints have suffered death at the hands of their enemies and through exposure to the inclement elements while being driven from their once peaceful and happy homes.

My father's brother, George Spencer Richards, at fifteen years of age was fairly butchered with about twenty other members of the Church, men, women and children, at Haun's Mill, Missouri, Oct. 30, 1838, and their bodies were thrown into a well for burial. No word or pen can adequately picture the physical and mental distress and suffering experienced by the Latter-day Saints during the early part of the century, while representing the Lord in the establishment of his Church, and the restoration of the Gospel. But Mormonism subsists and ever will, for God is at the helm.

The accomplishments of the Church and its people during the first century of its existence are marvelous and wonderful. The pageant being presented in connection with this centennial conference is portraying in an impressive manner some of the leading features of our work and accomplishments. But, notwithstanding all that the Church and its members have accomplished during the first century of its existence, to which our minds are being directed during this conference, there is much that we have undertaken that we have been unable to accomplish. However, we are in no wise discouraged.

SACRIFICES REQUIRED IN THE GOSPEL

We could scarcely hope to be more successful in an effort to convert the world than were the Lord's people of former gospel dispensations. Mormonism is just about as popular today as was Christianity in the primitive Church. The Mormon Prophet, Joseph Smith, is accepted about as generally today as were Jesus and his disciples in their day, or as were the prophets who preceded them. The Gospel truth never has been generally accepted. It is a standard of life that is too high for most folks to live. Jesus Christ is the only person who through life lived up to the Gospel standards in all respects and at all times. The best of saints are but striving to walk in the footsteps of the Master. Many have not the courage to undertake it and therefore do not embrace the Gospel.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ is one of sacrifice and self-abnegation, such that too many are willing to hazard their chances of salvation rather than to receive the Gospel and make the necessary sacrifices. Salvation is a gift of God freely given to his children who are willing to pay the price—the price to be paid is acceptance of the Gospel and obedience to its precepts. Certain principles are to be accepted, ordinances to be received, commandments to be kept, laws to be obeyed, service to be rendered, evils to be avoided and sacrifices to be made.

It is no small matter for one to give to his church year after year one-tenth of his interests and income and meet other financial obligations of church membership. It is no small sacrifice made by many thousands of our people in leaving home and loved ones and going abroad to engage in the ministry and missionary work from two to four years at a time, and in many instances filling two or more such missions. The home ministry of the Church also makes important demands upon the time and efforts of its members. Our faith in the words of the Savior is absolute and he has declared most emphatically that unless we are willing to lay down our lives for his cause, we are unworthy to be his disciples. We desire to be worthy disciples of the Master, and if we are, we will be willing to lay down our lives for his cause; and if we are thus willing followers of our Lord, there is no demand that can be made upon us, looking to the advancement of his work, to which we will not cheerfully respond.

PREACHING THE GOSPEL FOR A CENTURY

Our present corps of missionaries consists of about two thousand men and women scattered throughout the various nations of the earth and the islands of the seas. In money and time it is costing the Church and the membership thereof about three million dollars annually. For and during a hundred years we have been carrying on this missionary work in the discharge of a sacred religious duty and obligation to preach this Gospel of the Kingdom in all the world as a witness unto all nations before the end comes; and with a view to rendering to mankind a service the greatest one person can render another. To make such sacrifices requires faith, conversion, and courage such as but few possess.

For a hundred years we have tried to convince the world of the truth that there is a God in heaven; that he is the Creator of all things, the Giver of all good; that he is the Father of the spirits of all men; that Jesus Christ is the first born of the Father in the spirit and the only begotten of the Father in the flesh; that under the direction of the Father, the Son is Creator of all things, and that he is the Savior and Redeemer of the world, the very Messiah.

For a century we have been telling the world that God the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, are separate, immortal and glorified beings, each having a body of flesh and bones and spirit as tangible as the body of man, and that we are all created and made in his image and likeness; that all his attributes are manifest in us, his children, they having been inherited by us through our spiritual birth; that by perfecting these God-like attributes we become like him in character as well as being like him in form.

For a century we have been trying to convince the world of the fact that God our Heavenly Father and his Son Jesus Christ, have revealed themselves anew in this Dispensation of the Fulness of Times to and through the instrumentality of a boy less than fifteen years of age; that in answer to earnest, anxious prayer, both the Father and the Son visited him and talked with him, and made known to him the fact that there had been a universal departure from the faith and that the Gospel was about to be restored and that he, Joseph Smith, if faithful, would become their representative in accomplishing the restoration.

For a century we have been trying to show to the world that the scriptures teach the truth pertaining to God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ as revealed to Joseph Smith by their heavenly presence.

While addressing a class of college students who were in training for the ministry, upon the subject of Deity, Henry Ward Beecher said:

"I am compelled to say that I must form an ideal of God through his Son, Jesus Christ. Christ is indispensable to me. My nature needs to fashion the thought of God, though I know him to be a spirit, into something that shall nearly or remotely represent that which I know. I hold before my mind a glorified form, therefore; but, after all the glory, whatever may be the nimbus and the effluence around about it, it is to me the form of a glorified man. And I therefore fashion to myself out of the spirit, that which has to me, as it were, a divine presence and a divine being—namely, a divine man.” (Lectures on Preaching, page 129.)

If Henry Ward Beecher and the Latter-day Saints find in the scriptures evidence that God is a divine and glorified man, why cannot and why do not other religionists do likewise? The facts remain that despite our efforts the bulk of the Christian-Sectarian world prefer to believe God to be something different from what he really is.

For a century we have been trying to convince the world of the fact that there had been a general falling away from the truth prior to 1820, when the Father and Son appeared to Joseph Smith, that the authority to administer the ordinances of the Gospel had been withdrawn from the earth, in fulfilment of prophecy, and that the Gospel in its fulness, with all its ordinances, gifts and blessings has since been restored, with authority to administer its ordinances to the repentant believer.

For a century we have tried to show to the world from the scriptures that baptism is necessary to man's salvation; that baptism signifies immersion and that immersion was the only form of baptism known and practiced in the primitive Church until several centuries A. D., and that the changing of the mode of baptism from immersion to pouring or sprinkling is without authority and fulfils the prediction of Isaiah with respect to the last times, “The earth, also, is defiled under the inhabitants thereof, because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.” (Isaiah 24:5.)

For a century we have taught that children who die before arriving at the age of accountability, eight years, have eternal life, being redeemed from the foundation of the world through the atoning blood of Jesus Christ; and that for such, baptism is not necessary, nor approved of the Lord.

For a century we have denounced pedo—or infant—baptism as being unscriptural, unreasonable and in conflict with revealed truth; yet the practice of sprinkling infants continues. There are certain qualifications candidates for baptism must possess, as prescribed by the scriptures, which only those of understanding can possess. If their mode of baptism were right, and their subjects worthy and eligible, without the necessary authority which is found only in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, their administrations would be of no virtue as affecting the salvation of the candidates.

EXPERIENCE SAME AS IN FORMER DAYS

Our experience has not been unlike that of prophets and saints of other Gospel dispensations. We find Isaiah saying:

“Who hath believed our report?” (Isaiah 53:1.)

And the author of the epistle to the Romans:

“But they have not all obeyed the Gospel. For Esaias says, Lord, who hath believed our report?” (Romans 10:16.)

And the words of the Savior:

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" (Matthew 23:37.)

Then Jesus said unto them:

"Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while you have the light, lest darkness come upon you; for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

"While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus and departed, and hid himself from them,

"But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him:

"That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled which he spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?" (John 12:35-40.)

If they believed not in Jesus who wrought such mighty miracles among them, and taught them as no other person could do, we will not be discouraged though but few believe our report.

It is a satisfaction to have been right, and a disappointment to have been wrong upon any question that may have engaged our attention; and the more important the question, the greater the satisfaction or the disappointment, as the case may be.

MEANING OF SALVATION

The most important question that has ever engaged the attention of man is that of salvation, of what it consists and how it may be obtained. There is, perhaps, no other question upon which there has been such a diversity of opinion and understanding.

As sure as there is a life beyond the grave and that the soul of man is immortal, and there is nothing more sure, the time will come when it will be universally known who are right and who are wrong in their understanding of salvation. Then will the satisfaction and the joy of those who have been right be supreme; and the disappointment and sorrow of those who have been wrong will be terrible to endure.

We who have accepted the true gospel of the Redeemer, and by so doing, know of the doctrine, would have our fellowmen to accept it also and thus avert the terrible consequences of a mistaken conception of the all-important question of salvation.

We have the responsibility to preach this Gospel of the kingdom in all the world for a witness unto all nations before the end shall come; and we are trying as a Church and the membership thereof to discharge ourselves of this important and sacred obligation.

THE PROPHET JOSEPH'S INSPIRED WORDS

In the language of the Prophet Joseph:

"Shall we not go on in so great a cause? Go forward and not backward. Courage, brethren; and on, on to the victory! Let your hearts rejoice, and be exceeding glad. Let the earth break forth into singing. Let the dead speak forth anthems of eternal praise to the King Immanuel, who hath ordained before the world was, that which would enable us to redeem them out of their prison; for the prisoner shall go free.

"Let the mountains shout for joy, and all ye valleys cry aloud, and all ye seas and dry land tell the wonders of your Eternal King! And ye rivers, and brooks, and rills, flow down with gladness. Let the woods and all the trees of the fields praise the Lord; and ye solid rocks weep for joy! And let the sun, moon, and the morning stars sing together, and let all the sons of God shout for joy! And let the eternal creations declare his name forever and ever! And again I say, how glorious is the voice we hear from heaven, proclaiming in our ears, glory and salvation, and honor, and immortality, and eternal life; kingdoms, principalities, and powers!

"Behold, the great day of the Lord is at hand; and who can abide the day of his coming, and who can stand when he appeareth? For he is like a refiner's fire and a fuller's soap and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Let us, therefore, as a Church and a people, and as Latter-day Saints, offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness; and let us present in his holy temple * * * a book containing the record of our dead, which shall be worthy of all acceptance." (Doc. and Cov. 128:22-24.)

That we may be able to do so and be prepared for his second and glorious coming which is nigh at hand, is my humble prayer.

ELDER DAVID O. McKAY

"Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek Ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, where abidest thou? He saith unto them, Come and see."

"What seek ye?" "Master, where abidest thou?" "Come and see."

These three significant expressions were probably uttered immediately following the Savior's return from the Mount of Temptation. "What seek ye?" is the first recorded utterance of the Savior of men as he entered upon his public ministry. The question, "Master, where abidest thou?" was asked by two disciples of John the Baptist, undoubtedly, Andrew and John.

In that second question, I read some such meaning as this: "Rabbi, where can we find Messiah? Where may we obtain deliverance from the oppression of Rome, or, possibly, deliverance from the evils of our age?" The Savior's answer is most significant and important. If I may put it in my own words I read in that "Come and see," such a fact as this: If you will follow me, you yourselves may discover the way."

"WHAT SEEK YE?"

My purpose in calling your attention to this text this afternoon is to apply those questions to the world today. Suppose that the Son of Man said to mankind in the present age, "What seek ye?" what would be the answer? Many would say: We seek pleasure; some, wealth; others, fame and power; but the most thoughtful would answer, We are seeking the light of the ages, as mankind has ever sought. We are seeking a social utopia. We want a society in which we may be relieved of some of the ills of mankind, free from the troubles and toils of life.

UNSUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENTS

With every progressive age of the world intellectual, noble-minded leaders have sought for a better way of living than that which was current. The good life, a social utopia, has been the quest of the ages. To sense the need of reform has been easy; to achieve it has been difficult and often well-nigh impossible. Ideas and suggestions proposed by the wisest of men have seldom been practical, often fantastical; yet in most cases the world in general has been made better by the disseminating of new ideas, even though the experiments proved failures at the time. In this respect the century just past has been no exception.

The first half of the 19th century was marked by a general feeling of social unrest. Observant people became dissatisfied with social and economic conditions, and thinking men sought for remedial changes. In France, early in the century, the fanciful theories of Charles Fourier were circulated. He attempted to outline the future history of our globe and of the human race for eighty thousand years. Today his books aren't even read. Robert Owen founded a commercial society at New Harmony, Indiana. Although supported by a fortune that he had amassed by intelligent and frugal efforts, and although he was encouraged by the Duke of Kent who became his patron, his scheme for the betterment of mankind came to naught in 1827. He returned to England where he tried several similar experiments with the same result.

George Ripley, a Unitarian minister, conceived a plan of "plain living and high thinking." He had as his associates such able men as Nathaniel Hawthorne, Charles A. Dana, afterward assistant Secretary of War in the United States, and John S. Dwight. Ripley's impulse was really religious rather than economic, and "was due to a kind of monastic desire for withdrawal from a sordid world rather than a desire for a new society." He and his associates became the founders of what was known as the Brook Farm, a "Great Experiment" as it was called, to make the world an agreeable place to live in. It came to an end in 1846.

"Some of these Colonies" writes Phillip Russell, "were religious in purpose, others educational, and still others economic; but all, including Brook Farm, were social symptoms—rashes and growths indicating a sick and strained America."

THE CHURCH AS A SOCIAL ORGANIZATION

It has been charged by a cynical writer that the Mormon Church was but one more excrescence of the fermenting body politic of this religious-social reaction.

It is true that "religious excitement" led Joseph Smith to seek the right church, the proper mode of worship, the right way to live. A desire to know this impelled the youth to seek the Lord for wisdom in the spring of 1820, the greatest result of the answer to his prayer being the organization of the Church, in Peter Whitmer, Sr's. home, on Tuesday, April 6, 1830.

In considering the Church purely as a social organization having as one object, at least, what other worthy organizations had in view; viz., the amelioration of social ills, and the advancement of mankind, it is well to keep in mind at the outset the facts:

First: That Joseph Smith was unschooled and "unacquainted with men and things." Undoubtedly, he had never even heard of Fourier's phalanxes, the Owen experiment, nor any other scheme, religious or economic, for the bettering of social conditions;

Second: That the six original members were practically unknown, were financially poor, and had no political or social standing; and Third: That Joseph Smith did not organize the Church by man's wisdom but by divine direction, "in accordance with the order of the Church as recorded in the New Testament".

For one hundred years this organization has survived financial panics, social upheavals, and religious turmoil, and today conforms to the best concepts of sociologists as a means of supplying the highest needs of mankind.

CHURCH GOVERNMENT IN GENERAL

"Government represents the authority of the group, usually exercised in an external coercive way, to enforce the will of the group upon its individual members." That government is best which has as its aim the administration of justice, social well-being and the promotion of prosperity among its members.

Considered politically the world is upset at the present time in its opinion as to the best form of government. We are just witnessing the downfall of monarchies. Rising from these monarchical ruins have come democracy as exemplified chiefly in Great Britain in her dominions and in the United States; the dictatorship of the proleteriats as in Soviet Russia; and the Fascist regime in Italy, with Mussolini as chief dictator. It is apparent that men are seeking for a better form of government than most nations now have. Will they find it in the government by a dictator or in the government by the people, or in a combination of both?

One clear writer, Mr. Kirkpatrick, says that "Efficiency and progress are favored when the government is such that the local community has a great deal of responsibility of its own affairs and the central government has final authority to introduce those institutions and rules of procedure that have been shown to be permanently useful."

Now my fellow workers, and thinking honest men of the world, take that fundamental definition of true government and see how admirably the Church of Jesus Christ conforms to it. A careful analysis of the organization of the Church reveals the fact that it embodies all the strength of a strong central government and every virtue and necessary safeguard of a democracy.

First, it has the authority of priesthood without the vice of priesthood, every worthy man being entitled to a place and a voice in the governing quorums.

Second, it offers a system of education, universal and free in its application—the safety valve, the very heart and strength of a true democracy.

Third, it offers a judicial system that extends justice and equal privileges to all alike, applicable to the poor and to the millionaire.

Fourth, in its ecclesiastical groupings of stakes and wards and branches and districts, efficiency and progress are enhanced inasmuch as every local group attends to its own affairs, and yet each is so closely united with the central government that every mode of procedure proved useful and beneficial to the people can be adopted without delay for the good of the entire group.

Truly, from the standpoint of enhancing efficiency and progress, the Church of Christ has that form of government which the nations today are seeking.

A REVERSION TO THE TEACHINGS OF CHRIST

This is because it is patterned after that order which Christ himself established. I call your attention again to the fact that the Prophet Joseph stated on the 6th day of April, 1830, that the Church was organized after that order given in the New Testament. I read recently in a book published last year by Charles A. Ellwood, Ph. D., L. L. D., author of "The Social Destiny of Man," that "The religion of the future cannot be based upon historical Christianity, but must, in order to avoid misunderstanding, go back to the teachings of Christ, as recorded in the Gospels." Isn't it significant that a young man not twenty-five years of age, unacquainted with the social systems of his age, or of any age, should have realized and declared one hundred years ago just what this thinker realizes today!

Says the sociologist of 1930: "The religion of the future must go back to the teachings of Christ, as recorded in the Gospels."

Said Joseph Smith one hundred years ago: "The Church of Jesus Christ was organized in accordance with the order of the Church as recorded in the New Testament. And the practical and beneficent workings of the organization prove its divine authenticity."

FUNDAMENTAL ELEMENTS

Mr. A. Euston Haydon, author of "The Quest of the Ages," names four fundamental elements as an ideal of the satisfying life:

First: Man must feel a sense of security in regards to the basic needs of living. He must have food, shelter, proper family relationships and protection, and a recognized place in the group.

Second: Religion must contribute to the joy of personality, by permitting individuals to share in racial and cultural achievements. This calls for an educational discipline for poise and self-control, ability to think, in order to live more abundantly and free and to achieve kindness and tolerant sympathy for all people through understanding.

Third: The joy of human comradeship. No other community or organization in the world offers sweeter, more wholesome comradeship than does the Church of Jesus Christ. The love of husband and wife is an eternal bond, not sealed lightly in frivolity or passion but entered into by premeditation, careful observation, sacred association and prayer. The laughter of little children is music in the well-ordered home, and youthful pleasures and associations in home, ward society and auxiliary organizations, quorum service, and mutual helpfulness from babyhood to old age, offer an opportunity for comradeship that fills the soul with a joy that is unknown to the sordid and self-indulgent.

Fourth: The joy of contributing something of value to the common life.

Another writer, scanning the social needs of the world today with clear vision declares that "A church that will enthuse men not only for the redemption of individuals but for the redemption of communities and of mankind may never arrive. But if not, the cause of Christ will perish from the earth.

"I see the church as a life-boat launched to save a stranded world perishing amidst material prosperity, misdirected scientific achievements, and moral decay."

The author quoted says further: "We are witnessing either the crumbling of civilization under the weight of its material mechanism, or the birth of a new world organization with a spiritual ideal."

My testimony is that we are witnessing the birth, or rather the continuance of a great spiritual enlightenment.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

What of the future? "Come and see." "Life abundant, beauteous, laughing life," more brotherhood, securer peace, better social relations are some of the fruits of Mormonism as seen by the eye of faith.

"The increasing prospect tires our wandering eyes.

Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise."

Can you not see many nations yet to hear the truth—Jew as well as Gentile! India and China both awakening, Russia but in the throes of the birth of a new nation, a new religious freedom it must be. God will overrule it, for that people must hear the truth, and the truth in simplicity. Truly there is much for the Church to do in the coming century!

THE SOLUTION OF SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Brethren, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has in it all that the world would require. I am not associating political government with our religious government; I am merely pointing out that system of organization established by the revelations of God to man.

Let me conclude: The Church, established by divine inspiration to an unlearned youth, offers to the world the solution of all its social problems. It has stood the test of the first century successfully. In the midst of brilliant concepts of men in this twentieth century, who seek conscientiously for social reforms and who peer blindly into the future to read the destiny of man, the Church shines forth as the sun in the heavens, around which other luminaries revolve as satellites of minor importance. Truly it is the creator and preserver of man's highest values. Its real task, the redemption of our human world. "It is the light of truth radiating everywhere in the world, and this light cannot fail to reveal to man, sooner or later, the divine ideals by which man should live."

God help us and qualify us for the mission of carrying to the world this light. May we labor even more zealously than heretofore for the establishment of a social order in which God's will shall be done on earth as it is in heaven—a kingdom of God which shall foster the brotherhood of man and acknowledge the fatherhood of God. May we so live that men seeing our good deeds may be led to glorify our Father in heaven, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER DAVID A. SMITH

Of the Presiding Bishopric

I had hoped my turn to take part in this great conference would come a little later, that I might have time to partake more of the spirit of the occasion. For the last few weeks I have tried to fix in my mind something I might present to this conference, only to find each thought pushed aside with a vision of carpenters, painters, electricians, drapery hangers, printers, and the task of greeting the mass of people who come here expecting to view the wonderful pageant which is being given. I have gone home in the evening dizzy, and during the night have dreamed of stacks of colored cardboard tickets with a hundred thousand people pleading for them. Such temporal duties have left very little time to think of the spiritual, which above all else, at this time is of the greatest importance. And so I come before you relying wholly upon the Spirit of God, praying for your prayers, for the mercy of the Lord, that I may at least bear testimony to the truth of this great work.

I was impressed this morning with the remarks of Bishop Cannon in his reference to the Word of Wisdom, and I hope I may call to your attention some of the specific requirements of that revelation which was given to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints through the Prophet Joseph Smith, ninety-seven years ago, three years after the Church was organized. It was given for a principle with promise, adapted to the capacity of the weak, or the weakest of all saints who are or can be called saints. It applies to all alike; none is exempt.

As we stood here yesterday morning when President Grant called for a standing vote from that great body of men holding the holy priesthood, I was thrilled, for it was certainly a glorious sight. More than seven thousand men stood up. They are leaders in Zion, clean in mind and body. They are, indeed, temples of the living God, temples in which the Spirit of God dwelleth. They are spiritually minded men whose lives are given to thought and work, not alone of this life, but also the preparation for an exaltation in the life to come, eternal life, not in the telestial or terrestrial kingdoms of our Father, but in the celestial where he dwelleth. Every man in this building yesterday morning was, I believe, an observer of the Word of Wisdom as far as it pertains to the use of wine, strong drink, and tobacco, not because the Church requires that its officers refrain from their use, but because of their faith and their desire to merit the blessings God has promised his children.

It is unnecessary for me to tell you why liquor and tobacco are not good, for I believe you know as well as I the bad effects upon the body and spiritual condition of Church members who use them, but I am not so sure that we all understand this revelation in its reference to other matters of equal importance. The other day a prominent doctor, not a member of the Church, asked me if I ever read Section 89 of the Doctrine and Covenants. I answered that I had read it at least once a month for years and that obedience to its teaching had saved me from the doctor's knife. He answered that he seldom retired at night without reading it, and that he never reads it that he does not receive some helpful suggestion; and then he added, "I tell you, if your people would read it and observe it to the letter, there would be very little for doctors to do, for in my opinion, it is the greatest health document in existence."

Through that revelation we are warned that "in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days," we are to be warned and forewarned. It was given for the benefit of the council of High Priests and all the saints in Zion, and was to be sent greeting, not by commandment or constraint, but by revelation, and the Word of Wisdom showing forth the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all saints in the last days. "Given for a principle with promise, adapted to the capacity of the weak and the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints."

First, wine, strong drinks, tobacco, and hot drinks are mentioned as being, "Not good in the sight of our Father." Because tea and coffee are not mentioned, some excuse themselves in their use, for they say they do not take them hot. I heard a brother sometime ago, perhaps to justify himself in his desire to indulge his appetite, say that he would not be surprised if someone would come along and attempt to forbid the use of hot soup. I told him provision had already been made for that.

I shall not attempt to interpret the meaning of the Word of Wisdom, for to me it is clear, but may I call your attention to statements made by others by way of comparison. Hyrum Smith, brother of the Prophet, delivered a sermon on "The Word of Wisdom," soon after this revelation was received by Joseph Smith. In this sermon the Patriarch of the Church, who was sustained with Joseph Smith as a prophet, seer, and revelator, warned the Church against the use of tea and coffee, which he said were injurious to the mind and body.

It is interesting to note that scientists and medical men have given more thought to and have conducted a more extensive research into the field of foods and food values during the last fifty years than during all the history of the world before, and that the results of their research harmonize with the Word of Wisdom.

Recent medical publications make the following statement:

"Coffee and tea do more harm than good. Caffeine and tannic acid are the harmful agents in these beverages. Children should not have coffee or tea. Tea retards digestion." "Extremes of cold and heat produce gastric catarrh." "Piping hot broth or coffee is grateful on a cold day, so is ice-cream on a hot day, but extreme hot temperatures in the stomach are detrimental. Food repeatedly taken too hot or too cold may give rise to disturbances. Too hot food may be the cause of stomach disease. Note the frequency of ulcers among cooks. This may be due to the fact that they are constantly tasting hot things which they are cooking. The excessive use of pepper and spices may cause irritation of the stomach and intestines. Mustard is used altogether too lavishly. Its real place is for external rather than for internal use. It congests and blisters tough skin."

Referring to that which is good for man, the Lord places first, wholesome herbs, which he "hath ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man—every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof; all these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving." These are called by the dieticians high residual foods, or fodder vegetables. They are nourishing and give bulk to the stool. These foods are thus excellent for constipation. "Recent research suggests that in the colon is found the origin of many chronic ills and the untimely aging of the body. Fibrous herbs, fruits and vegetables help to correct these conditions. These foods also contain a great amount of the health-giving elements called vitamins. Scientists have discovered that vitamins, when kept, oxidize; the vitamin percentage, therefore, in canned foods, decreases directly with the age of the product. This food element when taken in sufficient quantity, prevents certain diseases." This may explain why the Lord advised that they be eaten in the season thereof. Again we read from the revelations, "Yea, flesh also of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, have ordained for the use of man with thanksgiving; nevertheless they are to be used sparingly." The scientist says, "It is now proved that meat eating is not essential to health and strength. The fundamental constituent of meat is proteid or albumen. This is found abundantly in milk, eggs, beans, peas and lentils. Medical science definitely knows that meat diet is harmful and dangerous in the presence of a number of diseases." Dr. Herser, a man of international reputation has said, "That in all cases of chronic rheumatism, his main advice and treatment is, simply stop eating meat!" "If food, particularly meat, is improperly masticated, it may pass into the colon partly digested. In this stage it is excellent culture media for pathogenic bacteria." Many of the minor ills of daily life are due to abdominal bacterial activity in the alimentary tract."

The Lord says, "All grain is ordained for the use of man * * * to be the staff of life." The modern scientist says, "Whole wheat bread is fast becoming the bread of choice," among those interested in health preservation. Unfortunately much of the whole wheat bread served is made with a liberal amount of white flour. Graham flour is composed of the carefully ground unbolted entire wheat kernel, and that contains all the constituents of the wheat. Every family would be healthier if whole wheat products were substituted for white flour. The promise to those who follow this instruction is that they "Shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones; and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint;" and the Lord gives unto them a promise, "That the destroying angel shall pass by them."

Is it not worth our while to become familiar with the Word of Wisdom and live according to its teachings, that we may enjoy these blessings which follow in a natural way, as do all of God's blessings, for they are based upon his laws and come to us as a reward of faith and obedience?

I believe this revelation to be the word of God and given to us as a principle with promises and I am happy to so testify to you at this time.

May I ask that you pardon a personal incident. The other day we were assembling a number of pictures to send to Europe. We had a number ready for distribution. In making the selection, I stated, that we had one of the Prophet but did not have one of grandfather. Just a few moments before a prominent brother had entered the office and heard the preceding remarks. He interrupted by saying, "I have never before heard Hyrum Smith spoken of in that way." I asked what seemed to be wrong with the statement. "Well," said he, "I guess it's all right but it sounded a little strange to me." When he left his words remained with me. What right had I to speak of Hyrum Smith in that apparently familiar way? Although a grandson by birth, I had not known him in life. Had I assumed a manner of self-exaltation? My answer is, that from my early childhood I have been taught and encouraged to pray to an all-wise and merciful Personage, who dwells in heaven. That this Personage, in whose image I have been created, is my Heavenly Father. That he is good, kind, merciful and loving and that when necessary he will chastise his children. That we are to acknowledge his hand in all things and he will hear and answer our prayers when we approach him in faith not wavering.

I have not seen God but I have felt the power of his Spirit as I have approached him in prayer, and never yet has he failed to comfort me.

Through the teachings and example of my father, Joseph F. Smith, I discovered in the life and labors of his father, Hyrum Smith, those attributes which are God-given and which have become a very part of all those who hope to gain an exaltation in the celestial kingdom. It has not been difficult for me to have faith in God and I have learned to look upon Hyrum Smith, whom I am permitted to call grandfather, as one of God's noble men—one who has gone back to his presence. As a boy I had very little opportunity to really know my father, but the last years of his life I was almost his constant companion. He was a man of God, full of the spirit of love. His life was filled with righteousness and although his words and example are constantly before me I find that I have been left an heritage difficult to carry. If I have failed, it is not because of lack of faith in God or in his promises to his children, but because of my inability to climb even part way to the heights to which they have attained. In my soul I know that God lives and does hear and answer prayers. I know that Joseph and Hyrum Smith were prophets of God, that Joseph F. Smith walked in their footsteps. Their lives have been an example and a source of inspiration to me which has helped me to a better understanding of God and his purposes. And while I may have fallen far short with such examples to encourage me I have always felt in my soul to do the will of my Father which is in heaven and so live that I may at last be worthy of an exaltation in the celestial kingdom where I know their exaltation will be.

To me the only thing in life worth while is to obtain that goal. If I should fail then what is life? Nothing. For the purpose of our existence in the earth is an exaltation in the celestial kingdom of our Heavenly Father, and I know that the only way that may be is through faithful service rendered in obedience to his laws. I rejoice that I can, in my very soul, testify of these things. May the blessings of the Lord continue to rest upon us and help us to carry on his great purposes in the earth I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

You may not be aware of the fact that for some time—I think it is about thirty weeks—at four o'clock every Monday afternoon, the Tabernacle Choir and the Organ are broadcasting throughout most of the United States. This is being done by means of the largest and most powerful radio stations to be found in the country. These broadcasts go to New York, Washington, Baltimore, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Toronto, Kansas City, St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Denver, Portland, Oakland, San Francisco, and other cities; and it is estimated that more than eight million people hear them.

We would be pleased to hear from another speaker this afternoon, but time will not permit. By the time we have heard the closing anthem and the benediction it will be necessary for this body of people to withdraw, unless they would like to remain here and listen to the broadcast. If you stay we request that you be very quiet. There must be no whispering. Ordinarily, when this broadcast is going on, no one except the choir is allowed in the building. If someone has to cough we hope that he will smother it as best he can by the use of a handkerchief.

As I look upon this audience I am impressed with the wonderful fulfilment of the prediction of Joseph Smith which was delivered on the west side of the Mississippi river and recorded in the journal of Brother Anson Call:

"I prophesy that the saints will continue to suffer much affliction, and will be driven to the Rocky Mountains; many will apostatize, others will be put to death by our persecutors, or lose their lives in consequence of exposure or disease; and some will live to go and assist in making settlements, and build cities, and see the Saints become a mighty people in the midst of the Rocky Mountains."

What a mighty people we are! As I look upon this audience today and think of the wonderful audiences that we had at all our meetings yesterday, and when I think of the seven hundred thousand people who are now members of the Church, I rejoice in the fulfilment of this prediction by Joseph Smith.

Daniel Webster, acknowledged to be one of the greatest, and claimed by some to be the very greatest, of all our senators in his day, referring to this country where the Prophet of the Lord said we should become a great and a mighty people, made the remark:

"What do we want with this vast, worthless area? This region of savages and wild beasts, of deserts, of shifting sands and whirlwinds of dust, of cactus and prairie dogs? To what use could we ever hope to put those great deserts or those endless mountain ranges, impenetrable and covered to their very base with eternal snow? What can we ever hope to do with the western coast of three thousand miles, rock-bound, cheerless, uninviting, and not a harbor on it? Mr. President, I will never vote one cent from the public treasury to place the Pacific Coast one inch nearer Boston than it now is."

"Shout ye hosanna," an anthem, was sung by the choir, solo part by Bob Robinson.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder James W. Funk, President of the Benson Stake of Zion.

Conference adjourned until Tuesday morning, April 8th, at 10:00.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

The fifth session of the conference commenced promptly at 10:00 a. m., Tuesday, April 8th, with President Heber J. Grant presiding.

The music for this session was furnished by the Latter-day Saints College Festival Chorus, Elder George H. Durham, conductor.

The chorus and congregation sang the hymn, "O ye mountains high."

Elder Edward H. Snow offered the invocation.

The chorus sang the anthem, "Arise, shine, for the light has come."

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

I feel, my brethren and sisters, that I need your faith and help this morning, and the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord. I have no set theme to present to you, but if I may be led by the spirit of truth I desire to bear witness of the truth and re-affirm before you my faith.

REAFFIRMATION OF FAITH

I believe in God the Father and in his Son Jesus Christ and in the Holy Ghost. I believe, without any reservation, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the Redeemer of the world. I believe that through the shedding of his blood he brought redemption to this earth and to all things upon its face, and, through obedience to the Gospel he has given unto all men the privilege of the remission of their sins; for he has suffered for all, that they might not suffer if they will repent. I believe that through obedience to the Gospel all who believe on his name and endure in faith to the end shall be saved in the celestial kingdom in the presence of the Father and the Son.

I believe it is the purpose of the Father to bring to pass the redemption of all men from death and from hell, except those who turn away from the light and the truth after having received it, thus becoming sons of perdition. I believe that our Father has prepared a place for every man according to his works and worthiness, but only through obedience to his laws in their fulness will men come back into the presence of the Father and the Son to receive an exaltation as sons and joint heirs with Jesus Christ.

I believe sincerely and absolutely in the mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith. I have faith, yes, the knowledge, that he was called of God and is a prophet and that he stands at the head of this great Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. I believe he was chosen to this mission before the foundation of the world was laid, and that he filled it acceptably before the Lord, in diligence and faith, in the midst of constant persecution. He was called to give to the world the light and fulness of the Gospel that through it men might be saved and come back into the kingdom of God.

GRATEFUL FOR VISIONS OF THE PROPHET

I am very grateful for the first vision, in which the Father and the Son appeared to the youthful prophet and again restored to man the true knowledge of God. I am grateful for the coming of Moroni, revealing the everlasting Gospel, and making known again to the world the fact that God is the same yesterday, today and forever; that the heavens are not sealed and God will and does inspire men in this age and generation as well as he did in times of old. I believe that the people upon the earth today are just as precious in the sight of the Lord as were the people who lived anciently, and just as much entitled to guidance as they who lived in former times, when the Lord revealed himself to them in person and through his prophets. I believe that the reason the Lord has not revealed himself to man in the ages that are past, when the Gospel was not on the earth, is that man rejected him and refused to be guided by his divine truth.

GRATEFUL FOR RESTORATION OF KEYS OF AUTHORITY

I am grateful for the coming of Peter, James and John, and, preceding them, John the Baptist, to restore the priesthood of God, that authority might be on the earth through which men receive remission of their sins and may come back into the kingdom through their faithfulness. I am exceedingly thankful for the Church and that again the Lord has established in the earth the same organization which existed primitively and which was taken from the earth because of the wickedness of men, and not, as I have said, because God willed it; not because he has shown favoritism, but because the people themselves refused to hear the prophets and turned from the truth.

I am very grateful for the coming of Moses, Elias and Elijah, restoring further keys, and in fact for the coming of all the prophets from the days of Adam to the time of Peter, James and John. For by these prophets the keys of all the dispensations past have been restored in this Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, that the work of the Lord might be made complete according to the promises made by our Lord and by his servants. Paul has said the Lord purposed in himself "that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth."

I am very grateful for the temples; for the sealing power which Elijah restored to Joseph Smith, which made it possible for the family to be preserved as a unit forever, husbands and wives having claim upon each other, and children having claim on their parents, through obedience to the ordinances of the temple of the Lord. I am grateful that the knowledge has been revealed and the authority given for the redemption of the dead who have died without a knowledge of the Gospel, but who would have received it had that opportunity come; in fact, for all the ordinances of the house of the Lord by which the fulness of salvation comes.

THANKFUL FOR NEW WITNESSES

I am thankful for the great volume of scripture which has been revealed, restoring to the Hebrew scriptures many of the most plain and precious parts that were taken away through the wickedness and unbelief of the world. I am thankful for the witnesses the Lord raised up who have testified in this dispensation that God lives, for they saw him and conversed with him and with his holy angels. Above all, I am most grateful for the testimony of the truth which I have received myself that all these things are true.

BORN OF GOODLY PARENTS

I am grateful that I have been born of goodly parents who taught me to walk in the light of the truth. From my earliest recollection, from the time I first could read, I have received more pleasure and greater satisfaction out of the study of the scriptures, and reading of the Lord Jesus Christ, and of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and the work that has been accomplished for the salvation of men, than from anything else in all the world. The Lord has given me a testimony of the truth which I pray may abide with me forever. I know that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet of the living God, and that he holds the keys of this dispensation. More than this—and I hope I may be pardoned for the references I am about to make—I am grateful for my lineage. I am very thankful to my Father in heaven that I am the son of my Father and the son of my grandfather. May I say to you that I am not boasting, but I am speaking, I hope and fully believe, in the spirit of humility in saying this. I cannot express my gratitude fully that my father remained faithful and obedient to the Gospel and the Church all his days, and that he taught his children to love the truth and to be loyal to the message delivered through the Prophet Joseph Smith, and to honor the name they bear. Let me say something which I think is not generally known.

HYRUM SMITH HELD KEYS JOINTLY WITH THE PROPHET JOSEPH

My grandfather, the Patriarch Hyrum Smith, was called to hold the keys of this dispensation jointly with the Prophet Joseph, his younger brother. The Lord has said that in the mouths of two witnesses shall all things be established. When the Jews accused our Lord of not fulfilling the law, because he stood alone and had no witness to speak for him and testify to the divine nature of his mission, he answered them:

"Ye judge after the flesh; I judge no man.

"And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.

"It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.

"I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me."

Joseph Smith could not have stood alone, else his work would have failed, just as the work of the Savior required the confirmation of another witness, and who could testify for Christ other than his Father? And so the Lord called another man to stand with Joseph Smith and to hold the keys of salvation in this dispensation as a witness with him. The Prophet Joseph was alone in his first vision. He was alone when the Angel Moroni first came to him and revealed the Book of Mormon, but whenever keys were to be bestowed; when the Lord had light and information to reveal in which the power of priesthood was to play a part, Joseph Smith and one other witness received the blessings.

OLIVER COWDERY'S APPOINTMENT

It was Oliver Cowdery who was appointed to stand with Joseph Smith to hold the keys of this dispensation. It was Oliver Cowdery who, with Joseph Smith, received the priesthood of Aaron under the hands of John the Baptist. It was Oliver Cowdery who received the authority of the Melchizedek Priesthood with Joseph Smith from Peter, James and John. It was Oliver Cowdery who knelt with the Prophet Joseph in the Kirtland temple in 1836, when Moses and Elias and Elijah came with the keys of their dispensations. I am convinced that if we had the full record, we would discover that Oliver Cowdery was associated with Joseph Smith the Prophet when the keys of all the other dispensations were revealed and restored in this dispensation. In this manner Oliver Cowdery was appointed and ordained to stand with the Prophet Joseph Smith as an associate and witness, holding all the authority and keys of this most glorious of all dispensations—the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times.

KEYS OF POWER AND AUTHORITY TAKEN FROM OLIVER

Unfortunately—at least unfortunately for Oliver Cowdery, who was called to this wonderful and responsible position, jointly associated with Joseph Smith holding all the authority and presidency in this dispensation—Oliver, in a spirit of rebellion and darkness, turned away. He lost his fellowship in the Church, the power of the priesthood was taken from him, and for a season he stood excommunicated from the Church. Fortunately he eventually overcame this spirit of darkness and humbly came back and received his membership in the Church, but never again was he privileged to receive the keys of power and authority which once were placed upon him.

ANOTHER WITNESS CHOSEN

That this testimony of witnesses might be continued and made complete, the Lord chose another to take the place of Oliver Cowdery, and that other witness was the Patriarch Hyrum Smith. By revelation through Joseph Smith, Hyrum was called and ordained to the priesthood and standing once held by Oliver Cowdery. Hyrum Smith received a double portion, not only was he called to become the Patriarch of the Church, which was his birthright, but at the same time the Lord said to him:

"And from this time forth I appoint unto him that he may be a prophet, and a seer, and a revelator unto my church, as well as my servant Joseph;

"That he may act in concert also with my servant Joseph; and that he shall receive counsel from my servant Joseph, who shall show unto him the keys, whereby he may ask and receive, and be crowned with the same blessing, and glory, and honor, and priesthood, and gifts of the priesthood, that once were put upon him that was my servant Oliver Cowdery;

"That my servant Hyrum may bear record of the things which I shall show unto him, that his name may be had in honorable remembrance from generation to generation, forever and ever."

In accord with this calling and commandment, the Prophet Joseph Smith conferred upon Hyrum Smith all the keys, authority and gifts of the priesthood which he, the Prophet, held, and which were formerly held by Oliver Cowdery. The Lord also revealed to Hyrum Smith all that was necessary to make him completely and to the full degree, a witness with his brother Joseph, as a prophet, seer, revelator and president of the Church, and to stand through all time and all eternity at the head of this dispensation with his brother Joseph, a witness for Jesus Christ.

JOINT MARTYRS

Thus, we see, Hyrum Smith became a president of the Church with Joseph Smith, which place Oliver Cowdery might have held had he not wavered and fallen from his exalted station. I am firmly of the opinion that had Oliver Cowdery remained true to his covenants and obligations as a witness with Joseph Smith, and retained his authority and place, he, and not Hyrum Smith, would have gone with Joseph Smith as a prisoner and to martyrdom at Carthage.

The sealing of the testimony through the shedding of blood would not have been complete in the death of the Prophet Joseph Smith alone; it required the death of Hyrum Smith who jointly held the keys of this dispensation. It was needful that these martyrs seal their testimony with their blood, that they "might be honored and the wicked might be condemned."

JOSEPH'S OPINION OF HIS BROTHER

Now if I may take just a moment or two longer—there are many things I would like to say, but time forbids—I would like to read to you the opinion of the Prophet expressed of his brother Hyrum, who was almost six years older. This is what the Prophet says:

"Brother Hyrum, what a faithful heart you have got! Oh may the Eternal Jehovah crown eternal blessings upon your head, as a reward for the care you have had for my soul! O how many are the sorrows we have shared together; and again we find ourselves shackled with the unrelenting hand of oppression. Hyrum, thy name shall be written in the book of the Law of the Lord, for those who come after thee to look upon, that they may pattern after thy works."

On another occasion the Prophet said:

"I could pray in my heart that all my brethren were like unto my beloved brother Hyrum, who possesses the mildness of a lamb, and the integrity of a Job, and in short, the meekness and humility of Christ; and I love him with that love that is stronger than death, for I never had occasion to rebuke him, nor he me, which he declared when he left me today."

THE CHILDREN OF THE PROPHET

All my life I have prayed and hoped that the Lord would touch the hearts of the children of the Prophet Joseph Smith and bring them to repentance. I still pray that he may do so. No man would hold out the hand of fellowship more quickly than I would to welcome them into the fold of truth. But I cannot countenance their actions in opposition to this great work which the Lord established through the Prophet Joseph Smith. While I regret the fact that they stand aloof and in opposition to the fulness of the Gospel which that Prophet restored, yet I pray and hope that the time will speedily come when some of them, at least, will see the error of their ways, and come humbly seeking the favor of God, and membership in the Church. They who will not repent, but who persist in the opposition to the truth, may they be confounded; may that which they propose come to nought; may all their works fail and may they soon stand exposed in the full error of their ways before the world.

May the Lord bless the family of the Prophet Joseph Smith and bring them to repentance. May he bless the descendants of Hyrum Smith that they also may walk in the light of the everlasting Gospel. May they never falter nor turn from the path in which their father walked, and may they honor and uphold his good name. And so I pray for all who receive the Gospel, for we are all brothers and sisters. May the Lord guide and bless all who love the truth. May we who have received the Gospel always stand steadfast, turning neither to the right nor to the left in the serving of the Lord, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JAMES E. TALMAGE

The dominant feeling in my heart, my soul, is and has been, throughout this conference, so far as it has advanced, and will be, I trust, to the end and thence onward, one of surpassing gratitude, thanksgiving and praise, combined with a deep consciousness of humility. I think I have never felt more truly humble in my life than during the proceedings of this great conference. I prize my membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints beyond all else on earth. It is sufficient to me to be a member of the Church, and in that great estate, I feel reverently humble. With you I have felt the power of the Spirit of God in these gatherings. This centenary is being celebrated by other than those whom we see with our physical eyes. There are more here than you see—messengers, reporters, spirits of high degree, who have been sent to take part with us in the commemoration of this wonderful century now brought to a close.

"MORMONISM" A NEW LIGHT

The world may well ask what has this system called "Mormonism" given to mankind more than the world had before? At this major milepost in the course of the history of the Church it is natural that we indulge in retrospect, and I think a hundred years is a span of sufficient length to give us a fair perspective of that which lies behind us. We are able to see and interpret now, more clearly than was possible while the events were in progress, those great developments that followed each other in orderly succession, many of them fraught with suffering and witnessed by blood and tears.

The world calls this religion "Mormonism;" so let it be; we shall use the term, it's convenient. We are always on our guard against the possible misapprehension attending its use, but we may use it safely. "Mormonism" has taught those who would be taught, those who would hear, all in the world who would listen, new conceptions concerning God. Is that not a gift worth prizing? I feel that through its influences I have come to know God better than would have been possible otherwise, even though I had the learning of the sages, the power of the orator and the voice of an angel. The revelation of this century past has thrown its light, like that of a great torch, into many of the dark passages of olden construction. "Mormonism," as I view it, is at once a system of the strictest fundamentalism coupled with all that is rational and good in the broadest modernism of the day. It has confirmed the declarations of ancient writ that the God we worship is a God of justice, but it has defined unto us in a way that man had never learned to know before, what kind of justice is God's justice. It has banished the stern tyrant upon his throne, sending one to heaven and ten to hell, all for his glory, and has shown that God's justice is just as truly the embodiment of mercy as it is the demand for right and righteousness.

CONDEMNATION, SALVATION, EXALTATION

It has taught me that the God I worship is the personification of love, but not that maudlin love that oftentimes blinds our eyes to facts and leads us to inconsistent actions. Not one whit of the ancient gospel has been abated, but new meaning has been shown through the words of his prophets in these latter times, down to this very day. The ancient edict stands, as voiced by the Lord Christ to the eleven immediately before the departure of the Savior: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." That last word is an awful one. If we do not understand its true import, it is terrifying, and that very affirmation, declaration, law, has been restated in this day and age; but thanks be to the Lord of Hosts, he has given us to understand what he means by damnation. It is no less real than it ever was, but men have not always understood it aright. What is it to be damned? Does it mean that all who come under that sentence shall be cast into hell, there to dwell forever and forever? The light of the century, given by the Lord, declares the falsity of that construction.

GRADATIONS IN THE HEREAFTER

Salvation is graded ever upward until it culminates in the glorious condition of exaltation. Though the term salvation is used in scripture in a general way, and we must learn to discriminate between salvation and exaltation as we read, so damnation is graded; else what did the Lord mean as recorded in the twelfth chapter of Mark, when he spoke of the leaders of the people who were untrue to their trust, when he spoke of those who used their power and position to oppress and to work evil; when he said of such: "These shall receive greater damnation?" Well, if there be a greater damnation there are lesser degrees of damnation and the term is used in the sense of deprivation and forfeiture. That man enters into a degree of damnation who has forfeited his opportunities and therefore has rendered himself incapable of the advancement that would otherwise be possible.

The Lord has told us of places prepared for those entitled to salvation. He has told us that those who will keep all the laws and commandments of God can come where he is and shall be heirs of celestial glory and power. And he has told us of lesser degrees unto which others who have failed to rise to the occasion of laying hold on the blessing of eternal life, in its fulness, shall come; and concerning the last of these kingdoms of glories, known to us as the Telestial, the Lord has said that it excels all that the human mind can conceive in glory, and yet the one in the Telestial Kingdom is condemned so far as his actions have rendered him incapable of attaining to the higher glories and blessings which mean power and advancement.

LAW, NOT CAPRICE, IN DIVINE ADMINISTRATION

"Mormonism" has taught me that God holds himself accountable to law even as he expects us to do. He has set us the example in obedience to law. I know that to say this would have been heresy a few decades ago. But we have the divine word for it: "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." (Doc. and Cov. 82:10.) He operates by law and not by arbitrariness or caprice. He is no tyrant to be propitiated and placated by honeyed words. He cannot be moved by wordy oratory. He is not a judge sitting to be influenced by the specious pleas of crafty advocates; and yet there is an eloquence that moves him; there is a plea that influences him. The eloquence of prayer from a broken heart and a contrite spirit prevails with him.

"Mormonism" has eliminated the thought of irregularity, caprice or favor from the doings and dealings of God with his children. He will take all circumstances into account and will give unto every man that which is his. Well, one may say, if that be the orderly procedure, natural and inevitable, what need of a judge to pronounce sentence? What need of a God? Great need indeed, for he has provided these conditions, these places, these certainties. He has made possible salvation and exaltation. The more we learn of God and his attributes, the wiser are we, not only for time but for eternity. God has revealed himself in this day with a literalness that puts beyond all question the fact of his goodness and Godliness. He has gone so far as to make plain unto us that he is no respecter of persons, and that while he has a covenant people upon the earth, others shall come from the east and from the west and from the north and from the south and shall enter into the kingdom of God if they will only do what he requires of them as conditions necessary for that enfranchisement. The conditions of citizenship in the kingdom of God are fair and just and open unto all men: "We believe that through the atonement of Christ all mankind may be saved by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel." And except for those few, to whom reference has been made this morning, who have betrayed their trust and who have forfeited the very ability to repent—and they are few—every soul that has ever been tabernacled in flesh upon the earth shall be redeemed and shall be saved in his degree of worthiness and desert.

HELL HATH BOTH ENTRANCE AND EXIT

During this hundred years many other great truths not known before, have been declared to the people, and one of the greatest is that to hell there is an exit as well as an entrance. Hell is no place to which a vindictive judge sends prisoners to suffer and to be punished principally for his glory; but it is a place prepared for the teaching, the disciplining of those who failed to learn here upon the earth what they should have learned. True, we read of everlasting punishment, unending suffering, eternal damnation. That is a direful expression; but in his mercy the Lord has made plain what those words mean. "Eternal punishment," he says, is God's punishment, for he is eternal; and that condition or state or possibility will ever exist for the sinner who deserves and really needs such condemnation; but this does not mean that the individual sufferer or sinner is to be eternally and everlastingly made to endure and suffer. No man will be kept in hell longer than is necessary to bring him to a fitness for something better. When he reaches that stage the prison doors will open and there will be rejoicing among the hosts who welcome him into a better state. The Lord has not abated in the least what he has said in earlier dispensations concerning the operation of his law and his gospel, but he has made clear unto us his goodness and mercy—through it all, for it is his glory and his work to bring about the immortality and eternal life of man.

THE LORD IS PLEASED WITH HIS CHURCH

With such profound truths made plain to us in the course of these hundred years what may we not hope for confidently, trustfully, in the future? With all my heart I praise the God of hosts who has brought this Church to its present state. He is well pleased with it, speaking of the Church collectively, but not individually, for there are too many of us who are not living up to the fulness of his requirements; but the Lord is pleased with his Church. He has endowed it with blessings beyond our power to compute or describe and there are yet greater blessings awaiting us, which shall be given to lead us onward and upward if we will, and with us all men who will become of us, all the honest in heart everywhere, unto a fulness of joy and glory; and that means no mere adulation, or demonstration of external splendor, but power and influence for good throughout eternity.

May we individually be acceptable unto the Lord even as his Church is acceptable, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus, the Master, our Redeemer. Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH W. McMURRIN

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the California Mission

I sincerely pray, my brethren and sisters, that during the brief time I occupy in this conference meeting I may be under the direction of the Spirit of the Lord, for that Spirit can take of the things of God and make them clear to the understanding of us, his children.

I praise the Lord for the precious things that have been presented for our consideration in this great centennial conference that is being held. We should all praise God for the splendid truths that have been brought to our attention. We must all know and feel that our Father in heaven is mindful of his work, his people, and his servants who direct his work. We can feel sure that his work and his will, by the power of the Holy Spirit, are being brought to the attention of those who have entered into covenant with God and have received, in this great dispensation, the glorious Gospel given for the salvation of the children of God.

I have come in contact, during the past few days, with a goodly number of missionaries, particularly missionaries who are laboring with me in the California Mission, and have heard from them many expressions of gratitude for the blessings that have come to them as representatives of the work of God, in the preaching of the Gospel they have been commissioned to teach. Ofttimes I have heard declarations from them indicating that they have received in a fulness the fulfillment of the promises that were conferred upon them when they were set apart and sent out to be ambassadors of the Lord Jesus Christ in the preaching of his restored Gospel. Those promises have been marvelously fulfilled. I feel that I too can testify, as my companions frequently testify, that the promises made to me have had complete fulfillment.

A few years ago I was sent to labor in the California Mission. President Heber J. Grant pronounced blessings upon my head that seemed to me to be too great for realization. I had labored for many years in other missions, particularly in the European missions, and entertained the thought that is common to missionaries that the field where I had labored was the greatest field in the world. The European Mission, to me in those days of my young manhood, was the mission of missions, and when there were promises made to me on the eve of my going to California—which at that time seemed to me a very insignificant mission when compared with the great fields where I had formerly operated—I could not believe that there could possibly come blessings that would surpass my former experiences. I feel to humbly acknowledge and testify before this great congregation that the promises, wonderful as they were, have been fulfilled, yea, more than fulfilled.

It has been my pleasure in the California Mission to be in the companionship of a splendid company of missionaries, young men and young women, who have been anxious to meet the responsibilities resting upon them as representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They have manifested the very greatest consideration and deference for me; they have gladly hearkened to my counsel; they have fully and joyfully held up my hands, and by their attitude have made me feel that I could depend upon their help, and that I had their faith and prayers and confidence. There are in the mission a very large number of local people who are not converts that have been made in the mission, but people who have been in the Church from their birth. We have ten thousand five hundred members enrolled in the California Mission. The majority are men and women who have been born and reared in the Church. They have been anxious to have the same advantages in the way of buildings in which to serve the Lord, that they were accustomed to in other sections of the land where they resided before they took up residence in California. Because of this, there has been a great desire manifest to erect houses of worship throughout the California Mission. It has been my pleasure to see comfortable chapels dot the land from Elko, Nevada, across over the Sierra Nevada Mountains into the Sacramento valley in California; then down through the Sacramento valley, and the San Joaquin valley, to the southern part of the state, at San Diego; and then beyond the California line down through Arizona. Until six hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of chapels have been erected in the California Mission, in which the people now worship the Lord our God. That surely is a blessing that is far beyond anything that was pronounced upon my head.

Then I have seen five or six thousand people, young and old, yield obedience to the doctrines of the Gospel. They have gone down into the waters of baptism and have entered into covenant with the Lord to serve him and keep his commandments. We read in the revelations of God that if a man gives his lifetime to the preaching of the Gospel and saves but one soul how great will his joy be with that soul in the kingdom of God. I feel again the blessings that have been realized have been greater than the promises that were made, and have found in the California Mission every opportunity for the service of God and every reward that I ever found in the European Mission or elsewhere. I have had, according to the promise sealed upon my head, a marvelous and wonderful experience, and feel in my soul that I know that I have been richly and wonderfully blessed in laboring in the service of God for the spreading of those doctrines that constitute the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. That Gospel is today, as it was anciently, the power of God unto salvation. All this and more has come to me in the California Mission.

After one hundred years of teaching the truth brought back to earth through the ministry of the great prophet of the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, we should all be coming to a realization of the wonderful nature of the work made manifest to men in the age in which we now live. It is strange to those who have received the truth, that all good men cannot see the beauty and necessity of the marvelous work that has come to mankind through the prophet of God, Joseph Smith.

I shall read a few words. I do not know the author, but they are words that have been sent out in the interest of the Mutual Improvement work of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and they fit in, I feel, remarkably well with the service missionaries render in the preaching of the Gospel as it is now being proclaimed.

"In the first century, due to the teachings of Jesus Christ and his apostles, there was a perfect understanding that God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ and the Holy Ghost, were separate, distinct, personages. The Savior was in the express image of his Father, possessing a tangible body of flesh and bones. Jesus taught that his father was greater than he and he was subject to the Father. Paul, in his epistles to the saints, almost invariably bore witness to the distinct and separate personalities of the Father and the Son. In the year 1830 these truths had been lost and the knowledge of God had become a great mystery; the personages of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost in the minds of the people were confused and they declared God to be without bodily form and passions.

"Through the great prophet, who was the instrument in the hands of God in reestablishing the work of God and receiving the visits of the angel who was sent flying through the midst of heaven having the everlasting Gospel to preach to those who dwell upon the earth, the truth as it was comprehended and taught by the inspired apostles of old, was again made known.

"The ancient prophets, as well as the Apostles of old, declared that revelation was to be had by the people of God in all ages. Many of the prophets had predicted wonderful revelations and renewal of covenants between the Lord and his people in the latter days. In the year 1830 all this was denied, and the world taught that the canon of scriptures was full and closed forever.

"The prophets of old predicted the coming of messengers from the presence of the Lord in the latter days, to visit men and to bestow upon them keys of authority and to instruct them in the ways of the Lord. In the year 1830 it was generally believed that the time of the appearing of angels from the presence of the Lord was past, and no longer needed.

"The Lord established a Church and in the days of the Apostles it was officered by Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Elders, Bishops, Priests, etc. Paul declared that these officers were necessary to the Church for its perfection. In the year 1830 all this had been changed and there were no Apostles, and no Prophets—no one to speak by divine authority.

"Through the ministry of the great prophet of the latter times, we have been made acquainted with the glorious truth that our Father in heaven is the same yesterday, today and forever, that he changes not, and that his revelation, his direction, is had today among the children of men as it was had anciently.

"In the scriptures man is called upon to repent and serve the Lord by keeping his commandments. In many churches in 1830 it was taught that through his atonement Jesus Christ had done all for man and man could do nothing for himself towards his salvation. All that was required was that an individual confess Jesus Christ and he would be saved."

We have learned in the age in which we live, by the revelations that have been given to the Prophet Joseph Smith, that we cannot take the commission that was given two thousand years ago to the disciples who were sent out to preach the Gospel, and claim that we have authority because of that commission, to teach the precious things of the kingdom of heaven. We preach today not because Jesus the Christ authorized men anciently to preach, but because of revelation and commandment directly to us. He made the declaration: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit;" and he commanded his disciples to go unto all nations, "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

If you will read the sixty-eighth section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants you will find that men operate today because the Lord God himself declared that his servants who had been clothed with authority in our own time were to go into all the world preaching the Gospel to every creature, making the promise anew that those who would believe them and be baptized would be saved, and those who would not believe should be damned. The authority has been conferred upon men in the age in which we live. I praise the name of my Maker, that in his loving kindness and providence, I myself, have been clothed with that precious authority, the authority of priesthood, the right to advocate the glorious doctrines that will bring men and women back into the presence of God, the right to administer those sacred and holy ordinances that have always been essential to salvation; they were essential in the meridian of time; essential in the days of our father Adam and through all dispensations. There has never been any other means by which men and women might be made citizens of the kingdom of God, and never will be worlds without end. That authority has been conferred upon mortal men in this age in which we live. I would that I could burn that thought into the minds of men and women who have not given investigation to this glorious Gospel that by the providence of God has been brought back to mankind again; for in our own time authority has again been given to men and the commandment given by divine revelation in this dispensation that we shall go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. We invite men and women who are not of our faith to give attention to this proclamation, this representation that the God of heaven has revealed anew the good old Gospel, the only Gospel that has the power of salvation; and he has made the declaration that all people may know, if they will, by obedience, that his word and his truth have again been revealed, by which lost authority could be brought back to men. There was no other way, as some have been able to discern who have not been members of the Church.

I will read a word or two from a booklet that I picked up long ago in an old cathedral in the old world. The pamphlet is entitled:

"Questions and Answers," and I read under the heading, "Why I am a Roman Catholic":

"And again, when Luther, Calvin, Henry VIII, and their followers were starting in their mad career, either the true religion was then in the world, or it was not. If it was, they committed grievous crimes in making new religions to oppose it. If it was not, they were powerless to create it. It takes a Christ, not a Luther, to create a Christianity. On either supposition, therefore, Protestantism is not the true religion of Jesus Christ."

I wish men could comprehend the truth of that declaration. "It takes a Christ, not a Luther to create Christianity."

So says a Roman Catholic. He seemed to recognize the truth—for it is the truth—that if the Gospel of the Son of God had disappeared from the earth, men could not bring it back. It could only be brought back by that Being who is the author of salvation, and in whom all power and authority center. The Catholic priest spoke better than he knew. We testify that the Lord God Almighty sent, as we have heard, at the opening of this dispensation, over a hundred years ago, his Son, our Redeemer, and holy angels; and those angels conferred upon men once more the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ; and by that authority men now minister in the nations of the world. If men are pricked in their hearts and cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" we make answer, "Repent, and be baptized, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." That is the religion of Jesus Christ, also the religion called Mormonism; it is the power of God unto salvation. God help us to understand it, to believe it, to receive it and live it. I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER STEPHEN L. RICHARDS

I thank God, my Heavenly Father, for this glorious occasion. My heart has been touched by the inspiration of the great messages which have come to us and by the contemplation of the century of achievement through which the Church has passed.

I humbly invoke the blessings of the Lord upon the words which I shall utter, that they may be in some measure worthy.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The scene was set one hundred years ago. America was newer then than now. The Alleghanies were in the west. Illinois and Missouri were the extreme frontier. Roads were trails and communication was difficult. Life in the villages and even in the cities was highly provincial, as it ever must be without adequate transportation facilities. Agriculture was the chief occupation of the people. The machine age and industrial era had not yet come. The nation was in the making, very young—still an experiment. A union had been formed but not understood by all the contracting parties. It had not then been subjected to the terrible test of blood and battle through which its real birth came. Pioneering—the subjugation of the soil—was the vocation of the people. Religion and politics were their avocations. Education was very limited. Lands must be reclaimed before schools and colleges can be built. But there were churches and creeds, and high partizanship and intense prejudices. Amusements were not so common as now. People were serious—very serious—and religion occupied much of their time and more of their thought.

THE ORGANIZATION OF THE CHURCH PROJECTED

Onto such a scene the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was dramatically projected. It was not viewed with indifference as it might have been in the day of tolerance in which we live. The circumstances leading to it—the heavenly vision of the young prophet, the miraculous discovery and translation of the gold plates, the bestowal of divine authority—were a challenge to the professors of religion which they could not and were not disposed to ignore. The circumstances undermined the fundamentals of their creeds. The vision revised the prevalent conception of the personality of God and the doctrine that revelation had closed; the Book of Mormon upset existing archaeological theories and gave a new interpretation of the Gospel; and if divine authority had been conferred by heavenly messengers, why then men theretofore had not held it.

INTOLERANCE AND BITTERNESS ENCOUNTERED

These things the religionists sensed, even if they did not express them. So they were not tolerant, they were not indifferent. They were aroused, they were resentful and with bitterness and persecution they made the way of the young prophet and the new church hard indeed. We believe that the spirit of opposition was engendered by the adversary of light and truth. Even so it was surely intensified by a consciousness, though only partially understood, of the far-reaching effect of the new establishment on the creeds and institutions of the time.

A NEW KINGDOM

And the fears and apprehensions were well founded, although the bitterness and persecution were not. In no land other than America could the young Church have taken root sufficiently to stand. Even in the liberty of our country its early years were in great hazard. A new dispensation of the Gospel was ushered in, new interpretations were given irreconcilable with those being taught, and a new kingdom was set up, a kingdom that was spiritual in nature but one which so permeated every fiber and tissue of living that it came to be construed by many as of temporal jurisdiction. So vital was this new kingdom to its adherents and so completely did it command their affection, their energies and devotion, that those who came in contact with it and were not of it became violently jealous of its influence and its power. They saw the masterful leadership of its authorities; they saw a man loved and revered as if he were indeed a prophet, they saw a unity and cohesion among the members incomparable to any they had known; and they saw progress and achievement that strangely galled like wormwood their envious hearts.

THAT WHICH PROMPTED OPPOSITION

I have tried diligently and sincerely to discover the factors which prompted the bitter and violent opposition to the Church in its early rise, and I reach the conclusion from the recorded facts which I know that it is ascribable chiefly to simple, unadulterated jealousy of its superb cooperation, unity, and control, and a fear that such worthy qualities would make it unassailable and triumphant. I am sure that this has been so in politics and business. I believe it has been true in the ecclesiastical field. No other reason could well exist. The leaders taught only good principles and the acknowledged virtues. The Priesthood ruled by kindness and persuasion and not by force. The cooperative objectives of the people were worthy. They were loyal citizens of the governments under which they lived, and their lives were unusually pure and upright. I grant that the doctrine of plural marriage contravened established custom, but the enmity came before the announcement of that doctrine and has long since survived the abandonment of its practice. I cannot find any instance where the Church, acting under official guidance, has ever brought to any person, community, state or nation anything but moral and civic righteousness, high idealism, and worthy accomplishment.

When I speak of those who have violently opposed the establishment and work of the Church I mean to limit the number to those who have had contact with it and opportunity to observe its people and its ways. I do not include many thousands who have traduced us because they have never known us and have unconsciously been the victims of false and malignant reports.

GROWTH IN SPITE OF OPPOSITION

In spite of opposition the Church grew. Every year brought an increase; no year a decrease. It met successfully every difficulty. Enemies within and without could not stay it. It survived, not without unspeakable sorrow but without retardation, its severest calamity—the martyrdom of its president, prophet and revelator. It endured mobbings, drivings, devastations, privations and inexpressible cruelties but it never faltered. It went on and on in its destined course until it is what you acclaim it today, your pride and mine, a benefactor to mankind, and I think I may say with assurance a marvel in the eyes of thoughtful observers.

THE CAUSE OF ITS GROWTH

Why has it grown? Because it has ever had within it the seeds and essence of life. It is vital to its members and to the world. It so intimately touches every phase of living that it means everything or nothing. It is authoritative. The authority is real, not symbolic, to those who accept it. Its ordinances are efficacious and its faith is a living, moving faith founded on individual conviction and testimony, the witness of the Divine Spirit to the spirit of man.

Individual testimony brings a sense of personal responsibility. Every man who has received has felt a duty to give, and that sense has prompted him to respond to the direction of the priesthood. We have been criticized because of our proclivities for proselyting. We would be untrue to the genius of our faith if we failed to share the gifts of the Gospel with others. So long as we conceive ourselves to be custodians of the truth we must disseminate it. I would like to pay tribute to those who have carried the message.

THE OUTSTANDING ACCOMPLISHMENT

Comparisons are odious. They are often erroneous and lead to difficulty, but if I were asked to name the outstanding, distinctive organized accomplishment of the Church of Christ in the last century I would, without much hesitation, set forth its phenomenal missionary labors and system. Nothing more truly characterizes the altruism of the Gospel that it teaches. Nothing more deeply signifies the devotion and sincerity of its members.

It would be interesting to know the number of missionaries who have been sent forth and the money value of their maintenance and time since the organization of the Church. These figures are not available in full detail, but from such investigation as I have been able to make I give you the following estimates. There have been approximately sixty thousand missionaries in the Church. The average length of a mission is twenty months, or six hundred days. Thirty-six million days of missionary service have been contributed at an average expense outlay of one dollar per day. This money has been taken out of Latter-day Saint communities and spent away from home. If the reasonable value of a missionary's productive time may be set at three dollars per day there may be added to the expense item one hundred eight millions, making the grand total of money cost of the missionary service something like one hundred forty-four millions of dollars, a sum nearly equal to the estimated cost of the Boulder dam, the largest project of its kind the United States government has ever undertaken.

The enormous cost of the service has been widely distributed—shared by nearly every family in the Church. Many families have sent forth more than one missionary and not infrequently has a home kept one or more missionaries in the field continuously, for ten or a dozen years, and sometimes for a quarter of a century.

I know of no way of securing comparable data from other religious bodies, but I venture the assertion that no other church at any period in history for a century of time has ever given to missionary service such a proportion of its membership and its available resources.

TWO GREAT ARMIES.

For a hundred years there have been two armies constantly on the march—an army of missionaries outbound from Zion, carrying the banner of Gospel peace and liberty; an inbound army of freed and happy people, faith and hope shining in every face, seeking the shelter, the inspiration and the glorious opportunities of a fair land and a divinely appointed society. Contingents of these armies have passed on almost every highway of the world; in the states; from the Americas, North and South; up and down the devious waters of the Mississippi where missionaries of the early days, like Brigham, and Heber, and Willard, and Parley, and Erastus, went on flatboats to embark on slow sailing vessels on their long tedious voyages to their fields in Britain, Scandinavia and the Continent; across Europe to the lands of the Arab and the Turk and on into far off India; over the broad expanse of the Pacific to and from Hawaii and the distant isles of the South Seas. As the missionaries have passed the immigrants in these great counter-marches of the century, whether in their ships at sea or as they paused to clasp hands in their weary trek across the prairie, one can fancy their salutation, not always spoken perhaps, but ever in their hearts. The missionary says "We go to carry the Gospel." "Thank God we have it!" the convert replies and then adds: "We will follow you later." And so, indeed, they have, in one heroic round. Missionary to convert then convert to missionary. Great has been their gift. Generously have they given

VITAL GIFTS

What has been given? Why, to every man what he needed. To the poor, they who are so many, the gospel of thrift; to the rich, who are so few, the gospel of giving; to the intemperate, the gospel of self-control; to the indolent the gospel of work; to the downcast the gospel of hope; to the militant the gospel of peace; to the ignorant freedom from superstition; to the cynical and the wavering a vital, satisfying philosophy; to the sinner the gospel of repentance; and to all faith, purity idealism, happiness and exaltation.

Is it difficult, then, to discover the urge which has made possible this remarkable missionary achievement? I think it is not. Such gifts, such faith, such vital endowments, are highly esteemed by man. They enrich his life, they enlarge his heart and fill him with gratitude. He thanks God and seeks to express his gratitude in terms of devotion and service. He sees no service comparable to that of giving to others the boon that he enjoys, and so he goes forth, not grudgingly, not merely out of a painful sense of duty, but cheerfully, eagerly, to requite the supreme blessing of his life and derive new and surpassing joy in the sharing of his joy.

INTEREST IN MISSIONARY SERVICE NOT DIMINISHED

I thank the Lord that the ardor for the service has not dulled with the passing of time. On every hand I see evidences which convince me that the members of the Church love to proclaim the Gospel. If men cannot go themselves they send their sons and daughters. Widows toil and scrimp to keep a missionary. Girls work to provide expense for brothers and young husbands. Quorums, wards and societies contribute, and occasionally a rich man opens up a generous heart and maintains a half dozen in the field.

Those who go are blessed and the homes and communities which send them also. Crude country boys from the farm and the range have been exposed to the education and culture of extensive travel and metropolitan life in the great cities. Young men from the city have been subjected to the rigors of the most primitive rural life. The knowledge, the tolerance, the adventure, the polish and the experience which world-wide travel brings have been during the whole history of the Church, a product of our missionary system. I feel sure that in no other communities on the earth is the percentage of those who have "seen the world" so large as in the villages, towns and cities of the Latter-day Saints.

RESULTS MORE VITAL

Such benefits, however, while important, are but incidental. The more vital results are deeper than enlarged information and polish. The fundamental character of our manhood and womanhood has been improved. Sacrifice has taught self-control; giving has made for generosity as it always does; teaching the virtues has brought them into application, and high spirituality has ingrained testimony and soul development. The general uplift in all standards of living which the Church has brought to its adherents is in no small measure directly attributable to its missionary system. How it has blessed the home! Fathers who have paid and prayed, mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts who have been anxious and worried and true, little tots whose first lisped prayers have been, "Please God, keep our missionary!" have made the home a sanctuary indeed, the foundation of our religious life.

BY HUMBLE MEN AND WOMEN

This remarkable missionary work has been accomplished by humble men and women. Their equipment, in the main, has not been the training of schools. It has been the influence and discipline of good homes, church organization, and individual testimony. The influence of their testimonies and their lives has been more potential than their preaching. The only eloquence they have required to deliver their message is the eloquence of the message itself, portrayed in the devotion and purity of their lives. They have never had to rant and yell, nor chant and sigh, to make a convert. They have carried the natural, simple, joyous message of the Christ in a natural, cheerful way. Was that not the Savior's way? Did he not ever suit the lesson to the people, their language and understanding? Have we any evidence that he employed rituals, ministerial garb, and sonorous phrases to make it impressive? I think we have not and I advance as a worthy argument for the divine authenticity of the Gospel we bear the manner of its presentation by the missionaries of our Church.

What these ambassadors of the Lord have done for individuals, families, communities and nations would fill books. A half million hearts today swell in gratitude for their blessed service. A man contemplates his home, the loving family which surround him, his prosperous business, the esteem of his fellow men, the fraternity of his brethren in the priesthood, his faith, his contentment, his glorious hopes; and from the depths of his soul he cries: "God bless the missionary who brought me this!"

AFTER A HUNDRED YEARS

Well the scene is set again, a hundred years later. The world is older than it was, not so provincial, better educated, more tolerant, perhaps more indifferent to the uses of religion, certainly more free from superstition, and infinitely better equipped to carry on the work of the world. Many things have passed into history and the great beyond. Hardships and cruelties, thank the Lord, have lost their sting and the resentment they once provoked. Men have died, but they have not died in vain. Joseph is not here but his successor is here. The power that sustained him is here. Here and now are the people and the truth, the needs and the opportunities. I am grateful that the message has not changed. It has stood the test of a century. It has not changed because it is true. Truth endures.

A REDEDICATION TO A WORTHY CAUSE

For these things we celebrate. Our hearts cry out praises to God. We are subdued in the presence of marvelous accomplishment—his accomplishment, not ours. But the triumph is not an end, it is a beginning. The only celebration worthy of the cause is a rededication to it. Its progress has been made by service. It never required service so much as now. If the Prophet Joseph were here, and I cannot think he is far away, he would speak as does our President, charging us to prepare to go forth into a new century of enlarged opportunity and carry the glad tidings of great joy to a new generation of God's children.

So it is the missionary who is to serve the next century as he has the old. God provide him and God keep him, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

If this were a picture show or an entertainment of some kind, the people would willingly stay to the close even if we had to be together two hours; or, if it were amusing, three hours. Therefore I am going to take your time and keep you here a little longer than usual.

THE MARTYRDOM

I am going to read something that I believe was written by John Taylor, who received four rifle balls in his body, as I remember, at the martyrdom of the Prophet and the Patriarch.

"To seal the testimony of this book and the Book of Mormon, we announce the martyrdom of Joseph Smith the Prophet, and Hyrum Smith the Patriarch

They were shot in Carthage jail, on the 27th of June, 1844, about five o'clock p. m., by an armed mob—painted black—of from 150 to 200 persons. Hyrum was shot first and fell calmly, exclaiming: I am a dead man! Joseph leaped from the window, and was shot dead in the attempt, exclaiming: O Lord my God! They were both shot after they were dead, in a brutal manner, and both received four balls.

"John Taylor and Willard Richards, two of the Twelve, were the only persons in the room at the time; the former was wounded in a savage manner with four balls, but has since recovered; the latter, through the providence of God, escaped, without even a hole in his robe.

"Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer of the Lord, has done more, save Jesus only, for the salvation of men in this world, than any other man that ever lived in it. In the short space of twenty years, he has brought forth the Book of Mormon, which he translated by the gift and power of God, and has been the means of publishing it on two continents; has sent the fulness of the everlasting Gospel, which it contained, to the four quarters of the earth; has brought forth the revelations and commandments which compose this book of Doctrine and Covenants, and many other wise documents and instructions for the benefit of the children of men; gathered many thousands of Latter-day Saints, founded a great city, and left a fame and name that cannot be slain. He lived great, and he died great in the eyes of God and his people; and like most of the Lord's anointed in ancient times, has sealed his mission and his works with his own blood; and so has his brother Hyrum. In life they were not divided, and in death they were not separated!

"When Joseph went to Carthage to deliver himself up to the pretended requirements of the law, two or three days previous to his assassination, he said: 'I am going like a lamb to the slaughter; but I am calm as a summer's morning; I have a conscience void of offense towards God, and towards all men. I shall die innocent, and it shall yet be said of me—he was murdered in cold blood.' The same morning, after Hyrum had made ready to go—shall it be said to the slaughter? yes, for so it was—he read the following paragraph, near the close of the twelfth chapter of Ether in the Book of Mormon, and turned down the leaf upon it:

"'And it came to pass that I prayed unto the Lord that he would give unto the Gentiles grace, that they might have charity. And it came to pass that the Lord said unto me: If they have not charity it mattereth not unto thee, thou hast been faithful; wherefore thy garments are clean. And because thou hast seen thy weakness, thou shalt be made strong, even unto the sitting down in the place which I have prepared in the mansions of my Father. And now I * * * bid farewell unto the Gentiles; yea, and also unto my brethren, whom I love, until we shall meet before the judgment-seat of Christ, where all men shall know that my garments are not spotted with your blood.' The testators are now dead, and their testament is in force.

"Hyrum Smith was forty-four years old in February, 1844, and Joseph Smith was thirty-eight in December, 1843; and henceforward their names will be classed among the martyrs of religion; and the reader in every nation will be reminded that the Book of Mormon, and this book of Doctrine and Covenants of the Church, cost the best blood of the nineteenth century to bring them forth for the salvation of a ruined world; and that if the fire can scathe a green tree for the glory of God, how easy it will burn up the dry trees to purify the vineyard of corruption. They lived for glory; they died for glory; and glory is their eternal reward. From age to age shall their names go down to posterity as gems for the sanctified.

"They were innocent of any crime, as they had often been proved before, and were only confined in jail by the conspiracy of traitors and wicked men; and their innocent blood on the floor of Carthage jail is a broad seal affixed to "Mormonism" that cannot be rejected by any court on earth, and their innocent blood on the escutcheon of the state of Illinois, with the broken faith of the state as pledged by the governor, is a witness to the truth of the everlasting Gospel that all the world cannot impeach; and their innocent blood on the banner of liberty, and on the magna charta of the United States, is an ambassador for the religion of Jesus Christ, that will touch the hearts of honest men among all nations; and their innocent blood, with the innocent blood of all the martyrs under the altar that John saw, will cry unto the Lord of Hosts till he avenges that blood on the earth. Amen."

John Taylor lived, notwithstanding those frightful wounds, to be the Prophet, Seer and Revelator of God. A son of Hyrum Smith lived to be the Prophet, Seer and Revelator in your day and mine. Today you have listened to the testimony from this stand of a grandson of Hyrum Smith, and you have just listened to the testimony of a grandson of Willard Richards, who was with the Prophet and Patriarch at the time of the martyrdom.

ENDORSES REMARKS

I endorse with all my heart the many words of inspiration that we have heard from the opening of this conference until the present time. I join with others in praying Almighty God to bless those who go forth to proclaim the Gospel, who go forth to proclaim the restoration again to the earth of the plan of life and salvation.

TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH SMITH AND SIDNEY RIGDON

I rejoice that the wonderful vision recorded in the 76th section of the Doctrine and Covenants was given not only to Joseph Smith, but to Sidney Rigdon:

"And this is the Gospel, the glad tidings, which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us—

"That he came into the world, even Jesus, to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness.

"That through him all might be saved whom the Father had put into his power and made by him;

"Who glorifies the Father, and saves all the works of his hands, except those sons of perdition who deny the Son after the Father has revealed him."

I thank the Lord that Joseph Smith was not alone, but that Sidney Rigdon was with him and that they were able to declare to all the world:

"And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: That he lives!

"For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father—

"That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God."

God lives. Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God. Joseph Smith was a Prophet of the true and the living God. The power of the priesthood of God is upon the earth and will remain, and those who think that possibly something may arise that will prevent this Church from progressing know not the truth, or they would declare to all the world that it has been established never again to be taken from the earth.

The chorus sang "The Lord hath done marvelous things," after which the benediction was pronounced by Elder Franklin S. Richards, the oldest living son of the late Apostle Franklin D. Richards.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p. m.

AFTERNOON MEETING

The meeting was opened at 2 o'clock by President Heber J. Grant, who announced that the opening hymn would be "Come, let us anew."

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Latter-day Saints College Festival Chorus, under the leadership of George H. Durham.

After the chorus and congregation had sung the opening number, the invocation was offered by Elder Alonzo A. Hinckley.

The chorus then sang the anthem, "The heavens resound."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We never seem to have all the time that we would like to have at our conferences. Therefore, we have arranged for two extra sessions tomorrow, and we do most sincerely hope that the people will fill this building at our closing sessions. We have in the past had to draw our inspiration partly from empty benches on the last day of our conference when that has fallen on a week day. We hope that on this centennial occasion this will not be the case.

We dislike very much to limit the time of our speakers, but we had a message from one of the senior apostles which took me only seven and one-half minutes to read; so we are going to call on some of our brethren to speak to us and ask them to be satisfied with the same length of time that Brother Smoot had.

Our first speaker will be Elder Samuel O. Bennion, President of the Central States Mission, who has been laboring in that mission for more than twenty years as its president.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

President of the Central States Mission

I am very happy, my brethren and sisters, to be able to greet you upon this occasion, and to bear my testimony to the divinity of this great work. I am sure that we have all been thrilled with the inspiration that has accompanied each speaker. To me it has brought many memories of past experiences in general conference assemblies.

An opportunity has come to me that few men, I presume, have had—that of laboring as a missionary for more than a quarter of a century. When President McMurrin was speaking yesterday, I thought of the day that he set me apart, in 1904. In those days they wrote the blessings that were pronounced upon the missionaries who went forth. I didn't know many of the brethren who were there on that occasion, but Brother McMurrin was the mouthpiece; and he told me in that blessing that I should stay "to the very uttermost," but that I should be returned home in the end. I didn't think much about it at the time, but began to realize its significance about five years later when I read it again, and I was very much impressed yesterday when he spoke in regard to promises made to himself, as it reminded me of the time that he set me apart. The words of the Lord that come to those who are set apart to go and preach the Gospel are surely to be fulfilled. They will not fail if the men and women to whom they are given will do their part.

I am glad to have gone into the world. I have found faith in the world. I have found hundreds and thousands of people who have faith in God and all they lack is an opportunity to know how to live to develop that faith. Splendid men and splendid women are awaiting the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

I am thankful unto the Lord that he has given us an opportunity to grow in a knowledge of God, and I am thankful for the great men who have been appointed to lead Israel in these latter days. The reason that the Church of Jesus Christ has flourished and grown as it has is because its leaders have lived in harmony with God, and other men and women who have been associated with them lived in harmony with them. These have believed in the leaders and the leaders have believed in God—they have walked in the presence of God. I have learned long ago that the Lord our God, through his Son Jesus Christ, is carefully guarding the interests of this great Church. He established it. He came into the world and introduced his Son to Joseph Smith, directing him to organize the Church. There is no other people bearing the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ to act in the name of God, and I bear this testimony to all men in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

President of the Southern States Mission

One of the great outstanding characteristics of the Latter-day Saints is their love for God and fellowmen. This sublime love finds its perfection in God our Heavenly Father.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." (John 3:16-17.)

The power to suffer and the will to sacrifice is always encased in great love, and surely only God could have suffered as he did in sending his Only Begotten Son into the world to be slain for the sins of the world.

The Lord Jesus Christ suffered so much, that he, the greatest of all, even God, sweat great drops of blood, that men might not suffer if they would repent. If the Savior had not come into the world and endured the suffering of death there would have been no redemption for mankind.

We see this love for God and fellowmen manifested and expressed in the lives of all the holy prophets of God. Think of Abinadi, the Book of Mormon prophet, who, knowing that he was going to certain death, voluntarily delivered himself into the hands of wicked men that he might declare unto them the word of God. The evil priests clamored that he be slain and Abinadi suffered death by fire because he would not deny the commandments of God. His last words were: "O God, receive my soul." He sealed the truth of his words by his death.

We think of Alma, the high priest, resigning the office of chief judge of the Nephite nation to go and preach repentance to the people. We remember that the three sons of Mosiah refused a kingdom in order that they might preach the word of God to a hardened and ferocious people. And this inspiration, this great love, for where there is great love there is the will to sacrifice and to suffer, was found in the Prophet Joseph Smith, who said: "If my life is of no value to my friends, it is of no value to myself." This same spirit, I testify to you, has been most nobly expressed in the lives of all the successors to the Prophet of God.

I repeat, my brethren and sisters, where there is great love for the Lord and his children, there is also great love and the will to sacrifice and to suffer. This work has made the Latter-day Saints great because it is a great work. Substituting two words in a famous college song, the sentiment in that song may be applied to this Church.

"Mother of men grown strong in giving,
Honor to him thy lights have led.
Rich in the toil of thousands living;
Proud of the deeds of thousands dead."
We who have felt thy power, and known thee:
We in whose lives thy lights avail,
High in our hearts, enshrine, enthrone thee,
Mother of men—the Church."

Truly the Church is the mother of men.

That soul-reviving blessing from our beloved President, Sunday morning, thrilled home to our hearts, and we, the people of Israel, love our leader. We proclaim that we ask the blessings of God upon our prophet, and upon all the General Authorities of the Church, for with them, by the help of the Most High, we propose to go on to the glorious consummation of the work of God. In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER WILLIAM R. SLOAN

President of the Northwestern States Mission

Three days hence will be commemorated in the great Northwest, the centennial of the pioneers to the state of Oregon. On the 10th day of April, 1830, eighty-three men, fur traders, trappers, and assistants, left St. Louis, Missouri, and they traversed the trail now known as the Oregon Trail and arrived in Oregon, and from the 10th until the 29th day of December that wonderful event will be commemorated. The President of the United States, senators and other leading men have given approval of this great commemoration.

Today we commemorate an event. I should like to read just a word or two from one of the editorials of a newspaper in Portland.

"The Pacific Northwest has profited by a share of the growth and influence of the Mormon Church. Latter-day Saint missionaries were first sent to Portland in 1896. The Northwestern States Mission was formed the following year. The Church has now a Portland membership of one thousand and a local investment of more than two hundred thousand dollars, including a handsome chapel, dedicated a year ago. Wherever they are, the Mormons today should find full measure of appreciation and congratulation on their century achievements."

I should like to read another clipping from a recent magazine:

"Greatest Power in Spiritual Forces.

"What line of research will see the greatest development within the next fifty years? This is the question that Robert Babson asked the late Charles P. Steinmetz while the world's foremost electrical engineer was visiting in the home of the nation's leading business statistician. It was natural to suppose that a scientist who had given nearly half a century to inventive processes would be thinking in terms of the future development of radio, aeronautics, or power transmission. Instead Mr. Steinmetz replied: 'Mr. Babson, I think the greatest discovery will be made along spiritual lines. Here is a force which history clearly teaches has been the greatest power in the development of men and history. Yet we have merely been playing with it and have never seriously studied it as we have the physical forces. Some day people will learn that material things do not bring happiness and are of little use in making men and women creative and powerful. Then the scientists of the world will turn their laboratories over to the study of God and prayer and the spiritual forces which as yet have hardly been scratched. When this day comes, the world will see more advancement in one generation than it has seen in the past four.'"

"If radio's slim fingers
Can pluck a melody
From night and toss it over
A continent or sea;
If petaled white notes
Of a violin
Are blown across a mountain
Or a city's din;
If songs like crimson roses
Are culled from thin, blue air,
Why should mortals wonder
If God hears prayer?"

In the pageant the other evening were six thousand men and women, all standing on their feet, faces toward the beacon light, singing in unison, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

I know this work is of God, and I rejoice in this most glorious privilege that I have enjoyed, being one of those mission presidents on whom God's prophets, in all love and kindness gave such a wonderful blessing. I hope the Lord will bless me.

I extend greetings to you, my brethren and sisters, from your sons and your daughters in the Northwestern States Mission. They are noble, sweet, pure, God-fearing boys and girls. The Lord loves and is magnifying them, and they are measuring up admirably to the responsibilities imposed upon them.

This is my prayer, my testimony of the truth of his work. I bear it humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer, Amen.

ELDER NOAH S. POND

President of the Northern States Mission

My dear brethren and sisters, I feel very humble and very happy to have the privilege of reporting the Northern States Mission of the Church. We have something like one hundred missionaries in that field at the present time. Last month fifteen of our most experienced missionaries were released, and only one was sent there. Brethren and sisters, we need your sons and daughters, and some of you, my brethren of the authorities of the wards and stakes. Your services are much appreciated, have been and will be, in the great ministry of the Church.

Last year we sold eight thousand and one Books of Mormon in our mission. We loaned thirteen thousand four hundred fifty-three copies. In sales and loans a few less than twenty-three thousand five hundred copies of the Book of Mormon were placed in the hands of the inhabitants of our area. With a population of between twenty-five and thirty millions of people, however, in those six states, you can readily understand what a vast field and enormous work there is for a hundred or a hundred and twenty-five missionaries to perform. With a possible exception or two, our missionaries are in the enjoyment of good health; they are happy, industrious, humble, and faithful in their work. The blessings of the Lord attend their labors.

Recently, last month in fact, we were impressed to send two of our fine young elders into a portion of the state of Iowa that our missionaries had not tracted or labored in for some time in the past. These two young men, going into the city of Dubuque, where our elders had not been for a number of years, felt rather discouraged at the conclusion of the first week's work. The following Sunday morning they were impressed to visit the Sunday School of the First Congregational church of that city. The superintendent gave them a fine welcome. After the preliminary exercises they were invited to speak to the membership of that Sunday School. They made a fine impression, in a few brief remarks. The minister greeted them, invited them to dine with him, brought them back to his evening service and gave them an opportunity of preaching the Gospel to a hundred and fifty or two hundred members of his church. A very similar circumstance happened almost simultaneously in Evansville, Indiana, where two of our young elders found a Pentecostal minister, who welcomed them to his church and they had the privilege of preaching the Gospel to a hundred and fifty or two hundred members of that faith.

I have been very much impressed by the manner in which the work is progressing in our organizations. Sister Pond has much pleasure in the Relief Society work of the mission, where she has nineteen societies. The Young Men's, the Young Ladies', the Sunday School, and the Primary organizations are progressing; so also is the Aaronic priesthood. We have it under as capable supervision as it is possible to provide, and we are very happy to note that the work is progressing.

The outstanding feature of our work during the last month was the visit of our dear President Grant, that we were favored with. He came into our mission and remained with us from February 16th to February 25th. During that time we had the privilege of dedicating the new chapel in Columbus, Ohio, and our beautiful chapel in the University branch in the city of Chicago; likewise visiting the chapel that had been completed during the past two years in the city of Detroit, where we have a beautiful building and a fine congregation of our membership, and active work. He also had the privilege of visiting our chapels and our congregations in Dayton and Cincinnati, Ohio, also Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Immediately following this visit a number of baptisms were performed. The saints and the missionaries will never forget the marvelous impression, the testimony, and the Spirit of the Lord that accompanied the visit of President Grant. We have been favored, since our entry into the mission with a visit from Apostle Ballard, likewise a tour of the mission by Apostle Orson F. Whitney. These brethren of the General Authorities of the Church are welcome. The saints, friends, investigators and missionaries will travel hundreds of miles for a single opportunity of meeting and hearing the words of inspiration that fall from the lips of the servants of God.

I am happy, my brethren and sisters, to report the progress of the work in the Northern States Mission, where we are also sending out missionaries. I am also happy because of our baptisms. Five baptisms were performed the first Sunday after President Grant's visit. I have a letter, just received today, from our mission secretary in connection with other matters, in which he said that the services in Chicago last Sunday were outstanding. Both our chapels were filled to capacity, a pageant in one and a specially prepared program in the other. Seven baptisms were performed in the city of Chicago last Sunday afternoon.

My brethren and sisters, there is joy and pleasure in this great work. May we have more of your sons and daughters, and some of you brethren of bishoprics, high councils and stake presidencies, for you little appreciate the value of your services until you have filled a three, four, five or six months mission in the mission fields of the Church.

God bless the presiding authorities of this great Church. And God bless our young people in the mission fields, for there also they are preparing for this missionary work. The Northern States Mission has within the last few months or years, sent out eight missionaries into other mission fields. We are happy to note that we have two young sister missionaries in the mission home at this time, preparing for the California and the Northwestern States missions. And our young people are learning and are desirous of becoming familiar with the principles of the Gospel, that from the mission field they also may go forward and preach this great Gospel.

I testify of the truthfulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I cannot recount a more happy moment or period in my life than we have enjoyed in this centennial. When I read the other evening of our friends, the Reorganites, celebrating in Independence, Missouri, six or seven thousand strong, the centennial of their church, I wondered how they would reconcile thirty years which they must falsify in history, or they must abandon the word "Reorganization." How can they be the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and celebrate one hundred years of its existence, when they came into existence thirty years after the original Church was organized.

May the Lord bless us with faithfulness. I testify to the truthfulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and pray for his blessings upon the First Presidency, the Council of the Apostles, the presidency and priesthood at home, all the membership of the Church throughout the world, and all the good and true and the noble with whom we labor, and to whom we are seeking to bring the Gospel, the plan of life and salvation. I pray for our Father's blessings in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER ELIAS S. WOODRUFF

President of the Western States Mission

It is a great honor to bring you the greetings of the saints and missionaries who labor in the Western States Mission. Many of them would have liked to be here to enjoy these services, even as you have. But I counseled them to remain at home and hold such services as they were capable of conducting and to invite as many friends as they could possibly get to attend our services in the twenty-seven branches that we have in the mission. Services have been arranged and have been held in all of those branches and also in a number of places where we have only Sunday Schools. As far as it was possible we have celebrated in a fitting manner this wonderful event.

The conference to me has been a tremendous inspiration. If I were to think of the responsibility that rests upon me as a servant of the Lord, without the thought that God is directing the work, I would be so completely overwhelmed as to be unable to proceed. I know that we are in our Father's work, that his power is behind us; and it gives me, as it gives my brethren, courage to proceed with the work, with confidence that it will triumph and grow and spread over all the earth.

In the Western States Mission the saints are faithful. They are good tithe-payers, they are attending their meetings in goodly number, they are trying to the extent of their ability to spread the word among their friends. They are trying to set an example to others, to show them that by being members of the Church they have lived better lives than they would have done otherwise; and in that way are preaching the Gospel by example. And in all respects we are endeavoring to serve the Lord.

It is my hope and prayer that the Lord will bless me that I may be able to take back from this conference a message to the saints and missionaries that will at least supplement the impressions they have already received from the meetings they have held and what radio reception they may have enjoyed.

May God bless and inspire his servants who preside over the Church, that they may ever be true to their trust. May you, my brethren and sisters, sustain them and love them and uphold their hands by being faithful to your trust, that the Church may grow and flourish as we know it will. As has been so splendidly expressed here, the thought is there is no danger that the Church will not proceed and grow; the danger is that you or I may fall by the wayside.

I humbly pray that we may never lose our faith, but that we may be able to keep step with the progress of the great Church which has given us this wonderful inspiration and through which we are so greatly blessed. I pray God to bless you, to bless the saints everywhere, to bless you who are preparing to send missionaries out, that you may be able to send them, and that you may be prospered so that you can care for them. I do want to make a plea, as President Pond has done, that you send your sons into the mission field. I think our mission has never been so low in numbers as at the present time. We released twenty-eight missionaries last month, and received three. We are badly in need of help. Those we have are laboring valiantly and splendidly, and I have pleasure in reporting that all are well.

God bless you. Amen.

ELDER JAMES H. MOYLE

President of the Eastern States Mission

In view of the necessity for brevity, I trust President Grant will, if necessary, assist me in keeping within my allotted time.

I am pleased to report that the Eastern States Mission is in a healthy, growing condition. The missionaries are enjoying good health, with rare exceptions, and doing splendid work. Although there are few baptisms, I know that there are many friends being made and converts who are not being baptized. Intelligent, influential men have openly confessed to me that they were converted and believed all that we teach, but that they couldn't break the hearts of their wives and embarrass their relatives socially, and could not make the sacrifice at present and break away from their life-long associations. But they are real friends. One thing is certain, that our young missionaries, though not baptizing many, have a personal development that is invaluable, an accomplishment that will go with and influence for good their lives, and which will be of as much importance to them as if they had spent the same time in a great university.

I was greatly interested in President Roberts' relation of the prophecy of Joseph Smith, that there would be organized in the city of New York a stake of Zion. One year ago, from this stand, I stated that I had been very greatly impressed with the fact that we needed such an organization in greater New York City and its environs. When I entered the mission in January, a year ago, the branch presidency said that there were three hundred members enrolled in the New York City branch alone. That does not include the Brooklyn branch and some small adjacent branches. We have been making a real effort to find the names and residence of the members of the Church, especially those who have come from these valleys east, and who live in that great and populous center. Now the branch presidency say that they believe there are fifteen hundred, where we only had three hundred of record. At our conference held in New York City in February a year ago, we had about two hundred and fifty people present, which was considered a large audience. At the conference held a month ago tomorrow, at which President Grant and Apostle Ballard were present, there were seven hundred and fifty present, and the hall, rented especially for the occasion, couldn't hold all that came. They were standing up and the aisles were filled. A similar condition existed in Washington, where we had about four hundred present, and where there was no organized branch of the Church prior to the great war. On the 9th of March we not only held a meeting in our chapel at Brooklyn, at ten o'clock a. m., into which was crowded something over three hundred people, but at two o'clock in Newark, New Jersey, another meeting was held with over two hundred present. That branch was organized only a few years since. Then in the evening, in New York City, we had the large meeting referred to, which was by far the largest gathering of saints ever held in New York City.

One of the material contributing reasons for the growing interest in the Church there, was the presence there a month or two before of Presidents Ivins and Nibley, who spent a week or ten days studying the needs of our members in Washington and New York City. They were impressed with the necessity for a more appropriate and permanent place in which to assemble. That fact, and the interest which President Grant and his counselors manifested, together with the presence of Apostle Ballard, did arouse a real interest in our conference, which I am sure will be fruitful.

I have been greatly surprised, and deeply impressed, with the fact that the sentiment in the east toward our people is greatly changed. This is true especially among the financial, industrial, and commercial leaders of the country, who have evidently become acquainted with our people and their accomplishments, and the character and merits of our young people, for they have been selecting a surprising number of them, in view of the small number of our people, as executives in such institutions. And why should they be looking for the kind of young men we are producing in these mountains? Because they have been trained and reared in the homes of Latter-day Saints, where the Word of Wisdom has been observed. They are looking for sober, temperate, industrious, God-fearing men, and there is no place in the world where they can be found more than here. The time has passed, in my opinion, when our Mormon boys should feel that they are discriminated against by the men who stand at the head of these great institutions. I am sure this is true. Men and women developed here under the conditions named, are also successful and active physicians, with a splendid practice; lawyers, occupying places in the leading law offices in New York; professors and teachers in the great universities there, several from the Brigham Young University, others from our state university. In nothing are our mountain boys more conspicuous there than in their success and prominence as engineers, especially electrical engineers. I am more than pleased to say that you can find our boys and girls comfortably and favorably located in practically all the great business institutions such as, banking, merchandising, real estate, and other commendable activities; they are accountants, artists, actors, singers and music teachers.

There is a great change of sentiment coming over the world, and while we do not baptize many we are making friends and arousing interest in our people and the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Last Sunday there was doubtless read in the Unitarian church in Reading, Pennsylvania, by one of our humble elders, the address that President Grant read here. It is the second or third opportunity that we have had in leading cities in the mission, in Unitarian churches, which are especially broad and liberal. We have one preacher on Long Island, who has had a congregation there for years, who is preaching every Sabbath the Gospel as we understand it, and his people generally do not know it; but he knows it, and believes it, and says he is going to be baptized.

I once more urge upon the fathers, mothers, and bishops throughout the Church the importance of sending us the names of our people who have left the organized branches of the Church in the west, in order that we may interest them in the work. We believe that there are hundreds of them being lost from lack of contact with the Church. We are finding some constantly who seem to have been practically lost and forgotten, and leaving the Church simply through lack of contact with it. They should formally become members of the branches of the Church there, just the same as when they move from one ward to another here at home, then we could find them and look after them.

A notable instance. I had to go to Florida recently to find a young man. I met his parents there. They gave me his address and expressed the fear that he was drifting away from the Church. When I returned, I invited him to our home, and to my astonishment he said he had been in the city for over a year and did not know where our place of worship was or our headquarters, or that there was such there. Before he left he promised that he would write his mother and say that he was going to attend church. When I called his attention to what he said as he left us, he replied, "I am not only going to so write her, but I am going to be a regular attendant at church." We had no means of reaching that young man prior to meeting his mother. The church officers, diligent as they are, knew nothing of him. We have many such cases.

There is another thing which has deeply impressed me. Never before has there been such an interest taken in the Book of Mormon as there is now. Think of what President Pond says is going on in his mission. While he is leading in the sale and distribution of copies of the Book of Mormon, the same condition exists more or less throughout all the missions. President Bennion says that they are sending out annually from the Zion's printing office, and actually selling, something like fifty thousand copies of the Book of Mormon in these United States alone. Fifty thousand sold by this one agency, and in addition to those thus sold, there are many more such books lent and placed with readers.

The Book of Mormon has been a subject of deep interest to me from my youth. I was intensely interested in the realities of angels appearing to men on earth, and the marvelous things revealed to Joseph Smith in connection with the introduction of the Book of Mormon to the world. I shall never forget my experience early in July, 1885, as I was returning home from the University of Michigan where I graduated in 1885. I went directly to Richmond, Missouri, for the sole purpose of meeting the then remaining living witness to the divinity of the Book of Mormon, David Whitmer. I inquired of the bus driver, the hotel clerk, and others, as far as possible, as to the character and reputation of David Whitmer. All said he was a fine old man, an excellent citizen, and was highly respected in the community. I introduced myself by presenting him with a book that I thought would please him, and said to him that I had just graduated from college. He was then in the eighties, with his hair and beard white, but in fair health. It was about three years before his death. I said to him: "I was born and reared in the Church and I do pray of you to let me know if there is any possibility of your having been deceived. I am just commencing life as you are preparing to lay it down, and I beg of you to tell me if there is anything connected with the testimony which you have borne to the world that could possibly have been deceptive or misunderstood." I further said, in an earnest youthful appeal, that I did not want to go through life believing a falsehood, that it was in his power to make known the truth to me. He described to me the details of the occasion, of the angel presenting the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated. The scene was in the woods, with nothing between the angel and himself except a log that had fallen and was lying between them. He declared that he saw the angel who had with him the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, and that in the presence of the angel he did hear the angel declare that they had been translated correctly. While I am speaking from memory, the foregoing most essential facts to me and which were the sole object of my visit, were so indelibly impressed upon my mind, that they are perfectly clear and unmistakable. I asked him many questions concerning his experiences with the origin of the Book of Mormon, and why he left the Church, all of which he endeavored to answer frankly. We talked for a considerable time. His mind seemed clear and his mentality above rather than below the average. He said he had never left the Church, that they had maintained a branch of the Church in Richmond, and that he had always been active in it; that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that the revelations he received up to the year 1835 were from God, but that he accepted none of them subsequent to that time. He appeared to have become embittered against Sidney Rigdon especially, and I fancied turned against the Prophet because of his placing Rigdon ahead of those who had stood by the Prophet in his early work.

He said with seeming pride and much interest, that he had the first copy of the manuscript from which the Book of Mormon was printed, in his humble home. And it was a humble home. That when the great cyclone struck Missouri, and houses were blown about and destroyed, every room in his house was destroyed except that in which the manuscript was kept. He seemed to feel that it was divinely protected. President Joseph F. Smith advised me that the copy of the manuscript was not the original, but one of the three originals. His sincerity was plainly shown when I asked him if he would sell the manuscript and place a price upon it. He replied that he would not.

There is much that might be said on the subject of the Book of Mormon. Even Colonel Lindbergh is arousing interest in the subject as probably no one else is today, through the pictures which he has been able to take from the air while flying over Central America, Mexico and the southwestern part of the United States. Front pages of the leading papers in the east are publishing those pictures, with interesting and instructive articles written by archaeologists. They are attempting to unravel the history of those lost cities. But I must close.

The story of the Book of Mormon which our missionaries are carrying to the people of the world and of which they bear testimony as to its divinity, is accompanied with that clear and unfailing guide like unto that which the Savior presented, when he said, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." In connection therewith our message, as missionaries, to the world is, for them to read and follow the advice found in the last chapter of the Book of Mormon, in which the Prophet Moroni, referring to the contents of the book, gives the sure and unmistakable test, similar to that which the Savior gave, when he said:

"And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

"And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things."

That is the test that we are submitting to the world, and that heaven is affecting the world; it is influencing the world. "What greater and surer test could there be?"

May the Lord help us to appreciate the blessings that we enjoy in the Gospel of our Redeemer, is my prayer, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER MILES L. JONES

President of the East Central States Mission

I hope that I shall be able to make my remarks short enough so as to make up for part of the time that President Moyle has occupied, so that the rest may have time for theirs.

I rejoice, my brethren and sisters, in the opportunity that I have of meeting with you upon this occasion. I have rejoiced exceedingly in the various sessions of this conference. I have been very much impressed today with the rendition of the music, as given by this wonderful gathering of young men and young ladies, the rising youth of Zion, young men and young women who sometime perhaps may be called into the world to spread the Gospel of light among the nations of the earth.

Just a short time ago it so happened that I came in contact with a very prominent lady who was connected with one of the other denominations, and in the course of our remarks I asked her how she found the spirituality of the young people in her church, and without hesitancy whatever she said: "There is no spirituality among the young people today, not in the least. They are seeking after the pleasures of life and are not looking after spiritual development." And I thought how much different is that from the Latter-day Saints. Here we see it exemplified today, these young men, young ladies, coming here filled with the spirit of the Gospel, and singing the songs of Zion and bringing forth the Spirit of the Lord in our day.

I rejoice in the work that is being performed in the East Central States Mission. I bring to you fathers and mothers the greetings of your sons and your daughters, yes and to the wives the greetings of your husbands, who are laboring in that mission. All are enjoying good health with but few exceptions, and the work of the Lord is progressing.

Just a few days ago I happened to pick up a newspaper and in reading through it I found the comment of a very prominent writer; writing upon religious matters and referring to several denominations he made this remark:

"It may so be in the course of time that the Mormon people will repudiate the Prophet Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, and then they will become one with us."

I thought how much different that is from the way we look at things. And then just a few days following that one of our saints happened to be listening over the radio to the world's book man who speaks every afternoon with the exception of Sunday, on some subject regarding which a question has been asked. He called me over the phone and I stepped into the room where my wife and I have a radio, and there I heard Mr. R. C. Preble, who had been asked this question: "What publication do we have that is the most reliable, or rather that gives us the most reliable information regarding the origin of the American Indian?" And he gave as his answer, without any hesitancy whatever, "The Book of Mormon." Then he proceeded to recite and tell how the Book of Mormon was delivered to the Prophet Joseph Smith by an angel from on high, and that the record was taken from the Mormon Hill, as he put it, and that it was translated through the instrumentality of a pair of spectacles which were hidden in the box with the record. And then he went on to tell how it was translated by the Prophet Joseph Smith and others who wrote as he translated it by looking through this pair of spectacles. Then he went on to tell that the Book of Mormon contains the history of a people who left Jerusalem some six hundred years before Christ's advent into the world, and that they landed upon the west coast of South America, where they settled, built wonderful cities, and eventually came on into this land and scattered over the various parts of North America. He then stated that in the extent of time those who were the most industrious in building cities were destroyed by the people called the Lamanites, now known as the American Indians; the records which this destroyed people had kept were the ones that were hidden in the Hill Cumorah and were received by the Prophet Joseph Smith from the hands of an angel. He gave such a fair account of it, and as this was the fourth question that I had heard him speak upon in regard to our people, in answer to questions which had been asked, I thought that I would take occasion to write to him, which I did. I dictated a letter, saying "If at any time you happen to be speaking upon any allied subjects pertaining to our people I will appreciate it very much if you will make the announcement that if there are any libraries in that part of the country that do not have a copy of the Book of Mormon, I shall be pleased to furnish them free of cost." I said further, "If you have not a copy of the book I shall be very pleased to send you one with my compliments, and if at any time when you are speaking on any subject pertaining to our people and you haven't first-hand information I shall be pleased to furnish you it." It was about ten days before the letter reached him. I addressed it to W. H. A. S., the station at Louisville, because he was talking over the national "hookup" and I didn't know just where he was; but it finally found him in the city of Chicago, and he immediately answered my letter and said that he would be very pleased indeed to receive a copy of the Book of Mormon. I sent him one with my compliments, and also enclosed with it several other pamphlets which contain some of the teachings of our people. I received another nice letter from him stating that he had received the literature, and that his secretary had already begun reading the Book of Mormon, and he was going to do so as the opportunity presented itself. And he continued: "I want to thank you for the little pamphlets which you enclosed, because of the information that they contain."

I thought how much different are conditions today from what they have been in times past. Conditions in the world are changing. I find that we have friends on every hand. We have opportunities of visiting, every night that we have open, holding cottage meetings, street meetings and private meetings with the people and conversing with them.

I pray that God may bless us that we may go on with the work, and that you at home may assist us by sending your sons and daughters, which I pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

The chorus sang "The glory of the Lord shall be revealed" (Doc. and Cov., Sec. 6:7.) Music composed by George H. Durham.

ELDER REY L. PRATT

Of the First Council of Seventy, and President of the Mexican Mission

I sincerely trust, my brethren and sisters, that the Spirit that has actuated those who have spoken during this Centennial Conference may be given to me, that I may be able to say something that will strengthen us in our faith and in our testimonies of the Gospel, that we hold so dear.

The Psalmist said, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city, the watchmen waketh but in vain.

"It is vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late, to eat the bread of sorrows."

In connection with his words my mind has reverted to the counsel of Gamaliel, that wise Jew, who asked the Jews to desist in their persecution of the apostles, counseling that if their work was not of God it would come to naught, even as had the work of many that he mentioned who had raised up and taught strange doctrines, and who had gained considerable following, but, when they had passed on, their work had ceased with them. I recall also the words of the Savior to his disciples, for he reproved the Jews in his day, citing from Isaiah, saying unto them:

"Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying,

"This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me.

"But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

"And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand:

"Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.

"Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard this saying?

"But he answered and said, Every plant, which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up."

I have been reflecting upon these scriptures, my brethren and sisters, in connection with the history of the Church during the past hundred years. It has grown marvelously, notwithstanding the persecutions that have been hurled against it, from even before the Church was organized, for Joseph Smith, when he announced to the world that he had seen a vision, was made the subject of the most bitter persecution, and it never ceased to follow him until he sealed his testimony with his blood. The Church itself, from then for many years, was submitted to persecution. It has been submitted to ridicule. The wise and the learned of the world, from the standpoint of the wisdom and the learning of men, have ridiculed this work, and have really predicted and prophesied its downfall; and they seem to be very much alarmed because their predictions have not come true. But my brethren and sisters, they have not reckoned with the vitality of this work; they have not reckoned with the fact that the Gospel restored and the Church organized means more than the mere setting up of a religious system, officered by mortal man. They have not taken into consideration the fact that the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ means the restoration to earth again of the power of God to speak, and to act in his name, the restoration of the holy priesthood. If you will stop to reflect for a minute, it will occur to you, perhaps, strange, as it has to men that I have spoken to in the world, that Joseph Smith, after he received the wonderful vision in which the Father and the Son appeared to him, did not immediately set up a religious system; he waited; and why? Because he sensed and realized that even with that great vision, which restored to the world that which the world was most in need of at that time, a knowledge of God as he is, still he was not empowered to speak in the name of God, to minister in the ordinances of the Gospel, with authority to organize the Church and place in it those officers that Christ placed in it, namely apostles, prophets, etc. Joseph Smith did not know when that would come when he received that vision. It was not until in the due time of the Lord when he received the priesthood, first the Aaronic at the hands of John the Baptist, that he performed any ordinances for the salvation of the souls of men; and not until he had received the keys of the kingdom, or the Melchizedek Priesthood, and the holy apostleship, did he presume in any way to organize the Church and to set in operation the Gospel as the power of God unto salvation among the children of men, here upon the earth.

Now, brethren and sisters, if this work were not of God I believe that we could believe still, today, that it would come to naught. But I know, by the manifestations of the Holy Spirit, and by the experiences that I have had in ministering as a humble missionary in the world, that the priesthood, restored to earth in this dispensation, is a reality. It is the power of God to act in his name, and its works; it operates.

I have been laboring, too, as a missionary, and I have been laboring among Book of Mormon people. There is no book in the world that has so appealed to me, and that so absorbs me, in its contemplation, as the Book of Mormon. And my heart has gone out through these long years, nearly a quarter of a century that I have labored without ceasing, in the interest of the people who are the descendants of the prophets who wrote that book.

In thinking over the history of the Church I recall that in the year of its organization the matter of preaching the Gospel to the Lamanite people occupied, with great concern, the minds of the leaders of the Church. In September, 1830, a revelation was given in which Oliver Cowdery was given to know that he was to carry the Gospel to the Lamanites. In October of the same year there were included in that mission, by direct revelation, Parley P. Pratt and Ziba Peterson and others to preach the Gospel to the Lamanites. There was a beginning. It has been preached at different times from then down until now, and in the specific work that I am engaged in, namely the Mexican Mission, for fifty-one years has the Gospel been preached in the Spanish language to the Mexican people. In the year 1879 an apostle of the Lord, Moses Thatcher, climbed nearly to the summit of the great volcano Popocatepetl that overlooks all of the country, nearly from sea to sea, in the interior of Mexico, at an elevation of perhaps eighteen thousand feet. There, stretching out his hands, he dedicated the land of Mexico to the preaching of the Gospel and to the redemption of the Lamanites, in that land.

But no one who has not followed the history of it closely, knows the hectic time we have had in preaching the Gospel in Mexico. Discouragements have been piled upon discouragements, until I have wondered sometimes—I have never doubted, but I have wondered just when we would see the fruits of our labors, and just when I might feel secure, and sure that the Gospel was planted in that land to stay there. We have had revolutions nearly all of that time, and since 1910 we have had revolutions continuously. Our missionaries have had to leave the republic, on one pretext and on another, and our saints have been left, many times for years at a time, to struggle as best they could, only connected with the body of the Church by correspondence which I have been able to carry on with their leaders down there, with their branch presidents particularly.

Five years ago, nearly, now, because of controversy between church and state in that land, all of our missionaries were obliged to leave the country and the saints were again left to shift for themselves as best they could. We prayed for the time that we might return, and they prayed for the return of the missionaries. In every letter that has been exchanged they have plead that we might come back to them, and they have asked the Lord that the missionaries might be returned to them.

I have had some misgivings as to what their condition would be, during all this long time that the missionaries were away from them. The Lord opened the way in February, and alone I went into the interior of Mexico. I traveled in that country for six weeks, in company with the branch presidents and our local district president that we have named in the interior of the country. I visited in their branches, merely as a member, and, because of the restrictions, not permitted to call the people together as an officer of the Church, nor to speak to them as an officer of the Church; but as a member and in conversation with them I visited them all. And I am happy with what I found in that land. We carried the Gospel to them. We not only taught them faith in God, faith in the Gospel as restored, faith in the principles of repentance and baptism and in the Church organization, but, brethren and sisters, we laid our hands on their heads, during the years that are past, and we ordained them to the priesthood. Deacons, teachers, priests, and elders have been ordained in that land. Branches have been organized. A district has been organized, and men from among the local priesthood there have been called to officiate and to conduct the affairs of that mission as best they could. I confess that through the years that have passed I have felt rather as I think Alma must have felt when he embarked on his great missionary journey. He wished that he might be endowed with the voice of an angel, that he might preach to the people with the voice of a trumpet, that all men might hear and be brought to a knowledge of the truth. I have felt many times that I should like to be able to do more than it seemed that I was physically able to do. I have felt that the restrictions that kept me back were galling, and I wished to get into the land, for I feared for the stability of the people of the land that had joined the Church.

I would like to read to you, however, the word of the Lord that came to us, because it comes to me as a revelation, and it made me more contented to do just as the Lord seems to make it possible for me to do in my ministry. Alma said:

"O that I were an angel, and could have the wish of mine heart, that I might go forth and speak with the trump of God, with a voice to shake the earth, and cry repentance unto every people!

"Yea, I would declare unto every soul, as with the voice of thunder, repentance and the plan of redemption, that they should repent and come unto our God, that there might not be more sorrow upon all the face of the earth.

"But behold, I am a man, and do sin in my wish; for I ought to be content with the things which the Lord hath allotted unto me.

"I ought not to harrow up in my desires, the firm decree of a just God, for I know that he granteth unto men according to their desire, whether it be unto death or unto life; yea, I know that he alloteth unto men according to their wills, whether they be unto salvation or unto destruction.

"Yea, and I know that good and evil have come before all men; he that knoweth not good from evil is blameless; but he that knoweth good and evil, to him it is given according to his desires, whether he desireth good or evil, life or death, joy or remorse of conscience.

"Now, seeing that I know these things, why should I desire more than to perform the work to which I have been called?

"Why should I desire that I were an angel, that I could speak unto all the ends of the earth?

"For behold"—and mark these words—"the Lord doth grant unto all nations, of their own nation and tongue, to teach his word, yea, in wisdom, all that he seeth fit that they should have; therefore we see that the Lord doth counsel in wisdom, according to that which is just and true."

I found that in the absence of your sons from the interior of Mexico, the Lord had magnified his servants who hold the holy priesthood in that land, and the work has not merely maintained itself but it has grown. Those people, confronted with the difficulty of not being able to hold their services in rented halls, because the law of the land forbids, had gone to with their might, and although they have built but humble houses, yet without asking a cent from the Church, they have built in the time that I speak of, five magnificent little meetinghouses in which they meet. In one place where our people were forbidden to meet, two years ago, in a little branch where only ten resided, they took off their coats, made the adobes and built the house. I was in their place the other day. Since they built it they have baptized enough people so that we had eighty-five people present in that building. Four weeks ago Sunday, in the town of San Marcos—Brother Ivins will remember that his early missionary experiences took him there a few years ago—they have builded a splendid house that will seat almost four hundred people, and we had at the evening session there nearly two hundred and fifty people gathered together. Our district president and his counselor gave addresses that I should be proud to have all the world hear, in defense of our position and the position of those people in that land.

My time is very limited, but I wish to recount some of the conditions with which they are confronted. There is a great upheaval in Mexico along all lines. There is an emancipation of the people. They are struggling. They are coming up from the dregs of degradation and slavery, and there is a great nationalistic spirit permeating the whole people. It is finding its way into the realms of the churches. There has been a great schism in the Catholic church. There has arisen a national Mexican Catholic church in opposition to the Roman Catholic church. The Mexicans are asking, all over the country: "Why should we look to Rome for leadership in the Catholic church? Why should we look to England for leadership in the Episcopal church? Why should we look to the United States for leadership in all of the Protestant denominations?" They have asked our people: "Why should you look to the United States for leadership in the 'Mormon' Church?" and our people have been invited, all over the country, there, to unite themselves with other factions of other churches to build up a Protestant Mexican church with leadership in their own land.

Four weeks ago Sunday, there stood before two hundred and fifty of the Mexican people there, most of them members, but many of them not members, a young Aztec. When I first knew him he wore the costume of the country. He wore white factory pants, with sandals on his feet, and a white blouse. He could scarcely speak, intelligibly, the Spanish language. He is well educated now. He joined the Church some twenty-two years ago. He dresses well; he knows the scriptures from cover to cover. He stood before the people and for an hour spoke to them of the principle of authority and brought up this proposition of the people and the suggestion that our people join with them in making a national church. Now he said, "Brethren, we must be consistent. The Lord does not know national limits in regard to his Church, and it has been his good pleasure to reveal his will to a prophet, who is as much our prophet as he is the prophet of the people among whom he was raised up, and that prophet is Joseph Smith. We hold the priesthood and we have seen its power, we have seen its manifestations, we have seen our sick healed, we have been blessed by it and held together; and all we have we know we owe to the restoration of that power that came to Joseph Smith. That is the power of God that will guide his Church, and we cannot make it any more Mexican than it is."

Now, brethren and sisters, I was humbled, I was humiliated, but I was thankful, and I felt like saying: Maybe thousands have not come in, maybe nations have not been born in a day, but I thank God that the roots of the everlasting Gospel have struck deep in the soil of the hearts of the Lamanite people of Mexico. I feel sure that, come what may, there is no power in heaven or in hell that can uproot that power implanted in that land, and it will go on, just as that same power will go on with you.

I feel just as sure as I feel that I live that this Gospel will thrive. It doesn't worry me what men think about whether we are going to succeed or not. I know that there are people in the Church that shouldn't be in the Church. I have met a lot of people that to me seem to be just like the foam that the waves beat up upon the shore and that then melts away. There is also a stratum that is in some parts and factions of the Church that is like the dregs of poison. But the vast body of the Church is true and is clear and is pure, and this work will go on to ultimate success and will remain. It is, and always will be, the power of God unto salvation.

This is my faith, this is my testimony, and I bear it humbly to you today in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ARTHUR WELLING

President of the North Central States Mission

Very humbly, my brethren and sisters, and yet in deep gratitude and pride I bring you greetings from the missionaries and saints of the North Central States Mission. I should like my testimony to be to the youth of Zion, these young people who have been singing for us, many of whom I have the honor to know, and of whose acquaintance and friendship I am very proud; and to the other thousands, perhaps tens of thousands of young people of the surrounding territory here who may be listening in to these services today. I recently calculated that in our mission, which is large geographically but small numerically, there are five million five hundred eighty-seven thousand and some hundreds of population, only twenty-five hundred and eighty-seven of whom are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. That will figure out to about seventy-five thousand for each of our seventy-five missionaries. I think nothing more need be said in emphasis of the plea that the other brethren have made for more missionaries. That is three-quarters as many as have been added to the Church per man for each of the six original organizers of the Church in the last hundred years.

The young men and women who serve in the North Central States are full of faith and integrity. They love their work, they love the Lord, and I am certain as I live that the Lord loves them. "Oh ye who embark in the service of God," they would say if they had a chance, to all Israel, "see that ye serve him with all your might, mind and strength, that ye be found blameless before God at the last day."

In the interest of time I should like the remainder of what I say to take the form of a testimony written for a friend long ago, which I believe will express, as well as anything else, what I would like to say here today.

A TESTIMONY

"Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it." (Ps. 127:1.) Obviously, what the Lord builds, they labor in vain who oppose.

Mormonism is a house builded of the Lord. It is a going concern. It works. Nothing stops it. Its devotees are undaunted by disaster. Those who accept it are made better and happier. Those who oppose it, do so in vain.

Consider the marvelous revelation of religious truth disclosed in the boy prophet's first great vision—its staggering significance to the world. Surely, except the Lord continue to build on that foundation, they labor in vain who attempt it. But if he does, who shall oppose?

Later, clouds appear. Twenty thousand empty-handed refugees, their homes in ruins, their prophet slain, unsympathetic neighbors behind, only the comparatively hospitable wilderness before them, they turn their faces the more resolutely toward God and the boundless West. What happened? Did they quit and die as was hoped by some? Did God leave them to build alone? For answer, in the midst of the desert, a thousand miles from civilization's late frontier, in "The country that God forgot," behold an empire rise. The Lord is with his people, helping to build his house.

Nor is material prosperity Mormonism's chief evidence of divine approval. Far more important and conclusive are the moral and spiritual values it portrays. In days of shifting moral standards, "Companionate Marriage," and easy divorce, think of the stabilizing effect of the doctrine of marriage for eternity, and of the virtue and chastity with which tens of thousands of Mormon boys as well as girls kneel at marriage altars, in the temples of our God. Surely here is evidence of his building. It works.

For keeping men always at their best, no merely human agency approaches, in effectiveness, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Those who accept and live its teachings are better and happier.

The missionary system of the Church, like the "quality of mercy," continues to "Bless him who gives and him who receives" its message.

More and more the Book of Mormon is commanding the respect of investigators and vindicating its own divine origin. Opposition to the great truths for which it stands, has been and will continue to be in vain.

For these and other reasons, I am proud to be a Mormon missionary.

My grandparents on my mother's side knew and loved the Prophet Joseph. My grandfather, Jonathan H. Holmes, a Mormon Battalion man, was mustered out of the service of his country, on the Pacific coast, in time to join his family and friends late in the summer of their first year in the valley of the Great Salt Lake. My mother was born in the old fort on Pioneer Square, in 1849.

My father, Job Welling, was a handcart pioneer of 1856. A venerable patriarch of Alpine stake, hearing my father's name, once said to me: "I helped your father bury one of your brothers (by a former marriage) on the plains of Iowa;" adding significantly, "Be as good a man as your father." This challenge: "Be as good a man as your father," I like to pass on to other young men of the Church. Think it over.

"Mormonism" is true. It is a nick-name for the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Joseph Smith was and is a prophet of the true and living God. So are his successors, including President Heber J. Grant.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints presents the same organization, the same Gospel doctrines, and the same authority to administer in the ordinances thereof, as characterized the primitive Church.

It is God's house. He is building it. It will stand forever.

To all of which I bear humble witness, in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

Selection by the chorus, "The Lord shall be revealed," from "The Messiah," by Handel.

Closing prayer by Elder Mark Austin.

Conference adjourned until 10 a. m., Wednesday, April 9th.

FOURTH DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, April 9th.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

The music for this meeting was furnished by the Ogden Tabernacle Choir, Lester Hinchcliff, director.

The hymn, "How firm a foundation," was sung by the choir and congregation.

Elder Frank Y. Taylor offered the opening prayer.

The choir sang the hymn, "If you could hie to Kolob."

ELDER ORSON F. WHITNEY

An old darkey minister was about to address a congregation. He chose for his text: "Bressed am dey what expeks noffin, for dey shant be disappointed." I apply this to myself, for I certainly did not expect to be called on to address this congregation. President Grant has been so kind to me already, in permitting me to read my Centennial poem at a previous session, that I was not looking for any additional honor and pleasure. I am thankful for it, however, and esteem it a precious privilege to be not only a reader, but also a speaker at this great conference—the greatest one I have ever known.

AN AGE OF WONDERS

We are living in an age of wonders. Events and achievements that would have been deemed miraculous a hundred years ago, have become to us almost commonplace. Had we lived two centuries earlier, and expressed a belief that men would fly through the air like birds, or dive in the sea like fish, it would have provoked skepticism, if not prejudice; would possibly have been regarded as bordering on witchcraft or a disposition to encourage it.

ERRORS OF SUPERSTITION

Two or three hundred years ago, in certain parts of New England, notably Massachusetts, if a poor woman was accused of witchcraft, she was put on trial in a most peculiar manner. They tied her to a plank and threw her into the water. If she sank she was innocent—which of course was a great comfort to her! If she floated they took her out and burnt her for a witch.

A LAND OF LIBERTY

But thank the Lord, we are past those bigoted and cruel times. We live in a day when men have the right to think—to think aloud and utter their thoughts, without being beheaded for it, or burnt at the stake. God be thanked for this Land of Liberty, for the freedom to worship him as conscience dictates—not the conscience of our neighbors, but of ourselves. I am proud of my country, proud to be an American citizen, and proud to be a Latter-day Saint.

A STRAW IN THE WIND

Speaking of wonders, I am reminded of an incident that happened right here, in this Tabernacle, a year or more ago. Elder B. H. Roberts was speaking, standing as I am now, just in front of the microphone, and I was sitting in the next seat below. He was rather husky. He always was a "husky," you know; but this time the huskiness was in his throat. He cleared it once or twice, and then I reached to him a cough lozenge, and President Grant, from the seat above, did the same. Said Brother Roberts in a low tone: "I'm afraid I'll swallow them." And I, in a whisper—a whisper, mind you—replied: "Well, that's what we want you to do." And that whisper went all over the world. At least it went as far as the City Cemetery; for a woman living near there said to me next morning: "I heard it over my radio. I heard what Roberts said, and I heard your whisper." That is only a straw, but it shows the direction of the wind.

THE MARVELOUS WORK AND WONDER

I repeat: We are living in an age of wonders. The wonders of science, invention and discovery; the marvels of steam and electricity, the miracles of the telegraph, the telephone, the wireless and the radio—what are they but parts of the "marvelous work and wonder," predicted centuries before the birth of the Savior, and begun in this the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times? And strange to say, the most marvelous part of it all—that pertaining to the restoration of the Everlasting Gospel, with the powers of the Eternal Priesthood and the gifts of the Holy Ghost—is the part that the world overlooks and passes by as a thing of naught.

THE SIGNS THAT FOLLOW BELIEF

The Savior said to his ancient Apostles, and he has repeated it to his modern Apostles: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned (or condemned);

"And these signs shall follow them that believe. In my name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them. They shall take up serpents; they shall lay hands upon the sick and they shall recover."

I am a living witness to the fulfilment of this divine promise. These miraculous "signs" follow belief now, the same as in days of old. I have seen devils cast out by the power of the Priesthood. I have seen and heard manifested the gift of tongues and the interpretation of tongues. I have seen the sick healed with a touch, and have been healed myself by the laying on of hands, accompanied by the prayer and power of faith.

A TYPICAL INSTANCE

I will cite one instance, as typical of many. About twelve years ago I was in the town of Sandy, ten miles south of Salt Lake City, to deliver a lecture. Just before starting for the hall where I was to speak, I received an urgent message from the Bishop of the Ward, asking me to come and bless his daughter, a girl in her sixteenth year, who was lying at the point of death, having been given up by the family doctor, who declared that she could not live till morning. Taking another elder with me, I proceeded to the Bishop's home, gave the girl a blessing, and went on my way. Next morning, a telephone call from Sandy to my home in Salt Lake, informed me that a marvelous change had taken place in the young girl's condition. Before we blessed her, she had had no sleep for days and nights; but no sooner had she received the administration, than she fell into a restful slumber and slept for twelve hours, waking up normal and so remaining.

When the Doctor came next morning he was amazed. "Something has happened here," he said. Yes, something had happened, indeed. "The prayer of faith" had "saved the sick," according to the promise of the Lord.

Now, the Doctor had been right, from his viewpoint. Medical science had decreed that girl's death, or had decided that she could not live; and if some power greater than man's had not intervened, she would have died, according to the doctor's prediction. But something more powerful did intervene. A greater Science than the science of medicine was brought to bear. The Spirit of the Lord said: "She shall live." And she did live. This girl who, twelve years ago, could not live till morning, is alive today, a happy wife and mother. I, myself joined her and her husband in eternal wedlock in the Temple of the Lord.

I could relate many such incidents, if necessary. They are of frequent occurrence in the experience of the Elders of Israel. "These signs" truly "follow them that believe," and they are only wanting where there is no faith, or not enough to justify them.

TESTIMONIES OF THE TRUTH

We call them testimonies—and testimonies they are; for testimony means evidence. Anything that furnishes evidence that this is God's work, is a testimony concerning it. But healings are not the greatest evidence—they are but parts of a supreme testimony, greater than dreams, visions, prophecies, healings, tongues, and all other manifestations combined. The greatest of all testimonies is the illumination of the soul by the gift and power of the Holy Ghost. How well I remember when it came to me. It showed me my place in the divine scheme of things; it showed me where I came from, why I am here, what is expected of me while here, and what awaits me in the Great Hereafter. That is the greatest thing that God ever did for me. This is my testimony, brethren and sisters, and I bear it here and now in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES H. HART

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Canadian Mission

I am very grateful, my brethren and sisters, for all of the blessings of this conference and for all the blessings unto me personally and unto the missionaries over whom I have the honor of presiding.

In this centennial year, the world may well ask, as never before, is the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints of divine origin?

The purpose of all intellectual research should be to discover the truth. Truth is defined by revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith as "knowledge of things as they are, and as they were and as they are to come." And that "the spirit of truth is of God."

Strictly speaking, truth has no degrees. A thing is either true or not true. To ascertain the truth we use evidence. While the word proof is sometimes loosely used as a synonym for evidence, yet more correctly it indicates the amount and quality of evidence which brings conviction to the mind. When evidence carries assent or conviction to the mind, the matter is said to be proved. However the matter may be in theory, the word proof is constantly used where the state of mind which is brought about by the evidence does not amount to that absolute certainty which is involved in a mathematical demonstration; it does not produce absolute or necessary truth as to which a supposition to the contrary is not and cannot be true. In investigations of every kind it is important that a correct estimate be made of the kind and degree of assurance of which the subject admits. Moral certainty, not mathematical demonstration, is the highest degree of assurance of which some truths admit. Even in the realm of the administration of the criminal law, where proof beyond a reasonable doubt is necessary to convict, mathematical certainty is not required. An abiding conviction to a moral certainty is sufficient.

In the noted controversy during the middle of the last century, in which Lord Brougham, a distinguished Scotchman, who was once Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, answered another distinguished Scotchman, Mr. David Hume, somewhat a skeptic in his views, who had claimed that proof of a miracle was impossible, Lord Brougham, although he thought his opponent's arguments went to the very denial of the possibility of the proof of any revelation, and realizing the importance of combating such an idea, yet did not pretend to use more than moral evidence; did not pretend to use mathematical demonstration.

Lord Brougham said:

"The degree of excellence and of strength to which testimony may rise seems almost indefinite. There is hardly any cogency which it is not capable of by possible supposition of attaining. The endless multiplication of witnesses, the unbounded variety of their habits of thinking, their prejudices, their interests, afford the means of conceiving the force of their testimony augmented ad infinitum, because these circumstances afford the means of diminishing indefinitely the chances of their all being mistaken, all misled, or all combining to deceive us."

Along the same line Lord Brougham in his argument with the skeptic Hume further said :

"Let any man try to calculate the chances of a thousand persons who come from different quarters, and never saw each other before, and who all vary in their habits, stations, opinions, interests, being mistaken or combining to deceive us, when they give the same account of an event as having happened before their eyes, these chances are many hundreds of thousands to one. And yet we can conceive of them multiplied indefinitely; for one hundred thousand such witnesses may all in like manner bear the same testimony; and they may all tell us their story within twenty-four hours after the transaction and in the next parish."

In law, evidence is classified as direct and circumstantial, the latter meaning "the evidence afforded not by direct testimony of an eye witness to the fact to be proved, but by the bearing upon that of other and subsidiary facts which are relied upon as inconsistent with any result other than the truth of the principal fact."

I am not disposed to place in contrast direct and circumstantial evidence since they are not naturally opposed. Both kinds have a legitimate place in the proof of disputed facts. It should be noted that while there is a popular impression that circumstantial evidence is unreliable or unsatisfactory, yet many jurists are strong in its praise and only a few overstate its probative force. Both kinds of testimony support the divine inauguration of Mormonism.

Lord Chief Baron MacDonald, a jurist of England, said of circumstantial evidence :

"It is almost impossible for a variety of witnesses speaking to a variety of circumstances, so to concert a story as to impose upon a jury by a fabrication of that sort, so that where it is cogent, strong and powerful, where the witnesses do not contradict themselves, it may be evidence more satisfactory than even direct evidence, and there are more instances than one where that has been the case."

The same judge said :

"Where the proof arises from the irresistible force of a number of circumstances, which we cannot conceive to be fraudulently brought together to bear on one point, that is less fallible than under some circumstances direct testimony may be."

Sir Alfred Wills in the preface to the sixth edition of the book of his father William Wills on Circumstantial Evidence, refers to several cases in which a single penstroke no longer than an eighth of an inch was the critical test upon which important cases turned (such as Cresswell vs. Jackson and Howe vs. Burckhardt, and other cases). A legal authority says that circumstantial evidence "although not invariably so, is frequently superior in proving power to the average strength of direct evidence, and that under safeguards and qualifications which have been stated, it affords a secure ground for the most important judgments in cases where direct evidence is not to be obtained."

The principles and the nature of the mental processes involved are the same in forensic inquiry as in the ascertainment of truth in any other department of human activity, and are made use of consciously or unconsciously by everyone in the daily course of life, religious inquiries included.

I have thus spoken particularly of the value of circumstantial evidence, not because I would minimize in the least the importance of the direct evidence in support of the divinity of the restored Gospel, but because I appreciate the great importance of circumstantial evidence in the consideration of the multitude of incidents making up the case of the divinity of the restored Gospel. Many thousands of these items are to be found in the six volumes of Church history mentioned in this conference.

The Prophet Joseph Smith was and always will be the most important of the direct witnesses to the divine origin of the restored Gospel and priesthood. In comparing his experience with the experience of Saul of Tarsus, who saw the light and heard the voice, Joseph Smith said:

"So it was with me. I had actually seen a light and in the midst of that light I saw two Personages, and they did in reality speak to me; and though I was hated and persecuted for saying that I had seen a vision yet it was true; and while they were persecuting me, reviling me, and speaking all manner of evil against me falsely for so saying, I was led to say in my heart: Why persecute me for telling the truth? I have actually seen a vision; and who am I that I can withstand God, or why does the world think to make me deny what I have actually seen? For I had seen a vision; I knew it, and I knew that God knew it, and I could not deny it, neither dared I do it; at least I knew that by so doing I would offend God, and come under condemnation."

There are many other witnesses giving direct testimony as to one or another of the important items comprised in the coming forth of Mormonism. For instance, the Three Witnesses to the Book of Mormon each gave direct testimony to the facts declared by them. The Eight Witnesses speak of facts known to them by the physical senses of sight and feeling, and the muscular sense of weight. Joseph's parents and other members of the family gave direct testimony to other items. During the past century there have been hundreds of other witnesses giving direct testimony to facts which fit into and interlock with the case of circumstantial evidence in support of the divine restoration of the Gospel. Some of the most important of these testimonies were given under conditions making them more weighty than if given under the sanction of an oath. Some gave declarations admissible as evidence under rules of common law and the decisions of our state and federal courts, Utah included, as dying declarations made in consciousness of early approaching death, although not made in court nor under the sanction of an oath.

Shakespeare must have well understood this rule of the English common law, for in the play of King John, his character, Melun, when mortally wounded and in fear of early dissolution, in announcing the intended treachery of King Lewis and upon finding himself disbelieved, is made to exclaim:

"Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life
Which bleeds away even as a form of wax Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceive
Since I must lose the use of all deceit?
Why should I then be false since it is true
That I must die here, and live hence by truth?"

For more than forty years I have had the opportunity of considering many of the circumstances and incidents making up the great case of so-called Mormonism, in the light of the rules and principles laid down by the great jurists for the discovery of the truth and for the detection of error. Joseph and Hyrum went knowingly like lambs to the slaughter, sealing their testimony with their precious blood. Hundreds of their followers willingly gave their lives in the same cause.

One non-Mormon writer asks:

"Is it not beyond all reason that a lad, born of poor parents, devoid of any save the commonest education, too poor to buy books, should have accomplished what he did in less than forty years unless there was some great reason for it?"

It required more than worldly wisdom to produce such books as the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants and the Pearl of Great Price, and to formulate a system of Church government which has been praised by non-members as having no superior on earth.

From my consideration of the testimony and the circumstances that have come to me in support of this great cause which is now before the world of the divinity of the restored Gospel, I can truly say that I have an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the claims of Mormonism, of the truth of its divinity.

We have had many experiences in the Canadian mission indicating the blessings of the Lord, and what a great thing it is to know that God lives, and be able to appeal to him and to know that he answers our prayers. I found on my last trip a newly made convert whose right arm was withered. Her husband had fought in five of the fiercest battles of the great war and had evidently become shell-shocked and had wandered off. She was losing control of her children as well. Her prayer in connection with her baptism was that she might have the use of her right hand, that she might be able to support her children, that her husband might be restored to her and that she might regain control of her children. When I saw her a short time after her baptism she told me that when she went into the waters of baptism she felt that withered hand was being revived. When she came out of the water she was able to wring out her wet clothes with the hand that had been useless for a long time. There was only the little finger that had not fully straightened but was much improved and she expected to obtain the full use of the same. She had regained control of her children and expected to find her husband.

I rejoice in the many blessings of the Lord to us, and aside from any test such as might be applied to Mormonism by the jurist, it is my testimony in the light of the spirit of truth, the Spirit of the Lord, that God lives, that Jesus is indeed the Christ, and that this is the restored Gospel, and that the power of the living God to Joseph Smith, the prophet, has been conferred upon his successors and now is upon President Grant and his associates. May God help us to realize these truths and to act in accordance with the great case that has been partly presented in this conference and which abides in the hearts of the people, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

THE RESULT OF A BOY'S APPEAL.

Who can imagine an event more romantic than for a boy hardly more than fourteen to go upon his knees and appeal successfully for the Creator of the universe to give him light and guidance? Strange as this may seem to many it was nevertheless the experience that came to Joseph Smith the founder of the Mormon Church.

Of this experience he made a written record—that it was revealed to him at the age of fourteen that God had a great work for him to do; that his name "should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds and tongues." (Pearl of Great Price, P. 51, Verse 33.) How, may I ask, without some sort of assistance, could a boy of fourteen have such an experience with such marvelous results?

Contrast that lone boy one hundred years ago with the multitudes that have here assembled, their hearts filled with thanksgiving and gratitude, celebrating the hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Church. One boy then appealing; hundreds of thousands now listening in.

"Behold, saith the Lord, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder." (Isaiah 29:14.)

Where can you find, or has there ever been, a work more marvelous, more wonderful?

THE VIEWS OF AN ECONOMIST

My purpose is to draw your attention to the words and views of Dr. Thomas Nixon Carver of Harvard, one of the greatest authorities on economics. In an article for "The Westerner" (April, 1930) he has expressed his views of the work and accomplishments of the Church, whose history began with the prayer of a boy. I urge that copies of this article be placed in the hands of our seminary students and missionaries. The demand for it has been such that "The Westerner" has provided an ample supply of reprints.

Those who have difficulty in seeing things with the eye of faith will, I think, have their faith stimulated and supported by the scientific and logical presentation which Dr. Carver gives:

FACTORS IN STATESMANSHIP.

"Statesmanship," Dr. Carver says, "is the art of nation-building. One can study it in miniature in the early colonies on the Atlantic coast, and in the Mormon colonies in Utah."

Imagine a boy of fourteen beginning an institution that commands any attention from one of the greatest political economists in the world, who says further:

"I have long been interested in the Mormon polity. It throws a great deal of light on the art of nation-building."

Is that a boy's work—nation-building?

"It furnishes a laboratory for the study of the science of statesmanship. It is one of the most interesting and instructive experiments in the world."

Is that a boy's work? The results are such that, as Dr. Carver says, "it is one of the most interesting and instructive experiments in statesmanship in all the world." Could anything but the power of God make such an accomplishment possible?

Continuing, the economist says:

"Themistocles, twitted because he could not play a musical instrument, replied that, although he could not fiddle, he could make a small city into a great and glorious one. The Mormon leaders did even better than that. They did not even have a small city to start with. They started with nothing and built a great and glorious commonwealth."

Is not this marvelous?—even "a marvelous work and a wonder." (Isaiah 29:14.)

THE MANNER OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

"Such things," Dr. Carver continues, "can be accomplished in only one way." That is what I say—in only one way—and that way is with divine help, guidance and inspiration.

"That way," Dr. Carver says, "is the economizing of man-power, since the economy of man-power is the key to the whole science of statesmanship, and of the whole art of nation-building."

What could be more marvelous, what more wonderful, than for a boy unlearned, a boy with little opportunity to go to school, one whose youth was spent in poverty, to start an institution, which, from the point of view of the "science of statesmanship" and the "art of nation-building," commands the attention, the respect, the admiration, of the scholarship of the world?

"It is only by economizing man-power that great masses of material can be moved, that rivers can be dammed, ditches dug, and land irrigated. It is only by economizing man-power that cities can be built, populations fed, and energy be spared for the arts and graces of life."

"The Mormons did not even start with a mass of highly educated or skilled man-power."

BOTH POOR AND UNEDUCATED

Thanks to the professor for those good words—that the Mormons did not start with a highly educated people. You remember that when John the Baptist sent messengers to Jesus, asking, "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" Jesus answered, go back to John and say, "The poor have the gospel preached to them." (St. Matthew, 11:3, 5.) Hear what the professor says:

"The Mormons . . . started, as a general rule, with commonplace people. These people came from the backwoods, the prairies, and the mountains. From overseas, they came from peasant farms, from coal mines, and from work shops. While they were sturdy, hard-working people, they were not conspicuously gifted or learned."

"Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" asked the messengers from John of Jesus. His answer was: "Tell John the poor have the Gospel preached to them."

"It was necessary for the Mormon Church," continues Dr. Carver, "to train its own people. They not only began with desert land and had to put everything on it, even water; they also had to start with relatively uneducated people. This double task of developing both land and people could never have been performed except by economizing such man-power as there was, and utilizing it to the nth degree."

For me to say what the results are might not be very remarkable. For other members of the Church to say it, might not be remarkable; but for a great economist, not a member of the Church, to say this, indicates to me that here is the Church and Kingdom of God.

Dr. Carver's strong words are: "The results were a marvel of statesmanship."

A CLUE TO THEIR SUCCESS

"Man-power, he says, "may be economized in three ways, and he analyzes the Mormon Church in these three ways:

"First, man-power may be economized by cultivating sound, personal habits among the people. They who waste their substance in riotous living," says the professor, "are wasting more than wealth. They are wasting their own vital energy, their own man-power."

If I could see him, I would take the professor by the hand and thank him heartily for the inspiring words that follow:

"I have never found more sound and wholesome personal habits than among the Mormons. I never mingled with people who showed fewer signs of dissipation. I have never studied groups of people who seemed better nourished and more healthful. I have never known people who took more pains to educate their children. These traits are a clue to the success of the Mormons as colonizers and nation builders.

"Man-power is also economized by discovering hidden talent and giving it a chance to function. . . . The world is always in desperate need of unusual talent. Any system of supervision or teaching which can discover latent genius and make it active is a factor in nation building. To discover hidden genius is better than to discover a hidden gold mine.

THE POWER BEHIND IT ALL.

"For some reason or other," he says—you know the reason and so do I—"the leaders of Mormonism had an almost uncanny"—(that is as strong a word as any scientific man could use for 'inspiration')—"the leaders of Mormonism had an almost uncanny power of discovering hidden talent. . . . The power to save skill, talent, and genius from going to waste, is as near to divine wisdom as anything we are ever likely to know in this world."

With the vocabulary to which science is limited, how could Dr. Carver more certainly stamp the Church with the mark of divinity?

"Man-power," he says, "is also economized by cooperation, or by working together harmoniously. . . . It may have been the sheer necessity of the situation which forced the early Mormons to cooperate or starve. It may have been the bond of a common religion, it may have been superior intelligence and insight. Whatever the source, the result was good."

A scientist cannot use the word "inspiration," nor say that people are guided by Divine Providence. He can use only those terms that refer to human forces or to the forces of nature.

But we must acknowledge that there is a something which we call faith that comes into human hearts. It is a something like electricity, difficult to define, but, like electricity, tremendously powerful. It is the faith of the people of the Church in the message delivered by the Prophet which gives to this institution its active, thrilling, marvelous vitality.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The first organization of our women in the United States was the Relief Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Today we have nearly one hundred thousand members in that organization. A marvelous work and a wonder has been accomplished by them.

We have a Mutual Improvement Association for the young ladies, which organization is now more than fifty years old, and has a membership of more than fifty thousand at the present time.

We have a Primary Association that has been established for more than fifty years and that now has practically a hundred thousand members.

INSUFFICIENT TIME

I regret exceedingly that we have never had a conference—and I suppose we never will have—in which we are not limited for time as it draws near to the close. We make our calculations in our Mutual conferences, in our great Sunday School meetings, and the conferences of our other organizations, with the expectation that we can get through on time and be able to hear from all to whom we would like to listen. But almost without exception, towards the close of our meetings we are short of time.

SISTERS TO SPEAK BRIEFLY

I had hoped to give to our good sisters, the presidents of the Relief Society, the Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Association, and the Primary Organization, at least ten minutes each in which to speak to us at this conference. But we will have to ask them to be content with the same amount of time that we have given to the mission presidents, namely, seven and one-half minutes each.

We shall call upon Sister Robison of the Relief Society to be the first of these sisters to address us.

SISTER LOUISE Y. ROBISON

President of the Relief Societies of the Church

My brethren and sisters: I pray that my Heavenly Father will give me strength that I can acceptably thank him for the great tribute that was paid to the women of our Church by our beloved prophet, Heber J. Grant.

At this time the people of the Church have undoubtedly been reading the history of our early pioneers and of the founders of the Church, and I think the women of today cannot but feel impressed with what the women of the early days did. Their equipment was so poor compared with that which we have. Those women did not even have matches, nor coal stoves, nor gas stoves. There were no electric lights, no bath tubs, no sewing machines, nor any rubber goods. It took from one to three months to hear from loved ones left in foreign lands.

A short time before the Church was organized that terrible battle of New Orleans, with its awful consequences, was fought two weeks after peace had been declared in Europe. Now we have so many conveniences; news from the world reaches us in a very few minutes. Our homes are so wonderfully equipped that it seems to me the world is thinking only of material comforts, and is standing on tiptoe for something new.

A few months ago I had the privilege, through the courtesy of President and Sister Moyle of the Eastern States Mission, of attending a street meeting on a busy thoroughfare in New York. Our fine elders stood forth, clean and intelligent, and offered to the people the plan of salvation. Very few cared for it. I thought at that time, if an inventor were to offer a new explosive, or something that could take life, there would be hordes and crowds of people around, and it would be broadcast everywhere. But when our elders offer the plan of life eternal it is not even recognized.

The women of our Church appreciate the opportunity for service the Gospel has brought to us. As mothers in Israel we should be just as valiant in the cause of truth as were our former sisters. We may not have to face mobs, and be driven from our homes, but we should stand just as firmly for the principles of the Gospel as did those blessed sisters. We were told most vividly in our Relief Society conference how Sister Lucy Smith felt when her two beloved sons were brought home to her—martyred. We may not have to experience this kind of tragedy, but there are worse things than this, for the enemies of truth, honor and purity are using every means to destroy our children today. The path is clear for mothers to follow. We must live the Gospel in our homes in such a way that our children will have confidence in our teaching. We must feel that no effort is too great to teach our children that there is a Father in heaven, and that he does hear our prayers. Let us make it a real event in our family when a child is blessed or baptized. Make our little boys understand the importance and responsibility of being ordained to the priesthood. We know the truth that has been given to us, and that it is only through our earnest efforts and our prayers that this message can be carried to the world that all may rejoice.

I thank my Heavenly Father for membership in this Church. I thank him that I have a testimony that he has spoken through the Prophet Joseph Smith. I thank him for the leaders we have; for those fine men holding the priesthood of the living God, who recognize women and who help them to accomplish what our Heavenly Father wishes them to do.

I pray that we shall carry the spirit of this glorious conference to our homes, and that the whole Church and the whole world will be lifted up and blessed through this rich outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord. I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

SISTER RUTH MAY FOX

President of the Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Association

My dear brethren and sisters: I surely stand before you at this moment as one of the least in the kingdom of heaven. To think that this day should ever come to me that I should be asked to speak at this great Centennial Conference is marvelous to me.

The trend of the remarks in this conference seems to be the recalling of things of the past. I wonder if I shall be forgiven if I tell you I was born in one of the factory districts of England, that if my father had not received the Gospel of Jesus Christ I might have been there yet. Perhaps through my days I might have been working in the factory, as many married women did, striving to get food for my children. I might have had a husband who was not converted to prohibition.

I might tell you that my mother died when I was a tiny baby; that I lived here and there, with any good sister that my father could prevail upon to take care of me; that when we crossed the plains two families co-operated in one wagon, fourteen members in all. But we came with faith.

As a little girl I came feeling that if I could look on the face of President Brigham Young it was all the blessing I would ask. I might tell you that when I was married I felt if the Lord would give me enough bread and molasses to feed my children I should be content. For the benefit of the youth of Israel I will say that if President Young had asked me to abstain from eating any particular kind of food or drink—I used to say if he had asked me to eat mush and milk all my days—I would have done it. That was because faith had been implanted in my heart by my father.

And so I am reminded of the words I have heard President Nibley say, "I do not forget the pit from which I was dug." I need not bear testimony in words. My whole life is a testimony to me that this is the work of God, and that God fulfils his promises and loves his children. If they will but walk in his paths they will be blessed forever.

I desire to thank President Grant and the Authorities of the Church for this great blessing that has come to me. I desire to pledge to them my allegiance and my loyalty, and if it is not too strong to say, even to the death; for the Gospel of Jesus Christ has always been the greatest thing in the world to me.

Naturally I am interested in the youth of Israel, and, oh, if I had the voice of an angel, as has been quoted here at this conference, if I could only tell every young man and young woman what it means to try to be a Latter-day Saint, I would be so happy in doing it. I do pray that the blessings of the Lord will rest upon the fathers and mothers, the guardians and teachers of the youth throughout the Church. Oh, may they live the Gospel and set such an example before their children that they, the children, will delight to follow them. May God bless the youth of Israel that faith may grow and increase in their hearts, that Zion may rise and shine, as God has promised, and I ask it in the name of his beloved Son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

SISTER MAY ANDERSON

President of the Primary Association

It is with great humility and yet with great pride that I stand before you today to represent the great army of the future, the children of the Latter-day Saints, and to say to President Grant, as his representative, that I appreciate this honor beyond all words in my power to express.

The future lies before the great army of boys and girls of the Primary Association, numbering as President Grant has said, more than one hundred thousand.

I was tremendously interested in the remarks of Brother Lyman, and as he talked I wondered if Dr. Carver comprehended the beauty of the work that is being done through the auxiliary organizations of the Church. I wondered if he knew of the thousands of women of the type such as he describes us to be who stand back of the General Authorities of the Church as helpers and aids in promoting in the world the establishment of the Gospel of Christ.

The General Board of the Primary Association feels it is bound in honor to provide for the boys and girls of the Church the highest possible type of religious and moral education. We are the Religion Class of the Church, the class that is striving to put into the hearts of the boys and girls a feeling of love, a feeling of joy, a knowledge and understanding of their opportunities, that they in this organization may have every possible opportunity to begin in their early years to learn the grace and virtue of service. It is the hope of the General Board that the programs of the Primary Association will give every boy and girl an opportunity and a real chance to grow in service to the Church. We are trying to help them by producing such plans as will make the opportunity a real one, and as a General Board we are pledged to the Church in every possible way to provide a program which will promote a magnificent future for the Church of Jesus Christ. I pray that God will bless us in this effort and give us wisdom and understanding, that we may go forward to make the future as glorious as this conference has told us of the past.

I must bear my testimony in concluding and say to you that I know the Gospel is true. My testimony is my greatest treasure, and that every boy and girl may have the same blessing I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I am delighted to say that we have associated with us in our Religion Class work, and as our Church Commissioner of Education, a son of one of the loyal, true, faithful Latter-day Saints who was a member of the Council of the Twelve, Brother Joseph F. Merrill, a worthy son of a worthy father. We shall now hear from him.

ELDER JOSEPH F. MERRILL

Commissioner of Education

My brethren and sisters: Unlike nearly all who have spoken, this call to address you is wholly unexpected to me.

May I say that I too rejoice at the opportunity of witnessing what we have beheld since this great conference began. Many thoughts have passed through my mind as they have through yours. I have heard the brethren this morning speak of some of the evidences of this work. Those evidences have of course appealed to you, and there are others perhaps that appeal to you, that have not been mentioned.

It is written in Joel 2:28 that the Spirit of God would be poured out upon all flesh. Elder Whitney has said this morning that we live in a marvelous age. Our poetic prophet, Parley P. Pratt, sang in the first hymn that is published in the hymn book, of the marvelous days that were about to be opened up.

I wonder if there has been any evidence in what has transpired in the past one hundred years that bears testimony to the fulfilment of the prophecy of Joel that the Spirit of God would be poured out upon all flesh. In that super-excellent address of the First Presidency that was read by President Grant at the opening of this conference, an outline of the marvelous developments of the century was made. These developments have been referred to by other speakers of this conference as witnesses of the fact that the Spirit of God has been poured out upon all flesh, and I doubt that even Parley P. Pratt foresaw the glorious effulgence of this day of which he sung.

Is this work divine? May I say to you that we believe of all the blessings that have come to us in the century the greatest is the witness that has come to us of the nature of our Father and God, the personal being that he is. With this work there came into the world at that time a conception of Deity that makes it easy for us to believe and to have faith and for us to serve. Has there been any philosopher, any philanthropist, any sociologist, that has ever proposed anything that has been as marvelous as the effect of the Gospel of Jesus Christ upon the lives of its members? If we are true Latter-day Saints we live on a plane of morality and virtue, of personal purity and of brotherly service to our fellowmen, that no other doctrine has yet lifted mortal up to. Is this an evidence of the divinity that has been in this Church and has been guiding it, and was in the beginning of its establishment?

May I say that I should like to hold up to you what is another most outstanding physical evidence to the world of the divinity of this work, the Book of Mormon. It stands today, as it has stood for one hundred years, a challenge to the world and to the scholarship of the world and the archaeologists of the world, and it has met that challenge. If this book is true, then God is a personal being, there are angels in heaven that are personal beings, and they have visited the earth; and if this book is not true Mormonism originated in a fraud. And so I say that to him who has not been granted faith to see and faith to believe, here is an outstanding physical evidence that challenges the reason of every sane individual, and we hold it up today as we have held it during the century as an evidence to all such and as testimony to ourselves that this Church is what it claims to be. And this, my brethren and sisters, is a testimony which is greater than any other physical evidence, I think, that we have that this work is of divine origin. Let us prize this incomparable book. But the greatest of all witnesses, as Elder Whitney has said this morning, is the witness of the Holy Spirit. This is an evidence that perhaps we cannot give to others, but we who have received it know it is the greatest, the surest, the most convincing. And my testimony to you at this time is that I do know, because I have received the witness of that Spirit and independent of any and all other evidence I declare to you that this is the Church and kingdom of God.

May the Lord help us ever, all who have this witness, and others who believe, to show our faith and testimony by the manner of our service, by the character and the kind of lives we live, that we may be as a light upon a hill, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The work of gathering statistics and recording history is of a trying nature. There is not the same inspiration in it that there is in going forth and proclaiming the Gospel. It is a type of work that, I have always been grateful to the Lord, has not fallen to my lot. I have a most wonderful admiration for the historian, the man who delves into things of the past: It is marvelous to me to contemplate the great labor that Brother Roberts has performed in compiling the history of the Church, also in writing the new history that has just been completed. I know of no more faithful, energetic, hard-working man to record history and to ascertain facts that we have ever had in the Church than Brother Andrew Jenson, and we shall be pleased to hear from Brother Jenson for ten minutes.

ELDER ANDREW JENSON

Assistant Church Historian

My brethren and sisters: I have for many years looked forward to this day with fond anticipations—this Centennial Conference of the Church. I have hoped and prayed that I might live long enough in mortality to be present when the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints should be one hundred years old. I feel now like I could paraphrase the saying of Simeon of old when he had witnessed the child Jesus brought into the temple at Jerusalem. He said, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

I have been permitted to live to see this day, and to participate in this glorious Conference at the end of one hundred years of the existence of the Church, of which I became a member when I was eight years old. I may explain that my parents were among the first converts to the restored Gospel in that little country, Denmark, situated in the far-off north, toward the north pole. Being trained by my parents in the principles of the Gospel, I was baptized when I was old enough to be admitted to membership in the Church.

I came to this land when I was fifteen years of age. From the time I was first able to read I became a student of Church history, and as a boy I read extracts from the history of the Prophet Joseph Smith as they were published semi-monthly in "Skandinaviens Stjerne," the Church organ of the Scandinavian Mission, and have been a student of Church history, from that time until the present. When I arrived in Utah, nineteen years after the original pioneers of Utah—after walking all the way across the plains from the Missouri River—I found that besides killing snakes and building bridges, I, as one of foreign birth, had many things to learn, among which was the acquiring of a knowledge of the English language. And not only did I have to study the language of my adopted country, but also the customs and habits of a new country. The Lord, however, was with me. I took hold of the task and did the best I could under the circumstances. After I had been here for some time I began to move about somewhat freely, with the English language moderately at my command. Then it dawned upon me that as I had been interested in the history of the Prophet Joseph and the history of the Church generally in my boyhood days in my native land, perhaps it would be a blessing for my country people to read the story of the great man and prophet who was the founder of this Church. And it became my privilege to write a brief history of Joseph

Smith, the Prophet, and to assist in publishing the first book that was ever printed in Utah in the Danish-Norwegian language. That was the history of Joseph Smith, in book form, issued even before a work of that kind was ever published by the Church in the English language. Prior to that time the Prophet's history had appeared in serial form in the columns of the early volumes of the "Deseret News" and the "Millennial Star."

It has been my privilege to travel extensively in many lands and climes in the interest of Church history. I am exceedingly thankful to President Grant for the few words of commendation he gave me in introducing me to this great congregation. I have sometimes been at a loss to know exactly where I stood in the estimation of the General Authorities of the Church, because I have for many years been engaged in a labor that is perhaps only appreciated by a few and not by the masses of the people. It has been my privilege, my brethren and sisters, to travel something like 495,000 miles in the interest of Church history and as a missionary of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to the nations of the earth. It has been my privilege to visit all the missions of the Church excepting one, namely the South African Mission. When I traveled around the world for the first time, there was none of our missionaries in South Africa, and consequently I did not go there.

In my historical studies and researches I soon learned that history is made up mainly from the acts of men and women, and that those who become converts to the true Gospel of Christ and are baptized, are organized, as a rule, into branches of the Church and that these branches are generally grouped into conferences, districts or missions. At home, the members of the Church, as we all understand, are grouped into wards, and the wards in turn are grouped into stakes of Zion. I have become convinced that it would be impossible for anyone to write a true and detailed history of the Church as a whole, without a knowledge also of the history of the various branches, conferences, districts, missions, wards and stakes of Zion; this means a history of the settlements of the saints in their gathering places, as well as histories of the missions and their subdivisions abroad; hence the necessity of extensive travels to read the sources of first-hand information.

It has been my privilege to be a field man, gathering historical data, most of my life, and in going into all parts of the world, to follow in the tracks of missionaries who were laborers in the vineyard before me, to find out what they had done, gather up historical threads and weave them into history.

After my long experience, I think that I am at liberty to say, from what I actually know, that there is no community at present in America or in any other part of the world that can consistently boast of so accurate a history of their movements and operations as can the Latter-day Saints. By making this statement, I refer particularly to the history of our settlements and our missions. It has been my lot to visit nearly "every nook and corner" of the Rocky Mountains and all the gathering places of the saints in the Great West, from Canada in the north to Mexico in the south, besides visiting the so-called "waste places of Zion" in the East repeatedly. In my extensive travels, I have ever endeavored to gather historical data, and from my field notes I have written and compiled some six hundred manuscript volumes containing Church history in general, and histories of our missions and stakes, with their subdivisions, in detail, and also histories of the different auxiliary organizations of the Church, both at home and abroad.

I have aged and my hair has turned gray, as you can see, while dedicating my best efforts to this work. Mormonism, however, means everything to me. I, together with so many others, was brought to this land through the use of certain keys of the holy priesthood which were restored to the Prophet Joseph Smith in the Kirtland temple on that memorable third day of April, 1836, when, among others, Moses appeared and committed to the Prophet Joseph Smith the keys for the gathering of Israel. That accounts for the fact that about one-fifth of the entire Church membership are converts or descendants of those who hail from the Scandinavian countries, commencing with the fruits of the labors of Erastus Snow and those who came with him to the north countries in 1850. In listening to these missionaries from Zion, the blood of Israel in our veins asserted itself, for that blood is to a very great extent represented among the inhabitants of those lands; and so, when Erastus Snow and his fellow-missionaries testified of the restored Gospel, a response was awakened in our hearts, telling us that we too were of the house of Israel. We seemed to listen to a familiar voice, which we understood and obeyed, for it was the voice of the true shepherd which the sheep recognized; and therefore we are here today. Israel in other nations has had a similar experience and thus a multitude of nations are represented in our glorious pageant which is now being given in this spacious tabernacle.

Brethren and sisters, I feel that I would like to devote the balance of my time to completing the work to which I have devoted most of my life, because it is not yet completed; and if President Grant and my superiors in the priesthood will allow me to have "free rein" and back me in my labors, I promise that I shall continue my loyalty to the Church and to the priesthood and put forth the best there is in me as long as I dwell in mortality, to this end.

There are many things that a real historian can see and understand which perhaps are not generally seen and comprehended by his contemporaries, but which will be better understood and appreciated by future generations—perhaps hundreds of years hence. Some of us, pioneers in new fields, must necessarily live ahead of our time, in order to accomplish work in the interest of yet unborn millions.

May God bless us, my brethren and sisters, and help us to be faithful and true to whatever positions in the Church we have been called, or may hereafter be called to occupy, as we sojourn in the midst of the saints of the most high God. May God help us to be satisfied with our lot and positions, if we can be convinced that we are where God wants us to be, and where we can be of the best use to our fellow-men, according to the strength and ability with which we have been endowed. We may not always be in the limelight, or be engaged in work that at once is understood and recognized, but if we are doing that which our Heavenly Father has designed us to do while we dwell in mortality, we should be thankful and satisfied. These, at least, are my sentiments, and by them and by my reverence for God and his cause I am encouraged and strengthened in my endeavors to faithfully and diligently discharge the duties pertaining to the work that has fallen to my lot to do in life.

May God bless each and every one of us, who are members of the Church, to be faithful and true to our God, to our religion, to the priesthood, to our co-religionists and to our fellowmen in general; and may we have the desire and ability to honor any and every position in which we may be placed, and successfully carry the responsibilities entrusted to us, is my sincere prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The choir rendered the anthem, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord."

Elder William T. Jack offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON MEETING

The closing session of the Conference convened at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, April 9th.

Practically every seat in the great auditorium and galleries of the Tabernacle was occupied.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

The Ogden Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of Lester Hinchcliff, furnished the music for this session.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn, "For the strength of the hills we bless thee."

Elder J. Robert Price, President of the Maricopa Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The anthem, "Hallelujah, O praise ye the Lord," was rendered by the choir.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I very much appreciate the audience we have here today. I am very pleased indeed that our building is practically full at the last session of the conference. As a rule when we have held our closing session on a week day there have been a great many empty benches.

ELDER MELVIN J. BALLARD

About one year after the organization of the Church, in a revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith, the Lord Jesus Christ said:

"And even so I have sent mine everlasting covenant into the world, to be a light to the world, and to be a standard for my people, and for the Gentiles to seek to it, and to be a messenger before my face to prepare the way before me.

"Wherefore, come ye unto it, and with him that cometh I will reason as with men in days of old, and I will show unto you my strong reasoning."

"Wherefore, hearken ye together and let me show unto you even my wisdom—the wisdom of him whom ye say is the God of Enoch, and his brethren."

From the testimonies that have been borne during this conference, ample evidence has been offered to show that the Lord has fulfilled in part at least this promise, that in the establishment of his Church he was establishing a standard for his people to seek unto and that would also attract the attention of the world.

AN IMPORTANT PERIOD

My soul rejoices with my brethren and sisters who have spoken during this great conference, for this glorious day, and I have lifted up my heart in praise and adoration of the Almighty for his goodness to give me life in this time. Had I been given the privilege to choose any period of all the glorious past I would prefer to be upon the earth today, in the year 1930, rather than any other period the world has ever known, because I believe we are at the dawn of far more glorious things than have ever been known in the history of all the glorious past.

TESTIMONIES REGARDING OUR STANDARDS

Men are bearing witness to the value of the standards of the Latter-day Saints. Many quotations have been made during this conference from eminent authorities who have been making a study of the lives of the Latter-day Saints. I want to add one from a critic who has already been quoted by one of the brethren, and who, notwithstanding his criticism, acknowledges as he examines the rise of various churches in America that of all of them there is only one that has succeeded. And he asks why has this one succeeded when others have failed? He answers:

"Mormonism is the American mind at last hitting on the solution. The solution is, briefly, a co-operation of energized believers working in the name of God for an earthly kingdom that will persist into eternity. In the half century before the Civil War America was freckled with experimental societies struggling to find this formula. Mormonism found it and has endured."

Testimonies of men who are observing us indicate that not only are our standards appealing to members of the Church, but to those who are not of us. In the establishment of this work the Lord declared that only the truth could survive, and that everything that could be shaken would be shaken.

CHURCH PROGRESS IN AGE OF GREATEST ENLIGHTENMENT

In looking into some late government statistics I observe that of the twenty-three leading denominations in the United States six of them in the period of the last ten years have shown a loss in membership, and of the twenty-three not one of them shows a greater percentage of growth than the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. While it is computed that there are twenty-five thousand vacant Protestant churches in the United States, this Church has been through its greatest building program in the period of the last three years. It is marvelous when we think of it also happening in the age of the world's greatest enlightenment. That inspired document which President Grant read, the utterances of the First Presidency, called our attention to the marvelous changes that have occurred in the period of one hundred years. Man's manner of thought, of travel, every phase of human activity, has been so touched by the inventions of science, that we live in a marvelous age. More light and knowledge has come into the world during this period of one hundred years than all the ages of time combined preceding it. And in the light of all this blaze of knowledge Mormonism thrives and flourishes as never before. The greatest ally the Mormon Church has is modern science.

GOSPEL TRUTHS HARMONIZE WITH SCIENTIFIC TRUTHS

We have no quarrel with any of the truths of science. We have perhaps still some dispute with some of the theories of men who are attempting to support their theories by the application of scientific truths, but we have no quarrel with the truths of science. They stand in perfect harmony with the truths of this restored Gospel, and all truth naturally will be akin and united. Each truth, whether it comes from science or from religion, will be united harmoniously together. And then when I think of this great flood of light and truth, I ask why did this come into the world in this age? Were there not wise men before 1830? Were there not great characters who have appeared upon the pages of history, and yet they were not able to solve the mysteries, unlock the door, and bring to light the wonderful things that this age has known? Why? I can only answer with simple, trusting, faith and belief, that the reason this flood of light and truth has come into the world in this age is because God willed it so. These great truths were known to him. Not a thing that man knows but was known of God long beforehand. The secret was kept until the day came when the door was opened. The Spirit of God, as was said this morning, has been poured out upon all flesh, and men have seen visions and have dreamed dreams and have unlocked the mysteries of God and have brought to light and knowledge these marvelous truths that are God's means of helping to promote the establishment of his religious truths and to prepare the world for his glorious coming.

God is not only moving among this people, but he is operating among the nations of the earth. I rejoice in the accomplishments of the past. Our fathers and mothers have stood trials, persecutions, mob violence, and difficulties, the like of which perhaps no other age has known. But they have endured it. They have stood like beaten anvils in all these trials, and remained true, and have given us a Church conceded by men to have the right to exist.

THE GLORIOUS FUTURE

Now what shall we do? Our sacred duty is to stand by the fires that have been kindled, keep them ablaze that they shall never die, that they shall never perish. This is the glorious age of truth. There are yet conflicts that will go forward. Battles? Yes, struggles. But in the finality of each struggle there shall come the day of the triumph of truth. For this is the age when truth shall be triumphant and victorious, error, darkness and superstition, whether in the Church or in the state, shall perish, for this is the age for the triumph of truth, and I rejoice in it.

As I look forward to the future, glorious as the past has been, I see more glorious things before us. You sons and daughters of Joseph who was sold into Egypt, driven out from the midst of his brethren—in his isolation God was with him and raised him up to be the Savior of the whole house of Israel—so you children of Israel, you Latter-day Saints, sons of Joseph and of Ephraim, though you too were cast into the wilderness, driven away, in your isolation God has been with you. He is preparing to bring you out of your isolation, even as he did Joseph, to glorify you and to make you the saviors of the whole house of Israel, the light of the world.

THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES

In the document President Grant read, you listened to the scripture from the forty-fifth section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants, wherein the Lord Jesus Christ promises that though Israel was widely scattered she should be gathered again. But the statement is made that Israel, so far as the Jews were concerned, were to remain in their scattered condition until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled, and that the times of the Gentiles began with the dawn of this Gospel dispensation, and that that generation should see the close of the times of the Gentiles. What follows afterwards? I am not able to determine the exact hour or period, but we have concluded from our Book of Mormon method that a generation is approximately one hundred years. It may be more. But we have every reason to believe that we are coming to the close of the period of the times of the Gentiles, and then dawns a new day. It does not imply that the Gospel shall necessarily be taken from the Gentile nations; it may remain there, and shall until all who are among them of Israel shall be gathered up and until our work is accomplished among them. Then cometh the day of Israel.

The Lord said, through Luke, that the Jews should fall by the edge of the sword and should be led away captive into all nations, and that Jerusalem should be trodden down by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles is fulfilled. Jerusalem was trodden down until General Allenby's army marched into Jerusalem and broke the power that had ruled over the land and the destinies of that people for ages.

THE DAY OF ISRAEL

And I cannot help but believe that God is working with the rulers of nations, even the rulers of Great Britain, for they were inspired to name a Jew, Dr. Samuels, as the first ruler in nearly two thousand years, who has had authority and dominion over the Holy Land, who is a descendant of those to whom God gave the land originally. This all indicates that the time has come for this branch of the house of Israel. Their day is at hand. Many years ago while doing missionary work in Montana I was given to understand by the whispering of the Spirit, as I wondered why the Lamanites had not been brought into the Church at an earlier period—the Lord made known to me that there were many things that he had to do for them before they were prepared to accept the Gospel message. I believe that the things the Lord had in mind are being accomplished and that their day dawns also. I was impressed with it on that memorable Christmas morning in 1925 in South America when Brother Wells, Brother Pratt and I knelt in that beautiful grove of weeping willow trees on the banks of the Rio de la Plata and dedicated the land for the spreading of the Gospel, and the Spirit of the Almighty was upon us. We were made to know that the Gospel message would find thousands who had the blood of Israel in their veins in South America. Then we saw the day when it would go to the fifteen million of Father Lehi's children who are in that land, and that the shackles, politically, would be broken, the day of retribution would come, the day of deliverance, and that they would come into a full realization of the promises of the Almighty. For, for that very purpose, we read in the third section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants, was the Book of Mormon given, to bring them, the Lamanites, to a knowledge of the truth.

THE LAND OF ZION

I bear witness to you that God is moving in South America, and that the day will come when it will be as the prophet declared, a land of Zion—yes, the land of Zion for this branch of the house of Israel; while North America becomes the land of Zion to Joseph's children of Ephraim. And God will move the leaders of the nations to prepare the way for it all.

CHURCH AND STATE

The great struggle for religious liberty that is going on in Mexico is also on in South America. Within the last five years two great nations have established absolute separation of Church and state, and others are struggling to that end. It will come. No power can stay it. The theory that the great dominant church there has, that its head has the right to rule over the Church and state, (and within the last year he has ascended unto that position, wherein he is now king and also the head of the church) is not the spirit of the democracy of South America, nor is it the spirit of the democracy of North America or Mexico. It may be a lingering symbol of that which was once in Europe, but that order of things cannot live in this land, for this is the age of the separation of the Church and the state. Yes, there will come a time when it shall be united again, but not under any earthly man. I believe that the Lord God Almighty is working not only in this Church but in this nation. Yes, this is the beginning of the realization of Daniel's dream. But I firmly believe too that God, as our scriptures very clearly teach, both the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, raised up this mighty nation of the Gentiles, and that his hand has been in it. He was with the patriot fathers who laid its foundation. He sustained them in their struggles. He was with Lincoln. He has carried the work on by his power, and men have acknowledged God as the King of the land. And so I believe when he comes whose right it is to rule and reign he will come as King of kings, and that is politically, and that he will be Lord of lords, and that is in his Church. I believe that when he comes to rule and reign there will be a union of Church and state under him whose right it is to rule and reign. But never has that right been given to a mortal man.

We are going forward in preparation for that time. This great government is going forward in its holy mission to establish the principles of righteousness in government. It is God's work. It is rolling forth and it is teaching the nations of the earth and preparing them for the order of things when he shall come. It was but a prophecy of that which in time will be, when the Lord Jesus Christ rode into Jerusalem as a king. They strewed their palm branches and hailed him king. That is what he shall be when he comes to rule and reign, and the people shall accept him and be glad for his coming.

GOD'S PURPOSES TO BE FULFILLED IN RUSSIA

I am sure also that God is moving in Russia. Much as we are disturbed over the tyranny and the oppression that is waged against religion in that land today, it is not a new thing, for that has been the order for ages. But I can see God moving also in preparing the way for other events that are to come. The field that has gone to wild oats needs to be plowed up and harrowed and prepared for a new seed. So in Russia. It may seem appalling to us, but it is God breaking up and destroying an older order of things, and the process will be the accomplishment of God's purposes within a very short period of time, which normally may have taken generations. But that people will come back, for I bear witness that there are thousands of the blood of Israel in that land, and God is preparing the way for them.

SAVIORS OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL

Yes, our cousins, the Jews, whom we have sympathized with, whom we have loved from the beginning of this Gospel dispensation—whether you know it or not God is moving in your interest. This work is the hub and the center about which all the great movements are going forward among the nations of the earth. God is in it and it will triumph, and the Latter-day Saints will come out of their isolation and become the saviors of the whole house of Israel; not so much to feed them bread as Joseph did, but a more precious bread, the bread of life, the spiritual things that are of greater value.

THE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF GOD'S PURPOSES

I bear witness to you Latter-day Saints that all we need to do is to keep the commandments of God. His promise was that if we would listen to his counsels we would never cease to prevail until the kingdoms of the world were subjugated under the Lord Jesus Christ; and the earth will be given to the saints and those who are worthy of it, to possess it forever and forever. All we need to do is to adhere to our teachings, and these standards of living will solve every problem that now vexes the world. In our making progress let us not lose sight of the goal, neither become discouraged. We are about to enter into a new era, a new period, more glorious, more wonderful. All we need to do is to serve God and we shall see his salvation going forward to the accomplishment of his holy purposes, for Zion shall arise and shine, and the ends of the earth shall come unto her to learn of her ways and walk in her paths, for she is destined to be the light of the world. I know it and bear witness of it, and ask God to send us home rededicating our lives and all that we have to keep the fires burning, to carry on and be prepared when God is ready for the consummation of his holy purposes.

DEAD BUT NOT SILENCED

We sorrow at the necessity of the death of the Prophet, but we glory that he was willing to die and did die a martyr and sealed his testimony with his blood. It was undoubtedly essential. As has been said by an eminent authority who has written a life of Christ, "We lend ears only to voices which cry out from the tombs, and reserve our scanty capacity for reverence for those whom we have assassinated. The only truths that remain in the fleeting memory of the human race are those written in blood. All the prophets who have ever spoken upon the earth were insulted by men, and men will insult those who are yet to come. We can recognize prophets by this: that smeared with mud and covered with shame they passed among men, bright-faced, speaking out what was in their hearts. No mud can close the lips of those who must speak, even if the obstinate prophet is killed. They cannot silence him. His voice, multiplied by the echoes of his death, will be heard in all languages and through all the centuries that are to come."

God vindicate his truth, as I am sure he will, and keep us worthy to be in the ranks of the victorious in the greater day that is to come, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Temple Block Mission

I am happy to be present at this meeting after my lectures at the University of Utah today. We have registered at the State institution over three thousand of the youth of the State; and I have a pride in the boys and girls, for they have faith in life; they have their dreams and hopes, and they will develop into fine citizens and will carry on the institutions of civilization which their fathers and mothers have founded. They will learn as we all learn that they will not go far without being brought face to face with the commanding figure of Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of the world. They will see the Creator of divine life in him; a truth that is linking together the peoples of the world into an immortal purpose.

In this day of mad rush and strife; when noise and glitter influence the human mind; this mighty rushing to and fro; this clash of many strifes; this feverish hastening towards some unknown goal; Jesus Christ gives the intelligible answer in revealing the infinite possibilities of the human soul. The heaven of his doctrine is ever working in the social body of which we are part, and his influence leads the van in every forward movement for the welfare of mankind. It is a plain fact of history that the influence of Jesus Christ upon the world has opened up vast tracks of spiritual opportunity of which the wisest men have never dreamed. He has uplifted and enriched the common life; he has filled the soul with immortal hope. He has brought peace to the desolate heart; he has made the quest for truth a divine adventure. He has made known the abiding joy of service for others; and most of all he has justified the upward reach of man, as he struggles from lower to higher things, which shows that Christ brings life and light into the hearts of men.

"Blessed are they who do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." These are the words of our blessed Savior; and as you think of them, you will recall the wonderful discourse of Jesus with the woman of Samaria by Jacob's well. He tells the woman about the "living water," which he can give to all who ask for it. "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again . . . but the water I shall give him shall be a well of water, springing up into everlasting life." These words are life-giving to us all; and when I think of them, I think of the ideals we are standing for today.

We have with us on this great occasion Miss Ruth Pyrtle, head of the National Educational Association, who will be introduced to you by President Grant. I should like to say to Miss Pyrtle that we hold sacred above all else the names of God the Father and Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior. It was Jesus who taught: "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." The doctrines of Christ are the living waters of our lives. God be praised for them. May we appreciate them.

As I contemplate them, I think of many of the world's great historical movements, among which are the establishment of the government of the United States and later the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the establishment of his Church by divine authority. Then the gift to the world of the Book of Mormon. It is a history of the religious development of ancient Israel on the American continent, and is a holy book.

First, as to the government of the United States. Our government was founded by inspiration, and the constitution of the United States was written as an expression of the freedom of the ages; a freedom that had been worked out and bled for by a people who looked always to God.

When the Pilgrim fathers first set foot on the soil of America, they wrote this divine statement concerning their object and ideals of government.

"In the Name of God, Amen. We, whose names are under written, the loyal subjects of our dread Sovereign, King James, by the grace of God, Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, etc.

"Having undertaken for the glory of God, and advancement of the Christian faith, and the honor of our king and countrie, a voyage to plant the first colonies in the northern part of Virginia, doe, by those presents, solemnly and mutually, in the presence of God, and one of another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic, for our better ordering and preservation and furtherance of the ends aforesaid; and by virtue hereof, to enact, constitute, and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions, offices, from time to time as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the Colonie. Unto which we promise all due submission and obedience. In witness thereof, we have here unto subscribed our names at Cape Cod, the 17th of November, in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord, King James of England, France, and Ireland the eighteenth, and Scotland the fifty-fourth, Anno Domini, 1620."

These great ideals, the Mormon people have ever striven to live up to, and only recently has a noted American scholar declared that the people of Utah—the Mormons—stand for the noblest ideals of free government.

Then came the founding of the government of the United States, the culminating event in a sense of the establishment of free institutions. This Government was founded by the inspiration of God, for the founders prayed for inspiration, and they were inspired. When the members of the First Continental Congress convened at Carpenters Hall in Philadelphia, they turned to God for divine help. The Reverend Mr. Duche was called upon to pray one morning, and in his supplications to God, he said:

"O Lord, our Heavenly Father, high and mighty King of Kings, Lord of Lords, who dost from Thy throne behold all the dwellers upon the earth, and reignest with power supreme and uncontrolled over all kingdoms, empires and governments, look down in mercy, we beseech Thee, upon these American States who have fled to Thee from the rod of the oppressor, and thrown themselves upon Thy gracious protection, desiring to be henceforth dependent only upon Thee.

"To Thee have they appealed for the righteousness of their cause. To Thee do they now look up for that countenance and support which Thou alone canst give. Take them, therefore, Heavenly Father, under Thy nurturing care. Give them wisdom in council and valor in the field. Defeat the malicious designs of our cruel adversaries. Convince them of the unrighteousness of their cause, and if they still persist in their sanguinary purpose, O let the voice of Thine own unerring justice, sounding in their hearts, constrain them to drop their weapons of war from their unnerved hands in the day of battle.

"Be Thou present, O Lord of Wisdom, and direct the Council of the honorable Assembly. Enable them to settle things upon the best and surest foundation, that the scene of blood may speedily be closed; that order, harmony and peace may effectually be restored, and truth and justice, religion and piety, prevail and flourish amongst Thy people.

"Preserve the health of their bodies, the vigor of their minds. Shower down upon them, and the millions they here represent, such temporal blessings as Thou seest expedient for them in this world and crown them with everlasting glory in the world to come. All this we ask in the name and through the merits of Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Saviour. Amen."

After we gained our independence, and later had written the constitution of the United States, our government was organized with George Washington as president of the new Republic. With the advent of the government of the United States came many new movements in the history of mankind. Upon this continent was found a people whom Europeans designated as Indians. They are of interest to us in that their forebears were Jews from Jerusalem. A great and enlightened people they had been, and on this continent they built up a civilization which today is the wonder of the world. According to Charles Eastman, a full blooded Sioux Indian, we have these words concerning the religion of the Indians:

"The original attitude of the American Indian toward the Eternal, the 'Great Mystery' that surrounds and embraces us, was as simple as it was exalted. To him, it was the supreme conception, bringing with it the fullest measure of joy and satisfaction possible in this life. The worship of the 'Great Mystery' was silent, solitary, free from self-seeking. It was silent because all speech is of necessity feeble and imperfect; therefore the souls of my ancestors ascended to God in wordless adoration. . . . Among us all men were created sons of God and stood erect, as conscious of their divinity. . . . Being a natural man, the Indian was intensely poetical.

The solitary Communion with the Unseen which was the highest expression of our religious life is partly described in the word HAMBEDAY, literally 'Mysterious feeling,' which has been variously translated as 'fasting' and 'dreaming.' It may better be interpreted as 'consciousness of the divine.'

"The first 'Hambeday' or religious retreat marked an epoch in the life of the youth, which may be compared to that of confirmation or conversion in Christian experience. Having first prepared himself by means of the purifying vapor bath, and cast off as far as possible all human or fleshly influences, the young man sought out the noblest height, the most commanding summit in all the surrounding region.

"Knowing that God sets no value on material things, he took with him no offerings or sacrifices, other than symbolic objects, such as paints and tobacco. He appeared before the Great Mystery. . . . Sometimes he would chant a hymn without words, or offer the ceremonial pipe. In this holy trance or ecstasy, the Indian mystic found his highest happiness, and the motive power of his existence.

"Then he came down from the mountain and again entered the vapor bath to prepare himself and be clean before he met his fellow men.

"It was the duty of the parents to direct their children and to assume the priestly power. The Indian was a religious man from birth. It was supposed that the mother's spiritual influence counted for most. The mother's first lessons were Silence, Love, Reverence. Later she added generosity, courage, chastity.

"As a child," says Eastman, "I understood how to give; I have forgotten that grace since I became civilized. . . . The fruits of worship are Self Control, True Courage, Endurance, Patience, Dignity, and Reverence. 'Guard your tongue in youth' said the old Chief Wabashaw.

"The moment that man conceived of a perfect body, supple, symmetrical, graceful, and enduring—in that moment he had laid the foundation of the moral life."

The coming forth of the Book of Mormon is a great event in history, for it tells about the religious teachings of the forefathers of the American Indians. It is a book of holy scriptures, and it contains the word of God to his people. Prophets there were in those days, and the Book of Mormon tells us that these divinely and inspired men taught the Kingdom of God and its Coming; The Fatherhood of God and the infinite Value of the Human Soul; and the Higher Righteousness and the Law of Love. These are all to be obtained by obeying the laws and commandments of God, which are fundamentally, Faith in God the eternal father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost; the principles of repentance and holy baptism by immersion by one having divine authority; and the conferring of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands by one holding the Priesthood of God.

So we are this day celebrating great events in the world's history. The Gospel of Jesus Christ will never go from the earth; it is safely lodged in the hearts of men. The Gospel will save the world from degradation and sorrow; from wrong and ignorance. Our Government of the United States will also live. It has already been an inspiration to the world in ideals of liberty and freedom. It will continue to be so if we will but try to live up to the ideals of its founders. This government says to all peoples: Come, you are children of God. Here is the world of God. Enter. There shall be no king; no subject; no master. There shall be no lord, no vassal. All are free to worship God according to the dictates of conscience.

One hundred years ago, a celebrated French savant, the Abby Genty, published an essay on the Result of the Discovery of America by Europe. The essay closes with the words: "The independence of the Anglo-Americans is the event most likely to accelerate the revolution which is to renew the happiness of the world. In the bosom of this new nation are the treasures which are to renew the world." He names the relief to crowded Europe as one of the blessings which is to come to mankind: the emancipation of slaves, the end of conquest; and the conversion of the world to Christianity.

The Abby Genty was right. Here will the world find a government of the people and for their eternal good; here will people look for their Zion—the kingdom of righteousness. The day may be far off; it may be near; but the Zion of the Lord will be established on this continent, and the kingdom of God shall reign in the hearts of man. For these ideals we are striving. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We are honored in having with us today Mrs. Ruth Pyrtle, who is the head of the National Educational Association of America. I will say for her benefit that the Latter-day Saints have always been interested in education. Immediately upon arriving here the early pioneers established schools, and last year the Church expended from the tithes of the people on education alone over $918,000. It is now my great pleasure to introduce the President of the National Educational Association.

MISS RUTH PYRTLE

President of the National Educational Association

President Grant and friends: I assure you that I deem it a great honor and privilege to be invited here today, an honor of a lifetime. Our association is greatly honored in that you let me come here as a representative of that great association and bring to you, this educational body, the greetings of the National Educational Association, the largest organization of teachers, of educators, not only of the United States but of the world.

I have listened with great interest this afternoon to these splendid addresses, and I feel quite at home, because it seems to me that the work of this hundredth anniversary meeting and the purposes that this great Church has had all through the years are common with the rest of the people of the world who are working for the progress of the human family. And so I feel like addressing you for a moment as educators, because that is what we all are if we are measuring up to the opportunities and responsibilities which God has given us as individuals and as groups in a community wherever it is our privilege to work.

I am tremendously interested in what I have heard expressed here today, showing the interest of this great Church and this body representing the Church, in the international point of view. I think all of us recognize as never before that we no longer live in a neighborhood as big as our immediate community, as big as our school district, or county, or state, or nation. But, as one speaker has so aptly put it, we are in a world neighborhood, and so in these modern days our obligations to each other in the human family are as big as the world. The way we measure up, if you please, and meet those obligations and responsibilities, I think, depends probably upon about how large our point of view is, about how large our vision is. I think that is true of the American school teacher behind the desk and perhaps the parent in the home and the people of the world, no matter where they may be working. We meet our responsibilities, I say, about in proportion as we have vision.

Great gatherings like this, bringing together peoples from many nations, giving people here such a splendid opportunity to get the great messages that will come out of this convention, (and I trust the press is giving it to the world) are going to help in pushing out our horizon.

It was my privilege to meet in the initial meeting of the World Federation of Educational Associations, which as you know was held in San Francisco, six years ago; and then again, four years ago, I attended the first biennial in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1925; in 1927 I was at Toronto, Canada; and last year at Geneva, Switzerland. When I mingled and met and talked with those people, representing more than fifteen nations of the earth, educators gathered together in order that we might think through our educational problems together—because we believe the hope of the world is in the intelligent education and direction of the youth of the world—I tell you, friends, when I met and heard those people of other lands, I realized what a common problem it is, this working for the progress of the human family in all parts of the world. It is not a national job. And may I remind you that the reputation of the people of Utah, the schools of Utah, the educational forces of Utah and the West, is not only nation-wide, but it is world-wide, and we are looking to you. I think this nation is looking to the people of the West for more than you sometimes realize. We have never been disappointed either.

I do not see how people could be small-minded, small in action, that are trained as I know your schools out here do train those who live in this great open country. The hymn that you sang here today expresses it beautifully. I do not see how people could help but have a big vision of their responsibility and their opportunity to serve. I oftentimes said to my own teachers in the building where I had the privilege of serving as an elementary principal, that if I were a parent of children I would be very grateful to that type of teacher who would very early in life put it into the thinking and action, if you please, of the children all along the line, whether it is kindergarten, elementary, high school or university, that type of thinking that Carruth, the Kansas poet, must have meant in his poem, "Each In His Own Tongue." I thought of it as I rode along over your beautiful country this morning. Those lines describe my country, and I think they describe yours. Carruth says:

"A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite, tender sky,
The ripe, rich tint of the cornfields,
And the wild geese sailing high,—
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod,—
Some of us call it Autumn,
And others call it God."

Friends, I would be more grateful for that type of teacher who put that kind of thinking and appreciation of God's world and the fundamental things in life into the early thinking and training of the children than I would be to the one who fails to do that but perhaps who teaches much exactness in language, or arithmetic, or geography, or what not. Because after all it is the fundamental things, it is the real values that count, that we want.

Perhaps you would like to know what this great educational association of teachers has been doing recently. Your inviting me in here today, Mr. President, is a sample of the co-operation which we as a great body of teachers find everywhere. I have had the blessed privilege this year, as your president, of going about, seeing the field in action, (I like to call it that) as I had this blessed privilege in Salt Lake today, and yesterday in Ogden. Then I have had several times opportunities of being down in Washington where our headquarters are, seeing them in action. I have been interested in some of the things that perhaps are not directly class-room experiences that we are doing as a great association. For instance, an illustration of co-operating with even governmental agencies. Not so long ago, following the stock crash, President Hoover, through the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. LaMott, invited the great National Educational Association to give any assistance they could in this program that they are working upon to keep confidence, if you please, to keep people employed, to avoid any great crises. To that end more than five thousand letters were sent out from our headquarters, at Sixteenth and M., four blocks from the White House, to the leading school men all over this country in every state, indicating that we should not retrench in education unless absolutely necessary, but keep up our building program, keep up this great educational program which this Church and all Utah believes in so strongly. And when the answers to these five thousand letters came back it was a great satisfaction to me to see them tabulated and sent over to the Secretary of Commerce and to the President of the United States, and to read the letters of thanks that came back.

That is one illustration of co-operation, which might seem to you almost outside of school room activities.

Another illustration is the opportunity which we had as a great profession to co-operate with the department of law enforcement. No doubt, friends, you have heard here—maybe not so much as we hear further east—much of the comment criticising “flaming youth,” even accusing the high school youth of America of drinking more these days than in the days of the open saloon. So the law enforcement department of the government asked us to be a fact-finding body and to give the truth or the falsity of such statements. A questionnaire was sent out to more than five hundred educators in every part of this Union. These answers are coming back and I assure you it is very interesting to our great research department to tabulate these results from that questionnaire and to get at the facts. I am not sure it is all finished yet, but enough has come in to show us that there really is no truth in the statement that the children of America, the high school children, are drinking more than they did in the days of the open saloon. It is not true according to the facts. There is enough truth though in some of the answers to the questionnaires to show us that the good work of this Church and of the people who represent it, and all of the other forces at work for the good of humanity in America and in the world, needs to keep on and on, and constantly on.

I could go on giving you other illustrations of co-operation. I see illustrated it seems to me in Utah, in this congregation today—I have always thought it was illustrated in Utah—one of the major problems of this year. We are working on the wise use of leisure time as a most important factor in this modern age. It is nothing new, but it is new this year, that we have appointed a national commission of fifty people and a state commission of an equal number in each state working on the wise use of leisure time, co-operating with all the other agencies that are working on that, or wanting to be a clearing house, if we may be, to that end. What for? For the youth of America, because we know how-very necessary that is. I can see many people here who remember that in late years we have had at least two of those great national programs of the N. E. A. in this beautiful city of Salt Lake. I remember very well being in this very tabernacle and enjoying the program that we had here in 1913, and you will remember that we were here in 1919. This year, in 1930, we are meeting in Columbus, Ohio, and the theme for the meeting is "Vital Values in Education." The very addresses which I have heard since I have been on this platform, it seems to me, would answer some of the things that we are discussing in our summer program—"Vital Values in Education." The first day will be "The International Point of View, as a Vital Value in Education." I have heard that discussed here today. You are doing it in every program. "The Art of Living, as a Vital Value in Education"—I know no people who know that stronger than the Mormon people.

"The Wise Use of Leisure, as a Vital Value in Education"; "The Enrichment of Life, as a Vital Value in Education." Another day a sub-topic will be, "Creative Learning, as a Vital Value in Education."

I just mention the topics because it seems to me so in line with probably the very purpose—indirectly, maybe some of you will think—of this great world-gathering you have here. May I remind you that we are working for the youth of the nation; we are working for better salaries, for better teachers. We are trying to bring to the spotlight worthy school activities and broadcast programs and worthy achievements. This association is a clearing-house—I mean the National Educational Association—for local and state associations. It is the voice, if you please, of people in service. We aim to shape the ideals of the profession. It is the pure plan of educational progress. I feel that the aims of our great National Educational Association are the ultimate aims which you have, Mr. President, in this great world-gathering of people. We are working together for the human race. I bid you God-speed. I invite you to give us all the help that you will give us as a group of educators trying to lead your children aright. Let us in that way assist any time that we may.

I esteem this a great honor and a great privilege for our Association to be allowed a few moments on this platform and to bring to you again the greetings of our great National Educational Association, the largest body of teachers not only of the United States, but of the world, working for the same purposes that you are, the progress, the best progress of humanity. I thank you.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

For the benefit of our visitor I will announce that we have in what is known as our Primary Association, comprised of little children, over one hundred thousand members; that we have in our Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Association and our Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association over one hundred thousand members; that in our Sunday Schools we have over a quarter of a million.

I am sure it will be of interest to you to learn that we expended last year from the tithes of our people:

For the construction of Ward and Stake meetinghouses $1,257,000, and that the people themselves spent another million.

For the maintenance and expense of our meeting houses $588,000.

For Stake maintenance $235,000

The choir sang the anthem, "God is our refuge and strength."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The Young Men's Mutual Improvement Associations are presided over by three of the Apostles, so we shall not call upon them to speak at this time, as they have already spoken.

Two of the members of the Superintendency of Sunday Schools are members of the quorum of Twelve Apostles, and Brother George D. Pyper, to whom we owe more I believe than to anyone else for this marvelous pageant that is being presented, is one of the General Superintendency of Sunday Schools, and we will allow him to talk to us for ten minutes.

I wish to say that I have been associated with Brother Pyper for many years, and that he is one of the loyal, true, faithful Latter-day Saints, true to the very core.

ELDER GEORGE D. PYPER

My brethren and sisters: I regret very much that I was absent from the meeting this morning when President Grant called me. Not that I desired to speak, by any means, but because I always like to be found in my place when called for.

I was just informed by a friend as I came on the platform that he had never heard a more splendid introduction to anyone who was absent than that given me by President Grant this morning. Probably it was well that I was absent as I have never in my life been called to face a wonderful general conference, and the shock might have proved fatal.

However, I am glad to stand before you, my brethren and sisters, and say that I myself am not entitled to all the credit for the production of "The Message of the Ages." There have been some wonderful helpers. We have had the cooperation of the Presidency of the Church and the leading authorities, of Elder George Albert Smith and the Centennial committee; a wonderful cooperation all along the line. The names of the Pageant committee are as follows: W. O. Robinson and Junius F. Wells of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association general board; Elbert H. Eastmond, director of art of the Brigham Young University, Provo; Charlotte Stewart, Salt Lake City's recreational superintendent; Irma Felt Bitner of the Granite stake committee; Ann Nebeker of the general Primary Association board; Anthony C. Lund, director of the Salt Lake Tabernacle choir; Tracy Y. Cannon, Tabernacle organist; Lester Hinchcliff, director of the Ogden Tabernacle choir; Leroy Robertson, a young musician of the Brigham Young University, Provo, who composed the motif and some of the incidental music and orchestrations connected with the pageant, who unfortunately is ill and in California, and has not been able to hear his own work; Bertha A. Kleinman, secretary of the Arizona Temple; Frank W. Asper, Tabernacle organist; and A. Hamer Reiser, of the Deseret Sunday School Union Board, who has acted as secretary.

I may say for your information that the majority of the committee have been working on the pageant for over six months in organizing the plot, selecting the scriptural texts from the Bible, Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants and the Pearl of Great Price. About the first of January, the Centennial committee sent for Sister Bertha A. Kleinman of Mesa, Arizona, who spent one month with the committee; and together we worked out the pageant as you now have it. We believe and hope that it may be a foundation for a Latter-day Saint mission play, that might be produced on the Tabernacle block at stated periods.

Thanks are due to those who have assisted in many other ways—Joseph D. C. and Cannon Young, the architects of the Church, who drew the plans for building this wonderful platform, as far as I know the greatest stage now in existence, except those that have been specially built for great spectacles. It is interesting to note that all of this has been done with love and reverence for this great building. Howard McKean, a splendid man, built the platform. I said to him, "Howard, be careful not to mar these pulpits." He said, "You do not need to warn me, Brother Pyper. I have such a reverence for this house that not a nail shall be driven where it can be avoided."

And so all the work has been done in that spirit. Brother M. A. Strand put in for us a wonderful electric system. It is rather thrilling to me to know that part of the switchboard used is the old switchboard of the Salt Lake Theatre which I installed there nearly thirty years ago. We met with many problems in the work, but with our united efforts, they were overcome. It was one of these that I was helping to solve this morning when called for by the President.

I do not know how many missionaries are abroad in the world today, but it may be interesting to you to learn that we have approximately fifteen hundred men and women working in this pageant, and every one of them is a missionary. If you could get among them and hear their expressions and partake of their enthusiasm you would be surprised—at least you would be happy as I have been. Anything they can do to further the cause of truth they are happy in doing. Their only interest is the glory of God and the furtherance of his work upon the earth.

I walked home with a man yesterday who said: "The Message of the Ages' has strengthened my faith." And I believe it is the feeling of all the members of our committee that if the production does that, if it strengthens the faith of the people in any way their greatest hopes and wishes will be realized.

There are many more connected with the production that I should like to name, but time will not permit.

I want to bear my testimony, my brethren and sisters, to the work of the Lord. I know that God lives, because I have felt his presence and he has been my refuge and comfort, as has been sung today, in time of trouble and tribulation. I know that Jesus is the Christ because I have felt the warmth of his love. I know that this Gospel of the latter days is true because of the blessings it has brought to me and mine in this life and the assurances it has given me concerning the life to come. My greatest desire now is that the few years I may have left upon this earth I may devote to his glory and the furtherance of his cause. For this I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER WILLARD YOUNG

My beloved brethren and sisters: I presume it is owing to the fact that I am the son of President Brigham Young that I have this honor.

I want to say that I believe if father were here he would rejoice very greatly in the proceedings that have taken place during the last few days.

The foundation of our faith is that we believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. We have heard quoted some of the Savior's sayings, such as: "If you come unto me you shall have eternal life," and "If you come unto me and are baptized ye shall be saved." What is salvation, and what is eternal life?

To be saved is this, that if we comply with the requirements set forth by our Savior, we will not have to suffer for our sins. That is one thing. Another thing is that if we accept the Gospel, become members of the Church of Jesus Christ and remain faithful to the end, when we die our spirits will go into paradise; that is, we will be placed beyond the power of evil. We will not have to suffer the temptations that we suffer here.

We are promised if we become members of this Church and are faithful to the end that when the Savior comes again, we shall receive a resurrection, and that promise is not given to any others than those who accept the terms.

Members of the Church who are faithful to the end will have life in the presence of God. If one has complied with the requirements of salvation in the terrestrial kingdom, he will have eternal life. If he complies with the requirements of salvation in the celestial kingdom he will have eternal life. If he complies with the requirements for exaltation in the celestial kingdom he will have eternal life and exaltation in that kingdom.

May God help us to properly use the knowledge that has been revealed to us, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We will now hear from Elder Junius F. Wells, one of the Assistant Historians of the Church, a son of Brigham Young's counselor, Daniel H. Wells, who succeeded my father in that position.

ELDER JUNIUS F. WELLS

Assistant Church Historian

Necessarily what I shall say must be prefatory to that which I should like to have recorded as my contribution to the great volume of testimony that is going forth from this centennial conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to all the world.

I feel as President Brigham H. Roberts did concerning the announcement of his prodigious work, which is perhaps one of the most important, and perhaps longest-lived contributions to this centennial year of any that shall go forth, the History of the Church, a work, I trust, that shall find its place in every public library, in every school library, and in the homes of the affluent who can afford to buy it. I will go farther and say I hope it shall find a place in the homes of the stockmen, who should give their sons a calf to raise with which to pay for those books; in the homes of the agriculturists who should let their sons cultivate a sufficient acreage of sugar beets to pay for them. They will in the course of time be worth many acres of sugar beets.

I wish to say a word concerning Andrew Jenson. I was so happy and pleased this morning that he should have the opportunity of addressing this great conference, for I knew that the desire lay near to his heart. Andrew Jenson, circumnavigator of the world in both directions, for years has devoted himself to historical study and research among the Latter-day Saints and has assembled a library of upwards of two thousand bound volumes, more than three thousand titled pamphlets and more than sixteen thousand manuscript biographies. These he has generously given to the Church and we have found lodgment for them in what we are designating the Jenson Alcove in the library of the Historian's Office.

Now if I have not exhausted my ten minutes, I should like to bear my testimony. I have borne my testimony from this stand more times than one concerning the Church to which I owe my existence through the faithful acceptance of its doctrines by my father and my mother. I have borne my testimony concerning the personnel of its general officers: the successors to Joseph Smith in the Presidency, six of whom I have personally and somewhat familiarly known and served, and the forty-one out of fifty-four Apostles whom I have personally known and loved, admired and upheld by my faith and prayers. I will not attempt to name the number of Seventies, but I have known a good many of them. I desire to bear my testimony that these men were men of God.

I should like to say a word concerning my testimony of Joseph Smith the Prophet, for I wish to challenge the world upon this proposition, that the world of unbelievers together with the believers among the Latter-day Saints, are witnesses before mankind to the fact that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. I will prove it to you. On the night of the 22nd of September, 1823, Joseph Smith appealed to God for a further revelation concerning his standing before the Almighty, and almost instantly in response to his prayer his room was lighted up by a light exceeding that of the noonday sun and within it appeared a personage. This personage spoke to him. I will quote Joseph's own words:

"He called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Moroni; that God had a work for me to do; and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds and tongues, or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people."

Now we say to the world, you have fulfilled your part and are fulfilling your part, and will be held responsible for it before the heavens, in traducing the name of Joseph Smith, in proclaiming him as an imposter, in speaking evil of him. We Latter-day Saints, in this volume of testimony that is broadcast from this conference, and in the action that we have taken since Joseph Smith came to his ministry, to uphold his testimony and maintain it before the world, are speaking his name for good, have been doing so in the past, and shall continue to do so in the future. And so between us we declare to mankind that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and I challenge the world to refute that statement.

The Lord bless you all. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I regret beyond expression that we have no more time left. We have not as yet heard from Bishop John Wells. We shall have to ask Brother Wells to speak very briefly instead of occupying the usual fifteen or twenty minutes that have been allotted to the General Authorities of the Church.

ELDER JOHN WELLS

Of the Presiding Bishopric

I have been deeply impressed with the references that have been made to the great pageant, particularly with the comments of our previous speaker, Junius F. Wells. It will serve to remind the Latter-day Saints of the program of our Father in heaven for the development and salvation of his children. The pageant gives a history of the world that is hardly ever given in textbooks. It shows the dealings of our Father with his children through various generations.

No one could listen to the music and to the recitation, and see the marvelous presentation of the great events, without strongly feeling the power and influence of God's messengers, prophets, and representatives who have held the holy priesthood.

We speak of the great events that have transpired in this Church, the restoration of the Gospel through the medium of the Prophet Joseph Smith. I never tire of hearing it. It is always music to me. It is the greatest subject of this last dispensation. We should constantly teach to our children and to others the story of the Prophet's first vision, the coming of the Angel Moroni, the delivery of the plates, the translation of the book, the testimony of the Three Witnesses, and the organization of the Church. We should also teach the mission of John the Baptist, and the travels, labors, and miracles of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

I am going to read to you a small slip that came to my attention years ago, written by a man named Francis, and which appeared in a California newspaper. It ranks very high, I believe, in current literature, and when I read it, it fills my mind with a very profound impression.

"Here is a man who was born in an obscure village, child of a peasant woman. He grew up in another obscure village. He worked in a carpenter shop until he was thirty, and then for three years he was an itinerant preacher. He never wrote a book. He never held an office. He never owned a home. He never had a family. He never went to college. He never put his foot inside a big city. He never traveled two hundred miles from the place where he was born. He never did one of the things that usually accompany greatness. He had no credentials but himself. He had nothing to do with this world except the naked power of his divine manhood.

"While still a young man, the tide of popular opinion turned against him. His friends ran away. One of them denied him. Another betrayed him. He was turned over to his enemies. He went through the mockery of a trial. He was nailed upon the cross between two thieves. His executioners gambled for the only piece of property he had on earth while he was dying, and that was his coat. When he was dead, he was taken down and laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

"Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone and today he is the center of the human race and the leader of the column of progress. I am far within the mark when I say that all the armies that ever marched, and all the navies that were ever built, and all the parliaments that ever sat and all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man upon this earth as powerfully as has this one solitary life."

We believe in God the Eternal Father. We believe in his Son Jesus Christ, our Elder Brother and Redeemer, our Advocate with the Father, who came to redeem mankind from the fall of Adam and to lay down a code of laws known to us as the Gospel of Jesus Christ, by obedience to which we may return to our Father in heaven. After three years of missionary labor, he was crucified, and having overcome all things, all power was given unto him, both in heaven and in earth. By his sacrifice he brought to pass the resurrection and eternal life.

The Gospel he taught has been restored in these latter days through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith, who received his authority from John the Baptist, and from Peter, James and John.

I hope that some future historian of the Church (say fifty years from now) will record that as a result of this great centennial gathering there developed among the Latter-day Saints a deeper spirituality, a more sincere desire to serve the Lord our God, a truer and more friendly neighborliness and love of fellowmen than ever before.

May the blessings of the Lord be with this people, and may his special blessings rest upon those who direct the affairs of this Church. I sincerely pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We would all be disappointed if we did not have a few words of blessing from the great grandson of the martyred Patriarch, who now stands as our Presiding Patriarch.

Brother Hyrum G. Smith has been in very poor health for some time, and at one time I felt it would hardly be fair to ask him to say anything at this conference. But he seemed to have sufficient vigor to offer a good prayer at the opening of this conference, and we shall be pleased now to have a few words of blessing and testimony from him.

ELDER HYRUM G. SMITH

Presiding Patriarch of the Church

I am very grateful, my brethren and sisters, for this important privilege, although I had thought there would not be time for me to appear the second time.

GRATEFUL FOR RETURN OF HEALTH

I am very grateful indeed for the prayers of the saints, and I testify that the Lord has heard them in my behalf.

Two of the late General Conferences of the Church I have heard over the radio from my home. I have been very grateful to be able to attend all of the sessions of this conference and am very grateful for the strength that has returned to me and that I am able to enjoy your association and presence.

A great many testimonies of my work, the work of the Lord, have come to me during this conference, and I am praying that what few words I can say will be acceptable in the time that is allotted, or left.

PARENTAGE EXPLAINED

Many people have asked me about my parentage and who I am, and in just a few words let me answer your questions thusly: I happen to be the oldest son of my father, who was Hyrum Fisher Smith, the oldest son of his father, the late Patriarch John Smith, who was the oldest son of his father, the Patriarch Hyrum Smith. My grandfather was the oldest brother of his father's children, but his younger brother became the President of the Church and perhaps because of that reason was better known by the people. Nevertheless, grandfather became the Presiding Patriarch of the Church at the age of twenty-three years, and I think he holds the record today for time of service, having served in that office for fifty-six years. Perhaps that is sufficient in that respect.

WITNESSES OF THE LORD'S GOODNESS

I want to bear testimony however to the fact that the Lord has blessed me in the work that has been entrusted to my hands as one of the young men of the Church. My grandfather in his fifty-six years was instrumental in administering about 21,000 recorded blessings, to say nothing of the hundreds of others that were unrecorded. And about 20,000 of his blessings are in the archives of the Church today. Eighteen years ago last Sunday I was sustained by the vote of the General Conference in this building to hold the office that I now bear. During that time there have been accumulated in my office nearly twenty thousand testimonies or witnesses that the Lord has been very kind to me. I am very grateful for the faith that the Lord has inspired in the minds of the saints and members of the Church in their blessings and in the power of the Lord through the holy priesthood.

I have been asked many times by individuals who have received the priesthood how I know that I have the priesthood. They too have been ordained to offices in the priesthood, but they have sometimes wondered whether or not they really hold the priesthood, because of their inactivity in the Church. I want to testify to you, my brethren and sisters, that I know that I possess the priesthood of God, because I have faith in those witnesses, nearly twenty thousand of them, and many others not recorded. They are a recorded witness that may go on down through the ages in the archives of the Church as well as in the hearts and homes and lives of the saints.

BLESSINGS FOR ALL

I am very grateful to be an instrument in the hands of the Lord in officiating in this sacred work, and indeed it is a sacred work. I pray God's blessings upon the membership of the Church and the officers of the Church—President Grant and his counselors, the quorum of the Twelve Apostles, the Seventies and other presiding officers; the Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons throughout the Church. I pray God to bless them and all their officers and their work in righteousness. I pray for the great body of High Priests throughout the Church. It was a thrilling sight when I saw them arise in this conference. God bless the High Priests in the Church, that they too may know that they possess that power, for the Lord himself was a great High Priest. The Lord Jesus Christ declared it, and these men bear his power in the earth today and are his witnesses; and I share that with them, in which I glorify the Lord.

I praise the Lord for his blessings, and as his servant I bless the entire membership of the Church. May God bless his servants the missionaries, both men and women, wherever they are called to labor, at home or abroad, and I bless them as his servant, that they may continue to go and come in safety, whether upon water or upon land, whether among their friends or their enemies, that they may go in the power of God as his witnesses; that they may find friends and search out the honest in heart, the blood of Israel, and those whom God would have know the truth.

I bless all who are working in righteousness throughout the world, the honest in heart, the sick, the suffering, the destitute. I pray God to provide their needs and to give them faith to hear and to heed the teachings of his servants. My heart is filled with humility and with blessings for all who deserve them. I know that God is merciful, that he loves the honest in heart, and that his blessings go out to the sick; for when he was upon the earth in person he visited them and blessed them and healed them. I pray his blessings upon them today, that they may continue to receive comfort and the power to be healed and restored. I bless them to this end in the Church and in the land throughout our mountain country here, those who are suffering in humility and have faith to be healed. God bless them.

TESTIMONY OF GOD'S WORK

I know that this is the work of God, that he is merciful to his children, and that this work will go on and on and on until it has finished its full purpose in the earth. This is the work that Daniel saw that should never be thrown down or given to another people, but should go on and on until it should fill the earth. And may God bless us to be instrumental in his hands in bringing about these holy purposes. May his Holy Spirit attend us and bless us in our homes. May his blessing be upon our lands, in our offices, in our fields, and with our flocks and herds. May our lands produce and grow fruit that will be meet for food, and then may we honor God in our tithes and in our offerings. Be honest with him and he will remember you and his blessings will be poured out upon you in rich abundance, and you will come up before him in an acceptable manner and go on richly endowed by his power and blessing, to be magnified in the world as humble servants carrying out his purposes. Unto this end I pray God's blessing upon the Church in all of its activities whether at home or abroad, both in the auxiliary organizations and in the quorums and offices of the priesthood—all of which I pray for in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

REPORT OF AUDITING COMMITTEE

"President Heber J. Grant and Counselors,
Dear Brethren:

It gives us pleasure to state that our examination of the reports of the First Presidency's office, which covered the Presiding Bishop's department, disclosed the fact that the finances of the Church are in excellent condition and its accounting system is modern and complete.

Respectfully submitted,

Your brethren,

APPRECIATION OF DEVOTION OF TEMPLE WORKERS

I desire to express my appreciation to the many hundreds who are working in our temples without remuneration—several hundred in the Salt Lake Temple alone. In all of our temples an immense and wonderful work is being accomplished, all on missionary time, and I appreciate it. On behalf of the Presidency of the Church I extend our blessing to all of these devoted workers.

President Grant asked all who were in the audience who had had the privilege of shaking hands with President Brigham Young to arise and raise their right hands.

There was a large number present who had had this privilege.

The President then asked those who were present at the conference of the Church fifty years ago to arise and raise their right hands.

There was a considerable number in the audience who had attended that conference, and who so indicated in the manner requested by President Grant.

The choir and congregation joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I desire, on behalf of the Presidency and the General Authorities of the Church, to thank the City Commissioners, the Police Department, the Commercial Club, the leading business men of our city, and all who have taken part so energetically and willingly to make a success, so far as was in their power, of this great conference. I wish particularly to thank each and every one who has given his or her services to make a success of the production of the wonderful pageant which is being presented nightly in this building. We think it is a marvel of inspiration, and we feel to pour out our blessings upon all who have been connected with it.

TO SPEAK AT SERVICES NEXT SUNDAY

The time has expired. I had hoped to have time to say something to the people. Those of you who happen to be in the city next Sunday, if you will come to the afternoon services in this building, may hear me speak to you on that occasion.

THANKS SINGERS AND OTHERS

I wish to thank all of the splendid singers—our own tabernacle choir, the tabernacle choir from Provo, the tabernacle choir from Ogden, the young people from the Latter-day Saints College, who sang for us yesterday; the leaders of these organizations, those who have sung solos, and all who have assisted in providing us with the beautiful music that we have heard. I wish to thank everybody who has contributed to the success of this conference, and if anyone has been overlooked, please consider yourself thanked.

President Anthony W. Ivins offered the benediction.
Conference adjourned for six months.

Accompaniments and interludes were played on the great organ by Tracy Y. Cannon, Frank W. Asper, and Samuel Whittaker.

Stenographic notes of the conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON,
Clerk of the Conference.

SUNDAY, APRIL 13, 1930, 2:00 P. M., SALT LAKE TABERNACLE

In his closing remarks at the General Conference, President Heber J. Grant announced that there was not sufficient time left for him to speak as he had hoped to do, and that he would therefore deliver an address at the services to be held in the Salt Lake Tabernacle, Sunday, April 13th, at 2:00 p. m.

The following is a verbatim report of the remarks of the speakers at that meeting:

ELDER ALONZO A. HINCKLEY

It is my sincere desire that I shall make a sacred use of the precious time granted to me on this occasion, and that with an eye single to the glory of God I shall bear a faithful testimony to the divinity of this work.

My soul has been made to rejoice exceedingly during the sessions of the recent conference. I have been filled with gratitude and thanksgiving, filled with testimony and good desires; blessed with a determination to offer continued service unto the Lord, praying for a spirit that shall permit me to discern between the essentials and non-essentials and center upon the essentials and offer full service.

I never experienced such a day in my life as the day on which we opened our centennial conference. I never felt a spirit more thrilling than on that occasion. As I stood with that great body of high priests to bear witness before God that we sustain the General Authorities of the Church in their position as divinely called and appointed leaders, my soul went out in gratitude. As we rent the heavens with the glad shout of hosanna to God and the Lamb, it seemed heavenly. Then in finishing the first session, the President of the Church blessed us not only from the kindness of his heart and the good desires and love that he has for all men (especially for the righteous) and for all who bear rule in the nation, as well as the Latter-day Saints. I thought, this is not just the voice of a kindly man, good and great and noble in his intentions, but this is one speaking by divine authority, and whomsoever he blesses God will bless, for he acts for God in the name of Jesus Christ.

Another week has elapsed, and on this another Sabbath we find ourselves here in worship before the Lord. The message of the centennial has gone forth and will continue its mission in the world. Mormonism, so-called, will be better known now than ever before. We stand in a remarkable position in the world, claiming no descent from or allegiance with any sect or denomination in the world, and every sect and denomination in the world is happy that they are not responsible for our existence. We stand and bear testimony of ourselves that this is verily the Church and Kingdom of God, and that it is founded upon the everlasting and enduring principles of God and is unshakable. We occupy a position different even from our brethren in that remarkable period, the meridian of time, when the Savior organized his Church and ministered among men. At that period of time it was given unto the authorities to know that while they proclaimed the Gospel with all fervor and with a full knowledge, and sought to bring all men to an understanding of the truth, that while they waged a righteous cause, yet they knew that the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times was yet far ahead. I have been led to believe that this knowledge must have carried with it some sorrow, when they knew there would come a time of dwindling in unbelief, that there would come a time when the true faith should be lost, a time when men should seek for the truth and should not find it. It must have been to them somewhat sorrowful.

But the Lord did not leave them without the knowledge that this Gospel, which is eternal and everlasting, should finally prevail, in the day of the restitution of all things. I have been much impressed with the testimony of Peter, when he talked to those unbelieving Jews. Peter and John, following the Pentecostal outpouring of the Holy Ghost, proceeding in their ministry, had gone to the temple. They saw a lame man who stood before the Gate Beautiful and pleaded for alms. Peter, speaking to him said: "Look on us," and he looked steadfastly into their faces, perhaps expecting alms. Peter said: "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." And he took him by the hand, and he did arise and did walk; and, rejoicing, entered into the temple with the brethren.

It created consternation, and men gathered to know what had happened. Peter reasoned with them and said: "Why art thou so concerned? Why is this so wonderful? Why do you look upon us as though it is any power inherent with us? This Jesus whom you would not release, whom Pilate would have released, but you clamored and demanded that he should release you a murderer, and you pleaded for his crucifixion—this Jesus has God raised from the dead, and it is through his power that this man stands forth healed." Then Peter said, referring to the betrayal and crucifixion. "I wot that through ignorance ye did it." And he warned them and commanded them to repent. "Repent, ye, therefore!" and he said unto them, not as he had said on the day of Pentecost, "Repent and be baptized and have the Holy Ghost bestowed upon you," but "Repent ye therefore, . . . that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you."

Then, through the remission of sins, there was a time coming, I say, it was revealed unto Peter, a great and glorious time when Jesus Christ would come again. For he did say that the heavens must retain him until the restitution of all things spoken by God through all the prophets since the world began. In that time of restitution, when God would send again Jesus Christ, whom the heavens must retain until then, should come into fulfilment of things spoken by all the holy prophets since the world began.

Is it not wonderful, my brethren and sisters, that there should be a people now living who declare that this is the dispensation, or period wherein Paul declared God should gather together in one all things in Christ Jesus, both in heaven and on earth? The message of the Latter-day Saints is to the world, and this great centennial conference has sent anew the declaration abroad, that this Dispensation of the Fulness of Times has been ushered in; that God has sent again from the heavens Jesus Christ; that he has sent ministering angels, each with his special power and special commission and special authority. He has taken away from the world and removed every superstition, every tradition, every false interpretation, and has established anew the Gospel of Jesus Christ and coupled it, not with any promise of some future time when we shall dwindle in unbelief and be left in darkness, but established his Church, given his own testimony that it shall never be thrown down or given to another people, but that it shall go on and on and on until it shall fill the whole earth.

This is a period of preparation, this is a period of proclamation. This is a time of warning. The responsibility is given to the Latter-day Saints that as they are warned they shall warn their neighbors, until there shall be no ear that shall not hear, nor eye that shall not see, nor heart that shall not be penetrated. The Gospel is the voice of God to all the world, calling them to repentance, to a godly life; with an assurance that unto all who conform their lives to the requirements of the Gospel there shall be no gift and no blessing that shall be withheld from them.

The Lord himself has said that it is the voice of God; he has called and he says:

"Hear, O ye heavens, and give ear, O earth, and rejoice ye inhabitants thereof, for the Lord is God, and beside him there is no Savior."

This is our testimony. This is the testimony of hundreds of thousands of Latter-day Saints who have been brought to a knowledge of the truth, and they who have conformed their lives to all Gospel requirements know that their feet are placed in certain and in sacred paths, and that if they remain faithful they shall be led to salvation and exaltation in the presence of God.

This is my testimony. I rejoice in the leadership of this Church. I bear testimony of the divinity of the lives, mission and labors of the Prophet Joseph Smith and those who have followed him. I rejoice likewise in the goodness that God has manifested in the consideration of his children, that no man has to walk alone, or lean upon the testimony of some one else, but that the Lord gives a testimony to each and every individual who accepts the truth and conforms his life to the requirements of the Gospel.

I bear my testimony as one of the third generation in this Church, that as my grandfathers and grandmothers, as my father and my mother knew, so know I that this is the Church and Kingdom of God and his power unto salvation now and forever. May the Lord help us to be true to the end, is my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I had hoped that during our conference we would have an abundance of time—seeing that we had four days instead of the usual three—in which I might make some closing remarks at the last session. It does seem that we never get quite enough time at our conferences. I know of nothing that has been more interesting to me in these gatherings than the brief addresses we have had upon many occasions from presidents of stakes. Since we quit having overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall we have not been calling on returned mission presidents and presidents of stakes to speak at our conferences, as we have lacked the time necessary to hear from them.

I do not know but that in the future it might be a wise thing for us to have our meetings start at half past nine and half past one, as an hour and a half is sufficient time for most people to eat their lunch, and this would allow two and a half hours for each session of the conference.

Since I became President of the Church, we have always been crowded for time towards the close of our conferences and have had to limit some of our brethren of the General Authorities to very brief addresses, which I regret. I realize that twenty minutes is hardly sufficient time for a man to enlarge upon any idea to a very great extent, and yet I believe that the five minute speeches by our sisters and the very brief remarks by our presidents of missions during our conference have found a warm echo in the hearts of those who listened.

A WONDERFUL CHANGE

One of the things I wished to say at the conference I will say now, and that is that I have never felt happier in my life than over the wonderful change that seems to have come all over the world in the attitude of people toward the Latter-day Saints. It has fallen to my lot now to labor for forty-seven and a half years as one of the General Authorities of the Church. In my early ministry as one of the officials, almost without exception as I traveled around the country, I found a spirit amounting almost to hatred in the hearts of people toward the Mormons. I have found people who would double up their fists and say: "If I had my way I would put all of you Mormons in the Tabernacle, and then turn the guns of Fort Douglas upon you."

I remember that during my three years' ministry in Europe I did not succeed in getting one single line of refutation in any of the newspapers of Great Britain, notwithstanding some of the vilest and most wicked and abominable stories were printed against our people.

ONE PARTICULAR CASE

I call to mind one particular case. I went to London with a letter of introduction from the shipping firm with whom we had done business for over fifty years, to the editor of one of the large papers. This letter of introduction not only vouched for me as a gentleman of integrity and honor, whose word was as good as his bond, but it also vouched for all of my predecessors as presidents of the European mission being in that same class. The editor to whom the letter was addressed was away, but his assistant, a Mr. Robinson, received me. When I told him I was anxious to refute the seven to ten columns that had been published on different occasions in his paper, he declined to accept a single thing that I would write. He announced that he was convinced that they had published the exact things that ought to be published about the "Mormon" people.

LETTERS OF INTRODUCTION

I answered him that a man may call his neighbor a liar, but that does not make him a liar. Yet he might be honest in thinking that his neighbor had lied. I told him I defied him to furnish a certificate of character from any reputable man or woman for any of the men or women who had furnished him the information that had appeared in his paper. I told him that I had letters of introduction from influential bankers in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, and from every non-Mormon banker in Salt Lake City, vouching for my integrity. I had no testimonies, I told him, from "Mormon" bankers. That would be equivalent to my writing a testimony; "To whom it may concern: The bearer, Heber J. Grant, is an honorable man. Very respectfully, Heber J. Grant."

All of my credentials were from those not of our Church. He said: "It does not make any difference what you have. We will not publish anything that you have to say. We believe that we have published the right things." "I know," was my reply, "that you have published that which is false."

At that time all of our missionaries in Great Britain were expected to wear "stovepipe" hats and Prince Albert coats. They seemed to be very particular at that time in regard to dress. They have changed somewhat in the last twenty or more years.

THE ASSISTANT EDITOR

When I got to the door I put my hat on, turned around, took it off and pretended to have an idea. I had had the idea as I was walking upstairs after the boy told me that the editor was out, but that the assistant editor, Mr. Robinson would receive me. I turned around and said: "By the way, my letter was not to you. The editor is out. You are only the assistant editor, and if I remember correctly the young man who ushered me upstairs told me your name was Robinson. Is that correct?"

He said: "It is."

"Do you know Phil Robinson?"

"Everyone knows Phil Robinson."

I said: "Would you accept any statement that Phil Robinson made?"

"Certainly I would."

"Did he represent the London Telegraph, one of the two greatest (and I emphasized the two greatest, because his paper was not one of them) London newspapers, during the Boer war?"

"Yes, he was their correspondent."

"Were all of his statements received at one hundred cents on the dollar?"

"Certainly."

"Then you would believe anything he says?"

"Certainly."

"All right. Buy his book entitled 'Sinners and Saints,' and you will find that everything that you have published in your paper is a lie pure and simple. It will only cost you two shillings, and if that is too expensive, I will be very glad to purchase it and present it to you with my compliments."

He said: "You astound me."

I said: "You are not the only person that has been astounded when he has come up against the Mormon question."

He said: "Write us half a column."

I said: "Seven to ten columns of falsehoods and a half column of refutation. Small favors thankfully received, and larger ones in proportion. In two hours, you shall have your half column."

MANUSCRIPT RETURNED

I sent it to him. He kept it the usual thirty to sixty days and returned it with the usual printed slip, many of which I have seen: "The editor regrets very much that he cannot find space for this article." The manuscript was sent back to me.

THE CONDITION IN EUROPE TODAY

What a wonderful change! When Brother Talmage who is sitting upon this stand presided over the European mission, and today while Brother John A. Widtsoe is presiding over that mission, we have been able to get practically anything and everything that we desire printed in the newspapers. They give us the best kind of notices regarding our conferences there, favorable and honorable notices.

OUR LOCAL MORNING NEWSPAPER

I am grateful beyond expression for the change in attitude of our local morning newspaper. I wish to pay a tribute to them for publishing twelve pages with illustrations of all the presidents of the Church, my counselors, our great temple in this city and all our other temples, and for accepting an article written by one of the General Authorities of the Church, covering the twelve pages.

I am reminded of the fact that some years ago I delivered a sermon in this tabernacle and the report of it was so garbled by that paper the next day that it was about as honest as though a man had said: "I killed John Jones in self defense," and someone had published that this man said: "I killed John Jones," without mentioning that it was "in self defense."

I remember that the president of the great Hartford Fire Insurance company, of which I was the agent at that time (I have had the honor of representing them for more than fifty years) was in the audience at the time I preached the sermon. The next morning he read this garbled report, and he said to me: "You ought to sue that libelous paper; that is not what you said at all. They have twisted around what you did say, making it altogether different."

Today no one could ask for fairer publicity or for a better article to be written, with illustrations, than the twelve pages that the Tribune recently published to which I refer. I am very grateful for this wonderful change.

A VICIOUS OPPONENT

I remember that when George Q. Cannon was elected a delegate to Congress his right to a seat in Congress was contested. The attorney who went to Washington to oppose Brother Cannon, and in behalf of the man who had received, as I remember it, just ten per cent as many votes as President Cannon, told the Congressmen that we were a vile lot, and went on to say that if a man were opposed to the Mormon hierarchy he was liable to disappear and nobody would know what had become of him; that a man took his life in his hands if he dared to be in opposition to the Mormon people. When he got through President Cannon said to him, calling him by name:

"You pride yourself that than you, no more bitter, no more unrelenting, vicious opponent of this awful Mormon system lives, do you not?"

"I certainly do."

Brother Cannon said, addressing the committee hearing his case: "Gentlemen, I do not think it is at all necessary for me to answer the gentleman's arguments. He has lived with us for over twenty years. He has a fine dwelling that has cost about $25,000 to erect." Then he sat down and the committee voted for Brother Cannon to retain his seat.

FRANCHISE TO WOMEN

Years later it was suggested that the horrible Mormon problem could be solved by giving the franchise to the women. It so happened that the legislature was in session at the time, and there was not a single non-Mormon in the legislature. Within 48 hours, if my memory serves me right, the women were enfranchised by our legislature. The same identical gentleman who was employed to fight George Q. Cannon's taking his seat in Congress, was sent to Washington to have the franchise taken away from the Mormon women as he said that it only added power to the awful hierarchy. He announced that the Mormons had from two to twenty wives, etc., and that these women were all slaves and voted just as they were told to do by their husbands.

When he got through speaking, President Cannon remarked: "Does it not surprise you, gentlemen, as you are all married, how some intelligent men believe that other men's wives can be bossed." He then sat down. He had killed the gentleman's argument.

However, when the discussion came before the Congress of the United States, the franchise was taken away from the women of Utah, but it was later restored when Utah attained statehood.

PLURAL MARRIAGE

The statement about every Mormon having from two to twenty wives, which has been uttered many, many times, is an absolute falsehood. I presided ecclesiastically for two years over one of the counties during the time that we were preaching and practicing plural marriage, and no individual was permitted to take a plural wife without the written recommendation of the bishop of the ward in which he resided, vouching for his character. Not only that, the president of the stake had to vouch for his character as well. And before he could go into the temple to marry a plural wife the President of the Church had to give him a recommend. I had only two applications for permission to marry plural wives during the entire time I presided over the Tooele stake of Zion, covering the entire county of Tooele, and I refused them both. I said to the first applicant: "What is needed in your family is sufficient brains to take care of one wife and one family, and certainly you cannot get a recommend from me to marry another wife."

To the next man I said: "I happen to have lived in Salt Lake before I came out here, and although you are vouched for by your bishop he is not familiar with your conduct when you are in Salt Lake. I happen to have seen you under the influence of liquor, and your kind cannot get a recommend from me to obtain another wife. It is bad enough to have a man who breaks the Word of Wisdom and gets drunk raising one family, without giving him the opportunity to raise another."

There never was a time in the history of the people of Utah that two per cent of the population were liable under the Edmunds-Tucker act. But it was a very fine argument to say that we imported, as people are saying yet that we do, women to Utah and forced them into plural marriage.

AN INCIDENT IN CHICAGO

The first time I was in the east, in the city of Chicago, in May, 1883, a gentleman who afterward became the general manager of one of the greatest insurance companies in the world, whose representative I was, took me to dinner at the Palmer House. After dinner there were about twenty ladies in the rotunda, and he said to me: "I have invited my lady friends here, Mr. Grant, to meet you."

I was a young man of 26 and it was my first trip east. I never had read a book on etiquette—and by the way, I never have read one since—and so I watched to see what people did so that I might not make a mistake. I noticed after eating that bowls were brought to us with a piece of orange in them. I thought it did not look very much like orangeade and wondered what it was. I saw my friend dip his fingers in the water and wipe them, and so I did the same.

When we came out to the rotunda, I noticed that he kept his hat on, notwithstanding there were ladies there. So I kept mine on. One of the ladies turned to me, after we had chatted a few moments, and said:

"Now—now, really, Mr. Grant, I don't wish to give offense, but would you mind removing your hat?"

I said: "Not at all, madame, I am only 26 years old, and the horns do not come out on the Mormons until they are 32. You will have to wait six more years."

She blushed and said: "Oh, I have heard that Mormons have horns."

I said: "I supposed you had, but they do not come out, dear madame, until we are 32 years old. I am sorry that I shall have to disappoint you."

FAIR PUBLICITY

Things have changed. We have had some of the very finest publicity all over the country. Occasionally I have seen a picture or two of myself, of Brigham Young and others, together with articles regarding us, that really if I were on a jury, trying the person who was the possessor of the face represented by those pictures I am sure I would convict him no matter what the charge might be. On the other hand there have been better publicity and better articles published about us during this centennial celebration than anything I have ever read before, and I am very grateful for it.

I want to pay this tribute to those who have published these articles and I expect to acknowledge with thanks the many telegrams that we have received.

OUR PEOPLE RESPECTED

When I realize that for years and years not a single person from Utah was ever able to secure employment in Washington, and that today we have several hundred of our people employed there, and when I realize that the delegate from Utah was expelled years ago, and today one of the apostles of the Church is recognized as one of the foremost and one of the most outstanding senators in the United States and respected by the president and his colleagues, I rejoice in this wonderful change.

I rejoice in having had ex-President Taft say to me when I met him upon a trip to Washington: "Mr. Grant, you did not call on me the last time you were here. Now I want it understood that you are never to come to Washington without coming to see me. There is in my heart a warm feeling for your people. I have great respect for them and I want you to call on me whenever you are here."

He was in such a condition of ill health that I couldn't call upon him the last time I was in Washington. I rejoice in the friendship for our people of every president of the United States from President Roosevelt down to the present time.

FRIENDSHIP OF U. S. GRANT

I rejoice in the friendship of Ulysses S. Grant. He sent out a lot of officials whose work and only object seemed to be to destroy our people politically and to take away from us the franchise, and do everything against us that they possibly could. But he came here himself and met the people. He saw 20,000 vigorous, fine children on the side hill out near where the Catholic cathedral now stands, waving American flags, and young girls all dressed in white singing a song. And as his carriage stopped and they welcomed the president of the United States, he said: "Whose children are those? Are they Mormons?" When he was told that they were he said: "I have been lied to outrageously." He went home and chopped off the heads of the officials, figuratively speaking, whom he had sent out here, and then sent us some good men. To everybody who undertook to tell him untruths about us he said: "I have been there. I have met them. I know."

HIGH STANDARDS

The one thing I rejoice in is that people are beginning to know that if we are judged by the standard laid down by the Savior of the world they cannot help but respect us. What was the first great commandment of God? To multiply and replenish the earth. We have a higher birthrate, higher than the average of any state in the Union. We have a low death rate. I have been engaged in the insurance business for 58 years. We have a lower death rate than the great life insurance companies. A wicked people never have a low death rate. We have a low divorce rate. We have a low insanity rate.

ARIZONA PIONEERS

The ex-governor of Arizona remarked upon one occasion in a public speech that the Mormon pioneers of Utah who had gone over into Arizona and settled there, the early pioneers of Arizona, were among the choicest and best of people in that state. He said: "In one particular they are being robbed of their share of the public moneys of this state. In proportion to their numbers they are being robbed of 2,500 to 3,000 per cent of their share of criminal taxes, because they are entitled to have 25 or 30 inmates in the state penitentiary and have but one. Then again, they are being robbed in that they are entitled to six, seven or eight in the insane asylum and they do not have one."

The very first time I went to Arizona, after hearing this I quoted the governor, and the district judge arose in the audience and said: "Mr. Grant, I am the district judge. That one was from Apache county and he has since been pardoned."

A year or so after that, Governor Campbell, who was successor to Governor Hunt who made the statement that I have quoted, was here at a convention of all the governors of the different states. They came into our splendid office building to pay respects to the Presidency of the Church and as I shook hands with Governor Campbell I told him what I had heard that Gov. Hunt had said and of the one person in the state penitentiary being pardoned. He said: "That is correct. He was from Apache county and he has been pardoned."

BY THEIR FRUITS

When people stop to reflect upon the statement of the Savior: "By their fruits ye shall know them," and then examine into the record made by the Latter-day Saints, we are not afraid of the decision that shall be made regarding our people. We rejoice that we are becoming known for just what we are.

I know from my contact with people in early days, of the vindictiveness regarding plural marriage. I have had very many men say: "Why, Mr. Grant, it is a crime morally, intellectually and physically against the posterity of these polygamous marriages." I have said: "I am under the necessity of acknowledging the truth of that statement, because I am the last son of the last wife, and I am a horrible example intellectually, physically and morally, of the fruits of plural marriage among the Mormons."

I can think of nothing that is more gratifying to me than this wonderful change that has come over the people of the world.

I am reminded of an incident wherein a young man applied for a prominent position for which his predecessor had received a salary and commission of a little over thirty thousand dollars a year. This was in one of the outlying states where the Mormons have but few members in comparison with others. In this particular state I do not think we have five per cent of the entire population. The man who had the position to offer said to the young man: "You are a Mormon?"

"Oh, no," said the young man. "I have outgrown that."

The gentleman said: "Well, we are considering your application with others. Come around at a later date."

In the meantime he sent for the president of the stake and said: "What is the matter with that young man?" He thought that by announcing that he had outgrown Mormonism he would get the job. "Unless you can vouch for his honesty," said this gentleman to the stake president, "he will not get the job. What has he done?"

The stake president said: "Well, he has been studying psychology, and he thinks he has outgrown Mormonism. But I can say to you that I think he is an honorable and energetic young man."

"Then," said the gentleman, "we will give him the position."

OBSERVERS OF WORD OF WISDOM

The word "Mormon" today is a synonym for an honorable, upright, sober, industrious person, provided the person who is a Mormon is living up to his religion.

We are fundamentally for prohibition. As Latter-day Saints we have as you all know—and if there are any strangers here I announce it to them—that we have in our Church what is known as the Word of Wisdom, which is a revelation given to Joseph Smith, in which we are told to leave hot drinks (and Joseph Smith interpreted "hot drinks" to mean tea and coffee) tobacco and liquor alone; that tobacco is not good for man, and that liquor is not good for man, except for the washing of the body. We are promised that if we obey the Word of Wisdom it will give us physical strength, whereby the destroying angel shall pass us by as he did the children of Israel. And we are promised that we shall have hidden treasures of knowledge if we live in accordance with the Word of Wisdom.

It is only fair to say to our friends who may have honored us with their presence here this afternoon that we have more than 1,000 bishops of wards and presidents of branches in this Church, from Canada to Mexico, and they each have two counselors, and that each bishopric and branch presidency has a clerk. So that we have more than 4,000 men in the different wards of this Church who must pledge themselves to keep the Word of Wisdom, or we do not install them in office. Occasionally men do not live up to their pledges, but unless they repent we tender them their resignation and of course they accept it, as they cannot help themselves.

ENDORSE WHAT LINCOLN SAID

In addition we have more than one hundred stakes in the Church. A stake includes from five to ten or twelve wards. There are a president and two counselors and a high council of twelve and a stake clerk in each of these stakes. We have more than 2000 men as officers of these stakes who make the same pledge to obey the Word of Wisdom. Therefore, so far as we are concerned, we absolutely believe and endorse most heartily, always have and always expect to, this remarkable and wonderful statement which I am about to read to you, by a man who was loved perhaps as much as any man has been while occupying the presidential chair of the United States after the war closed. Some terrible things were said about him just before the war started and while it was in progress. Lincoln said:

"Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well-wisher to his posterity, swear by the blood of the revolution never to violate in the least particular, the laws of the country, and never to tolerate their violation by others. As the patriots of seventy-six did to the support of the Declaration of Independence, so to the support of the Constitution and laws let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor. Let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty. Let reverence for the law be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap. Let it be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges. Let it be written in primers, in spelling books, and almanacs. Let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed in legislative halls, and enforced in courts of justice. In short, let it become the political religion of the nation."

As I said before, we are fundamentally in favor of prohibition and we feel that any man who violates the prohibition law, the Eighteenth Amendment, as long as it is in force, is encouraging anarchy and shows a lack of that patriotism which should be in the mind and heart of every true American.

CONSTITUTION INSPIRED

I wish to say to our friends who are visiting with us here today, that the Latter-day Saints believe and have taught from the beginning that God raised up the men who wrote the Constitution of this country; that it was an inspired document, and that the Lord fought on the side of our revolutionary fathers.

It was my privilege to be one of the men who worked to make a success of the Liberty Loan drives. I was chairman of two of the drives for the State of Utah, until I became president of the apostles. I was present in California at a convention of people known as the Patriotic Committee of One Thousand. And then we had a smaller meeting and I was permitted to be a speaker at both of these meetings. In the latter meeting there was quite a feeling that it looked as though the enemies of the United States and of our armies were going to win. These men were saying that the outcome looked very dubious. I said: "There are some people who have no fear in regard to this matter, and those people are the Mormons. Why? Because we not only believe in the Bible, but we believe in the Book of Mormon, as a divinely inspired record, that it is the holy scripture of the forefathers of the American Indians, that it gives a sacred history of many of their prophets and others. In the Book of Mormon we find the statement recorded that this land—America—is a land of liberty, choice above all other lands, and that no king shall rule here. So we are not afraid of the Kaiser ever winning the war. We are convinced that God is on our side in this great conflict."

TRIBUTE TO JOSEPH SMITH

I rejoice in the wonderful change that has come and the manifestation of good will toward our people. We are glad that people are beginning to acknowledge that Joseph Smith was a very remarkable and wonderful man. Although it has been quoted by me a great many times, I am going to close my remarks by quoting from Josiah Quincy at one time the mayor of the great city of Boston, a man who was acquainted with many leading men of his time. He paid a most remarkable tribute to the Prophet Joseph Smith. For the sake of our friends who are here as tourists—the Latter-day Saints have heard this quotation many times—I have decided to read it before the conclusion of my remarks here today.

"It is by no means improbable that some future textbook for the use of generations yet unborn will contain a question something like this: What historical American of the nineteenth century has exerted the most powerful influence upon the destinies of his countrymen? And it is by no means impossible that the answer to that interrogatory may be thus written: 'Joseph Smith, the Mormon Prophet.' And the reply, absurd as it doubtless seems to most men now living, may be an obvious commonplace to their descendants. History deals in surprises and paradoxes quite as startling as this. The man who established a religion in this age of free debate, who was and is today accepted by hundreds of thousands as a direct emissary from the Most High—such a rare human being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets. Fanatic, imposter, charlatan, he may have been; but these hard names furnish no solution to the problem he presents to us. Fanatics and imposters are living and dying every day, and their memory is buried with them; but the wonderful influence which this founder of a religion exerted and still exerts, throws him into relief before us, not as a rogue to be criminated but as a phenomenon to be explained. The most vital questions Americans are asking each other today have to do with this man and what he has left us. . . . A generation other than mine must deal with these questions. Burning questions they are, which must give a prominent place in the history of the country, to that sturdy self-asserter whom I visited at Nauvoo. Joseph Smith, claiming to be an inspired teacher, faced adversity such as few men have ever attained, and, finally, forty-three days after I saw him, went cheerfully to a martyr's death. When he surrendered his person to Governor Ford, in order to prevent the shedding of blood, the Prophet had a presentiment of what was before him. 'I am going like a lamb to the slaughter,' he is reported to have said, 'but I am calm as a summer's morning. I have a conscience void of offense and shall die innocent.' I have no theory to advance respecting this extraordinary man. I shall simply give the facts of my intercourse with him.

"A fine-looking man is what the passer-by would instinctively have murmured upon meeting the remarkable individual who had fashioned the mold which was to shape the feelings of so many thousands of his fellow-mortals. But Smith was more than this, and one could not resist the impression that capacity and resource were natural to his stalwart person. I have already mentioned the resemblance he bore to Elisha R. Potter, of Rhode Island, whom I met in Washington in 1826. The likeness was not such as would be recognized in a picture, but rather one that would be felt in a grave emergency. Of all men I have met, these two seemed best endowed with that kingly faculty which directs, as by intrinsic right, the feeble or confused souls who are looking for guidance.

"We then went on to talk of politics. Smith recognized the curse and iniquity of slavery, though he opposed the methods of the abolitionists. His plan was for the nation to pay for the slaves from the sale of public lands. 'Congress,' he said, 'should be compelled to take this course, by petitions from all parts of the country, but the petitioners must disclaim all alliance with those who would disturb the rights of property recognized by the Constitution and which foment insurrection.' It may be worth while to remark that Smith's plan was publicly advocated eleven years later by one who has mixed so much practical shrewdness with his lofty philosophy. In 1855, when men's minds had been moved to their depths on the question of slavery, Ralph Waldo Emerson declared that it should be met in accordance 'with the interest of the South and with the settled conscience of the North. It is not really a great task, a great fight for this country to accomplish, to buy that property of the planter, as the British nation bought the West Indian slaves.' He further says that the 'United States will be brought to give every inch of their public lands for a purpose like this.' We, who can look back upon the terrible cost of the fratricidal war, which put an end to slavery, now say that such a solution of the difficulty would have been worthy of a Christian statesman. But if the retired scholar was in advance of his time when he advocated this disposition of the public property in 1855, what shall I say of the political and religious leader who had committed himself, in print, as well as in conversation, to the same course in 1844?"

STATESMANLIKE AND INSPIRED

We as Latter-day Saints say that God, through his inspired prophet, Joseph Smith, pointed the way to save the vast loss of human life, the breaking of hearts and the vast waste of money which the rebellion brought, by selling public lands to buy the slaves.

"If the atmosphere of men's opinions was stirred by such a proposition when war-clouds were discernible in the sky, was it not a statesmanlike word, eleven years earlier, when the heavens looked tranquil and beneficent?"

It was a statesmanlike and inspired word from the prophet of the living God.

"Born in the lowest ranks of poverty, without book-learning and with the homeliest of all human names, he had made himself at the age of thirty-nine a power upon the earth. Of the multitudinous family of Smith, none had so won human hearts and shaped human lives as this Joseph. His influence, whether for good or for evil, is potent today, and the end is not yet.

"I have endeavored to give the details of my visit to the Mormon prophet with absolute accuracy. If the reader does not know just what to make of Joseph Smith, I cannot help him out of the difficulty. I myself stand helpless before the puzzle."

All over the wide world the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ has been proclaimed by weak humble elders, many of whom have never stood on their feet to speak in public before they were sent out into the world. Men and women from every denomination, under heaven, every religious sect, and in every country where the Gospel has gone, have received the witness of the Holy Spirit that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet of the true and the living God, and they have sacrificed their families, their friends, their homes and their associates. Many of them, in earlier days, have been turned out by their families, as things of evil because of the testimony that had come into their hearts of the divinity of this work.

TESTIMONY

I thank God for the knowledge I possess by the inspiration of his Spirit that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, the Redeemer of the world, the Only Begotten of the Father in the flesh. And I thank him that I do know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the true and the living God. I rejoice in having had the privilege of bearing this testimony from Canada on the north to Mexico on the south, in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Germany, France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, in the Hawaiian Islands and in the far-off land of Japan. May God help me and every Latter-day Saint who has a testimony of the divinity of the work in which we are engaged to so live that our lives may proclaim the truth of this Gospel, is my humble prayer, and I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

I want to say that I have been overwhelmed with gratitude for our marvelous and wonderful pageant. My heart goes out in deep gratitude to those who have taken part in it, I mentioned it at conference, but I want to mention it again today.

We now have on file more than fifty thousand applications for additional tickets to the pageant. I do not know how we are going to accommodate all of the people who want to see it. But we rejoice in the loyalty and the patriotism of our choir and of all who have taken part in this great pageant. And we are grateful because of the fine reception it has had from all of the citizens who have seen it.

A pageant entitled "The Messages of the Ages" having been presented in the Salt Lake Tabernacle, in connection with the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Church, the following article in reference to the pageant was prepared by Elder George D. Pyper for publication in this pamphlet:

"THE MESSAGE OF THE AGES"

On April 6th, 1930, in celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, a mammoth production of "The Message of the Ages," a sacred pageant, was given in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City. It was at first intended that the production should be given the evenings of only one week; but the unusual reception accorded the work by the people made it necessary to extend the time one week more and then another and continue until May 5th—thirty performances in all. It was a stupendous undertaking and surprised and thrilled all who witnessed it. Including the people on the stage, choir, orchestra, ushers and assistants, fifteen hundred people took part in the performances. It is estimated that approximately two hundred thousand people saw the pageant.

The members of the pageant committee, who prepared and staged the colossal affair are as follows: George D. Pyper, former manager of the Salt Lake Theatre, and second assistant General Superintendent of the Deseret Sunday School Union, chairman; W. O. Robinson, Field Secretary, Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association; Junius F. Wells, member Young Men's Mutual Improvement Board (who died April 18th, while the pageant was in progress); Elbert H. Eastmond, professor of art, Brigham Young University, Provo; Charlotte Stewart, City Recreational Superintendent, member General Board of Y. L. M. I. A.; Irma Felt Bitner of the Community Activity Board, Granite stake; Ann Nebeker of the General Board Primary Association; Anthony C. Lund, Conductor Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir; Tracy Y. Cannon, Tabernacle Organist and member Deseret Sunday School Union Board; Frank W. Asper, Tabernacle Organist; Bertha A. Kleinman, Secretary Arizona Temple; Leroy Robertson of the Music Department B. Y. U., Provo, and A. Hamer Reiser, Secretary, member Deseret Sunday School Union Board.

The Pageant Committee worked under the Church Centennial committee consisting of Elder George Albert Smith, chairman; Elders David O. McKay, Joseph Fielding Smith, Melvin J. Ballard, B. H. Roberts, Rulon S. Wells, Sylvester Q. Cannon, with Leroi C. Snow, secretary. The epic readers were Joseph F. Smith and Lynn Richards; the lyric readers, Maud May Babcock, Mrs. Grace Nixon Stewart and Mrs. Algie Eggertson Ballif.

Others were called upon to aid in the work and gave their time gratuitously.

The aim of the pageant is given in the explanatory note printed in the official program, which reads as follows:

"The Message of the Ages' is a presentation of the outstanding features of the Lord's dealings with man in this world existence.

"Be it known that the Gospel, planned in the councils of heaven, was known to the ancients, preached by Christ in the Meridian of Time, and, after a great falling away, this same Gospel was again revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith and restored in these last days, a century ago, and through the martyrdom of the Prophet and the faith and patience and heroic toil of his people, 'the Lord hath brought again Zion,' and established her among the hills, and that by walking in his ways, the children of men may find peace and happiness and the 'more abundant life.'

"The Pageant is divided into a prologue and three periods, viz: The Ancient Dispensations, The Messianic Dispensation, and The Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. The story is told in narrative tableau and processional, with organ, orchestral and choral music." The plan and compilation of the scriptural texts taken from the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants and Pearl of Great Price, were the work of the Pageant committee. The poetical text was written by Mrs. Bertha A. Kleinman of Mesa, Arizona; who quoted quite extensively from the poetry of Elder Orson F. Whitney and included in her work a poem by Theodore F. Curtis.

The Pageant begins with a fanfare of trumpets and musical motif written by Leroy Robertson of the Brigham Young University musical staff. These are used at the beginning of each dispensation. Then follows a reading giving an account of the Council in Heaven, the plan of salvation, the selection of Christ the First Born as the Savior of the world, and the war in heaven resulting in Satan's being cast down, taking with him one-third of the hosts of heaven who became the evil spirits that tempt the children of men.

The first scene is a mystic representation of the Creation of the world and while this is being shown the great chorus sings a part of "The Creation," by Haydn, with solos by Wallace Bennett and James H. Haslam. Following this is shown Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden offering sacrifice, with the explanation of it as given in the Pearl of Great Price.

The story of the flood is told, ending with an inspiring tableau of Noah and his sons and their families, the ark and the bow of promise.

The children of Israel in Egypt are shown in bondage and in ornate and "carnal sumptuousness." Upon the scene comes Moses from the burning bush. Here a stage full of hundreds of people in colorful costumes march through the wilderness to the foot of Sinai where the voice of God speaks forth the Ten Commandments, spoken from behind the scene by Elder John M. Knight. Following this, reaching across the mammoth stage, is revealed a frieze of the ancient seers, prophets, judges and kings of the old and new worlds. These are introduced through the graceful draperies with titles briefly embodying the character and mission of each. With the opening of the draperies and the tableau curtain these characters form part of a composite picture depicting the adoration of the Ages, the Nativity, the Magi, the Shepherds and "His other sheep" on the Western Hemisphere. Music from Handel's "The Messiah" is sung with solo by Emma Lucy Gates Bowen. This is followed by an impressive representation of the Sermon on the Mount, the voice coming through a brilliant light, the beatitudes being spoken by Elder Winslow F. Smith. The Messianic Dispensation closes with a recital of the Lord's passion and a tableau of the resurrection accompanied by Mascagni's magnificent Easter anthem "The Lord Now Victorious."

Part I of the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times opens with a prelude showing the apostasy, the spurning of the prophets, the famine for the word of God, and the search for truth. The reading is accompanied by orchestral music from "The Restoration" by Brigham Cecil

Gates, and the singing of part of "The Nations Bow to Satan's Thrall," an anthem by Joseph J. Daynes. In quick succession come the pictures of the restoration. First is depicted the boy prophet, praying in the Sacred Grove. The appearance of the holy Beings is represented by brilliant shafts of light. The chorus sings the third verse of "Joseph Smith's First Prayer" (words by George Manwaring, music by A. C. Smyth) and then the Voice of the Lord is heard again—"Joseph, this is My Beloved Son, Hear Him." The fourth verse of "Joseph Smith's First Prayer" follows and the scene closes with motif, fanfare and chorus, "The Morning Breaks, the Shadows Flee." (Words by Parley P. Pratt, music by George Careless.) After this the Angel Moroni is seen delivering the golden plates of the "Book of Mormon" to Joseph Smith; and while he peruses the record a gorgeous procession of the ancient peoples of this continent passes in vision across the stage, to the choral accompaniment of "An Angel from on High," (words by W. W. Phelps, music by John Tullidge.)

Then follow picturizations of the restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood by John the Baptist, of the Melchizedek Priesthood by Peter, James and John, the organization of the Church, the appearance of Moses, Elias and Elijah to Joseph and Oliver, and the restoration of the Gospel in its fulness.

"With keys to bind and seal and ratify
For time on earth and for eternity."

Part I of the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times closes with a representation of the Elders taking the Gospel message to the world. A male chorus sings "See the Mighty Angel Flying," by Evan Stephens.

Part II of the last dispensation opens with an epochal reading, with orchestral accompaniment, relating the momentous events of the Church history including the move from Kirtland to Nauvoo, the Prophet Joseph's vision of the West, his tragic martyrdom, the singing of "Hail to the Prophet," and the selection of Brigham Young as his successor. The curtain is raised to an apostrophe to the hymn, "Come, Come Ye Saints," and reveals in tableau four stages of the western trek: the Mormon Battalion, a camp on the plains, scouting through the mountains, and the first glimpse of Salt Lake valley. As the chorus sings the pioneer song, the bas-relief becomes animated and depicts the entrance into the valley and the beginning of community building. Their trail is followed by other companies with handcarts and afoot. The house lights go up and the congregation sings "O Ye Mountains High" (words by Charles W. Penrose.)

In scene two the curtain rises upon a plastique—a graven statue in stone representing the composite fundamentals of the community life of the Latter-day Saints—Church, home, school, work and play. To this conception of community life in the valleys of the mountains come the folk from all nations, tongues and people, preceded by the reading of the prophecy of Isaiah 2:2-4, and the following lines:

"Across the seven seas Thy children come
From every land and island of the deep,

To merge their boundried nationality
And rear a lasting empire unto Thee.
Of such as these, the salt of all the earth,
And as they wend in hallowed pilgrimage
May grace of Thine enfold and lead them on To lave their souls in Truth's resplendant flame.

This group, made up mostly of natives of the countries where the Gospel has been preached, enters to the inspiring "March Heroique" by Saint Saens and the curtain falls on a tableau showing the nations merged in one united people.

The finale is a tableau symbolizing the activities of the Church—Priesthood, Temple and Genealogical Groups—Relief Society—Sunday School—Mutual Improvement Associations—Primary.

The epic and lyric readings in the closing scene are a song of praise for the centenary of truth, a pledge to carry on, and a prayer for the benediction of the Lord on all the world, "till welded nations cease from strife, to learn the way, the truth, the life."

"Thus in Thy handiwork, O Zion's God, Behold what Priesthood's miracle hath wrought!
From worlds primeval to the ends of Time—the Message of the Ages stand revealed!"

The chorus then sings "The Voice of God is Heard Again," at the conclusion of which the congregation, with hands outstretched toward the light, joins the choir in singing:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise Him all creatures here below
Praise Him above, ye heavenly host, Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

WILL FIND THE BOOK

An Introduction to the Study of the Book of Mormon

By J. M. SJODAHL

To be mighty interesting and illuminating

"Some of the contents of the book has appeared in the IMPROVEMENT ERA and other Church publications during the last ten years, and friends have been good enough to say, repeatedly, that they would be glad to have those contributions in some form more convenient for reference. Acting on their suggestion, I have collected some papers previously published and others that now appear for the first time, and respectfully submit them in this form to the public. In doing so, it is my sincere prayer that the testimony here offered may be of benefit to the reader, and especially to honest seekers after the truth."

"Time is the supreme test of a prophecy. He who undertakes to foretell events must know that Time in its merciless pursuit will find him out. Of all the pretenses of the false prophet, prophecy is the most hazardous. Religious impostors often display qualities of leadership in controlling the affairs of their followers. The more modest their pretenses, however, the more likely are they to escape detection and exposure. But when spiritual leaders assume to exercise the exalted function of prophecy, and have the courage to publish their prophecies, they place their reputations before the bar of the world, and as the weight of Time presses out the vintage of the centuries they must sink to a deserving oblivion or be exalted to a place in the skies. Time is a foe of Fraud, but the never-failing friend of Truth."

Now that the claims of Joseph Smith as prophet have been set up before the world for a century, it is proper that the verdict of Time should be ascertained. To disclose these findings, this volume is given out. Only a few of the well-known prophecies are here considered.

All this is clearly set forth in

What All the World Believes

This work embraces an account of the Bibles and Beliefs of Mankind; the Faiths of every age and every land being presented impartially, each from its own historical standpoint.

The chapters on the Scriptures of the World, and the digest by religions of the most notable Parliament utterances, are from the pen of the Rev. Edward C. Towne, B. A., whose broad scholarship and great knowledge of the World's Religious Systems was fittingly recognized in his selection as one of the principal editors of the Official Report of the World's Parliament of All Religions. These chapters offer for the first time to the general reader a concise, connected, yet scholarly view of all the Bibles of Mankind, and of the various beliefs as to the inspiration under which remarkable writings have been held to be Sacred Scriptures.

A New Commentary on Holy Scripture

INCLUDING THE APOCRYPHA

Edited by Bishop Gore, D. D., Formerly Bishop of Oxford; H. L. Goudge, D. D., Regius Professor of Divinity, Oxford; A. Guillaume, Professor of Hebrew and Semitic Languages, Durham.

This great work of scholarship stands out from its predecessors in several ways:

- (1) In the distinction of its chief editor, who had done so much to reconcile the old faith with the new knowledge.
- (2) In the unity which the volume achieves owing to the fact that the bulk of the contributions are by scholars in agreement with the general outlook of the editor, who in addition has worked over the whole material and left upon it the impress of his unrivalled experience.
- (3) In the generous amount of space given to the exegesis of the important books.
- (4) In the inclusion of the Apocrypha, and the consequent bridging of the gap between the two Testaments.
- (5) In the ease and convenience with which it can be used, despite its 1600 pages and million and a quarter words.

A Thrilling Story of CENTURY ONE OF CHURCH HISTORY

ERE is a new story of "Mormonism," told with a completeness and charm that will thrill Latter-day Saints with a pride of achievement and at the same time win the admiration of the critic, be he friend or foe. In a COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH, B. H. Roberts has done a masterful piece of research and has set down the record of Century One—1830 to 1930—in a brilliant appraisal of momentous events. The reader with a sentimental interest will be fascinated with this narrative of truth stranger than fiction; the reader who approaches the new work with the critical vision of the historian will find it fair in statement, authentic in fact, copious in detail and sound in judgment.

A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH was written by Elder Roberts at the instance of the First Presidency of the Church, with a commission to make it exhaustively complete, from the remotest beginnings to the close of the Centennial Conference of April 6, 1930. The final volume ends with an account of the Conference itself, making the history technically inclusive of all that happened in Century One of the organized existence of the Church. Thus it is a fitting commemoration of one hundred years of struggle and achievement.

This monumental work is not to be confused with any former history, journal or chronicle. Though its nucleus is the history of "Mormonism" published a few years ago in AMERICANA, running serially for six years through that magazine, yet this History is NEW—new in its wealth of material, new in method of treatment and new in its physical representation of the book maker's art.

States; William R. Sloan, Northwestern States; Charles H. Hart, Canada; Rey L. Pratt, Mexico; Joseph W. McMurrin, California; Levi Edgar Young, Temple Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The opening session of the Conference commenced promptly at 10 o'clock, Friday, October 3, 1930.

The great auditorium and galleries were well filled with people from all parts of the Church.

President Heber J. Grant called the assembly to order, and the services were commenced by the congregation singing the hymn, "Now let us Rejoice in the Day of Salvation."

Elder Claudius Hirschi, President of the Zion Park Stake, offered the invocation.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Zion Stands with Hills Surrounded."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

It is always a pleasure to me to meet with the Latter-day Saints in any of their public gatherings, and especially am I pleased to be present at the General Conferences of the Church, having had the privilege of attending them from my childhood until the present time.

There are assembled I am sure in this city today fully twenty thousand people from different sections of the Church, from Canada on the north to Mexico on the south, who will attend these meetings. In addition there will be several hundred thousand who will attend our meetings by means of the marvelous radio. It is wonderful how many people are permitted to listen in, those who have a desire to do so, to our conference proceedings. In many of our Wards and Stakes the meetinghouses will be filled with those who will hear as plainly and partake of the spirit I believe as perfectly almost as those who are assembled in this building today.

I rejoice in the opportunities that have come to preach the Gospel through the means of the radio. One day four letters were received from New Zealand, announcing the perfect reception of a program broadcast by KSL.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION PUBLICITY

We rejoice in the marvelous Conference that was held here six months ago. When we think of this building being filled for thirty evenings by people who attended the wonderful pageant that was presented, it is another marvel to contemplate the fact that publicity was given to millions of people regarding that great pageant. I have here on exhibit and I wish to show you what is merely a collection of newspaper clippings regarding our Centennial celebration. Over three thousand newspapers gave us favorable notices. The great change that has come about since the days of my boyhood in the general attitude toward this people is almost beyond contemplation or expectation.

I can remember when I was the junior member of the Council of the Twelve, forty-eight years ago this month, that during my first trips away from home, almost invariably, wherever I went I found opposition. I found ill-will toward the Latter-day Saints. I found men so full of bitterness toward us that they said if they had their way the "Mormons" would be shut up in their tabernacle and the guns of Fort Douglas be turned upon them. Today, wherever I go I find the opposite feeling; I find good-will; I find kindness; I find readiness and willingness on the part of newspapers to give us favorable public notices. Anything we wish to say they are willing to print.

ATTITUDE OF THE PRESS

During the time when I presided over the Japanese Mission there were some vile things published in that country about us; and when I obtained affidavits from home refuting the published statements I could not get them into the papers that had published the scurrilous articles against us. During my presidency of the European Mission, for three long years, I never succeeded in getting one single line of refutation printed in the papers in England. Some very pernicious articles were written about us, but the newspapers would not publish refutations of those articles. Today, we are getting very favorable publicity. The newspapers are open to the president of the European Mission, Elder John A. Widtsoe. We regret his absence from the meetings of this Conference. We would be delighted if he were here.

We also regret very much the absence of Elder Stephen L. Richards on account of ill health.

I remember calling upon one newspaper in London that had published some seven to ten columns of vile stuff about the "Mormons," and I took with me a letter of introduction from a large shipping firm in Liverpool—with which we had done business for over sixty years—vouching not only for my integrity as president of the European Mission, but for the integrity of all of my predecessors, and yet they would not publish a single line. I told them I had letters of introduction from all of the non-"Mormon" bankers in Salt Lake City, and from bankers in New York, San Francisco, and Chicago, and from the largest wholesale dry goods house in New York, vouching for my honesty, and gave them my word of honor that what they had published was false. Yet they would not publish a thing in our favor.

SOURCE OF GRATITUDE

To have over three thousand newspapers; to have the Associated Press; to have the Hearst papers, and to have western papers—especially in Utah and in Idaho—the newspapers generally, give us such extended and favorable articles as this immense volume contains, is a cause of deep gratitude on my part and that of my associates of the General Authorities of the Church. These notices and editorials as well as the original articles that appeared with illustrations, are all that we could possibly have asked. There was very seldom anything published during our Centennial Conference that was not favorable. The Associated Press and special representatives of various newspapers sent out truthful and informative notices. This is a source of profound gratitude on our part.

FOR WHAT WE ARE

I announced to the good sisters yesterday in their Relief Society Conference that we are becoming known for what we are, a God-fearing, honest, upright people, striving to serve the Lord and keep his commandments, carrying a message of good will to all the world. All that we have ever asked or expected is that people shall judge us by the standards laid down by the Savior of the world, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

We have a lower divorce rate, we have a higher marriage rate, we have a higher birth rate, we have a lower death rate, we have a lower criminal rate, than other people.

I know of nothing for which I am more grateful than to realize that we are coming into our own, that we are being accepted for exactly what we are, a God-fearing and splendid people.

IN FULFILMENT OF PROPHECY

The accomplishments of the Latter-day Saints are in absolute and full accord with the prophecy delivered on the west bank of the Mississippi river by the Prophet Joseph Smith, as recorded in the prophet's journal under date of August 6, 1842:

"I prophesied that the Saints would continue to suffer much affliction and would be driven to the Rocky Mountains. Many would apostatize, others would be put to death by our persecutors or lose their lives in consequence of exposure or disease, and some of you will live to go and assist in making settlements and build cities, and see the Saints become a mighty people in the midst of the Rocky Mountains."

This has been fulfilled to the very letter and we have over one thousand wards and branches from Canada on the north to Mexico on the south. The Church has expended during the last three years between three and four million dollars in assisting to erect local meeting-houses. The people have contributed a like amount. As you know we have builded here a four-million-dollar temple, and we have built temples in St. George, Manti, Logan, Canada, Arizona and the Hawaiian Islands, costing in all many millions of money. We have in very deed fulfilled that prophecy notwithstanding the fact that this western country was considered worthless. When you think of this arid region, when you think that it was considered of no value, and then realize what has been accomplished, it is beyond question that we have fulfilled that prediction.

At the very time this prophecy was uttered, Daniel Webster, one of the foremost statesmen in the United States at that time, said:

"What do we want with this vast worthless area, this region of savages and wild beasts, of deserts, of shifting sands, and whirlwinds of dust, of cactus and prairie dogs? To what use could we ever hope to put those great deserts or those endless mountain ranges, impenetrable and covered to their very bases with eternal snow? What can we ever hope to do with the western coast of three thousand miles, rock-bound, cheerless, uninviting and not a harbor on it? Mr. President, I will never vote one cent from the public treasury to place the Pacific Coast one inch nearer Boston than it now is."

MARVELOUS RESOURCES

When I think of the magnificent harbor at Seattle, and the wonderful Golden Gate harbor as well as others on the Pacific Coast, I am aware that Daniel Webster was not very well posted. When we think of this "worthless" country—Utah, Idaho, Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and California—having furnished more wealth so far as the precious metals are concerned than any other part or all of the balance, I think, of the United States; when we realize that we have one mine here, a copper mine, the copper being mined in a most unusual and wonderful way, having paid as I recall over one hundred and fifty million dollars in dividends, working successfully ore that does not run one per cent—less than twenty pounds of copper to a ton—handling upon one occasion more than eighty thousand tons in a day, or double as much as was handled in a day in the construction of the Panama canal; when we think of the millions upon millions of dollars' worth of gold produced in California; when we think of the rich copper mines in Arizona, to say nothing of silver, lead and gold in all these sections, and Colorado's immense wealth, we realize that Daniel Webster did not know very much about this country.

But the only point I wish to make is that we as Latter-day Saints realize and know that Joseph Smith was and is the representative of God and a prophet of God, and that his sayings have been fulfilled to the very letter.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

I am very happy in contemplating the prosperity that prevails today, and my heart goes out in gratitude for the change that has taken place at home and abroad. While the world is in a state of commotion and there is perplexity among the nations, the Latter-day Saints have no fears for the future. The signs of the times indicate the near approach of the coming of the Lord, and the work that we are engaged in is a preparatory one for that great event.

NEVER WHILE THE WORLD STANDS

In speaking here last month, Bishop Sylvester Q. Cannon referred to a statement made by a minister to the effect that unless the "Mormon" Church can withstand the criticism of intelligent people, the test of modern science, etc., it must, in the next one hundred years, be counted in the category of declining religions and that it would then be necessary for us to shift our faith from Joseph Smith and his reputed revelations.

Never while the world stands will it be necessary for us to shift our faith. God lives, Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God. He has appeared to Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, and Sidney Rigdon, and we proclaim to all the world that we know that he lives and that God has given to us individually a testimony regarding the divinity of the mission of Joseph Smith. We have the truth, and as the great lawyer said to those who were fighting Christianity, we can repeat today:

"Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

"And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men. * * *

"Refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this work be of men, it will come to naught:

"But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found to fight against God."

DURING ONE HUNDRED YEARS

This work is of God and it has been proclaimed now for over a hundred years. We are here today assembled celebrating the one hundred and first semi-annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. During all of these one hundred years the Gospel of Jesus Christ, as revealed through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith, has been proclaimed all over the world wherever there has been religious liberty. In every land and in every clime wherever it has been proclaimed honest men and honest women have received the message, have accepted the Gospel, have gone down into the waters of baptism, have pledged their lives and their fortunes for the advancement of this work. From every religious denomination under heaven we have gathered converts. I have never investigated beyond my own experience in life, but I know of no single missionary who has gone out into the world, not one, who has been converted to any other religion and come home to announce that this Gospel of Jesus Christ is not true. But by the hundreds and thousands, during my life, I have heard the testimonies of the young men and the young women who have gone out to proclaim this Gospel returning from their missionary work and bearing witness that they had an increased knowledge of the divinity of this work, that their testimonies had been strengthened. Think of it! What a wonderful miracle it is that with this "false" prophet and these "purported" revelations our young inexperienced members of the Church go out and come in contact with all the education, all the learning, and all the faiths of the world, and yet the churches have not been able to convert any of them and show them that straight and narrow path that leads to life eternal.

WITNESS TO THE WORLD

I bear my witness to you today—and I am talking now not only to the people who are here assembled but to the people who may be listening in by means of the radio, at home or abroad, in the United States or in foreign countries—I bear my witness that God lives, that he is the Father of our spirits; that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God; that Joseph Smith is a prophet of the true and the living God, and that his words contained in the Doctrine and Covenants are the inspired words of a prophet of God. I desire all men to know that the revelation or vision given to Joseph Smith, as contained in the seventy-sixth section of the Doctrine and Covenants is absolutely true. I have repeated two passages from that section time and time again, and I shall repeat them again now, in this day of doubt.

Some years ago many ministers of the gospel, even several hundred of them, were asked the following questions:

"Do you believe in God, the Father; God a person * * * in whose image you were made?"

"Do you believe that Christ was the Son of the living God, sent by him to save the world * * * that he is God's very Son, with a divinely appointed and definite mission, dying on the cross and raised from the dead?"

"Do you believe that when you die you will live again as a conscious intelligence, knowing who you are and who other people are?"

These questions were put to ministers in the New England States, and not a single one gave an unequivocal answer, Yes, notwithstanding they had been asked to answer them Yes or No.

THE FAITH OF THE LATTER-DAY SAINTS

All three of those questions can be answered by every Latter-day Saint. We believe that God appeared to Joseph Smith, and that he proclaimed Jesus Christ as his "Well Beloved Son."

And now, I quote from the vision given to Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon:

"And this is the gospel, the glad tidings, which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us:

"That he came into the world, even Jesus, to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness.

"Who glorifies the Father, and saves all the works of his hands, except those sons of perdition who deny the Son after the Father has revealed him."

"And now, after the many testimonies that have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: that he lives!

"For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice declaring that he is the Only Begotten of the Father—

"That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God."

So there is no dubiety in our minds. One man said to me, "The only religious people I ever met in my life who have a perfect faith in and an absolute assurance of their final destiny are the Mormons." And it is true.

IN DEEP GRATITUDE

I feel that I have occupied enough time. I rejoice in the advancement of the work of God. My heart goes out in deep gratitude to the members of the committee who furnished that magnificent pageant. I thank the men who secured this wonderful publicity for us. It is marvelous.

May the Lord bless each and every one who has a testimony of the divinity of this work to so live the Gospel that his life will proclaim its message to the people of the world. The promise is made that those who will do the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or whether it be of man. Having fulfilled the law and having received the knowledge that we are engaged in the work of the Lord, we pray that he may help us to live it. May he help us to be absolutely honest in the payment of our tithes, in observing the Word of Wisdom and setting an example that will cause men and women to investigate the message that we have to bear. It is my humble prayer that the Lord will bless every honest-hearted soul upon the face of the earth, and I ask it in the name of Jesus, our Redeemer. Amen.

ELDER DAVID O. MCKAY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

It is a source of deep satisfaction to have the privilege of meeting the officers of Stakes and Wards and members of the Church in general in this great Conference. I am greatly surprised, however, to be called upon to address you at this session. I pray earnestly for the inspiration and guidance of God's Holy Spirit and for your sympathy and prayers.

I am not sure that I can give to you in the brief time allotted, in a manner that I should like to give it, the message that I have in my heart.

THE CITIZEN'S RESPONSIBILITY

Many many years ago a wise man said, and it has echoed through the ages:

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

I wish to add as a corollary:

"Punish a man when he is old, and he will not likely depart from the habits of a lifetime."

I am constrained to refer to the great concern in the minds of the leaders of our nation and of thinking men generally regarding the lawless condition now prevalent, particularly here in the United States. Recently a committee of the American Bar Association appointed to study existing conditions, reported that the criminal situation in the United States is undoubtedly worse than in any other civilized country. I think it is time that the people arouse themselves to a realization of their responsibility in regard to this condition. We are prone to dismiss all social responsibility by blaming the law and depending upon the lawyers to bring about a reform. But I think the citizen carries much of the responsibility for this condition.

PREVENTION RATHER THAN CURE

If we look at the statistics as they are published from time to time we are shocked to learn that our prisons are filled. We are astounded when we read of the vast sums of money expended in punishing lawless men and women and wayward boys and girls, who are considered enemies to society. It is difficult to ascertain definitely how much this sum is, about two and one half million dollars a day. One man estimates that we are spending ten billion dollars a year in the punishment of criminals; yet each year crime is eating deeper into the vitals of our civilization.

I suggest that we expend some of that vast sum of money to better advantage by putting forth more effort to stop the source of crime by giving a little more attention to the young. For, mind you, the average age of the criminal in the United States today is under twenty one years. That is something which challenges our attention. We are not spending proportionately the amount in preventing lawlessness among our youth that we are spending in punishing those who become entangled in the meshes of the law. Men and women who are thus arrested and punished are not all bad. Some are misled, others are merely unfortunate.

THE POWER AND INFLUENCE OF MONEY

To understand more clearly conditions as they exist, I think it is well to consider the dominant influences of society today. If we go back through history we find that at one time the world was governed by the spirit of might, physical force was the aristocracy of the age. And naturally men chose to be strong in physical achievements. Later that period gave way to another aristocracy, or ruling power. The sons of these mighty physical men became the rulers, and so there developed an aristocracy of birth.

You and I are witnessing and have witnessed the decay of this aristocracy. Thrones are crumbling, their power is diminished. Titles can be purchased by money. Supplanting the aristocracy of birth has come the aristocracy of wealth. Money, it is said, can buy anything. Unquestionably one of the great factors that enter into the lawlessness following efforts to prohibit the sale and manufacture of liquor, is the great amount of profit that men find in that illicit traffic. If we can prevent the bootlegger from filling his purse we can better enforce the law against this liquor evil. And in passing let me urge every Latter-day Saint throughout the world to uphold the law against the sale, manufacture and transportation of intoxicants.

Well, we are in this financial age. We need to realize this when we examine and study the conditions that are influencing the youth of today. Many of them are seeking to be wealthy. They are thinking that success lies only in the obtaining of the dollar, and with that unwise ideal they will sacrifice that which is higher and better than any material possession.

Do not misunderstand me, I would not underrate the value of wealth. I am cognizant of the fact that the second great commandment was to replenish and subdue the earth. I realize that one great purpose of life is to subdue matter, and I rejoice when I see the great reservoirs filled with water from which flows that element which will change the sagebrush flat into a waving wheat field, and that is wealth. I do not take second place to anyone in the realization of the good which this can do. I am merely emphasizing the thought that there is a nobler ideal in life than the accumulating of wealth.

THE ARISTOCRACY OF CHARACTER

When God gave us the command to subdue matter, he meant us to use the power derived therefrom, the power of material things, to realize something which is higher; and that is character, a life that will merit the inspiration of God. What the sunshine is to the field and to the flowers the Holy Spirit is to the life of man, and the Holy Spirit does not abide with base characters. He will not dwell in unclean tabernacles.

Well, now, my thought is that we should put forth every effort to supplant the aristocracy of wealth with the aristocracy of character, and awaken in the minds of the youth a realization that to be honest, to be dependable, to be a loyal citizen of the country, to be true to the standards of the Gospel, are the noblest ideals of life. The important problem is now to instill these lofty principles into the minds of young people, and thereby make them worthy citizens. I am glad to see evidences in our own country that men are now moving towards the beginning of the stream of humanity to correct evils, rather than to expend so much money on those who have drifted down the stream of society and have become contaminated by sin and hardened in lawlessness.

CHILD GUIDANCE

On Christmas day, 1908, President Roosevelt invited 200 child welfare workers in all parts of the United States to attend a conference on dependent children, to be held in Washington, Jan. 25, 26, 1909. Much good came from that. Later President Wilson, referring to the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, expressed the hope that there might be set up "certain irreducible minimum standards for the health, education, and work of the American child." Recently President Hoover said that the opportunity of the nation lies in the health and protection of its children, and in accordance with that thought he has appointed an investigating committee charged with the duty of getting at the facts of the physical health, mental equipment, and social well-being of children in the United States. Many of the leading men of the nation, educators, business men, doctors, etc., are volunteering their services to a nationwide investigation of conditions, with a view of ascertaining what forces are operative in child guidance.

DURING LEISURE HOURS

I cannot refrain from calling your attention to what Utah is doing in regard to this important question. Let me say that I am not now thinking so much of the child when he is in the home under the influence of parents, neither am I concerned so much about him when he is in the public school under the influence of the teacher, although in both these basic environments much more emphasis might be placed upon character and loyal citizenship than we are placing upon it; I am concerned about the child when he is not in school, about what he is doing after school. In other words, it is time for the nation and for states to look after the youth during leisure hours. The leisure time of youth is the dangerous time. That is when he needs the training, and yet in some of our states we have compulsory education up to fourteen years of age, and in those same states have laws prohibiting the boy from working until he is sixteen. There you find a two years' period in which the boy is left practically to go his way. And what is his way? He will find the gang, and gangs are often the breeding grounds of bootleggers and organized vice squads.

In Chicago alone it is said there are thirteen hundred and thirty gangs, young boys who are going their own way, and whose efforts should be guided, no matter what it costs, along the paths of better citizenship. In Utah we have a law that compels the young man and the young woman to be in school until he or she is eighteen years of age. However, it is one thing to force a boy into school, it is another thing to arouse in his life an ideal, or a desire to emulate the best in life.

AN EXAMPLE WORTHY OF IMITATION

In one of our school districts great strides have been taken in guiding and taking care of the leisure hours of youth, particularly during summer vacations, not only in recreation but in vocation. A few years ago the Granite School District inaugurated a plan of guiding these students in the proper way of citizenship. Brother Francis Kirkham, who is now a member of the national committee to which I have referred, was instrumental in introducing this, and Superintendent D. C. Jensen is carrying the work nobly forward. I am mentioning it now because it is an example worthy of imitation by all educators in the state and nation. Summer supervision for Junior and Senior high school students was inaugurated in 1920, when 1227 students were enrolled. In the summer of 1921, the enrollment increased to 1500. In 1930 in two important respects the policy in this district was changed in respect to compulsory enrollment. "School officials do not now require enrollment in the activities of the summer, nor do they make a formal record of the credits earned as a requisite to unconditional promotion. Enrollment is wholly voluntary and the joy obtained through participation is the only reward offered." Notwithstanding they give no credits, make no compulsion, last year there were enrolled 4303 in activities as follows:

	Music		Dancing		Playground
	Enrolled	Av. Att.	Enrolled	Av. Att.	Enrolled	Av. Att.
1st Mo.	514	495	1287	910	1990	883
2nd Mo.	568	481	947	700	2145	1007
3rd Mo.	515	463	974	633	2447	1125

Total enrolled in the three activities—4303.

Total school population, 6-18 years of age, Jordan District—6037.

In addition to those instructed by music teachers employed by the Board, 102 students were in regular classes under teachers employed by local municipal or civic organizations.

It cost the children nothing, it cost the parents nothing. The Jordan District carried this on at an expense that is merely nominal, only $1.33 per pupil.

But the teachers did not stop at instruction and play during the recreation period; they found also lucrative employment for the students. The total number of students thus placed and properly supervised in picking beans, thinning beets, delivering groceries and in other jobs, was 476. The number of boys contacted 111. Total number of employers cooperating 103. Total number of visits for all purposes 670.

ITS EFFECT UPON CITIZENSHIP

Now to show what effect this will have upon citizenship. During the school year there was a family in that district that refused to send the boys to school. The truant officer visited it and found antagonism on the part of the parents. The boys were not interested in school. Later the father was out of work and when the truant officer went there he threatened the officer by saying, "If you take me to court there will be a serious tragedy in this end of the county. If you want to keep healthy, leave me alone." But the boys were compelled to go to school. The father however had to be arrested and the law was enforced.

During the summer vacation this same officer visited that home with the view of offering employment to the boys. When the father met him at the door, despondent, still bitter and defiant of the law, he said, "Well, what do you want now?"

"Have you any employment?"

"No."

"Would your boys like to have a job?"

"You mean to say you have work for my boys? You come here with a job?"

Those boys joined the working squad, went out and picked beans. The father apologized and said, "I have misjudged you."

Those boys as well as the father now have an entirely changed attitude towards the law and towards citizenship. Success to that method. Success to the Utah school laws. Success to Milton Bennion who is recognized in the United States as a pioneer in moral teaching in the schools, and to others associated with him.

THE MEANS PROVIDED BY THE CHURCH ORGANIZATION

But now, brethren of the Church, do you realize that we have here in the organization of the Church the best means in all the world of training the youth? Your Deacon Quorums, what are they but opportunities for the young boys to meet together and satisfy that spirit of brotherhood? There are 1041 quorums in which over 30,000 boys ranging from 12 to 15 years of age meet every week under environment which is faith-promoting and character developing. Similarly grouped in 623 quorums are 18,500 Teachers, and 610 quorums over 23,000 Priests. Bishop, what is your Priests' quorum but an opportunity for you as a president of that quorum to get those young men around you as your bodyguard, young men who carve the social atmosphere of the ward, and whom you may lead in paths of honor, trustworthiness and faith? Continuing with auxiliaries, what do we find? In the Primary association 85,000 children between 4 years and 12 in the case of boys, and 4 years and 14 in the case of girls, all most efficiently supervised and instructed. In the Y. M. M. I. A. there are 42,813 youths, and in the Y. L. M. I. A. 42,042 young women. In the Sunday School 229,793 members exclusive of officers and teachers.

I look upon the organization of the Church as the greatest opportunity ever given to man for the proper training of youth. I make the statement without fear of successful contradiction. I hope the national investigating committee will look into the opportunities furnished by this Church. I hope while they are investigating they will consider the fact that Joseph Smith, when he outlined this organization, was not twenty-five years of age, unlearned in sociology, unschooled in economics; yet after one hundred years that which he gave by inspiration of God stands as the best social condition that the world has.

NOT ALL BAD

God bless the officers of the Priesthood quorums and auxiliaries, that they may go forth from this Conference with renewed determination to reach the youth. Young people are not bad, they just need guidance, that is all, and if you are leaders you may depend upon it the boys and girls of the Church will follow. Even these criminals in Chicago are not all bad. In the race riot of 1919, one of the gangs, called the "Dirty Dozen," started out one day to harass the negroes—just a group of boys misled. One of the boys jerked the trolley cord and held the rope while the others jumped into the car to create a disturbance and throw out the occupants. While he was holding that rope a negro woman slashed him over the heart with a razor. Only one of the gang was caught, the others fled, but the one caught said he heard "Shakey," the boy who was cut, say as his last words, "What will mother think?" He was not all bad when his dying thought was a regret that he had wounded his mother.

I tell you the time has come for the nation, for the state, for the home, for the Church, to look more directly and particularly after the boys and girls and train them in the way they should go, and when they are old few will depart from it.

God help us to utilize the quorums and the organizations to that end, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

President of the Southern States Mission

Brethren and sisters: Weakness is given to make a man humble; therefore, I feel very humble and dependent upon God at this moment.

The Assyrians, with horses and chariots, sought to apprehend Elisha. "Fear not," said the prophet, "for they that be with us are more than they that be with them."

I believe this truth applies to the Latter-day Saints. Ever since the world began all the prophets and righteous men have beheld in vision the work that we are doing and they have rejoiced in this glorious day.

When Napoleon formed his armies in battle array in Egypt, pointing to the pyramids he said: "Soldiers, forty centuries look down upon you." All the former dispensations merging into this dispensation are looking upon us. God help us that they may behold in our labors richness of spirituality and steadiness of purpose.

The Prophet Mormon in his teachings says that angels have a ministry:

"Nay; neither have angels ceased to minister unto the children of men.

"For behold, they are subject unto him, to minister according to the word of his command, showing themselves unto them of strong faith and a firm mind in every form of godliness.

"And the office of their ministry is to call men unto repentance, and to fulfil and to do the work of the covenants of the Father, which he hath made unto the children of men, to prepare the way among the children of men, by declaring the word of Christ unto the chosen vessels of the Lord, that they may bear testimony of him.

"And by so doing, the Lord God prepareth the way that the residue of men may have faith in Christ, that the Holy Ghost may have place in their hearts, according to the power thereof; and after this manner bringeth to pass the Father, the covenants which he hath made unto the children of men" (Moroni 7:29-32).

We proclaim in humility, dear brethren and sisters, that Mormon foretold the mission of his splendid son, Moroni, and that Moroni did appear to a chosen vessel of the Lord, even the Prophet Joseph Smith, who with magnificent courage and firm in the faith of the living God proclaimed his message to the nations of the earth. With angels we share a heavenly gift, even the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the Book of Mormon tells us that angels speak by the power of the Holy Ghost.

We are told in holy writ that angels are our fellow servants, and the Apostle Paul tells us that we are laborers together with God in the accomplishment of his glorious purposes. Is not this a high honor? Is not this a sacred responsibility? Ought not this knowledge to inspire us with the loftiest ideals and devoted service to our Heavenly Father?

I thank God for the gift of the Holy Ghost. It is this gift that distinguishes us from people described by a great writer as "the wind-mill species." Established in the truth by this personal testimony, we have faith in our leaders. The pilot in steering his vessel with its precious cargo of lives and merchandise would imperil both by steering according to weather vanes. But with the compass he will steer his ship through dark clouds knowing that beyond lies the haven of security and safety.

So in this Church we are not guided by the theories of certain men which "with the hour begin and end," but we are guided by the compass of divine revelation which is in the possession of the leaders of this Church, even the revelations of God, the gift of the Holy Ghost, which God pours into every believing heart, and as we follow the direction of this compass we shall be guided safely into the harbor of eternal life.

Oh, I thank God that we are following our Lord Jesus Christ. We desire to do his will. We love him. We love God our Heavenly Father. I bear you my humble testimony that God is with this people, that he is leading the Church, that Jesus Christ is our Redeemer and Savior, and that he is our friend if we will keep his commandments. I rejoice in the Gospel because I know it is the power of God unto salvation, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER ARTHUR WINTER

I need scarcely say to you that it is indeed a surprise to me to be called upon to speak to this vast audience.

It has been my privilege to go forth on a short mission during the summer and visit the various missions of Europe. Many years ago I received two patriarchal blessings without any solicitation upon my part, and in each of those blessings a promise was made that was quite significant in the wording. I have often wondered how it could ever be realized. In each case the promise was made by the Patriarch that I should "travel from nation to nation" and preach the Gospel. The wording which is practically the same in both cases, was somewhat peculiar; it was not that I should go from place to place, from county to county, or from state to state, but that I should travel "from nation to nation," and preach the Gospel.

In this call that came to me from the Presidency of the Church, along with Bishop Wells, those two patriarchal blessings, upon that point, were literally fulfilled; for I have in very deed traveled from nation to nation and preached the Gospel.

Bishop Wells and I have visited every mission in Europe. First of all we had the opportunity of meeting with all the mission presidents of Europe in the city of Basel, Switzerland. We were with them in the closing sessions of their conference. The final session was a testimony meeting and I do not recall having attended a testimony meeting where the Spirit of God was poured out in richer abundance than it was at that time.

The mission presidents of Europe are a splendid lot of men and are doing a magnificent work for the proclamation of the truth. They are led and supervised by President John A. Widtsoe, of the Council of the Twelve. He has a tremendous responsibility upon him, which he is discharging in a most remarkable manner. He is undertaking to systematize, organize and unify the work in all the missions abroad, so that the most effective work can be accomplished and the truth be made known in the most efficient manner.

The Elders who are laboring in those missions are as fine a body of men as can be found anywhere on earth, and they are doing a marvelous work. Notwithstanding their youth and inexperience the Lord has touched their hearts. His Spirit is working with them and they are presenting the message of the Gospel in a very creditable manner.

There are over thirty thousand members of the Church in the European missions and they are being organized as nearly as possible like the organizations at home. The priesthood work is being developed as fast as possible. The auxiliary work is showing a remarkable advance over the years gone by. The sisters are doing a splendid work in this particular. The wives of the presidents of the various missions are leading out and cooperating fully with their husbands. Sister Widtsoe especially is distinguishing herself by the intelligent and effective work she is doing among the sisters. The Relief Society, the Mutual Improvement Associations and the Sunday Schools, are all flourishing. The Primary Association has not yet been developed to the extent of the other organizations. But it is not being overlooked. These auxiliaries are more advanced now in the various missions of Europe than ever before, and are doing a splendid work in training and developing the people, both young and old. Many who are not of the Church belong to these associations, and through the influence of little children the mothers and fathers are being made acquainted with the truth.

I am happy to say that the feeling of the world toward the Latter-day Saints has changed materially since I last visited Europe. The press shows a marked change for the better in its attitude towards the Church. There is now a willingness to publish articles in refutation of the slanders that may be put forth by our enemies (for the devil is not dead yet and the Church still has enemies in Europe), and the papers generally are trying to be fair in their attitude upon the "Mormon" question. Moreover, they are opening their columns to us. When conferences are held it is not uncommon for the newspapers to send representatives to such gatherings, and they usually give a fair account of what transpires.

I rejoice in the wonderful experience I have had through this opportunity of visiting Europe. The work of the various missions is progressing, and the Gospel is being taught in its purity and power.

However, there is one serious drawback to it all, and that is the indifference which prevails among the people. Since the war, particularly, there has been a noticeable change in the religious attitude of the people of Europe. Where they formerly believed in the Bible, in the church, in the observance of the Sabbath, and in those things that tend to build up and uplift humanity, they have gradually assumed an attitude of indifference to all these things. They no longer have much use for religion or for the churches. That spirit is growing, and I do not know just how we are going to meet it. It is one of the problems of missionary work today. Formerly you could approach the people with the Bible and sustain the principles of the Gospel from the "good book." But today too many pay little or no attention to the Bible. The approach therefore must be different. Our missionary methods and efforts will have to be changed somewhat in order to meet the changed situation. President Widtsoe is working along these lines, devoting a great deal of thought, time and energy to the development of other methods so as to meet the new conditions and get the people interested in the Gospel message.

I want to say in closing, my brethren and sisters, that I am very happy in the work of the Lord. It is the dearest thing on earth to me. It is fifty years this month since I was baptized into the Church; and out of that fifty years of experience in the Church I can testify to you today that I know this to be the work of the Lord. I know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God. And I know too that the Church is led by the inspiration of the Lord. The Lord has not forsaken it. He has not gone on a journey. He is guiding and directing the affairs of this Church. He is inspiring the leaders of the Church. For forty odd years I have been in close contact with them. I have seen their lives, and I am here to testify to you that in guiding the affairs of this Church they have been led by the inspiration of the Almighty. We need have no fears as to the future of the work of the Lord, for it is his work and will triumph and I bear testimony to it in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER BRIGHAM H. ROBERTS

Of the First Council of Seventy

St. Paul said:

"For though I preach the Gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!"

"For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but-if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me."

He leaves rather unsaid what he means by that significant remark: "If I preach not the gospel, then a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me."

But undoubtedly he implies that a very serious consequence would rest upon him if he failed in this mission that had been granted unto him.

I think very likely the contemplation of another prophet, who had also been commissioned of the Lord to carry a message unto Israel in Babylon, will throw some light upon the subject.

Some time after the Babylonian captivity began the Lord called Ezekiel and sent him to Babylon to convey to Israel his mind and will. So Ezekiel departed on that mission. When he arrived in Babylon he seemed loath to undertake the responsibility. We are told that he sat by the river that ran through the city, doubtless in deep contemplation of the work before him. The Lord, it would appear, felt that he was somewhat delinquent in discharging the tremendous responsibility given him, so he spoke unto the prophet to this effect:

"Son of man, I have placed thee upon the watchtower and given thee my word unto Israel."

"When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

"Yet if thou warn the wicked man, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul."

I think that in all probability this quotation from Ezekiel helps us to explain in something like fulness the words of Paul upon the subject of responsibility of those who receive commission and a mission from the Lord to the world.

For the few minutes that I address you I would like to make a somewhat wider application of this same principle that we see operating here in the case of individual prophets. Let us remember that responsibility can rest upon a people, a nation, or a church in the same manner that it can rest upon an individual. Israel demonstrates the truth of that statement. I mean the experience of the Hebrew nation; which people, after God had delivered them from Egypt, were called to be his witness in the earth—witness of his being and the kind of being he was, his character, his attributes; and also to be witness of his law which he revealed to them through Moses. The conditions making them his witness to the world were such that in any event they would be his witnesses. If by observing his law, keeping his commandments, and honoring him, then by a realization of the highest blessings that God could confer upon a people; they would be strengthened and upheld as a people especially blessed of the Lord. In the event of their failure to live up to the requirements of his law, and do honor to him, then such calamities would fall upon them as would testify of God's displeasure upon those who ignore his laws and commandments. And the Hebrew nation under these conditions has been a witness for God, perhaps the most remarkable miracle in all history. I remember that Bishop Joseph Lightfoot, a Christian Bible scholar of high standing of the last century, declared that men could disbelieve every other miracle in the Bible and yet the Hebrew nation would be the outstanding miracle of all miracles that are mentioned. The experiences through which they had passed; and they, we know, have chiefly been witnesses of God through the things which they suffered because of their disobedience unto the Lord.

The full passage by Bishop Lightfoot is as follows:

"You may question, if you will, every single prophecy in the Old Testament, but the whole history of the Jews is one continuous prophecy more distinct and articulate than all. You may deny, if you will, every successive miracle which is recorded therein; but again, the history of the Jews is from first to last one stupendous miracle, more wonderful and convincing than all." (Quarterly Review, April, 1886).

But I want to apply this principle, introduced by Paul's statement, to a Church, more especially to our Church, in which the ends of the earth are met, being the Church of the new dispensation, the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, which shall include within it all previous dispensations, for in it shall be realized that refreshing that was promised by St. Peter when he said, the heavens would receive and retain Jesus Christ until the times of refreshing should come from the presence of the Lord, and Jesus Christ should be again revealed from heaven, made known to the people; and all things spoken by the mouths of the prophets from the beginning of the world should be gathered together into one, and be established in this great forth-coming dispensation (Acts 3:19-22).

This is the Church we are supremely interested in, this Church of the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. God has committed to this Church his Gospel, his law. He has commissioned men and given unto the Church its organization wherein is his divine authority. He has commissioned this Church to preach the Gospel to every nation and kindred and tongue and people. And in a remarkable way he has made this Church the means through which he will instruct the world and administer to all men the ordinances of the Gospel. By reason of this large commission this Church extends its interests from the first dispensation to this last dispensation, from Adam until the present time. God has made it all inclusive. It therefore becomes the official exponent of the whole scheme of life and salvation that God has designed for the world, the advocacy of the truth; and the defense especially of God's revealed truth, is lodged with this organization together with the tremendous responsibility that goes with this divine commission.

Moreover, the Lord has given special instruction for our guidance, the guidance of his priesthood—how we may acquit ourselves and become efficiently instructed and prepared to discharge these high responsibilities. I want to call your attention to that.

Ninety-eight years ago a group of elders had assembled in Kirtland—they were waiting the coming on of a conference at which they were expected to receive organization and instructions to go out with the message of the Lord to the people in the country round about. Most of them had come in from missions. While thus in waiting they inquired of the Prophet for the word of the Lord respecting them and their future labors. It was on this occasion that the Lord gave what to me is one of the most wonderful, as it is also one of the most beautiful, of our revelations. It seems that the Prophet was inclined to regard it somewhat in this light, for he named it "The Olive Leaf," because it was intended, in certain parts of it, to make reconciliation of differences that had sprung up between the elders down at Independence, Missouri, and the elders of the Church in Kirtland. Coming to that part of it which was to be instruction to this group of Elders, the Lord said to them:

"I give unto you a commandment that ye shall continue in prayer and fasting from this time forth.

"And I give unto you a commandment that you shall teach one another in the doctrine of the kingdom.

"Teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory—"

They did not disregard theory. Some people are disposed to sneer at theoretical things, but the Lord required that these Elders should be instructed more perfectly in theory—

"—in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that are expedient for you to understand.

"Of things both in heaven and in the earth, and under the earth; things which have been, things which are, things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home, things which are abroad; the wars and the perplexities of the nations, and the judgments which are on the land; and a knowledge also of countries and of kingdoms—"

And now observe this, I pray you. First, hold in your consciousness the width and length and height and depth of this great field of knowledge in relation to things of the past and the future; things to come; things of a national character; things in the earth itself, and under the earth. It seems to me that an effort was made to circumscribe the whole field of knowledge, human and divine; historical and philosophical. It is a tremendous designation of the field to be scored for knowledge of the things that are. And now, as I was about to say, mark the purpose of the instruction, for the paragraph continues:

"That ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again to magnify the calling whereunto I have called you, and the mission with which I have commissioned you."

And then later, by the way, I ought not to omit that, the Lord said:

"Verily I say unto you, my friends, call your solemn assembly, as I have commanded you.

"And as all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study and also by faith."

You will observe that there are two sources mentioned here from which men may obtain learning and wisdom. One is through access to the treasures of knowledge by faith; but as all do not have that gift of obtaining knowledge by faith, then "seek ye wisdom from the best books;" and of course there can be no possible objection to men thus instructed of the Lord obtaining wisdom both by faith and also by research in experimentation, and by becoming familiar with the great truths that are taught in the best books.

Well, that I think discloses somewhat the responsibility of the Church to become efficient as teachers of those truths which God has revealed, and also as to all truth, because I recognize the fact that the Lord from time to time has granted through his prophets, especially, great flashes of light that men call philosophical truth, as well as moral and spiritual truth and admonition. And I regard it the duty of the Church to represent and uphold and sustain in the exercise of the mission given to her of God the so-called philosophical truths of the revelations of God, as well as the important doctrinal truth and ordinances of the Gospel that he has restored. It is binding upon the Church, from my viewpoint, that she shall weave into beautiful harmony, as I believe it can be woven, the truth that God has revealed, and also those undoubted truths which men, and especially in this wonderful age, have been developing by their profound research and experimentations. A new world has opened to the knowledge of men in these last thirty years. It is called in their literature upon the subject, a New Renaissance, and that renaissance of knowledge has brought to the scientific and intellectual world and the philosophical world new conceptions in relation to the structure of the universe, and also its immensity, its almost unbelievable greatness. For now, whereas in past times we have spoken of the "solar system," we speak of that galaxy which we regard as constituting our universe—consisting of more than one billion blazing suns, and many thoughtful writers are ready to concede the possibility at least of these suns being the centers of opaque, circling planets, as is the case with our own sun, for our sun is like the other billions of suns that make up the galaxy. Now they burn holes into space by improved telescopes, supplemented by the great "photographic eye of science," the photograph-telescope, until a multiplicity of galaxies of blazing suns equal perhaps to our own galaxy, are to be found out in the depths of space, beyond the galaxy to which our solar system belongs.

And so this larger view of the universe, together with other discoveries in geology, the science of earth structure; and biology, the science of life; and in chemistry as well as in astronomy,—the ideas of men in the last thirty years have undergone a complete revolution you may say.

I am sorry to call attention to the fact, but I must needs do so, that while there are a few exceptions to the notion among scientific men, it is safe to say that the trend of intellectual thought and scientific investigation and deduction holds out the idea of the coming of a dead universe, and also it denies—this trend of thought—even the possibility or the desirability of individual immortality, even the immortality of the race. Of course if the universe is headed towards a complete universal deadness, all forms of life go into that universe; and that is the trend, I wish to say, of scientific thought. Others, however, and some of them the most prominent in the intellectual life of our times, hold to the fact that as these blazing suns and many worlds that may attend upon them are wasting away, matter being annihilated, —contrary to the old philosophy—matter being annihilated, radiant energy is being developed in its stead. There are those who believe that radiant energy reaches a point at which it undergoes reconstruction, and that there is a building up of the universe, as well as a tearing down of it; but that is not the trend of scientific thought.

Now, in relation to these things, I can only say at this time that the prophet of God of this New Dispensation has announced this great principle as to the eternity of the universe, the immortality of individual men, as well as of races—he has given the world to understand through our Book of Mormon that there is a God in heaven who has created all things, things to act and things to be acted upon; and all the researches of the scientists bring us at last only to those two things the positive and negative, out of which the unexhaustive matter of the space depths is brought into tangible being and reality, and the great drama of creation goes on though there be disintegration of worlds and integration of them.

And so the Lord has made known unto his Church these great truths. It is my belief that the Church is the custodian of those great philosophical and scientific truths, and it is for us to be champions of those things and to harmonize them with the truths which men have discovered, that the truths of God may be vindicated.

This is our new field of labor, you may say, at the commencement of this second century of the existence of the Church. I believe it is up to us to fortify the youth of our people and our missionaries that they shall go out into the world with a knowledge of these things that are in fact included in that great commandment which God gave to his servant ninety-eight years ago, that they may go out efficient to meet the world in respect to all the truths that God has revealed, and the reasonable implications that grow out of them.

I pray you do not regard this as any attempt on my part to make any adequate statement of the development of the new knowledge of the world of the last thirty years. It is not so. I merely call your attention to this vast new field in which we ought to put our feet as far forward as any other people in the world, because we can do it with the assurance that God has revealed great truths in relation to these matters. So regard this, my brethren, as merely a mentioning of this broad field of which the ministry of the Church and the educational department of the Church should take notice.

May the Lord bless us, we men of the second century in the Church. May we discharge our duties and responsibilities as faithfully and as successfully as did the men of the first century. If we do that we shall stand without reproach, a light given of God to the world. May the Lord bless us to that end, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The hymn, "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord," was sung by the congregation, after which the closing prayer was offered by Elder Leonard G. Ball, President of the Idaho Falls Stake, and the Conference adjourned until 2:00 p. m.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

At 2 o'clock the second session of the Conference was opened by President Heber J. Grant announcing that the congregation would sing the hymn, "Guide us, O Thou Great Jehovah."

After the singing, Elder Joseph S. Hansen, President of the Gunnison Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The congregation then sang the hymn, "Do What is Right."

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I hope and pray that I may have the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord in what I shall say this afternoon.

Very timely counsel and instruction were given in the meeting this morning. I was pleased that our attention was called to the duties of parents and teachers and their responsibility in looking after the interests of our children and the youth of Israel and in imparting proper instruction while they are young so that they may not depart from it.

I believe fully that we are living in the last days; that we are approaching very rapidly the advent of the Son of God on the earth. President Grant made reference to this in his remarks this morning.

AN EXAMPLE IN RIGHTEOUSNESS

This afternoon I would like, if I may be led to do so, to say a few words to the Latter-day Saints by way of counsel and perhaps admonition. We have been informed that the world is full of lawlessness, and especially is this the case in our own country which is dedicated as a land of liberty. The Latter-day Saints are as a city set on a hill that cannot be hid, and like the candle that gives light to all who are in the house. It is our duty to let our light shine as an example in righteousness, not only to the people among whom we live, but to the peoples of the whole earth. It is our duty to be law-abiding. We are commanded by the Lord to keep his commandments and also to be obedient to the laws of the land. Having the light of the Gospel as it has been revealed, we are under obligation to set examples in righteousness before all men. We have been endowed with power from on high. We have been blessed with direct revelation through our prophets. We know the Authorities of the Church are entitled to inspiration, and that they receive it. We know that we have been guided by revelation and commandment from the Lord. With this light and knowledge before us, there is no place in the Church for the disobedient and the rebellious, the violator of the law. There is no place for those who do not have in their hearts a love of the truth and who remain unrepentant. When I say this I do not mean to convey the thought that we have no sympathy for the lawbreaker and no love for the unrepentant. It is our commission to go into all the world and cry repentance and endeavor to save the sinner; but if men will not repent who are in the Church, and if they will not be obedient to the teachings of the Church, then they are not entitled to membership. It is the duty of every member to be repentant, to be humble, to be willing to receive counsel, and to walk in the light as it has been revealed to us.

LAW-ABIDING CITIZENS

Today many of the laws on our statutes are ridiculed. Some of the people stand in opposition to them because they have been misled in believing that mistakes have been made. Others are standing in opposition to the law because they have malicious and evil hearts. The Latter-day Saints are quite generally law-abiding citizens, both of the nation and of the kingdom of God. We should be such, for we are under covenant to walk in the light of the truth, to be obedient to the statutes and the judgments which have been given us for our guidance both civilly and spiritually as members of the Church.

IN A DAY OF WICKEDNESS

We are living in a day of wickedness. I do not believe, as some seem to think, that the world is growing better. I cannot make that thought appear consistent with the word of the Lord, for he has emphatically said otherwise. If the world is becoming more righteous, then the coming of the Lord will of necessity have to be postponed, because he is going to come in the day of wickedness, in the day of judgment, and when vengeance against the ungodly is in his heart. At that time he will cleanse the earth of its unrighteousness, and we are told there will be "few men left."

Let me read one or two passages of scripture which bear upon this point. These sayings have been given us for our guidance and for the guidance of the whole world if they will receive them. The Lord says in a revelation given shortly after the organization of the Church:

"And ye are called to bring to pass the gathering of mine elect; for mine elect hear my voice and harden not their hearts;

"Wherefore the decree hath gone forth from the Father that they shall be gathered in unto one place upon the face of this land, to prepare their hearts and be prepared in all things against the day when tribulation and desolation are sent forth upon the wicked.

"For the hour is nigh and the day soon at hand when the earth is ripe; and all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that wickedness shall not be upon the earth;

"For the hour is nigh, and that which was spoken by mine apostles must be fulfilled; for as they spoke so shall it come to pass;

"For I will reveal myself from heaven with power and great glory, with all the hosts thereof, and dwell in righteousness with men on earth a thousand years, and the wicked shall not stand."

Again in another revelation the Lord said:

"Behold, I, the Lord, utter my voice, and it shall be obeyed.

"Wherefore, verily I say, let the wicked take heed, and let the rebellious fear and tremble; and let the unbelieving hold their lips, for the day of wrath shall come upon them as a whirlwind, and all flesh shall know that I am God.

"And he that seeketh signs shall see signs, but not unto salvation."

So the Lord is going to come when the cup of iniquity is full. He has said:

"Mine indignation is soon to be poured out without measure upon the nations; and this will I do when the cup of their iniquity is full."

Here is the testimony of the Lord to Enoch as it is given in the Pearl of Great Price:

"And the Lord said unto Enoch: As I live, even so will I come in the last days, in the days of wickedness and vengeance, to fulfil the oath which I have made unto you concerning the children of Noah.

"And the day shall come that the earth shall rest, but before that day the heavens shall be darkened, and a veil of darkness shall cover the earth; and the heavens shall shake, and also the earth; and great tribulations shall be among the children of men, but my people will I preserve."

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE WATCHMEN UPON THE TOWERS

Brother B. H. Roberts, this morning, called our attention to the fact that we are watchmen upon the towers of Israel. It is our duty to warn, to admonish, to teach, in righteousness, the Latter-day Saints and all peoples. I think we are under responsibility to warn the world and call the attention of the people to these predictions and cry among them repentance, and ask them to repent, that they too may receive the Gospel and thus escape from these calamities and tribulations which even now are being poured out upon the nations of the earth. The Lord has promised us that Zion may escape from this destruction and trouble if she will hearken to his commandments and walk in his statutes. But Zion will not escape unless she is willing to walk in humility and obedience. If we refuse to hearken to counsel, if we refuse to observe the laws of the Gospel and to live in humility, faith and love, then we will be visited "with sore affliction, with pestilence, with plague, with sword, with vengeance, with devouring fire." Therefore, I feel it my duty to cry repentance and to warn the people.

OUR DUTY ON THE SABBATH DAY

I pray that these things may pass us by, but I fear they will not unless there is sincere repentance in Israel. As I travel up and down through the stakes of Zion, I discover that there are those among the Latter-day Saints who are violators of the Sabbath day. Now, the breaking of this great law is not confined to those who are not of us; but in our own communities the Sabbath day is set aside as a day of pleasure rather than a day for worshipping the Lord and for reflection and study concerning the things which pertain to eternal life. I think it is deplorable and the Lord will not hold us guiltless.

Latter-day Saints have no business, with the Gospel before us, and the direct commandments we have received from the Lord, to go to the picture shows on Sunday. Sunday is our Sabbath. The Lord has set it apart as such and has commanded us to observe it faithfully. We have no right to go to pleasure resorts on that day. We have no business at the baseball games, and other places of amusement on this, the Lord's day; but should be found inside our church buildings which have been dedicated for the worship of the Lord our God. We should go to the house of the Lord, and there confess our sins, partake of the sacrament and receive instruction in praise and thanksgiving, rejoicing in the truth. This is our duty on the Sabbath day, and we should be engaged in no other thing, for this is a day appointed unto us in which to rest from our labors and to pay our devotions to the Most High.

NEED OF REPENTANCE

We have been warned many times, and I say, my brethren and sisters, there is room for repentance among the Latter-day Saints. We had better repent or many of us will find ourselves caught in the snares and in the net. The Lord has said that when he comes those who will not hearken to the voice of his servants, and more especially to the voice of Jesus Christ, our Lord, shall be cut off from among the people. There will be many among those in Zion and who belong to the Church, who shall be called upon to mourn and to lament, as did the Nephites of old, unless we turn with full purpose, to the worship of the Lord and the keeping of his commandments. That we may turn unto the Lord and remember the covenants we have made with him and thus be worthy in the day of his coming, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER REY L. PRATT

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Mexican Mission

I sincerely trust, my brethren and sisters, that the same spirit that has actuated the speakers at the morning session, and so far this afternoon, may be given to me. My only desire is to bear witness to the truth, to assist in its establishment in the world, and to forward the work of the Church, and the preaching of the Gospel among the nations of the earth. My desire is to see righteousness established among men and selfishness and wickedness done away.

I realize very greatly how dependent I am, as an individual, upon the Lord to assist me and to keep me in the path of duty and from going off either to the right or to the left, because of the perplexing conditions that exist and the controversies that there are among men. And, if it be hard to live individually in keeping with the truth, so is it hard also to be sure always that a person is teaching the truth.

When Jesus Christ stood before Pilate he was asked whether he be a king, and he said:

"My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered unto the Jews; but now is my kingdom not from hence.

"Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king, then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

"Pilate saith unto him, What is truth?"

As I come in contact with men and things in the world today, it seems to me, my brethren and sisters, that many men are wondering, "What is truth?" The Savior said that he came into the world, and for this purpose was he born, to bear witness of the truth in the world; and I find joy and consolation and comfort in looking to him for a witness of truth concerning things that perplex me, and I think the world might well do likewise.

Among people who profess to believe in Jesus Christ as the Redeemer of the world and the great Teacher that they in their churches, and according to their creeds, follow, there are controversies over points of doctrine and in regard to the very existence of God and his personality. Still they do not look to him for an answer to that query, "What is truth?" concerning all of these things. The personality of God is a question that is being discussed in a spirit of controversy and has been for many years. Many men deny the existence of God as a personality, as a being, other than a diffused Spirit throughout the immensity of space.

Jesus Christ said that he came to bear witness of the truth, and of that truth he has borne witness unto us. Philip asked him upon one occasion to manifest the Father unto him and his associates, and the Savior seemed a little surprised that such a query should be made after he had been with them, the Twelve, so long and had taught them. He very pointedly said to Philip: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

My brethren and sisters, there is your manifestation and your witness of truth concerning God. It is given by him whose mission it was to bear witness to the truth in the world. Every teaching, then, of the Savior, if it be his mission to bear witness of the truth, is truth, taught to our Father's children for their salvation here upon the earth. "The Gospel of Jesus Christ," Paul says, "is the power of God unto salvation," and this is true. It is the witness of Jesus Christ in the world, of the truth.

The question that is perplexing now, brethren and sisters, is where is the truth in the world today? We who go out in the world to preach the Gospel come in contact with men who contend tenaciously that they are teaching the truth, that the church they represent is the true church of God; that their concept of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost is a true concept; and still we find them differing among themselves, and we differ from all of them, practically speaking, in most of these vital points. So where is the truth today? Since the minds of men have been confused, and men, seemingly, have gone astray from the truth, or at least are confused as to where it is located, has there been a remanifestation of it?

I maintain, my brethren and sisters, that Joseph Smith, as a prophet raised up of God, not equal of course to Jesus Christ in any sense of the word, but in the same spirit, came into the world to bear witness of the truth today, through a restoration of it, just the same as Jesus Christ came into the world to bear witness of the truth when he came; and in all essential points his witness concurs with the witness of Jesus Christ.

What was the witness of Joseph Smith, when a mere boy, concerning the personality of God? We all know that there was great confusion in the world at that particular time, and when Joseph Smith went into the woods to pray I doubt that he had a well defined idea or concept of Deity, or at least a concept as well defined as he had after he had so prayed and received a manifestation of the Father. He came from out that forest and boldly declared, to the day of his death, that there came into his presence a being after whose image and in whose likeness he was formed,—in other words, a man, an exalted man, who proclaimed himself to be the Father of another being there also in his presence, they two being in the same likeness; and he gave command to Joseph Smith to listen to the voice of his Son.

That is the witness of Joseph Smith concerning our Father in heaven—that he is a being with body, parts, and passions, in whose image and likeness mankind is formed. He bears witness that the Son is like him, and he bore witness to the end of his days that such was the truth. From the very moment that he announced these things he was confronted with persecution that was bitter. He no doubt realized that by retracting, and I think was told that should he retract, this persecution would cease. But he bore testimony that he felt like Paul of old must have felt when he saw a vision, when a light enveloped him, when he heard and saw the Redeemer of the world. Joseph said:

"I know that I have seen a light, and that in that light I saw two personages, and they are God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ; and who am I, that I should deny God, for I know that I know these things, and I know likewise that God knows that I know them."

If we will carefully analyze the teachings of Joseph Smith, not only in this particular but in regard to every principle of the Gospel that through him has been established, we will find that they concur with the witness of truth manifested and established by Jesus Christ when he was among the children of men. So I think that we can well look to this as the means and as the key whereby we may know.

I bear you my witness, my brethren and sisters, that I know that God lives. I know that Jesus Christ is the Savior of the world. I know that the Gospel, as restored through the Prophet Joseph Smith, is the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It is the power of God unto salvation, and it will, in its unfolding, answer every query and every problem that confronts the world. I have absolute and abiding faith in these things, and am willing to trust to the Lord. Perhaps a witness has not yet been borne to every truth. There may be marvelous truths yet to be revealed to the children of men, and the Lord, in his own way and through his Spirit, will make these things known to his children as they may be useful unto them. I think that we should search for truth; we should strive to know it; we should strive to learn it. Only truth can free the world from the errors that are in it today. Only truth can bring about a better condition in the world, and less hatred and strife and bitterness and misery among the children of men. I mean truth if it goes into the hearts of men and men live by the truth. The Savior says: "If you will follow after my words, and believe in them, you shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." I maintain that if the truth is planted in the heart of man, and he lives in accordance with the truth as it comes to him through the inspiration of the Lord, that he is willing to pour out on all those who seek him, it will relieve mankind and the human race of all the ills that beset them.

May the Lord help us to appreciate the truth; and to become free by knowing it and by living in harmony with it, is my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Our twelfth Article of Faith says, "We believe * * * in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the law." There are those who, looking upon this as a religious statement, will ridicule it. But are there any who will ridicule the words of Lincoln? "Bad laws, if they exist, should be repealed as soon as possible; still, while they continue in force, they should be religiously observed."

REVOLT NATURAL TO AMERICANS

My purpose, this afternoon, is to appeal to you to live in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, to obey the laws of our country.

The American people have a natural inclination to break the law. Our nation was cradled in revolt. Our Declaration of Independence and the oft-repeated speeches of the Revolutionary period keep fanned into a flame that old revolutionary spirit—the spirit of defiance. Our Civil War is perhaps the greatest example of the belief of Americans in the right of revolt.

In early days, when our numbers were few and when these few lived on sparsely settled areas, to have laws and to obey them was not a matter of supreme importance.

REVOLT NOW DISASTROUS

But in this mechanical age, with our great cities, our densely populated manufacturing centers, with hitherto undreamed-of wealth—wealth unequally distributed—if there were no laws, or if the laws are disobeyed by a large portion of the community, disaster will necessarily follow.

Listen again to Lincoln:

"Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well-wisher of posterity, swear by the blood of the Revolution never to violate in the least particular the laws of the country, and never to tolerate their violation by others. * * * Let reverence for the law be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap. Let it be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges."

AIDING THE CAUSE OF ANARCHY

If the day has come when a majority of the citizens of the United States will ridicule Lincoln and his ideas, when a majority will disobey our laws and disregard our Constitution, the republic is doomed, its destruction sure.

The American Bar Association said recently by resolution that when lawyers, bankers, manufacturers, merchants, and social leaders disobey and scoff at the prohibition law, they are aiding the cause of anarchy, they are promoting mob violence, they are encouraging robbery.

Many are intentionally breaking the prohibition law. By so doing they are aiding the cause of anarchy, promoting mob violence, and encouraging robbery.

SWORN DUTY OF OFFICERS

It is the sworn duty of officials to obey and defend the Constitution and to discharge their duties with fidelity. Lincoln not only asks that every "American swear by the blood of the Revolution never to violate the laws of the country," but he appeals to every American "never to tolerate their violation by others." Must we tolerate public officials who themselves break the laws?

I have made a solemn public pledge that I will not knowingly cast my vote for any man for any office unless I have been assured that he lives in accordance with the law. I am referring primarily to the prohibition law.

TWELVE MILLION WOMEN!

The Washington Post of March 9, 1929, announced that ten national affiliated women's organizations had pledged the support of twelve million women of the United States to aid the dry drive of our country. The wife of the President was pointed to as a fine example of the way in which American women can help in the enforcement of the liquor law. That way is by refusing to participate in social or other functions where the law is broken. Are these twelve million women carrying out this pledge?

It is my intention to request those candidates for whom I may cast my vote to answer the following:

- (a) Do you yourself live in accordance with the prohibition law?
- (b) Do you pledge yourself to refuse to participate in any social or other function where the law is broken?

The Constitution of the United States prohibits the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors. Our State law provides that the importing, advertising, giving away, exchanging, dispensing, or serving of liquor is "forever prohibited." It is unlawful also for any person to have intoxicating liquor in his possession.

With such provisions in the statutes of our State and in the Constitution of our country, no public official can, in honor, violate the prohibition laws "in the least particular" nor can he "tolerate their violation by others."

WHAT ONE HUNDRED CAN DO

It has been said that if one hundred of the leading business men in Salt Lake City would live in accordance with the law and would not participate in social or other functions where the law is broken, soon much of our trouble with prohibition would be over. I propose to try to get the above-named pledge—

- (a) From at least 100 of the leading business men in Salt Lake City.
- (b) From at least 100 of the leading business men of the State of Utah.
- (c) From at least 100 of the leading business men, scientists, and statesmen of the United States.

If the outstanding characters of our country can be induced not to participate in any function, social or otherwise, where the law is broken, and if our officers will do their sworn duty, then respect for the Constitution and the law will speedily be restored.

PROHIBITION A SUCCESS

Many assert that prohibition is a failure. I propose to present a few of the reasons why I regard it a success.

Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army: "Sin and poverty in the slums of New York have decreased since prohibition" (Readers' Digest, December, 1928). Before prohibition there were eight licensed saloons in every block of the bowery besides many unlicensed dance halls, brothels, and dives. Before prohibition the Salvation Army would often collect twelve hundred or thirteen hundred men and women in one night who were too drunk to care for themselves (Deseret News, Sept. 29, 1930). Only seven or eight of such characters are to be found now.

In the Salvation Army Memorial Home they have 4,800 men each week. They do not find one drunken case in a thousand. Before prohibition in Jersey City, where there were 1200 saloons, 85,000 men on Saturday nights squandered their week's wages for liquor. In the gutters were to be seen many helpless men and helpless women. These were not homeless people. They were American workers and the money they had squandered "we of the Salvation Army knew was money needed for food, clothing, and shelter." In what industrial center of America does such a condition occur today? Vice has not disappeared, but it is not so bold as it was before prohibition. Then it was not uncommon in the quarters of the Salvation Army to see a newly born baby lying in the arms of a drink-soaked mother. Such conditions do not exist now.

DRINKING IN EUROPE

"I wish all those who question whether any change for the better has been worked in America might observe conditions in the slums abroad. One of our London homes shelters about 200 women, three-quarters of whom are so absolutely degraded by drink as to appear beyond the hope of redemption. They are in rags and tatters, bleary-eyed and indecent. Drink is responsible for their condition. No such condition can be found in America.

"In many European industrial cities the Salvation Army is trying to work some sort of a regeneration in a type of women who are so degraded that one shudders to think of their condition. Such a lot of women could not be recruited in this land of prohibition where the volume of drinking is amazingly, gloriously, lessened.

"Under prohibition the men uncharitably called 'bums' are disappearing. No longer is the Salvation Army besieged by a clamorous swarm of broken wrecks. Because of prohibition there is less misery among the poor and tens of thousands of homes have been reestablished because some Americans have stopped drinking."

CONDITIONS IN COLLEGES

Dr. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, says that during these prohibition times the students at Ann Arbor do not drink one-tenth as much liquor as they did when he was a student in the same institution before prohibition. One of the house rules of the Michigan Union at Ann Arbor reads:

"Gambling, drinking of intoxicants, entering the building in an intoxicated condition, and bringing intoxicating liquors into the building, are each and all absolutely prohibited."

The effect of prohibition at Yale University has been good. Professor Charles C. Clark:

"I know whereof I speak, for I have been a member of the committee of discipline for a time dating back many years before prohibition. I know conditions intimately; I do not pretend that the students are all prohibitionists or are not drinking, but the change has been simply revolutionary. * * * In the old days we rarely troubled ourselves about a case of near intoxication if it had not resulted in some kind of public disorder, whereas now, intoxication of itself is regarded as calling for the severest penalty."

Who, then, interested in the welfare of youth, will say that prohibition has not been a success?

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, and former president of Stanford University:

"There is no doubt that there has been a marked decrease in the use of alcoholic beverages among the college students with whom I come in contact.

Compared with the period before the present laws were put into effect, I should say that we have only one-tenth of the problem we had at that time in connection with liquor."

WORKERS BECOME CAPITALISTS

The savings of the country in 1926 were five times those of 1914. They increased from $6.71 per capita to $33.00 per capita. This is 390%. The laborer is saving the money he once spent for drink.

Since prohibition we have hundreds of thousands fewer arrests and jail commitments per annum for drunkenness. Our drink-caused poverty has decreased 74% and we have reached the lowest rate of pauperism known in the United States (Wayne B. Wheeler).

Prohibition is making capitalists out of our workers, according to John G. Cooper of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. "When the saloon closed, the 'poor man's club' vanished. It is being replaced by comfortable homes." The laborer of today is getting much more satisfaction out of an automobile and a decent home than he ever did out of the corner saloon. Who will say under such conditions that prohibition has not succeeded?

IDEALS OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

"Bad as the situation is now, it is better than the pit out of which we were digged" (Harry Emerson Fosdick). In 1912 the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association met in Ohio. Here is an excerpt from one of the speeches:

"We must create an appetite for liquor in the growing boys. Men who drink * * * will die, and if there is no new appetite created, our counters will be empty as well as our coffers. The open field for the creation of appetite is among the boys. Nickels expended in treats for the boys, will return in dollars to your tills after the appetite has been formed."

That tells you something of conditions which prevailed before prohibition, something of the standards of those who are engaged in the liquor business.

SHALL WE GO BACK?

If the present situation is unsatisfactory, let us not forget conditions back in 1884, when in old New York the Board of Aldermen was composed of "12 saloon keepers, 4 saloon-controlled politicians—16 out of 24. That same year out of 1002 Democratic and Republican primaries and conventions held in New York City, 633 were held in saloons and 96 in places next door to saloons" (Harry Emerson Fosdick). Many of the younger generation do not comprehend what conditions were in towns like Boston where before prohibition there was a saloon license for every 310 inhabitants. Do we desire to return to those conditions?

Go to Great Britain and see the public houses with wire cages in front of them where little children, not allowed by law to be taken inside the public houses, are huddled "to fight like dogs and cats, while their mothers are inside getting drunk." What we have in the United States, bad as it is, is better than that condition (Fosdick).

LIQUOR THE BREEDER OF CRIME

Many look upon conditions today under prohibition and complain because they see everywhere bootleggers, hijackers, and lawlessness. Remember the liquor trade in the United States has always been lawless. "It always has vomited criminality across the commonwealth. It always conspired against any government that licensed it or any laws that were supposed to control it" (Fosdick).

As evidence of the attitude of the liquor interests the National Liquor Dealers' Journal of September 10, 1913, said:

"To us there is the handwriting on the wall and its interpretation spells doom. The liquor business is to blame. It seems incapable of learning any lesson of achievement or motive but profit. To perpetuate itself it has formed alliances with the slums. It deliberately aids the most corrupt political powers."

The liquor trade has been lawless always. It will be lawless forever. Bad as conditions are there is no concession to the liquor interests that can be made in the law that will not make conditions worse. Any change in that direction will but increase the quantity of liquor consumed; and increasing the amount of liquor used means increasing the amount of drunkenness, increasing the amount of crime, increasing the amount of poverty, increasing the amount of misery.

BUSINESS DEMANDED PROHIBITION

Prohibition did not come until the great economic interests of our country gave it their powerful support. Drink-befuddled brains cannot do America's work. From 1919 to 1925 the per capita productivity of the workers in the automobile business increased 100%. The productivity of all the workers in the rubber tire business increased 139% (Henry Ford). Throughout the United States, labor reports show "unbelievable increases" in the per capita production of American workmen. By making America more productive prohibition has succeeded.

Over thirty years ago the United States Commissioner of Labor investigated 7,205 American business institutions employing 1,750,000 men. Three-quarters of these reported they never hired a man without investigating his drinking habits. Seven hundred reported they absolutely prohibited any drinking on the part of any employee within or outside of working hours. It was the hard-headed business men of America who furnished the driving power that brought the American people to prohibition.

"RULE G"

Long before we had national prohibition the following "Rule G" was in operation on every first-class railroad: "The use of intoxicants by employees while on duty is prohibited; their use or the frequenting of places where they are sold is sufficient cause for dismissal." Such prohibitory laws were not written by fanatics but by American business men.

Here is another:

"Any employee found using intoxicating liquor—either during or after working hours—is warned that it will not be tolerated, and he is urged to discontinue its use completely. If the promise is made, then the man is given another chance; otherwise he is discharged" (Fosdick).

The locomotive, the automobile, and the flying machine are "unanswerable arguments in favor of prohibition. And now that men and women, boys and girls, are at the wheels of automobiles everywhere, wisdom dictates not only that prohibition must be continued but also that it must be enforced.

WHAT PROHIBITION HAS ACCOMPLISHED

Before prohibition men under the influence of liquor were tolerated. Today no intoxicated employee dare approach the flying field, the engineer's cab, or the chauffeur's seat, without being subject to dismissal. Again, prohibition is a success.

Before prohibition Chicago had a saloon for every 300 inhabitants. It is said that if every speak-easy, dive, or soft drink parlor dispensing liquor in that city were counted today, the number would not be half so great. In our larger cities before prohibition, drunken men and drunken women were removed from lawns, they were seen frequently staggering along the streets. Such spectacles are unknown today. Prohibition is succeeding.

Then, dives filled with drunken men were seen everywhere. Women and children, cold, naked, and hungry, congregated on the streets of our cities looking for husbands and fathers. There are no such spectacles today. By making liquor hard to get and by increasing its price, prohibition has protected these poor families so that in these days there are few mothers and children waiting in terror in a drunkard's home for the return of a drunken husband and father. Those who are using liquor now are the so-called "smart set." Fortunately, they are the non-rearing family class. Comparatively few of the children, therefore, are reared by parents who drink. Thus prohibition protects the poor and the lowly and those fine law-abiding Americans who are rearing families.

"GOVERNMENT CONTROL"

Many honest, conscientious citizens stand today for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Most, if not all, of these favor "government control."

Government control means that the people can get liquor without breaking the law; this will mean an increased consumption. In our automobiles haven't we drunken drivers enough already? The automobile alone is reason enough for the strict enforcement of our prohibition laws.

"You've been drinking. With you at the wheel I will not get into this car," said a mother as she and her fourteen-year-old daughter stood at the open door of an automobile.

"Get in, get in, he has only had a taste," said a group of people who were standing about.

The car hadn't traveled three miles on a downhill grade before it reached a curve and by the drunken driver was capsized. The child, who had been selected to deliver the address for her class at commencement, was killed, while the mother and other occupants of the car were seriously injured. I say again the automobile alone is reason enough for the retention and the strict enforcement of the prohibition law.

Prohibition means efficiency. Prohibition means prosperity. Prohibition means doing away with drink-caused poverty. Prohibition means that there will be no children in the United States who cannot get training in the public schools. Prohibition will mean that the children of the United States, even the poorest, will be well clothed, well fed, well educated. Are not these arguments strong enough to justify the retention and enforcement of prohibition?

A word more about government control. It is in operation in Canada. During the past summer I spent some weeks there going as far north as Winnipeg. From personal observation I concluded that conditions there, under government control, are much worse than conditions here under prohibition.

TESTIMONY OF A CANADIAN

Fearing that the information secured during my brief stay might not have led to a correct conclusion, I asked a practicing attorney who has been a citizen of Canada for some twenty or thirty years to tell me what he thinks of government control.

"To my personal knowledge," began my able and experienced legal friend, "drinking increased immediately in every province." Do we desire to modify our laws, if after so doing, drinking is to increase immediately in every state and in every city?

In 1927 six Canadian provinces spent $147,000,000 for liquor. In that same year alcohol in the Dominion held the sixth highest place among the imports of the nation. Under government control it advanced to third place in 1928. During that time the value of alcohol imported increased beyond that for automobile parts, for raw sugar and for crude petroleum. Only two commodities, machinery and coal, exceeded in value that of imported alcohol.

A FLOOD OF ALCOHOL

Under government control, said the "Toronto Star" in 1927:

"A flood of alcohol continues to pour into Canada. During the fiscal year which ended in March, 1927, the Dominion imports of alcoholic beverages reached the value of $46,000,000 as compared with $19,000,000 in 1925. Including home production, the latest total would be close to $100,000,000."

Do the citizens of the United States desire to have the amount of alcoholic liquor consumed increase at this same rapid rate? If such increase comes, imagine the peril that will exist for pedestrians with the whole country filled with drunken automobile drivers.

During the four years following the adoption of government control, the province of Alberta, with a population of about 600,000, spent $42,000,000 for liquor. This amount would have paid the total expense of operating the provincial government for three years, it would have paid the total cost of all gasoline used in Alberta for three years, or it would have bought more than half the automobiles that are now in use in that Province. Are the people of the United States clamoring for a condition like this? Do the people of the United States desire to have our laboring men spend proportionately large sums for liquor, thus offering inducements to our laboring men to spend for liquor that money which is now being used to feed and clothe and educate their children and to provide comfortable homes for their wives and families?

This very day one of Salt Lake City's prominent citizens said he stands strongly for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment because it will do away with bootlegging. William R. Wood of Winnipeg says the brewers bootlegged 62% of all the beer they manufactured, and adds: "Illicit stills are found doing business on a gigantic scale after years of government control. Carloads of illicit liquor are still intercepted on the railways." With the neighbor on our north involved in all these serious difficulties, are we going to follow in her footsteps and adopt government control?

Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton says of conditions in Canada: 1. The government by putting its seal of approval upon drinking has almost annihilated the work of the church through years of teaching temperance and sobriety. 2. Bootlegging in Quebec is on the increase, and complaints of liquor law violation have almost trebled between 1922 and 1925. 3. The number of government liquor shops increased from 64 in 1922 to 90 in 1925. 4. Headlines in the Montreal Post during government control: "Montreal the Mecca for Crooks," and "A Veritable Avalanche of Outlawry, Hold-ups, and Robberies Has Descended upon the City." 5. A mayor of Winnipeg: "While conditions under prohibition were bad, the present conditions are a thousand times worse." 6. Under government control the province of Quebec consumed in 1925, 27,397 more gallons of alcohol than in 1924.

"Toronto Globe":

"If by success of government control we mean increased manufacture, increased facilities for the people to secure liquor, increased sales, increased consumption, increased drunkenness—then government control is a success.

"If we mean decreased consumption and decreased drunkenness, if we mean reduction in bootlegging, blind piggeries and law breaking, then government control is a failure."

IS LIQUOR NECESSARY?

Invitations have been extended to economists of known standing throughout the country to write on the economic value of the use of liquor. No economist has been found who will speak or write on that side of the question. All economists agree that America sober has achieved things of which America drunk never could have dreamed.

Some have argued that liquor is necessary in order to produce relaxation or rest from the prosaic dullness of the average life. In modern America the motor car, the movies, and the radio produce this relaxation. These and prohibition have transformed conditions. Mass existence is no longer the narrow, rum-ridden life of a generation ago.

The automobile driver who is quite drunk is usually not dangerous because he is so easily detected or incapacitated, but the really dangerous driver is the man who has had one or two drinks only, who still thinks he is in possession of his faculties but whose driving judgment has been impaired. A moderate drinker, who slightly swerves in the wrong direction, may collide with any one of the 23,000,000 motor vehicles that crowd the nation's highways (Prohibition Still At Its Worst—Fisher, p. 340).

When the Pennsylvania Railroad forbids its locomotive engineers to drink a drop even when off duty, ought not the American people, through legally authorized representatives, to forbid all automobile drivers to do the same?

He who drives an engine has a steel track to steer his course. But he who drives an automobile has to steer his own course. Every car or pedestrian he passes is at his mercy. Each cross road is a grade crossing. Engineers are trained professionals. Many automobile drivers are amateurs. If private prohibition, applied to the professional on a perfected track is justified, surely government prohibition applied to the amateur on an unprotected track is more than justified. Prohibition applied to the automobile driver in America means prohibition applied to everybody.

ELDER JOSEPH W. McMURRIN

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the California Mission

I am very happy, my brethren and sisters, in being present at this Conference, and feel, as no doubt you feel, that many very precious things have been presented for the consideration of the people who have assembled together.

My mind is running upon matters pertaining to missionary work, that being my responsibility. I come up with greetings from the missionaries who labor in the California Mission, and I think I may be justified in saying that we feel considerably distressed in our feelings because of the tremendous reduction that has taken place in our numbers during the present year. It looks as though by the end of the year we will probably have a reduction of fifty per cent in the number of missionaries in the California Mission. Fifty per cent less than January, 1930. We have been in frequent correspondence with the presiding authorities of the Church about missionaries, until I have sometimes felt myself that when I would make reference to the need of the mission for an increased number of missionaries, it would not be very pleasant reading, because of it being so frequently repeated.

I am conscious of the fact, my brethren and sisters, that financial conditions are not good. People are suffering from a lack of means, and

I am wondering if it is possible that any of the Ward and Stake authorities who make recommendations to the presiding authorities for missionary calls, feel there ought not to be the demand made upon the strength of Israel that has been made in the past, because of the depression that prevails throughout the land.

Personally, I think there should be some steps taken in local communities to improve the conditions from a missionary point of view. Ordinarily, when a missionary is called to go out to preach the Gospel, the responsibility pertaining to his expenses rests altogether upon the parents or other near relatives. This should be changed. I entertain the thought that if a real effort were made in the local communities, through bishops, stake presidencies, and high councilmen, to interest all the people in the expense of the missionaries who represent them in the field, a great burden might be lifted from the shoulders of the fathers and the mothers who have representatives out in the world preaching the Gospel. This responsibility properly belongs to all the people.

I do not understand that our obligations as members in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints have been removed or lessened because of the financial distresses that are in the land. We have had quoted in our hearing the Scriptures, the inspired declarations of the prophets. One of those prophets, as we heard in the morning session, represented that the Lord God of heaven had said to him that he was a watchman upon the towers of Zion, and that his duty was to give warning to the inhabitants of the land. If they hearkened they would be preserved. If they did not hearken they would be destroyed, but the watchman would have delivered his soul. Well, we need these watchmen that the people may be warned. That is my feeling. It is very strongly upon me.

We have been laboring—I trust, with a fair amount of zeal throughout the California Mission—as watchmen. We have been trying to bring to the attention of the people the fact that we live in a marvelous age, and that as preachers of the Gospel we have been properly called by divine authority to cry repentance among the people. We have been trying to testify that we are not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, that we know it is the power of God unto salvation, and that therein is the righteousness of God revealed, from faith to faith. We have been trying to impress the people with the thought that by this divine appointment we have been sent out to a perishing world, with the message of salvation; and while the people have not flocked in very great numbers to listen to our declaration, some have paid attention, and there have been many investigators. Many of them may not be investigating with very great anxiety, but they have at least had their hearts so touched by the teachings and attitude and personality and spirit of the missionaries, that they are glad, in many cases, to receive them into their homes; and some of them are inquiring for missionaries and we have none to send to them.

In quite a number of instances, missionaries are laboring alone. That is not entirely in harmony with the counsels of the Church and with the rule that has prevailed quite largely in missionary work, but because of the reduction in our numbers, in an effort to hold the ground that has been won we have split up and divided our forces, in order that the word of the Lord, the Gospel of the Son of God, might be carried in some measure to the people who have been in the habit of coming in contact with representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

I would like to humbly appeal to the men of the Church, in the communities of the Church where recommendations for missionaries originate, that after the call has been made by the presiding authorities of the Church, the whole community render financial assistance. I am quite confident when I say what I have said regarding the reduction of missionaries in the California Mission, that I represent the condition that prevails in all of the missions.

I do not understand that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has been relieved one whit from the carrying of the Gospel message to the inhabitants of the earth. Our Father in heaven declared, at the opening of this dispensation, that this message is to be taken to all the world. That is our responsibility, that we shall be found in the nations of the world, that we shall be crying repentance, that we shall be bearing witness to the restoration of the authority by which men minister in the name of the Son of God; for we are in the same condition as were the disciples of old. Jesus taught them: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and have ordained you, and have sent you forth, that you might bring forth fruit." That is the condition of the missionaries. They have been selected from their fellow men, and by divine authority they have been commissioned to carry the message of the Gospel to the peoples in the missions to which they have been assigned; and there surely is a crying demand for that service.

I hope that proper local authority will be concerned in relation to this matter, that the hands of mission presidents may be strengthened, and that the opportunities that abound may be utilized, in the preaching of the word of God.

I think I ought not to take more time, but I most earnestly make this plea. I am glad to say that although our numbers are smaller than they have been at any time during my presidency in the California Mission, we are nevertheless a happy company of men and women. We do believe in the Gospel that has been revealed through the Prophet Joseph Smith. We do believe that the promises of the prophets of old, in regard to the latter times, are having fulfilment; and our hearts, as we endeavor to deliver this witness to the people, burn with joy within us, and you know the promise has been made by the Lord Jesus Christ that by that burning we should know concerning the truth of his work, and we have that burning in our souls and know the truth has been revealed.

We want help, that we may deliver the message that has been committed into our hands. May there be ways and means found to give the help, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER ELIAS S. WOODRUFF*President of the Western States Mission*

It is a very great pleasure to return and associate with friends and with Latter-day Saints in our Conference, and I sincerely trust that while I occupy this position the Lord will bless me as he has done my brethren.

President McMurrin has uttered the thoughts, the hopes, and the desires of every mission president, I am sure. It has been a matter of great concern to each of us to see our missionary numbers dwindle as they have within the last eight or nine months. It has been a difficult matter to so dispose of our missionaries as to take care of the various fields of labor in which their services are required. It has been necessary and essential that we get local elders to help us, as far as we possibly can. I am aware of the fact that in securing the help of these local brethren and sisters we are merely adding to the faith and integrity of our own people, and adding to their ability to assist us at all times in the future; and perhaps in that respect the dearth of missionaries may have had a compensating effect. But there is a great need for missionaries to carry the word, to spread our literature, to bear their testimony to the people; and there are many people who seem to be willing to at least listen.

The power of the Lord is manifest in the missions. I know that in the Western States Mission we have had many favors at his hands. There have been some manifestations of his power that have thrilled and delighted us.

I recently mentioned, in a report to my brethren, two important happenings. I think you might enjoy hearing of them.

Over in Lincoln, Nebraska, a young missionary sister was distributing tracts with her companion; her companion on one side of the street, she on the other. She came to the door of a woman who invited her in, with the understanding that she would listen to her only while she continued her ironing. The woman said: "I am too busy to listen to you unless you talk to me while I iron." So the sister went in, took a chair and sat down. Pretty soon the ironing stopped. The woman pulled the plug out of the electric iron, stood the iron on its end, drew up a chair, and sat down in front of our missionary sister, and said to her: "What is there about you that is different from any one I ever saw before?" This sister, of course, was unable to answer her, for she was not aware of any difference. The woman said: "Why, you are surrounded by a halo of light. I have never seen that before in my life." So our young missionary sister tried to explain to her that sometimes the Lord's blessings were manifest, and the Holy Spirit which surrounded his servants might be seen by those who had the gift of seeing. She was so interested and so astonished that after a little while, hearing in the conversation something about our Primaries, she asked Sister Goodliffe: "What is the Primary?" Sister Goodliffe explained to her what our Primaries are. The woman said: "I am the mother of nine children. Will you hold a Primary in my home?" So today, once a week, the two sisters in Lincoln, Nebraska, go to this good woman's home, and they hold a Primary with her children and the neighbors' children that are invited in.

We have been so short of missionaries that it became necessary to take the sister missionaries out of Council Bluffs. We had the spectacle or the experience of a pair of elders holding six Primaries every week, in place of the sisters. One would smile, perhaps, to think of that, and yet they have been quite successful in their efforts to tell stories and entertain the children after the manner of Primary teaching. We are hoping that we may soon have two sisters that we can send back in there to continue that work. They do it so much better than the elders.

Upon another occasion, speaking of the power of the Lord and the manifestation of his goodness, two elders in northern New Mexico, while going through the country for the purpose of visiting the scattered Saints, came into a community where two or three families of Saints resided, and began to administer the ordinance of baptism for their children. One little fellow who applied for baptism was nine years of age. He had been crippled from his infancy with an affliction in his knee of such a character that whenever his knee was placed in cold water he suffered excruciating pain. His mother said: "No; no, you can't be baptized. You couldn't stand it." But the little fellow pleaded. He wanted to be baptized. The elders were asked: "Shall we baptize him?" and of course they hardly knew what to say. They naturally left the matter to the parents. Upon the earnest pleading of the boy he was permitted to enter the cold river water, for baptism, and to their astonishment there was no pain, and the little fellow came forth from the water rejoicing. Afterwards the elders laid their hands upon him, and invoked the blessings of the Lord upon him, and went their way. In three weeks time, on their way back to their quarters, they passed through this section of country, and naturally went to the home to see how the little boy was. When they arrived he was not in the house. The mother, replying to their inquiry as to his whereabouts, said: "He is out on the hill, looking for the cattle." The little fellow had been healed and was able to walk. Never before, in his life, had he been able to do so without pain or distress.

One of these two elders, at a recent conference held in Alamosa, Colorado, stood before the congregation to address them, and there was a manifestation of the power of the Lord upon him, so that he was lifted up beyond himself, and I have never heard any one speak better than he did that night. We knew that the power of the Lord was with him, but only one person in the congregation was conscious of an unusual manifestation. At the close of the meeting a little girl, less than fourteen years of age, came to the presiding elder and said: "All the while that Elder Tenney spoke there was a beautiful personage clothed in white standing to the right of him, and this personage's countenance was beautiful to behold. When Elder Tenney closed his remarks, he disappeared." We were naturally delighted and happy to know that the witness of the Holy Ghost and the power of the Lord do accompany the labors of our brethren and sisters.

I am sure that these manifestations are occurring everywhere, merely a sign of the favor of our Father to his servants.

It is a glorious privilege, my brethren and sisters, to be within the influence of such spiritual manifestations and blessings, and I count it not only an honor, but a joy and privilege to be thus favored. I am enjoying my labors. I have pleasure in reporting to you that all the missionaries, with one exception who are laboring in the Western States Mission at the present time, are quite well, and the one who is ill is recovering.

May the Lord bless you. May he bless you in your basket and in your store, that you will listen and heed the appeal that has been made to send us more missionaries, so that we can carry on the work of the Lord. This is my humble prayer, and I ask it in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER ORSON F. WHITNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

LIBERTY'S PERFECT LAW

The Gospel of Christ is the Perfect Law of Liberty. So says James the Apostle. But liberty does not mean license, nor does the Gospel stand for antiquated tradition or for present-day speculation, religious or irreligious. It embraces all truth, whether in science, philosophy, art, or any other department of knowledge. God himself is its Author, its Fountainhead, and divine revelation is the channel through which it flows.

PURPOSE OF THE GOSPEL

The Gospel is a great system of laws, a code of eternal principles, whereby the omnipotent and all-wise Creator, our Father in Heaven, proposes to lift fallen mankind, his sons and daughters, and not only save them, but exalt them to his glorious presence, and so far as they prove worthy and capable, share with them the empire of the universe.

NO TYRANNY

Freedom is the Gospel's sign manual. Tyranny has no place therein. There is no room in all the Government of God for the exercise of unrighteous dominion.

ETERNITY'S CONSTITUTION

The God we worship is no respecter of persons, but He is a respecter of men's rights, and a guardian of them—a fact clearly shown in the heaven-inspired Constitution of our country, and in the Gospel itself, which might be termed the Constitution of Eternity.

A FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE

Man's free agency, his right to worship as his conscience dictates, and to act in all things willingly and without compulsion—a principle handed down from the eternal past, where Lucifer was overthrown for seeking to destroy it—is an integral part of Liberty's Perfect Law. As such it found expression, a concrete illustration, and that by direct, divine command, when this Church was organized, one hundred years ago.

THE CONSENT OF THE GOVERNED

"Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." So says the Declaration of American Independence, and so says, in effect, the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The doctrine of common consent has been practiced in this Church from the beginning, and is shown forth in all the conferences and other important gatherings of the Lord's people. They are clearly within their rights when they vote for or against the officers nominated to preside over them, and when they approve or disapprove of any proposed measure vitally affecting their spiritual and temporal welfare.

JOSEPH AND OLIVER

The men who organized this Church, or who were most conspicuous in its organization, were Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. Joseph had looked upon the face of God; had gazed upon the Father and the Son; had received from them instructions concerning the then existing churches, from which he was commanded to hold himself aloof, and await the coming of the true Church, which was about to reappear, and in the establishment of which he was to be the chief human instrument. Oliver had been with Joseph in the work of translating the Book of Mormon, assisting him as copyist or scribe. He had shared with the Prophet the honor of receiving the restored priesthoods—the Aaronic and the Melchizedek; the former under the hands of John the Baptist, the latter by the subsequent personal ministration of the Apostles, Peter, James and John. The foremost of these heavenly messengers, John the Baptist, had told Joseph and Oliver that they were to be, respectively, the First and Second Elders of the Church; and had directed them to baptize each other as a preliminary to other important proceedings soon to follow.

In the first, second and third chapters of the History of the Church, Volume One—Joseph Smith's autobiography—the Prophet tells his own story of these wonderful events; and they are also recorded in a more recently published Church History—the splendid product of the able pen of President B. H. Roberts.

AN AMERICAN CHURCH

Speaking of the word of the Lord that came to him and his co-laborer in the farmhouse of Peter Whitmer, Sr., at Fayette, Seneca County, N. Y., a word directing them to ordain each other to the office of Elder, the Prophet says:

"We were, however, commanded to defer this our ordination until such time as it should be practicable to have our brethren, who had been and who should be baptized, assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers, or not."

An American Church, truly, manifesting at the very hour of its birth the sublime democratic doctrine: "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." And truly did Joseph Smith, God's prophet, show himself a real and true American when, at a later period, in answer to a question put to him, as to how he managed to govern a community made up of so many different nationalities, with all their varied languages, customs and traditions, he replied: "I teach them correct principles, and they govern themselves."

GOD AND THE PEOPLE

Let it not be supposed, however, that this recognition of "government of the people, by the people, for the people"—as Lincoln expressed it—shuts God out of the question. It may do so in the mind of a godless politician, or a pseudo, make-believe Christian, but not in the mind of a true Latter-day Saint or a Christian of genuine stamp. The United States is a republic, in which the people are looked upon as the one source of political power. The Church of Christ is a theodemocracy, in which God speaks and the people say amen! It is the Church of God and his people, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Obedient to the divine mandate spoken to them in Father Whitmer's humble home, Joseph and Oliver took steps to ascertain whether or not their brethren would sanction their ordination as Elders of the Church and were willing to come under their spiritual tutelage.

NOT YET QUALIFIED

What!—exclaims one. After these men had communed with heavenly beings and received from them commandments for their guidance; after receiving divine authority to preach the Gospel, administer its ordinances, and establish once more on earth the long absent Church of Christ! After all this must they go before the people and ask their consent to organize them and preside over them as a religious body? Yes, that was precisely the situation. Notwithstanding all those glorious manifestations, they were not yet fully qualified to hold the high positions unto which they had been divinely called. One element was lacking—the consent of the people. Until that consent was given, there could be no church with these people as its members and those men as its presiding authorities. The Great Ruler of all never did and never will foist upon any of his people, in branch, ward, stake or Church capacity, a presiding officer whom they are not willing to accept and uphold.

Happily for all concerned, the brethren associated with Joseph and Oliver on that memorable sixth of April of the year 1830, did sanction their ordination, did "decide by vote" to accept them as their "spiritual teachers."

GOD THE GIVER

But suppose it had been otherwise. Suppose the brethren in question had not been willing to accept the men whom the Lord had chosen, but had lifted their hands against instead of for them. What would have been the result? Would such action have taken from Joseph and Oliver their Priesthood or their gifts and powers as seers, prophets and revelators of the Most High? No. Any more than it would have blotted out the fact that Joseph had seen God, and that he and Oliver had communed with angels sent from Heaven to ordain them. Their brethren had not given them the Priesthood, had not made them prophets and seers, and they would have remained such regardless of any adverse action on the part of their associates. The Gospel, the Priesthood, the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven are not within the gift of the membership of the Church. They are bestowed by the Head of the Church, Jesus Christ, in person or by proxy, and without his consent no power on earth or under the earth could take them away.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE RESULTED

But if the vote had been unfavorable, this would have resulted: The brethren and sisters who were waiting to be admitted into the Church would have closed the door in their own faces, would have cut themselves off from a most precious privilege, would have deprived themselves of the inestimable benefits flowing from the exercise of the gifts and powers possessed by the men divinely commissioned to inaugurate this great Latter-day Work; and they could have gone elsewhere, and, under divine direction, have organized the Church of Christ among any people worthy to constitute its membership and willing that these men should be their leaders. But the vote was in their favor, thank the Lord! and we who are here today are among the beneficiaries of that act of faith and humility.

A DIVINE NECESSITY

Never, since this Church was organized, has it been without a divinely inspired Priesthood, with seers, prophets and revelators at its head; and it never will be without them. They are a divine necessity. Wanting such guides, such pilots, inspired from above, we would be floundering in the same troubled sea of doubt and uncertainty respecting religion, its sacred obligations and its vital problems, as are the peoples of the world around us. Without the gift of the Holy Ghost, to interpret the Scriptures and make manifest the things of God, we also would be putting our own private interpretations upon the revelations of divine truth, and be lost and wandering, as others are, in a maze of superstition and error.

LONGING FOR LIGHT

The churches of men are built upon books and traditions, handed down from the dubious past—what God said to other peoples in other times, under circumstances vastly different from our own. And mixed with these things are other things that God is said to have said—but never did say—and they are palmed upon the world as utterances of divine authority. In many lands God's children, millions of them, are yearning and longing for the Light, hungering and thirsting for pure Gospel truth, which they find not in man-made religions and philosophies; and blind leaders of the blind, turning their backs upon New Revelation, are endeavoring to feed a spiritually starving world with the mutilated menu card of a banquet ages old.

POWER OF THE PRIESTHOOD

No book, however good; no tradition, however venerable, is a sufficient guide for a progressive people on their way to the Celestial Kingdom. We have something better than books—far better than the best of them. We have divine authority, which constitutes the men holding it agents and representatives of the Almighty; and whatsoever they do by virtue of that authority, and under the inspiration of the spirit of their holy calling, is just as valid and binding and just as acceptable to God, as though he were present in person saying and doing what his servants say and do for him. That is what it means to bear the Priesthood.

THE PURE FAITH

We have the pure, primitive Christian Faith, and the spirit that interprets its sacred mysteries. Without that Spirit no man, whatever his intelligence, whatever his education and culture, can comprehend the Gospel or know Him whom to know is life eternal.

GOD'S WORK AND GLORY

This Church is not the work of man. Had it been man's creation it would have succumbed long ago to the assaults made upon it by the adversary of souls. It is not built upon the sand of ancient tradition or of modern theorization. It is founded upon the rock—Divine Revelation—God's gracious will and the glad consent of his people. Therefore is it destined to endure and to withstand every shock. The hosts of evil may hurl themselves against it, but they cannot prevail against it, nor shake the firm foundation upon which it stands as immovable and immutable as the throne of Him who sitteth in the midst of Eternity, and who has said in words that can never die: "My work and my glory is to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man!" Amen.

The hymn, "O Ye Mountains High," was sung by the congregation. The closing prayer was offered by Elder Joseph Christenson.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Saturday morning, October 4, 1930, at 10 o'clock, with President Heber J. Grant presiding.

As an opening number the congregation sang the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

Prayer was offered by Elder David I. Stoddard, President of the Union Stake.

The congregation then sang the hymn, "O Say, What is Truth?"

ELDER MELVIN J. BALLARD

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Ninety-nine years ago, about a year after the Church was organized, among other instructions that the Lord gave to his prophet for the guidance and comfort of the Church, were these words, found in the sixty-fourth Section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants:

"Wherefore, be not weary in well-doing, for ye are laying the foundation of a great work. And out of small things proceedeth that which is great."

THE FOUNDATION OF A GREAT WORK

Later in the same revelation:

"For, behold, I say unto you that Zion shall flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her.

"And she shall be an ensign unto the people, and there shall come unto her out of every nation under heaven.

"And the day shall come when the nations of the earth shall tremble because of her, and shall fear because of her terrible ones. The Lord hath spoken it."

As we listened to the review, as given by the President yesterday morning, of the changed conditions that have occurred in the attitude of the world toward the Church, and as we see the hundred years of progress that has been made, we have every reason to believe that the Lord is fulfilling these wonderful promises; that insignificant as was the beginning, those words of promise are fulfilled; that they were laying the foundation of a mighty work, and that out of small things great things will proceed. Evidence of that is clearly shown in the accomplishments of the past.

AN ENSIGN UNTO THE PEOPLE

But this promise goes farther than the foundation—it extends into the future, for "Zion shall arise and flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her; and people shall come from every nation." They have come from every nation. How could the prophet know, except he were inspired of the Lord, that this gospel message would touch the hearts of the children of men in all nations? They have fulfilled that prediction, and here they are assembled; and now comes a new charge to the Church: This Church "shall be an ensign unto the people."

My brethren and sisters, as we look at the future there seems very clearly, to me, in the Lord's program a definite purpose, that his work shall arise and shine. This is an age that is full of theories. Many churches have solutions for the present problems. There are many societies and organizations being promoted in the world for the solution of our present troubles among the nations, and dealing with individuals.

TRUE CHRISTIANITY'S OPPORTUNITY

It does seem to me that after these many years we have come to the place where we have an opportunity to be heard, and the world is willing to listen, and prejudice is so far removed that they are willing to give credit where credit is due. We have been more or less contending, for these hundred years, for the right to exist, to be heard and understood, and yet we have been drilling; we have been rehearsing. We are ready to come on the scene in a great drama, to demonstrate before the world that there is virility and strength and power in the Gospel of Jesus Christ to solve the problems of the world.

For all these centuries Christianity has been in the world, and has been helpless, very largely, to solve these problems, until the skeptic has concluded there is no power in Christianity, there is no virtue in the Gospel of Christ to solve these difficult problems that bring war and bloodshed and wickedness among men.

The Latter-day Saints recognize that there has been, during all these ages, some little truth, and many honest souls have struggled towards the light; but the world has been in a state of apostasy. The power of the Gospel has not been among men. The form of it, yes. So that true Christianity has not had a real test. It has not had a chance to demonstrate what it really could and will do.

POWER TO SOLVE THE WORLD'S PROBLEMS

This Church was established for the express purpose of proving to the world that there is power in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, power to solve the problems of the world, power to change the hearts of men, and bring to a distressed world its golden age, its peace, its prosperity, and its happiness. The dream that Daniel saw is to be realized, when the God of heaven is to establish a work that shall stand forever and fill the whole earth.

The prediction of the modern prophets has been to the effect that this was but the beginning of that great movement, and now that we are being given the opportunity to be heard, now is the time for the Latter-day Saints to rally to their standards, and demonstrate to a world that is in doubt and uncertainty, and full of skepticism, that there is power in the Gospel of Jesus Christ to change the hearts and the lives of men, and to influence the destinies of the nations towards that dream of the prophets of the past that a golden age would come, when all the distresses that have afflicted men would pass, and universal brotherhood would come, and peace be in the world.

Let me just touch one or two of the problems that this Gospel is solving and can solve—setting a pattern for the world.

THE LORD'S PLAN FOR HELPING THE POOR

Here is the problem of the world's poor. The Lord's plan for its solution, without humiliation to the poor, and a blessing to those who offer relief—the fast offerings given by the membership of the Church once a month, following abstinence from food for two meals. Fasting is a blessing in itself to the physical being, and a blessing to the spiritual being, because it tends, in its very nature, to give spiritual control over the physical being. Gratitude for the goodness of the Lord in providing food and life comes from that fast, also sympathy for the poor who are without food, and then too we are giving that which has been saved.

I know that there are many who do not seem to clearly understand what ought to be given—the equivalent of the meals saved. I should say that certainly ten cents a meal would be the minimum, or twenty cents per individual, per month. I wish that were the standard maintained by the membership of the Church. It is not up to that point, but even as well as the Latter-day Saints are performing that service, it is creating a large fund, and if we would observe it strictly it would create ample funds to care for the needs of the poor, and industrialize them.

The method of the Lord's plan is excellent, the giving to the bishop, who distributes to the poor. It is not my business to give to the poor. It is the business, in the Lord's Church, of the bishop to give. I give to the bishop, and he dispenses to the poor. Those who receive it do not know from whence it comes, and those who give it do not know to whom it goes. That is not letting your right hand know what your left hand is doing. I know of no other scheme by which the Lord's plan could be carried out better than that established in this Church. This plan would perpetually solve the problem of the poor, and I say industrialize them and make them independent economically.

The Lord's plan does not contemplate the pauperization of the poor. I remember my father being a bishop for forty years, and it was my privilege, as a boy, to carry the charities to the poor of that ward. I was impressed, when I went to the home of a widow who needed help, and found her knitting stockings; and when I went to a poor man who needed help, I discovered he was cutting the widow's wood, while she knitted stockings for the poor man who needed help. Everybody was encouraged to do something to help somebody else, even though they received charities.

I am told that on the tithing yard here east of us, when there wasn't work for worthy poor, there was a pile of rocks in one corner of that yard, that the worker that wanted a job was set to carry into another corner of the yard, and he received his pay at the end of the day. If on the following day there was a worthy applicant, but no work for him, he might be given the task of carrying the rocks back into the original corner, and he came to get his pay at night with the feeling that he had earned it.

That is the spirit of industrialization among the poor of the Church that has been with us from the beginning, and is to be carried on.

A SOLUTION FOR CAPITAL AND LABOR PROBLEMS

The problem that exists in the world between capital and labor can be solved in the Lord's plan of tithing. The struggle for the maintenance of one class over another is not the Lord's way of solving this problem. Let me read to you, from the fifty-sixth Section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, what the Lord himself has to say upon this subject:

"Woe unto you rich men, that will not give your substance to the poor, for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of visitation, and of judgment, and of indignation—the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved!

"Woe unto you poor men, whose hearts are not broken, whose spirits are not contrite, and whose bellies are not satisfied, and whose hands are not stayed from laying hold upon other men's goods, whose eyes are full of greediness, who will not labor with your own hands!

"But blessed are the poor"—yes, and the Lord could have added, blessed are the rich—"whose hearts are broken, and whose spirits are contrite, for they shall see the kingdom of God coming in power and great glory unto their deliverance."

The deliverance of the poor shall not be through any legislation. It will come through the Lord's plan, for they shall see the power of God coming in glory unto their deliverance, for the fatness of the earth shall be theirs.

"For behold, the Lord shall come, and his recompense shall be with him, and he shall reward every man, and the poor shall rejoice.

"And their generations shall inherit the earth from generation to generation, forever and ever."

That is the plan that will succeed. Neither in the control of the affairs of the world by the rich, nor by the poor as in Russia; neither element will succeed, from its own selfish point of view, but they must be brought together in the spirit of brotherhood, in the spirit of union of interest, and that will never be accomplished, only under the Lord's plan. Tithing is the first step toward that plan, where both the rich and the poor contribute according to their means, for the common welfare of each. There is no pew in this Church for the rich to sit in, and denied to the poor; no blessings extended to the wealthy in the temples of God, and denied to the poor. They share alike, and the rich man gets no more than the poor man. Tithing the Lord designated as a schoolmaster in this Church to bring us to the more perfect order of things that obtained in the days of Enoch, and every man that will come into the celestial kingdom of God will have to learn the lesson, to live not only under the schoolmaster, but ultimately to come to the United Order, or the Order of Enoch, wherein there shall be community of interest, and yet individual responsibility and opportunity, but such combination as will eliminate jealousy and hatred and envy in the hearts of men.

This Church is a hundred years nearer the solution of that problem than any other community in the world, and the Latter-day Saints should rally to the law of tithing and be prepared in time to demonstrate before the world the real genuine solution of this question.

A STANDARD FOR THE PERFECTION OF MEN'S LIVES

So with the Word of Wisdom, dealing with the perfection of men's lives by living up to a Gospel standard. Oh, it may be true that we do not maintain the prohibition law that has been enacted into the Constitution, but I hope it shall be preserved. If we abandon it we shall see worse times than we are seeing today. I believe that if this nation could persevere under the prohibition law for twenty-five years, we would raise a generation of men and women that would easily subscribe to that law, and that problem would be solved. But if this nation is not able to do that, and shall return to the old conditions, what of us?

The Lord gave to this Church a plan that will succeed when all the schemes of men shall fail. I recognize that you cannot legislate men into righteous living. That must come from the heart. Our plan contemplates the conversion of the hearts of men to an obedience to the Lord's plan, and to the strict observance of that revelation that enjoins upon us the obligation not only to refrain from the use of liquor, but from tea and coffee and tobacco, that are injurious to the physical being.

The Lord knew the needs of this fast-moving age, that we need the power that comes from observing the Word of Wisdom, if we shall endure under these strenuous conditions that are around us. Now is the opportunity for the Latter-day Saints to rally to that standard, and demonstrate, though the world may fail, through its legislation to correct this evil, that we will correct it by the conversion of men, and demonstrate the way for the world to follow after in the solution of that problem.

FOR THE ESTABLISHING OF PEACE

So with all the other problems. In this Gospel is the plan and the way by which peace can come, and war be abolished. If every person in the world had in his heart today the spirit that is in the hearts of these Latter-day Saints, you would not need a League of Nations, you would not need a court to limit armaments. It would be solved, because into the hearts of these Latter-day Saints has come the power of God, the gift and power of the Holy Ghost, that takes envy and malice and hatred out of the heart, and puts the love of men there. You could not think of one stake of Zion going to war with another. No. Although they come from the ends of the earth, the men of all nations live here in peace and in love. If that spirit could be extended to the ends of the earth, our problems would be solved.

Now is the opportunity for the Latter-day Saints to arise and shine.

As we enter into this second great period of the Church's history an opportunity comes to us, since we have the stage, and since the people of the world are willing to listen and give credit. Now is the time for us to rally to our standards and demonstrate the power there is in the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

God help us to see our opportunity and embrace it, and carry forward gloriously the Lord's purposes, until his work shall be consummated and become the glory of the earth, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Anticipating an invitation to speak during this Conference, and realizing that the speakers would be heard by a large number of people outside of this building, I prepared some notes that I might speak from, but I don't know that I shall use them.

GRATITUDE FOR BLESSINGS OF LORD

I want to say to the brethren and sisters that I am very happy in my membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and in the blessings of the Gospel which I enjoy in common with you. I am happy in your fellowship and association, and in the work that I have been honored to do in this Church.

The Lord has been good to us as a people, and he has been good to me as an individual. As I look back over my life and its experiences, I can see where the Lord has held me by the hand, as it were, and led me along the path of duty, shielding me from evil and wickedness that I might have indulged in to my everlasting sorrow and condemnation. I feel that it is as little as I can do to seek to know what the will of my Father in heaven is concerning me, and to do his will to the best of my ability. I believe that every member of this Church should feel the same. If we turn our thoughts back over our past lives, I feel sure that all of us will have occasion to rejoice in the fatherly care that has been given us, and the many blessings that have been showered upon us.

TESTIMONY REGARDING THIS WORK

I have passed the period of question or doubt, which comes into the lives of many people, and I do know of a surety, and have proven over and over again from the scriptures and by the application of reason and good sense, to my perfect satisfaction, that this work is true, so that I have no fear of any man being able to disprove it. I have lived the Gospel, in part, at least, so as to have the witness of the Spirit of God, and I do know, by the power of the Holy Ghost, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, and the Redeemer and Savior of this world.

I know that our Father in heaven lives, a glorified and immortal being, with all power—power to bless and power to save. And I know that this work is true, that in it is the saving power of God to those who will accept and obey it. I know, by sense of reason, that he who was the instrument in the hands of God in restoring this Gospel to earth, must have been and is a prophet of God.

NOT ACCEPTED IN THEIR OWN DAY

It is hard for the people of this day and time to accept Joseph Smith as a Prophet of God. It was ever so that the prophets were not generally accepted by the people of their time. The Scriptures relate that when Jesus was preaching in the synagogue in his own country, the people were astonished, and said:

"Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?"

"Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James and Joses, and Simon, and Judas?"

"And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things?"

"And they were offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country, and in his own house.

I have often wished that he had added, which I think he could have done with equal truth, "save in the day and time in which he lived."

"And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief." (Matt. 13:54-58.)

I firmly believe that the time will come when all men, as universally as they accept Jesus Christ to be the Savior of the world, will acknowledge Joseph Smith to have been a great prophet of God in these last days, in the dispensation of the fulness of times.

Brethren and sisters, that which I feel and know to be true, I believe that you, also, who are living your religion, feel and know to be true, by the same means.

THE FAITH OF OUR FATHERS

An impressive thought came to me this morning while we were singing the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

"We'll find the place which God for us prepared,
Far away in the West;
Where none shall come to hurt or make afraid—
There the Saints will be blessed. * * *

"And should we die before our journey's through,
Happy day! all is well!
We then are free from toil and sorrow too;
With the just we shall dwell."

These words express the feeling of our pioneer fathers and mothers in their deep trial when their faces were turned, as it were, from civilization toward the great unexplored West, bringing with them practically nothing but the Gospel, which was the dearest thing they had on earth; and with the hope that the Lord would inspire his leaders that they might find a place of refuge, safety and liberty, where they could worship the Lord according to the dictates of their consciences. They endured much sorrow and tribulation, and many died in the effort to make for us what we have here today.

OUR OBLIGATION

We are their successors in this work. We have inherited the blessings that they finally were able to enjoy. We are indebted to this work for all that we have, all that we hope to obtain. Are we going to carry on the work as faithfully and devotedly as did our pioneer parents, or are we lying down on the job? Are we fainting by the way? Or are we living our religion, and by so doing setting an example to the world worthy of their emulation, such as will cause them to glorify our Father in heaven by an investigation of that which has made us what we are, that is commendable, and perchance, by their embracing the Gospel and engaging with us in the furtherance of the Lord's work?

Do we ever consider that we are under obligation to our fellow men, that we are under obligation to the Church, as well as to ourselves? Do we consider that we are under obligation to our fathers and our mothers, who have suffered and endured so much for us? If we will not live our religion for our own soul's salvation, then we ought to do so for the sake of others, including our children, and our children's children who are coming after us.

PERTAINING TO OUR KINDRED DEAD

We have a responsibility pertaining to our kindred dead. The Prophet Joseph tells us, and it is on record, that the greatest responsibility that God has laid upon us is that of looking after our kindred dead. Until the Church was organized, and there were temples built, and an opportunity for the living to do something for the dead, there seemed to be no occasion for our forebears to look to us. There was nothing we could do for them. But with the introduction of the Gospel, and the building of temples, the Lord sent his servant, Elijah, as predicted by Malachi he would do, who conferred the keys upon Joseph and Oliver of the turning of the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers. From that day, the 3rd of April, 1836, when in the Kirtland temple that wonderful manifestation was had, there has been a spirit and a desire among the children of men on the earth, not only those in the Church, but those outside as well, to know of their kindred dead. Men and women of education and wealth are expending their fortunes and their time in the search for knowledge of a genealogical character, and in the printing of histories of their families. Governments have made provision for the keeping of records, just such statistics as we need in order to perform this temple work for our dead. Genealogical libraries have been established all through the land, and these family histories, and other genealogical information, are accessible to the Latter-day Saints.

The Lord is using those who are not of us in the furtherance of his purposes and in helping us, that we may more fully do our duty by our kindred dead.

SERVING A TWO-FOLD PURPOSE

Are we making use of this information, and are we going into the temples of the Lord to do this work? Or if we are not able ourselves to go, are we expending some of our means in the employment of others to go through the temple for our dead?

All the ordinances administered in the temples are performed without any charge to the individual. Those who come there can attend to those labors without any charge whatever. If you cannot come it will be necessary for you, in the endowment work of the temple, to have some one represent you.

In these temples we have some of our aged pioneers who have worn themselves out, as it were, in helping to make this country inhabitable, beautiful and prosperous as we find it today. Their bodies are broken but their spirits are alive and awake as much as ever, and they find in the temples a work that they can do just as well as can younger people, who are more vigorous in a physical way. Some of these people have nothing to live upon except the mere pittance which is given them in compensation for the work they do for others in the temples. If you cannot go to the temple yourselves, send to the temple a little money with a record of your dead and these good people will do the work for you, and you will not only be redeeming your kindred dead but you will by so doing be helping to support the worthy poor of the Church. We had a letter come to us a few days ago from a man here in the city who is interested in genealogical and temple work, and he suggested that in these times, when there are so many of our people out of employment, men who are worthy to go to the temple, it would be an opportune time to make known to the people of this Church that if they would furnish some means now to get their temple work done, these unemployed people would receive a great blessing in being employed to do that work. That, I think, is a suggestion worthy of consideration, as we are looking about us for something to do to alleviate this distressing condition of the unemployed.

ACCORDING TO OUR KNOWLEDGE

Brethren and sisters, are we living our religion to the best of our knowledge? I want to say to you that no man can be saved in the kingdom of God without knowledge, knowledge of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, of the way of salvation, and no man can be condemned without a knowledge of this Gospel. The Lord has made provision that every child of his that comes to maturity in life shall hear and have the privilege of accepting the Gospel either here or hereafter. When the ordinance work is done for those who died without a knowledge of the Gospel, it becomes effective for their salvation upon their acceptance of it.

Are we, brethren and sisters, who know the truth, living according to the light which we have received, so as to not fall under condemnation? I think I can promise the Latter-day Saints, in truth, and in the name of the Lord, if you, my brethren and sisters, will live up to the light of the Gospel as you have received it, you will obtain a salvation in the kingdom of God. If you shall be disappointed and condemned in the end it will be because you have not lived up to the light and knowledge which you have of the Gospel. I wonder if our Father in heaven is going to be disappointed in some of us, his children, when we return, having had the opportunities the Gospel has afforded us here in life. I wonder if we will be disappointed in ourselves, if our parents will be disappointed in us, or our children who come after us.

This is something, brethren and sisters, that I think we should consider most seriously. Our time is brief at longest here in which to prepare for the life which is to come. We cannot afford to waste our time. We cannot afford to trifle with sacred things and sacred duties. The sin of neglect is unjustifiable. "He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not is in sin before the Lord, and he that knoweth to do right and doeth it not is in sin."

OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO TEACH OTHERS

Our obligation is not only to ourselves but to our fellow men here in the world. We mustn't overlook that. If we be not called to go abroad and preach the Gospel, there is plenty for us to do at home. The spirit of this work is, every man to his neighbor; he that is warned, to warn his neighbor. Our responsibility to teach the Gospel to others is set forth in Ezekiel, 3rd Chapter, 20th verse:

"When a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumblingblock before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand."

Every man and woman that in sincerity has received the Gospel was at the time of entering the Church a righteous man or woman. Have we held them in righteousness?

The ministry of the Church at home has a responsibility of completing the conversion and holding these men and women. Are we doing it in an organized way, as effectively as we can? Are we, as individuals, doing our part to our neighbors within the Church? If we see men and women neglecting their duties in the Church and we know that they are in danger of losing that which would be more precious to them than life, do we give them a note of warning in the spirit of kindness and brotherly love, and reach out a hand to help them, and bring them back and put them in the way of religious duty? Are we doing our full duty by our fellow men?

Brethren and sisters, these are questions that we may well ask ourselves, and then answer them to our satisfaction, by living up to our obligations and to the light and knowledge of the Gospel which we have.

We cannot accomplish this alone, but if we seek the Lord with desire in our hearts to live our religion, and to do his will, he will help us so that we will be able to come off victorious, conquerors of ourselves, conquerors of evil, devoted adherents and advocates of the truth of God. May he so bless us and save us in his kingdom, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

At the request of President Grant the congregation arose and sang, "God Moves in a Mysterious Way."

ELDER J. GOLDEN KIMBALL

Of the First Council of Seventy

I intend to be reminiscent in what I shall say on this occasion.

I have frequently called your attention to the fact that under President John Taylor I was permitted to fill a mission in the Southern States, in 1883 and '84, under the presidency of Elder B. H. Roberts. They were trying times, and the elders, as a whole, traveled without purse and without scrip.

In 1892 I was again appointed, under President Wilford Woodruff, to preside over the Southern States Mission. It was during that period of time that I found God; as my father said: God answered my prayers, and isn't that a pretty good evidence that God lives? My testimony was fixed and fast, and what I knew I learned by obedience and through suffering.

I take the position that knowledge cannot be knowledge without experience, so that what I know through the influence of the Holy Ghost—for I have heard that still, small voice—I know to my perfect satisfaction. There is no question of a doubt in my mind as to the truth of this work, and any time in my life that I can be convinced that Joseph Smith was not a prophet of God, then I will question the truth of this work. But Joseph Smith to me is a prophet, and there is hardly a Kimball living in the flesh today—of the first generation—notwithstanding we were very young when our father died, that did not have burned into his soul as a child that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the living God: that Brigham Young was his successor; that he too was a great prophet.

Now, it is along that line that I desire to occupy your time for a few moments, and to do so I expect to forecast from dead prophets. I shall not undertake to quote from memory as it is very difficult for me to quote correctly.

The prophet Joel said—we elders in that day on many occasions quoted this prophetic saying:

"And it shall come to pass afterward that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy; your old men shall dream dreams; your young men shall see visions."

I think one of the greatest pieces of philosophy in the Bible is: "Where there is no vision the people perish." And the Prophet Joseph Smith left with us this statement: "Where there are no gifts there is no faith."

I further read in the Bible:

"When a prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken; but the prophet has spoken presumptuously, Thou shalt not be afraid of him."

Jesus himself testified that "a prophet hath no honor in his own country."

I claim not to be a prophet, but I am a son of a prophet, and I expect to give you evidence—whether you question the truth of it or not—that shall be left with you—that Heber C. Kimball was a prophet of God. President Brigham Young on more than one occasion said: "Heber is my prophet, and I love to hear him prophesy."

In May, 1868—that is sixty-two years ago—he said:

"After a while the gentiles will gather in Salt Lake City by the thousands, and this will be among the wicked cities of the world."

He said:

"A spirit of speculation and extravagance will take possession of the Saints, and the results will be financial bondage."

He said:

"An army of elders will be sent to the four quarters of the earth, to search out the righteous and warn the wicked of coming events."

"All kinds of religions will be started, and miracles performed that will deceive the very elect, if such a thing were possible."

"Persecution comes next, and all Latter-day Saints will be tested to the limit."

"Many will apostatize, and others will stand still, not knowing what to do."

"Before the temple reaches the square our brethren will be imprisoned, until the penitentiary shall be full, and some of them will be removed to other penitentiaries."

"Mothers would weep for their husbands, and children would cry for their fathers: Some would die, and sorrow would fill the hearts of the Latter-day Saints."

"When the temple roof is on, the persecution will lessen, but when the temple is completed the power of the Evil One will be shut out."

"The prayers of the Saints will then be heard. The sick will be taken there and healed."

"The Spirit of God will rest upon the people, and work for the dead will be continued night and day."

"The judgments of God will be poured out upon the wicked, to the extent that our elders from far and near will be called home; or in other words, the Gospel will be taken from the gentiles, and later on will be carried to the Jews."

"The western boundaries of the State of Missouri will be swept so clean of its inhabitants that as President Young tells us, 'when we return to that place there will not be as much as a yellow dog to wag his tail.'"

"Before that day comes, however, the Saints will be put to the test that will try the very best of them."

"The pressure will become so great that the righteous among us will cry unto the Lord day and night until deliverance comes."

In 1856—that is seventy-four years ago—a small group of friends convened in the house of the Lord, called the Endowment House. The conversation was about the isolated condition of the Latter-day Saints.

"Yes," said Brother Heber, "we think we are secure here in the chambers of these everlasting hills, where we can close the doors of the canyons against mobs and persecutors, the wicked and the vile, who have always beset us with violence and robbery, but I want to say to you, my brethren, the time is coming when we will be mixed up in these now peaceful valleys to that extent that it will be difficult to tell the face of a Saint from the face of an enemy against the people of God."

"Then is the time to look out for the great sieve, for there will be a great sifting time, and many will fall.

"For I say unto you there is a test, a Test, a TEST coming."

He further said:

"This Church has before it many close places through which it will have to pass before the work of God is crowned with glory.

"The difficulties will be of such a character that the man or woman who does not possess a personal knowledge or witness will fall. If you have not got this testimony, you must live right and call upon the Lord, and cease not until you obtain it.

"Remember these sayings: The time will come when no man or woman will be able to endure on borrowed light. Each will have to be guided by the light within themselves. If you do not have the knowledge that Jesus is the Christ, how can you stand?"

Do you believe it?

President George Q. Cannon said, after Heber C. Kimball's death: "Heber Chase Kimball was one of the greatest men of this age."

He continued: "No man, perhaps, Joseph Smith excepted, who has belonged to the Church in this generation, ever possessed the gift of prophecy to a greater degree than he."

On the morning of the 22nd of June, 1868, he died.

At the funeral President Brigham Young said: "Heber was a man of as much integrity, I presume, as any man who ever lived on the earth—a man of faith—a man of benevolence—a man of truth."

On the evening of January 12th, 1862, the Lord made it known to Heber C. Kimball that he should not be removed from his place as First Counselor while he lived in the flesh.

Now my brethren and sisters, I am here to testify that the spirit of prophecy is in this Church. Any man who has a testimony that Jesus is the Christ has the spirit of prophecy, and I know that we have living prophets. Whenever the Lord desires, and it is his will to speak through his prophets, I have no fear and no doubt as far as I am individually concerned that they have the courage and the faith to speak the words of God. At a time when the people were suffering, when the people were almost naked, when everything looked desolate, as if they were forsaken—

"Heber C. Kimball, filled with the spirit of prophecy in a public meeting declared to the astonished congregation that within a short time States goods would be sold in the city of Great Salt Lake cheaper than in New York and that the people would be abundantly supplied with food and clothing."

"I don't believe a word of it," said Apostle Charles C. Rich; and he voiced the sentiment of nine-tenths of those who had heard the astounding declaration."

"On resuming his seat he remarked to the brethren that he was afraid he had missed it this time. But they were not his own words and He who had inspired them knew how to fulfil. The occasion for the fulfilment of this remarkable prediction was the unexpected advent of the gold-hunters on their way to California. The discovery of gold in that land had set on fire, as it were, the civilized world and hundreds of richly laden trains now began pouring across the continent on their way to the new Eldorado. Salt Lake valley became the resting place. Thus as the Prophet Heber had predicted, States Goods were actually sold in the streets of Great Salt Lake City cheaper than they could have been purchased in the city of New York."

Now, brethren, that is how I feel about it. I take pride in being a son of my father and as long as I live I shall never fail to honor my father and his successors, and try to be as loyal and true and steadfast in the faith as they have been. I am the only one that can destroy my faith in this work. God bless you. Amen.

ELDER DAVID A. SMITH

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

After one hundred years, and then what?

During the past year we have been dwelling largely in the past, and it seems to me that when we look upon the work of our fathers, our mothers, our grandfathers and grandmothers, and view their great accomplishments, there can be no question that this Church has grown in a wonderful manner. No organization could make such a growth other than through the help, inspiration and leadership of an all-wise Father. As I view these accomplishments I wonder if we are not, to a certain extent, living now too much in the past, and not enough upon the past, for the experiences and accomplishments of the past should be a tower of strength to urge us on to greater individual effort.

I heard a brother who was preaching a sermon on tithing say that his father overpaid his tithing and some of his children were drawing on it to this day. Surely such action cannot be considered as a growth. How can we use the past to help us build for the future? Truly they showed the way. Are we doing our part to carry on? If so, there need be very little concern for the future. If we have a clear picture of the struggles of the past one hundred years, and understand the principles that made it possible for them to build such a foundation, we should go on with a sincere desire to build for our future welfare and salvation.

One of the writers in the Book of Mormon tells us:

"For behold, this life is the time for men to prepare to meet God; yea, behold the day of this life is the day for men to perform their labors. And now, as I said unto you before, as ye have had so many witnesses, therefore, I beseech of you that ye do not procrastinate the day of your repentance until the end; for after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness wherein there can be no labor performed. Ye cannot say, when ye are brought to that awful crisis, that I will repent, that I will return to my God. Nay, ye cannot say this; for that same spirit which doth possess your bodies at the time that ye go out of this life, that same spirit will have power to possess your body in that eternal world. For behold, if ye have procrastinated the day of your repentance even until death, behold, ye have become subjected to the spirit of the devil, and he doth seal you his; therefore, the Spirit of the Lord hath withdrawn from you, and hath no place in you, and the devil hath all power over you; and this is the final state of the wicked."

And so I say we should be gravely concerned with today. If so, tomorrow will take care of itself, and the work entrusted to us will be nobly done, and our reward assured.

Brother McMurrin made a plea for more missionaries. Our mission presidents are constantly doing that. There isn't a month that their reports do not contain pleas for more help. It is marvelous what this people are doing, many even sacrificing the comforts of life to provide for their children who are engaged in missionary work, but how many make an equal effort to prepare them for this service before they leave for the mission field. I am sure better preparation which must come through active service will go a long way to meet the demands made upon us.

Yesterday, sitting in a group in this tabernacle, we had eighty-seven young men and women who next week will leave for the mission field. They are young and inexperienced. They have a testimony of the Gospel, but they are not altogether sure of themselves at the present time. They are anxious to be engaged in a good cause. Last night at seven o'clock I met with them, this being the last period of their day's work. Their first class yesterday was at nine o'clock in the morning. They were excused at nine forty-five and came here in a body to attend this Conference. They were here in the afternoon, and went from that meeting to another class; had a luncheon period, and then to another class. At the close of their class at eight o'clock last night I asked them to select a song to close, for we always begin and close our day's work with song and prayer. The song first suggested seemed to me, for the moment, a bit of irony. It was announced as "Do not weary by the way." As we sang the song, I stood facing that group. I tried to detect such a feeling on their part. I found everyone singing—not just the words, for all were singing as we can sing only when touched by the Spirit of God. When the prayer of dismissal had been offered after nine hours of religious service, these young people, whom you have sent from your homes to go into the mission field, gathered around me with more questions, untiring in their effort to gain more information.

We shall not be greatly concerned for them while they are in the mission field, for they are going out with a purpose, and God is with them and watching over them, and will hear and answer their prayers and our prayers in their behalf, and as long as they continue in that service in faith, his blessings will rest upon them, and they will return home to bear testimony of his goodness, and to the truth of the Gospel.

Then is the time when we should be gravely concerned for them, for we find many times these young missionaries come home and find themselves in the condition, in a measure, that the Savior found himself in, as related to us by Brother Richards today. Speaking of Jesus:

"And when he was come unto his own country, he taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works? Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things? And they were offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country, and in his own house. And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief."

Let us compare the faith of these, his own people, with the faith of one who was despised by the Jews.

"So Jesus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum. When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought him that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death. Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe. The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die. Jesus saith unto him Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way. And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth. Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him. So the father knew that it was at the same hour, in the which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: and himself believed, and his whole house."

I am wondering if in Israel today we are not lacking just a little bit in faith. During the last summer we received many reports saying: "We have been unable to do anything with our priesthood work. It is vacation period, and everybody feels that they should have a vacation from church work."

I do not feel to criticize any who have a desire to take a vacation, for a change and rest is necessary at times, but even then they must have food if their physical welfare is to be preserved. But I have yet to find a good reason for taking a vacation from spiritual work, and from that association which comes to those who are humbly seeking spiritual food. On the contrary, as I view the situation, I find that those who feel that it is necessary to take a vacation from church work seem to forget that spiritual food is necessary to preserve the spiritual body and without it the spiritual body begins to die for lack of nourishment. That death may come slowly or, if sin overtake them, it may come quickly, and I believe one of the greatest dangers that we have confronting us is the sin of indifference which surely leads to spiritual death.

There is no time for vacation in this service. God is working constantly. He requires that his children upon whom the priesthood has been conferred labor in spirit constantly, for the spirit of God will not always strive with man. We cannot lay this work aside and take it up as we feel inclined, for if we hope to succeed we must work daily, hourly and every minute. We must so live that these temples which God has given to us and which we call our physical being will be kept clean and a fit dwelling place for his spirit. That can best be done through associations provided through our gatherings, such as priesthood and sacramental meetings where spiritual uplift is engaged in.

This condition is manifest in our missionaries who, after having devoted all of their time to the spiritual, come home strong in spirit.

We should be concerned for these young people who return from the mission field, because I find, or I think I find that sometimes we do not have a full sense of responsibility regarding their future welfare. It can be pictured to you in this statement. I heard a father say to his boy, who had just returned from the mission field: "Come on now, son, get off your good clothes and get into your old ones and get to work. You have been loafing long enough."

Most of them don't loaf in the mission field, but we force them to loaf sometimes when they come home, because we fail to feed them, to give them that spiritual food that kept them active while in the mission field. And so they die spiritually, and we wonder why. Don't blame them. It isn't their fault. It isn't their choosing. They would have it otherwise.

Now, what of the future? I must not talk longer, but let me give just a little illustration that perhaps will show you what can be done. After the close of the past year, when bishops were sending their annual reports to the Presiding Bishop's Office, one bishop came with his, and as he turned to leave the office, he waved his hand to me. I returned his salute and beckoned him to come into the side office where I was, for he had a broad smile on his face and seemed unusually happy. He stepped to the door, and stated that he had no desire to disturb me. He just wanted to say "hello." I suggested that he seemed happy and asked how he managed to get that way, for it is unusual to find a bishop in that frame of mind at that time of the year. He answered that he was happy because the people over whom he was presiding were helping him. He stated that he had been bishop two years. He said:

"When I started in to get acquainted with the people of my ward I found it was very difficult to make much headway with the older people. They were fixed in their habits. They were doing some church work, but not much. Most of them were willing to let someone else do the work. Their activity record was on a par with their spiritual condition. We decided to take up a labor with the younger people. We reorganized the Aaronic Priesthood quorums, conferred with those who were active, and they helped us outline a campaign to encourage greater activity. We sent them out to bring in those who were inactive. They responded with such a spirit of good will that soon every boy who held the Aaronic Priesthood was in attendance at meetings. We decided to take up as our first major activity a campaign for the year on tithing. Our first duty was to convert ourselves. Every phase of the subject was discussed. All agreed to work with a desire to have every person holding the Aaronic Priesthood a full tithepayer. We gave quorums credits based on numbers. Some complained that we were bribing them, in offering credits for the payment of tithing, but nevertheless it was a means of encouraging them. They brought in their five cents, their ten cents, their twenty cents each week as they earned money. After a while the parents gave more thought to their tithing, and last year, when I came in with my tithing settlement, we had double the tithing of the year before and more than double the number of active members, due largely to the activity of these young men whom we taught to observe this principle. And this year we have increased the tithing of our ward just as much as we increased it last year and the ward members are responding to every call, and that is why I am happy to come in here with my final report."

I could mention many such experiences.

My brethren and sisters, what of tomorrow? Tomorrow may never come, to some of us; but may the blessings of God rest upon us today, that we may be touched with the power and influence of his Holy Spirit. May we have power to see clearly the purpose of this great work; may we see clearly the niche in which we belong, that we may fit in and do that which is required of us to the best of our ability, for there is work for all to do. We belong to the most wonderful organization in all the world. Men are called to positions of responsibility, and after a time are released, and take their places in the ranks that others may gain experience through leadership. There are no hard feelings, jealousy, or contention, for men serve wherever they are called to serve. They do not seek honor, and serve with fear and trembling, happy to be engaged in such a noble cause.

May we continue in that spirit. May we have love in our hearts for each other. May we work for each other, and to the end that God's purposes shall be brought about, and when the time comes for us to lay down the part we are called to play, I sincerely trust it will be said of us: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Enter into my rest." May God bless us, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I trust that the few moments I occupy I may enjoy the Spirit that comes from our Heavenly Father, that gives to us power to think, to reason, and to teach.

This Conference has been one of great interest to me. My mind has been directed toward so many things that pertain to our work. I have been making notes during the entire period of our meetings, up to now, notes that I trust I may use to refresh my mind when I am in the conferences of the Church, because very many times a suggestion or an idea directs to a portion of the scripture, and when we read it it sounds a little different from what we thought it did, because it has been a long time since we read it, perhaps.

A BLESSED PEOPLE

We are a blessed people. I know of no other people in the world who have more reason to be grateful than we. We have all that the world has in the way of information, education, culture, refinement; and besides that we have an understanding of the purpose of life: we have the privilege of being identified with the Church of the Lamb of God.

We are wonderfully blessed in the assurance that the Lord gives to us of eternal life, and when we compare the information that we have obtained with that which many of our Father's children in the world have, we are made to realize that much will be expected of us, because unto us much has been given.

It is unique these days to belong to a church, wherein those who are members believe that the Lord speaks through their leaders. When we are instructed by the President of this Church, we believe he tells us what the Lord would have us do. To us it is something more than just the advice of man. We believe that, and it searches our souls, and we are prompted to renew our determination to be what God would have us be.

I have rejoiced in the fine testimonies that have been borne, in the instructions that we have received. I have had pleasure in shaking hands with many of my brethren and sisters here. These things give me joy, and help to make my life worth living.

While Brother Kimball was speaking of the prophecies of his father, I thought how many men there have been in this Church who have listened to the voices of the prophets of God, and who have lived to see the fulfilment of those prophecies. No other organization that I know of, in the world, lays claim to any such gifts or blessings.

INVESTIGATORS IN THE MISSIONS

I have just returned from the Northern States Mission where I had the pleasure of visiting a number of our larger branches. The development there is very pleasing to me. I have never been in the Northern States before when we had so many comfortable chapels as we have now that have been dedicated to the Lord, and I have never been there before when there was as great a percentage of investigators in the congregations as at this time.

The people of the world are becoming alarmed, but the alarm is only just beginning. Unless the men and women of this nation, and of all nations, turn unto the Lord and keep his commandments, they cannot hope to continue in his favor; and if his favor is removed from them, then the adversary will do his work. I rejoiced in my visit in the East, to find so many people investigating the Gospel, people who after meeting would say: "I have never attended one of your churches before, but I thought I would like to come, and have enjoyed the service." I have in mind a woman and her husband, who came up after the meeting in Detroit. They had never before attended a Latter-day Saint meeting. This woman was delighted to find that there were people on the earth who believe as we do. She listened to the humble missionaries bear their testimony and preach the Gospel, not with great learning, but with the power that is more potent than university training, the witness of our Heavenly Father that they spoke the truth.

We cannot hope to convince the world of the truth of the Gospel if we depend upon the book-learning that we obtain in schools, but we can obtain all that they possess, and then if the Lord continues to bless us we can go on, reaching higher points, understanding greater things that are not understood except by the power of the Lord.

THE PARABLE OF THE WEDDING FEAST

I have opened to the twenty-second chapter of St. Matthew's account of the Savior's teaching, and will read this particular parable:

"And Jesus answered and spake unto them again by parables, and said, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,

"And sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come.

"Again he sent forth other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage.

"But they made light of it, and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise:

"And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.

"But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.

"Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy.

"Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

"So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

"And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment:

"And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless.

"Then saith the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

"For many are called, but few are chosen."

OUR MINISTRY

How much this is like the world today! God has restored his Gospel. He has sent his servants into the world. They have called all men to repentance, as far as they could reach them; have not reviled them or been unkind, but have invited them to come into the wedding feast that the Lord has prepared, and in many cases they have been ignored. People have been too busy to hear the message. The invitation meant nothing to them. They didn't believe in what was being done, and in some cases they have ill-treated those who had come to them in kindness and love.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ is a gospel of peace. It is not a gospel of contention. We are instructed by the Savior to go into all the world and teach this Gospel unto every creature. That commandment has been given to the Church in this day. We do not go out in our own name or in our own strength, but we offer to our Father's children these precious truths, that are essential for them to understand in order that they may gain the blessing that our Heavenly Father intends.

Thousands of our sons have gone into the world. Many have been kindly received, and they have explained the truth, and this mission is still going forward. The feast has been prepared. Our Heavenly Father has provided what is necessary: it has not been done by the wisdom of man. He has sent us, his representatives, into the world, not to drive or coerce, but to invite. "Come follow me," is what the Savior said, "And I will give you peace." That is what the Gospel teaches, and that is our ministry.

WITHOUT A WEDDING GARMENT

But I am thinking of another group. Here was a man who came into the wedding feast, and when the time came the king or the master saw that he didn't have a wedding garment on. He had ignored the importance of it, apparently. He had come in, not prepared, expecting to participate. He had come to the feast—they had all been bidden to the feast, but I assume that they were supposed to know that only those would be admitted who were properly clothed, and this man was amazed when the question was asked him why he was there in that condition.

The world seems to think that they can come whenever they are ready. Our Father's children do not understand that there is some preparation to be made. The adversary has so deceived them as to make them believe that no preparation is necessary, anything will do, but in this message that the Savior gave in a parable to his associates we are informed that there must be some preparation, and without that preparation no one will be permitted to partake of the more precious gifts of our Heavenly Father. That applies to the membership of this Church who have an idea that because they have been invited, and because their names appear upon the record among those who have been called, there is nothing more for them to do; men who have been blessed in a financial way; women who have become prominent in social life. They have forgotten the Lord and are not preparing for the feast to which he has invited them.

NECESSARY PREPARATION FOR THE FEAST

Our Heavenly Father intends that we shall prepare for the wedding feast or we will be excluded. He expects us to continue to store our minds with the truth, and to disseminate that truth as opportunity offers among all his children. The fact that our names appear upon the Church records is no guarantee that we will find our place in the celestial kingdom. Only those who live worthy to be members of that kingdom shall find place there.

In the midst of the unsettled condition, the uncertainty that is in the world, if there ever was a time when we should examine ourselves, to find out if we are doing what the Lord would have us do, it is today; if there ever was a time when we should be sure that we are in the pathway of eternal life, it is now. We can't slight these opportunities. God will not be mocked. When he has offered to us a gift, when he has placed within our reach a blessing, when he has invited us to partake of a feast and we ignore it, we may be sure that we shall suffer the distress that will come to those who refuse the blessings of the Lord when they are offered.

ONLY BY KEEPING THE COMMANDMENTS

This is a good time for the membership of this Church to be examples to all the world, for the humble among us to seek the Lord, and for those who lack humility to cultivate it. It has been made very plain to us, and there was no distinction made whether men were in the Church or out of it. It was the Savior who taught that, "Unless you are as humble as a little child ye shall not see the kingdom of God." We desire to see that kingdom, don't we? This group of men and women here today, who represent the Church, desire to see and to inherit the kingdom of our Lord, and there is only one way whereby we may obtain that priceless gift, and that is by keeping all the commandments of our Heavenly Father. He does not differentiate; he does not select any particular group of commandments; but he teaches us that we must keep all of his commandments.

I say that there is need in all Israel today—there is need for this man addressing you to examine himself—there is need for every one of us to look about ourselves and see wherein we are neglecting our privileges and our duty, for tomorrow may be too late. Today is the acceptable time of the Lord. Let us set our houses in order. Let us love one another. Let us sustain these men whom God has raised up to preside over us. Let us bless them, not only by our lips, but by assisting in every possible way to carry this burden that rests so heavily upon their shoulders. Let us honor these presidents of stakes and these bishops of wards. Pray for and bless them and help them. Let us love one another, that our Heavenly Father may be able to bless us, and he will bless us if we love one another and do good to all his children.

TESTIMONY

I know that God lives. I know that our Heavenly Father has spoken in this day and age of the world, that his Gospel is upon the earth, and while I would not compel any soul to accept it, I pray that we may have power and wisdom and strength to reach out after these neighbors of ours who do not understand the truth. Let us do our duty, and draw them into the fold of the Master, that they, with us, may know that he lives.

Again, I bear my testimony that I know that Jesus is the Christ. I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the Lord. I know that the Gospel for which these gave their lives is the power of God unto salvation, and the only means whereby we shall obtain a place in his celestial kingdom.

That we, with those we love, and as many as we can contact with and influence, may take advantage of our blessings, and accept the invitation to the marriage feast, and when we arrive there be properly clad, that we may go in thereat, that we may rejoice with those who have kept the commandments of God, and enjoy eternal life in his celestial kingdom, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I failed to read one brief statement of statistics in my opening remarks. There have been two changes in Stake Presidents: Elder David

I Stoddard has been chosen to succeed Brother William D. Hanks as President of the Union Stake; and Brother William O. Bentley has been chosen to succeed Brother Joseph K. Nicholes as President of St. George Stake. Brother Stoddard opened this meeting with prayer, and Brother Bentley will offer the benediction.

Elder William M. Waddoups has been released as President of the Hawaiian Mission, and also as President of the Hawaiian temple, and Brother Castle H. Murphy has been appointed to succeed him.

Elder Edward P. Kimball has been released as President of the German-Austrian Mission, and Elder Oliver H. Budge has been appointed to succeed him.

There have been two new wards organized—the Fourth Ward of Richfield, Sevier Stake, and Helper Ward, Carbon Stake.

Bishops who have passed away during the past six months:

Rulon M. Jensen of the Basalt Ward, Shelley Stake.

Karl N. Snow of East St. George Ward, St. George Stake.

We now have 104 Stakes of Zion; 933 Wards; 71 Independent Branches, making a total of 1004. There are Dependent Branches, 41; Missions, 29, Branches in the Missions, 835. Total Wards, Branches and Missions, 1909.

All of the brethren who have been honorably released are released with the love and blessing and thanks of the General Authorities for the splendid work that they have done.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Our Mountain Home So Dear."

Benediction by Elder William O. Bentley, President of the St. George Stake.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference was resumed at 2 p. m.

The hymn, "Prayer is the Soul's Sincere Desire," was sung by the congregation.

Elder Clarence E. Smith, President of the Bear River Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

ELDER JAMES E. TALMAGE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

"For behold, my soul delighteth in plainness unto my people, that they may learn."

These are the words of an ancient Hebrew prophet, addressed to the people whose leader he was, commissioned and appointed of God.

The spirit of plainness has characterized the addresses of this conference so far, and if I speak plainly unto you at this time I trust you will understand that I speak under the same spirit that impelled Nephi in the utterance cited.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE WORLD?

We do not believe in treating ourselves with gratulation to the extent that we feel because we are the covenant people of God—and we boldly proclaim this fact—that all is well with us and that we are right in the sight of God to the extent he would have us be. Gentle but firm admonishment has been given in earlier addresses. Well deserved commendations have been made of the good that our people have accomplished and are accomplishing, and the question of what is the matter with the world, which occasionally we see in bold headlines in newspapers and magazines, has been touched upon.

The great trouble with the world today as I understand it is that it has become idolatrous. We read of idolatry and think of it as a practice or series of practices in the past. This is an idolatrous generation, defying the commandment written by the finger of God—"Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and an idolatrous generation is an adulterous generation.

IDOLATRY AND ADULTERY

Have you never pondered over that remark of the Savior to those who came seeking a sign at his hand, when there were signs all about them? They had seen the sick healed, the lame made to walk, the deaf made to hear, the blind made to see, the dead raised to life, and still they came asking for a sign; and he answered them as befitted their hypocrisy:

"An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign."

I ask, have you ever considered the connection between the awful sin of adultery and that godlessness that made those curiosity-seekers come asking for a sign? The word "adultery" and the word "idolatry" were originally one, that is, they sprang from the same root, and mean essentially the condition of being false to a solemn covenant.

The Lord compared himself—though in terms of rebuke—to the Israelites of old, as their husband. "I am married unto you," he said; and further, in effect: "O recreant Judah, backsliding Israel. I am married unto you. I love you as a husband loves his wife, and yet you go after strange gods and desert me, with whom you have made covenant."

LIVING SCRIPTURES

That was adultery and idolatry, and such is characteristic of the world today. How far does it affect the Latter-day Saints? Let us consider later. But first I cite you to a bit of ancient scriptural history, and as introductory to such citation, I take the opportunity of saying that every dispensation of the Lord's dealings with mankind, from the Adamic down, has been characterized by living scriptures. The accumulated scriptures of earlier dispensations were quite essential to the people lest they would dwindle in unbelief. These ancient records are the world's treasures; but ancient scripture is not enough. In every dispensation there have been oracles of God empowered to speak the will and the word of the Lord, and what they spoke became scripture, technically after it was written; and these scriptures are preserved for our guidance.

A BIT OF ANCIENT HISTORY

Here is the historic instance I would cite to you. Call to mind the history of King Nebuchadnezzar, whom the Lord used as a scourge unto the covenant people because they had gone astray. Aye, because they had deserted him, their husband, and had fallen into the ways of idolatry and adultery, he sent Nebuchadnezzar to scourge them. The pagan king led Israel captive. He went so far as to take from the temple in Jerusalem the sacred vessels of gold and silver that has been used in the ceremonies and ordinances of the holy house. Eventually Nebuchadnezzar was brought to see the power of God and rendered praise unto him.

His successor, Belshazzar, referred to by historians as the son or the grandson of Nebuchadnezzar, was lifted up in the pride of his heart, and on the occasion of a great feast he called for the vessels that had been brought from the temple that he might display before his people his power and proclaim anew the captivity of Judah.

You know the story. As he and his lords with their wives and concubines there in the court were drinking from those vessels, a mystic hand appeared, writing upon the wall. None of the king's sooth-sayers or wise men could interpret the writing. Belshazzar was greatly frightened. Then Daniel was called, he who had interpreted the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, and he spoke plainly, for his soul delighted in plainness. He recited the troubles that had come upon Nebuchadnezzar, and then added:

"And thou his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this;

"But hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven; and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou, and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, which see not, nor hear, nor know: and the God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified."

Then did he interpret the divinely cryptic writing, part of which interpretation made clear to Belshazzar that he had been weighed in the balance and found wanting, and his kingdom was to be taken from him.

PRESENT DAY APPLICATION

Ancient history, you say, yes but is it not applicable to conditions in the world today? Men are praising the gods of silver and of gold and of all the other valuable commodities that make up wealth, and the God in whose hand their breath is and whose are all their ways they will not recognize. Do you wonder that wickedness and crime have increased to terrifying proportions under those conditions? The prophets of old foresaw it. They spoke of the days of wickedness and vengeance immediately precedent to the second coming of the Lord, which I reiterate, for it has been spoken before, is near at hand.

Now, O Israel, ye Latter-day Saints, how far do these conditions exist among us as a people, laying claim even to higher title than that of which Israel of old were so proud? There were certain signs by which that ancient people were known among their pagan contemporaries. I mention three, as many as time will permit.

SIGNS OF THE COVENANT PEOPLE

The Israelites were distinguished in the first place as worshipers of a living God, a personal God, in whose image they had been created and made. No other nation on the face of the earth recognized the living God. That was a sign by which the covenant people, descendants of Abraham, through Isaac and Jacob, were known. Another sign was this, they observed every seventh day as the Sabbath of the Lord their God; and the Lord had said: This shall be a sign between thee and the nations: They shall know that ye are my people, because ye observe my Sabbaths. And the third sign I mention is that they were tithed of all they possessed. Those were set forth prominently as the banners of Israel, by which all nations should know that they were the covenant people of God.

Now I repeat, in every dispensation living scriptures are given. The history of the past is of value, but the great principles are restated, the fundamental laws are reenacted. Christ came to fulfil and supersede the law of Moses, and yet with his own lips in the flesh he restated every commandment in the Decalog, giving it to the new dispensation. He cited prophecies of the past, connecting up the earlier dispensations with that in which he lived and at the head of which he stood in a particular sense, not only as the head of all dispensations, but in the sense of his being there in mortality.

Where do we stand with respect to those signs? Are we worshipping the true and living God, or are we going idolatrously after the gods of gold and silver, of iron and wood, and brass, diamonds and other idols of wealth? Are we worshipping our farms, our cattle and sheep? Who is our God? To whom are we yielding homage, allegiance and worship? Not worship by means of words only, in ritualistic form, but worship in action, devotion, and sacrificial service?

COMMENDATION AND ADMONITION

I feel it is the duty of those who stand as your presiding servants and your leaders to call attention to the defects of the people as well as to praise their good deeds; and I say that we are not fully living up to those signs characteristic of the Lord's covenant people. Where are you spending your Sabbaths? Are you tithed? No other people on the face of the earth is making such a record, and I believe no other people in past ages have made such a record as the Latter-day Saints are making, in the matter of the payment of tithes. But collectively we are about a fifty per cent tithe-paying people. Are we in the habit of leaving our tithing settlement until the end of the year and then making some donation or gift, calling it tithing, trifling with the word of God and his law? I doubt if there be one man in fifty, perhaps not one in a hundred, who leaves the payment of his tithing until the end of the year who pays a tithe. Unless he keeps his books with all the care that a bookkeeper in a great business corporation could give he does not know what he has to tithe. But the Lord would have you tithed as his people of old were tithed, paying when they received.

I know that this people are the people of the Lord, that they are acceptable unto him, but we are not reaching fully the requirements that the Lord has made upon us; and too many Latter-day Saints are going after strange gods, setting their hearts on their hay and their corn, their bonds and stocks, their automobiles and the luxuries of the world, to the neglect of their duties in the Church. Though I would be no prophet of evil, of disaster, or of calamity, I feel to say that if the Latter-day Saints do not obey the law that God has given with respect to the tithes, they will have less and less to tithe, this in the Lord's own time.

EXHORTATION TO GREATER EFFORT

Let us lift the banners of Zion, the banner of the true worship of the living God, the banner of Sabbath observance, make it a holy day for the service of the Lord, not a day of idle rest and sleep and inactivity, but a day of activity in the Lord's important service. This he has required of us, and he never has modified the requirement by the slightest amendment. Keep flying the banner of the sacred tithe for the Lord. He would have his people tithed that the land may be sanctified unto them. It is for our good that the law of the tithe has been given. We cannot advance in the knowledge of God and the things pertaining to exaltation in the kingdom of God unless we have that training.

I can join with full heart and soul with my brethren and sisters in that joyous hymn, "Zion prospers, all is well." But I remember also the words of the Lord given unto the Nephites of old: "Therefore, wo be unto him that is at ease in Zion! Wo be unto him that crieth: All is well!" It depends upon how we say it and how we sing it. Zion is prospering and will continue to prosper in spite of you, my brother, you forty per cent Latter-day Saint; in spite of myself, whatever my rating may be, and I am trying to attain the one hundred per cent standard. Zion will prosper in spite of me, if I am not faithful. But wo unto him who sits down in idle complacency, neglecting the commandments of God.

I pray that we may be what we profess to be, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT RUDGER CLAWSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, man in his creation is a dual being. There is a spiritual side to his nature and there is a temporal side, and with respect to this matter I desire to give expression to the thought that is in my mind.

THE DUAL NATURE OF MAN

If you will pardon me for being personal, I will say that for the last seventy-three years I have been partaking of food, and every time I sit down to a meal of victuals, if I address myself to the occasion with a good appetite and the food is properly prepared, I enjoy it. It contributes to my body. It is pleasant, refreshing and healthful.

Now, the elements that were in the food that I have partaken of are about the same, and yet when the food is prepared in a variety of different ways and made inviting to the taste it accomplishes the purpose. If I refrain from taking food into my mortal body, the body will die.

What I have said of the body is equally applicable to the spirit. We come to meeting and sit down at the table of the Lord, so to speak, and partake of spiritual food. We have had a most wonderful spectacle in this General Conference. Yesterday the people assembled in great numbers and sat and listened with rapt attention to what was said. Why did they come to the meeting? They came in order to get spiritual food, and they appeared to enjoy it and to be well satisfied at the conclusion of the services. It almost appeared from their attitude that they were indeed perfectly satisfied and would require no more of such food. But here they are again today, the same people, with an appetite for more food to strengthen their spiritual natures.

This seems wonderful to me, but it is comprehensible and it is true.

THE GOSPEL—EVERLASTING AND EVER-INTERESTING

Now, with respect to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, we have been listening to the preaching of the Gospel for an hundred years. It has not changed in principle, or theory, or practice, one iota in all that period of time. We are led to believe, and we surely do believe, that it will never change. It is an everlasting Gospel, and yet when these glorious doctrines such as faith, repentance and baptism, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and other principles of the Gospel—I say when they are presented to us from different viewpoints, combined with the particular characteristics of the speakers, their manner of delivery, etc., we become interested, and what we hear seems to be new to us and is acceptable and pleasant. And yet, as I have already said, there isn't any change at all in the scheme of salvation.

It may be, my brethren and sisters, in my remarks this afternoon that I shall touch upon some principle or principles that have been emphasized in this Conference. If so, I hope to approach them at a little different angle from that which you have heard, so that you will not become weary and tired, but may be profited.

A SACRED VOLUME OF SCRIPTURE

I have in my hand the Pearl of Great Price, which is a sacred volume of scripture. It is one of the standard works of the Church, and in its teachings, it is in perfect harmony with the Holy Bible. The title page reads as follows:

"The Pearl of Great Price—selections from the revelations, translations and narrations of Joseph Smith, the first prophet, seer and revelator to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints."

So, in part, what is found in this book, is a veritable pearl of great value. It was translated by Joseph Smith the Prophet from parchment, or papyrus, which came down from ancient times and was found enclosed with a mummy. It is a record which is well worth the careful attention of the world.

AN EXTREMELY IMPORTANT WORK

In this book there is a sentence which has already been quoted in our Conference and which I am disposed to repeat, wherein the Lord says:

"This is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man."

Brother Whitney, I think, emphasized these words, and others have referred to them. Well, now, brethren and sisters, let me say to you that in my opinion the work thus referred to is the greatest and most important and most vital work in which God is engaged. Why is it so extremely important that he should bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man? It is for this reason: God himself is eternal, God is the "Father of the spirits of all flesh." Our earthly parents furnish our bodies, and our Heavenly Parents furnish our spirits, and the spirit and the body joined together constitute the soul of man. Hence the children of men are living souls. It so appears from the very beginning, at the time of man's creation. The record says: "God created man of the dust of the earth and breathed into him the breath of life, and man became a living soul." He was never a living soul until that moment. What was he? A living spirit—whose habitation was in heaven. But when the body was created from the dust of the earth God put the spirit into the body, and man became a living soul, a child of God. It is not to be wondered at that God is interested in man. It is not to be wondered at that he desires his salvation.

SAVING PRINCIPLES

Now, God is a pure and holy being, and in order that man might be saved it is highly essential that he should become like God. And if that be the case, it is imperative that man should repent of his sins and do works of righteousness, and until such time as this is brought about man cannot be saved. No impure or unholy thing can come into the presence of God and dwell there. This emphasizes powerfully the importance of the doctrine of repentance.

And then if you put forth the saving principle of repentance there must be something to go with it. It is not complete in itself. It is not sufficient that a man shall repent of his sins. There still remains the weight of sin upon his soul. There must be some way to remove the weight of sin from his soul. God has provided the means, and it consists of baptism, baptism by water, by immersion, in the name of Jesus Christ, administered by one having authority, for the remission of sins. All conditions being equal, when the man comes forth from the water of baptism, his sins are washed away absolutely. If they are not washed away baptism is a mockery in the sight of God. If it does not accomplish this purpose there is nothing to it. But we maintain that it does, and the effect of baptism properly administered is apparent at once. That is, mark you, if it is a complete baptism, and it is not complete if it has to do with the water simply and nothing further.

A NEW BIRTH

Baptism, like many other things, is dual in character. There are two vital features connected with it. There is the baptism by water, or the birth by water, as Jesus said to Nicodemus, and there is the baptism of the Spirit, or the birth by Spirit. What kind of baptism is the baptism by the Spirit? the Christian world might ask. Do you not know, ye men of the world, ye ministers of the Gospel, do ye not know what the birth of the Spirit is? If you do not let me enlighten you and say that it is the gift of the Holy Ghost, which comes upon a man by the laying on of hands of one having authority, and the gift is transmitted to the baptized believer. He is enveloped, buried as it were, in that spirit and power, the power of the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, that brings to his memory things present, things past, and things to come.

This is a complete baptism and it is described by the Savior as a new birth. We are born into the world. That is the first birth with which we have to do. What a wonderful thing that is! What a tremendous privilege, that we were permitted to come into the world and take upon ourselves these bodies. And so now if we are to come into the Church and Kingdom of God it must be by some such means as birth. We must be born into the Kingdom of God. We cannot walk into it; we cannot run or jump into it, or drop into it, or grow up into it; we must be born into it. We must go through the door, and the door is baptism.

SALVATION IN NO OTHER WAY

You see that there is reason and logic in this great principle that is treated lightly by some people in the world, some people who say, "yes, yes, that is very well, if you want baptism you may have it; some of the churches will give it to you if you want it. If you do not want it you are at liberty to let it alone. You can have it or not as you please." But the Latter-day Saints say it is a vital principle of the Gospel and it cannot be set aside and must not be ignored. And so surely as the sun shines and truly as we live, no man or woman can come into the Church and Kingdom of God and be saved in his presence without passing through the door.

FULFILLING AN IMPORTANT OBLIGATION

Having passed through the door of baptism into the Kingdom this is just the initial step. We simply have the means, the blessing and the gift to become acquainted with the things of God, to grow in understanding, in knowledge and wisdom. And let me tell you of one thing—there are many things of course—but one very vital principle I would like to emphasize for a moment before I sit down. It was brought to my mind as I left the meeting this morning.

I met a good sister who offered her hand and said to me:

"Brother Clawson, don't you recognize me?"

I said to her, "Yes, of course I recognize you, but for the moment I am unable to call your name. Your face is familiar to me."

"Well," she said, "Brother Clawson you might forget me but I shall never forget you, because you once presided over me and over my people in the Box Elder Stake. My name is so-and-so."

I said: "Surely it is, I recognize you now perfectly. How is your health? You are looking very fine, in fact, you have quite a youthful appearance."

She said: "Brother Clawson, my health is very good, and do you know, I have had quite a family of children."

"How many have you had?"

She answered: "I have had twelve children and they are all living."

Then I said to her: "Are they doing well? Are they good children?"

She said, "Yes."

I said to her: "You are very fortunate, you are a blessed woman, because you have given heed to that first great commandment that was given to Adam in the garden of Eden, when God said unto him and unto Eve, 'Be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth.' That was the obligation put upon Adam, and that is the obligation that rests upon his children."

A PARTNERSHIP WITH GOD

Then I said to her, "Do you know what that means? It means you have met this obligation, that you have fulfilled this great duty in life. It means that you have entered into a partnership with God Almighty. Now, that seems like strong language to use, to say that a mortal man, or a mortal woman, has entered into partnership with the Lord. But it is true, for the Lord is the Creator of the souls of men, and it takes the spirit and the body to make a soul, a living soul. You and your good husband have created mortal bodies for twelve beings, twelve souls. That is your work, and God has contributed twelve living, eternal spirits and put them into those bodies. So you have become a partner with him. You occupy a very different position, entirely different to many of those grand ladies in the world, so denominated, so thought to be, with their wealth and their culture and their opportunities. These grand ladies seem to be satisfied and content to put their affections, and the affections of the human heart are very wonderful, upon the lower animals—dogs, cats, and monkeys.”

I said, “I have wondered many times what would be the feeling of these people that I am speaking of who are blessed with mortal bodies, when they appear before the bar of God and stand there convicted of not having been willing to meet the great obligation of marriage which was instituted to people the earth.”

ADVICE CONCERNING MARRIAGE

Now, brethren and sisters, this is an extremely interesting and important matter because the Latter-day Saints, and particularly the authorities of the Church, favor marriage. We advise our young people to marry when they have reached a proper and suitable age. Young ladies are marriageable at eighteen, nineteen, twenty, twenty-one and twenty-two, and later on. Young men at twenty-two, twenty-three and twenty-four, twenty-five and later on. It is their duty to go forth and honor this law of God. We say to them, be very careful and keep yourselves pure and undefiled. We say to the young men of Israel, be careful in selecting your companions. Make it a subject of prayer and much thought. Seek women of faith, women of pure lives; and then be sure, be very sure that you are in love with the women you espouse and hope to marry. I would not say to love them with all your heart and soul, because that belongs to God. That duty is to him alone. But be sure you love the young woman sincerely and truly, and be sure that she is a good woman. Then, we would say to the young woman in making her choice: Be ye equally careful. Be sure the young man is of good character, pure in his life, that he is a young man of faith; and after all be very sure that you love him. Without love there could be no lasting happiness between husband and wife. Love is very binding in its nature and will help to hold them together.

FOR TIME ONLY OR FOR ETERNITY?

Then I should ask a couple if I were advising them, “What kind of marriage are you contracting? Is it a civil marriage or a temple marriage?” If a civil marriage, I should say: “Well that is a good marriage, that is legal. The United States of America stands behind the civil marriage. It is not the best marriage for you, however. There is another marriage that is far superior, and it is the Temple marriage.

The Temple marriage is very different in character to the civil marriage." I would say to them: "You must remember, if you are married by the law of the land the contract holds good only until death, at which time the bond is broken. On the other hand, if you are married in the Temple the contract holds good for this life and the life to come, and you will have a claim on each other in that future life that cannot be had by the civil law."

The young man or young woman might say: "Well, Brother Clawson, I have heard that people who are married by the civil law, members of the Church, when they come up in the resurrection, will find the civil ceremony to be of no virtue or force. Is that true?" I would answer, "Yes, it is absolutely true."

The girl might then say, "Well, I cannot subscribe to that idea. I cannot believe God would be so unkind as to separate me from my husband. I love him. He loves me. We love our children. Surely God will not separate us, will he?"

And I would say, "No, of course the Lord won't separate you. No, he is too kind and merciful for that. You have separated yourselves. God would bind you together by his law, but you will not permit it, so that you have already separated yourselves for the other world."

She might persist in saying, "I do not believe it."

Well, now, in conclusion I would say to her: "Let me refer you to a paragraph in the one hundred and thirty-second section of the Doctrine and Covenants (the thirteenth verse)." God, in speaking to Joseph Smith, his prophet, said:

"Everything that is in the world, whether it be ordained of men, by thrones, or principalities, or powers, or things of name, whatsoever they may be, that are not by me or by my word, saith the Lord, shall be thrown down, and shall not remain after men are dead, neither in nor after the resurrection, saith the Lord your God.

"For whatsoever things remain are by me; and whatsoever things are not by me shall be shaken and destroyed."

I would say to the young lady, "Mark it well. The Temple marriage is of God and therefore it is one of the things that cannot be shaken or thrown down."

Let all the young men of Israel, and all the young women of Israel, whether they are married or single, remember that the Temple marriage will stand in the eternities to come when no other marriage will stand.

God bless you, in the name of Jesus, Amen.

The assembly arose and sang the first verse of "America."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

As always happens in our Conferences we do not have as much time as we would like. We have a surplus of speakers, figuratively speaking, but not enough time to hear from all. I will request the remaining speakers this afternoon to watch the clock, and I would like them not to take more than fifteen minutes each.

ELDER JOHN WELLS

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I have been blessed with the privilege of performing a short mission to Europe, having been appointed by the First Presidency. I was very glad, indeed, that this privilege came to me, for I have never been on a foreign mission. My labors as a young man while in England were quite extensive, though necessarily restricted to a branch in Nottingham and its nearby towns and villages. When I was asked to go to my native land for a short time, I was very happy about it, particularly when a similar call came to my dear friend, Arthur Winter, who spoke to you yesterday forenoon and gave you some general ideas concerning our duties and the conditions in Europe.

It might interest you to know that Brother Winter and I were born in the same town, played together as children in the same streets, went to the same school, and worked together in the same office. He heard and accepted the Gospel and labored assiduously with me month after month teaching me its wonderful principles and bearing constant testimony to its truth. Arguments, scriptural and otherwise, did not seem to affect me, but at last I asked the Lord to give me light and understanding. When I did this fervently, I began to understand the Gospel and accepted it. Twenty-five years ago Brother Winter and I had the privilege of returning to our native land where we enjoyed a brief stay. Words cannot express our thankfulness to the Lord for the Gospel, for the marvelous opportunities that have come to both of us because of the blessings we enjoy, and for the privilege of coming to this goodly land where we had the opportunity to be trained and educated in the Gospel, and now after twenty-five years, we again return from England full of thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for all the Gospel has done for us.

The First Presidency instructed us to report to President Widtsoe and to labor under his direction. During our voyage to Europe we received a radiogram requesting us to go on to Basel, Switzerland, instead of landing at Plymouth. At Basel we attended the closing session of the conference of European Mission Presidents. A day was spent with President Widtsoe who outlined what he would like us to do when visiting the missions. These instructions were carried out as far as time and circumstances would permit. Our work was mainly this: to reduce the clerical labor in the mission offices, to simplify and reduce, if possible, the labor of district presidents and secretaries, to encourage the organization of branches with the local priesthood in charge, to develop local self-government in the branches. President Widtsoe placed upon me the special duty to work out the organization, duties and functions of the Aaronic Priesthood, the law of tithing, the proper use of the tithes for mission purposes, the care of the poor, etc.

It was very refreshing indeed to be in the company of President Widtsoe, with his splendid powers of administration and his wonderful grasp of the needs of the missions of Europe. Since he has been released as president of the British Mission, he is laboring night and day to organize and systematize the work of the various missions of Europe.

Basel is the headquarters of the Swiss and German Mission. There we found a fine body of Latter-day Saints. There were many large branches of intelligent members, and by the time we had visited this mission and the German-Austrian Mission, we had a very high opinion of the German people. They are refined and educated and have very high ideals.

Our next stay was in Geneva where we met with the President of the French Mission, who has a fine group of young elders. They are trying to allay prejudice and want the privilege of giving the French nation a fair opportunity to hear the Gospel. President Woolf has moved headquarters to Paris where he expects to organize a branch and to gather in quite a number of Latter-day Saints who are taking special courses in the great universities in science, art, and literature. There are some members of the Church who are residing in Paris permanently.

On leaving Geneva we visited Oberammergau where we saw the great Passion Play. It is a wonderful production, but if I had my choice, I would rather see our own great pageant. I felt the influence of our own pageant more than that of the Passion Play. In saying this, however, I do not wish to belittle the marvelous work of the village folks of Oberammergau.

From there we went to Czecho-Slovakia where we met a number of elders in the city of Prague. They are happy and optimistic as to the future. I believe the English language is spoken more in that city in proportion to its inhabitants than in any other foreign city. The elders were preaching to crowds of people in English. They found they were not making progress in acquiring the Czech language, so they resolved to speak only the Czech language among themselves. They are now prepared to go out into the country districts. I believe there is a great future in this land. The reformation started in the city of Prague. It was the home of John Huss. I was gratified to hear that the people were thankful for what the United States has done for them in securing their liberty, and they are naming streets and other places after great men of the United States.

From Prague we went to Dresden and found that President Edward P. Kimball had been released because of the illness of his wife. He was just getting started in the work, introducing ideas for the development of the missionary work in the German-Austrian Mission. While there we attended the great health exhibition. The Latter-day Saint exhibition typified the words, "By their fruits ye shall know them." The exhibit stressed the Word of Wisdom and its results on the people in Utah. A table had been provided in the room upon which were small folders called "The Word of Wisdom," and one hundred and twenty thousand of these folders had been taken. We then went to the former home of Karl G. Maeser in Meissen and stood in reverence before the house, discussing the life and labors of that great man. One of the brethren said, "What a marvelous work Brother Maeser did for the Church." He was answered by another, "Yes, and what a marvelous work the Church did for Brother Maeser."

From there we went to Berlin where we met with a number of elders. That city has a fine body of Latter-day Saints and a splendid troop of Boy Scouts. We met with the branch members one night.

The next stopping place was Copenhagen which has been one of the most fruitful missions of the Church. It is claimed that more people have embraced the Gospel in Denmark in proportion to its population than in any other country. A beautiful mission home and chapel are being erected there. The buildings are a credit to the community, and these two fine buildings will serve notice to the Danish people that the Latter-day Saints are there to stay.

In Stockholm we were very cordially received. Several days were spent in office work. We met with the saints in their meetings on two different occasions. We also met with the local priesthood and with the missionaries; in fact, this was our policy everywhere we went. The people, as well as the missionaries, accorded us royal treatment, and when we left, a large body of the saints were at the station to bid us farewell and sang two of the songs of Zion, much to the astonishment of the passengers on the train.

We continued our journey to Oslo where we attended to the business of the Church. We visited one branch forty-five miles south, met with the elders, and during our stay there the old folks' annual party was given. I noticed many elderly people who, under ordinary circumstances, will never have an opportunity to come to Zion, and yet they are full of faith and devotion.

Our next visit was to Rotterdam. We met with the President and his staff and with the saints in Rotterdam and Utrecht. A special meeting was held with the elders in Utrecht at which there were thirty elders present out of the fifty in the mission.

After that we went to Birmingham in England, which is now the headquarters of the British Mission. There we had the pleasure of meeting a large body of elders. After attending to routine and clerical work, we enjoyed the hospitality of President Lund and his wife. A few days later we met with all the district presidents along with President and Sister Widtsoe.

Liverpool was our next destination. We reported to President Widtsoe our labors in the missions and to Sister Widtsoe we reported Relief Society, M. I. A., and Primary matters. In England we found a large number of Latter-day Saints out of work. Poverty is very closely related to the unemployed, but through the efforts of branch organizations, some are obtaining employment, and I am pleased to say that no Latter-day Saints are suffering for the necessities of life.

Many have inquired, "How did you find conditions in England, Germany, etc.?" We found serious business depressions and much poverty. We thought we noticed the demoralizing effect of the "dole" system in both countries. In most of the countries we visited there was a disposition to ignore religion. Some said, "What is the use of religion? It did not stop the war." We said in several cases that had the Gospel of Jesus Christ dominated the Christian nations, war would have been impossible.

Some of the countries of Europe are still unsettled politically, as well as economically, and it is probable that during the next few years there will be serious changes in their forms of government.

All the elders seem enthusiastic. They are developing remarkably. They are the finest body of men I have seen outside of Utah. I was delighted with their poise and intelligence. The captain on one of the ships said to me, "I am always glad when there are Latter-day Saint missionaries on my ship. They are the cleanest, best behaved, best mannered people that travel. I am always glad to have them. Tell your people that from me."

As to the indifference of the peoples of Europe to religion, I am wondering. There is a reaction against all kinds of religion. The result will be, I believe, that in the near future honest men and women will look for a worth while religion, and I hope when that time comes such honest people will listen to the message of this Church.

May the Lord bless the Latter-day Saints. May we sense deeply our responsibility to preach the Gospel and warn the world. May the quorums of High Priests, Seventies, and Elders rise to their responsibility and cooperate with the bishops so that the widow's son or daughter may have the privilege of going into the mission field. If each of the five hundred Elders' quorums, one hundred and fifty Seventies' quorums, and one hundred and four High Priests' quorums would make up their minds to support one missionary, the number on missions could be very materially increased. I pray the Lord to bless us all so that His will may be done and righteousness established in the earth. I ask these blessings in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RULON S. WELLS

Of the First Council of Seventy

When the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ was restored and his Church again established upon the earth and endowed with power from on high a tremendous responsibility was placed upon it. This responsibility was twofold in its nature. First, the proclamation of that Gospel unto the inhabitants of the earth. As to how well the Church has discharged itself of that responsibility—and it is still engaged in it—these great gatherings of the Latter-day Saints upon the occasions of our General Conferences, bear eloquent testimony.

Missionaries are sent to every part of the world, carrying the glad tidings of great joy, declaring unto the nations that God has spoken again and restored that Gospel which has within it the power of God unto salvation, making known unto the inhabitants of the earth the plan of life and salvation. What a wonderful work that is!

These missionaries numbering two thousand and upwards, at the call of the Church, cheerfully leave their homes and their loved ones, oftentimes under most trying circumstances, pay their own expenses, even buying the literature which they use, and devote some two or three years of their time or as many more as may be required of them in the promulgation of the Gospel. Surely the first phase of this responsibility is being fairly met. Why all this noble endeavor, this great sacrifice, this hearty response which would be impossible under any ordinary circumstances? And why such devotion? Why was it necessary to restore the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the earth? Because it was nowhere to be found among its inhabitants or as the Prophet Amos prophesied, there was a "famine in the land, not a famine for bread nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord."

The other phase of that responsibility is the perfecting of the saints. Why have we come up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob? The scriptures tell us "that we might learn of his ways and walk in his paths."

What was the matter with the earth that all this should be necessary? What was the condition that prevailed? The prophet Isaiah clearly saw in vision what the difficulty was. Said he:

"The earth is defiled under the inhabitants thereof because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant."

That was the condition that prevailed in the world, and to a very large extent it still prevails. With the restoration of this Gospel our duties are clearly outlined in the revelations that have been given through the modern prophet, Joseph Smith. Let me quote a few words from the Doctrine and Covenants as they are found in Section 88:

"The spirit and the body are the soul of man.

"And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul.

"And the redemption of the soul is through him that quickeneth all things, in whose bosom it is decreed that the poor and meek of the earth shall inherit it.

"Therefore, it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory."

Here it is very plainly pointed out, the great problem that we have before us. This world that is defiled under the inhabitants thereof must be called to repentance. They must turn unto the Lord. They will not all do it, but those who have accepted of that glorious message and have been brought into the fold of Christ are expected to lay hold of eternal life.

From these passages we learn that these souls of ours are constituted of a spirit and a body, the spirit which came from God, begotten of him in the spirit, and a body which we receive from mother earth. That spirit and that body in combination constitute the soul of man.

How are we going to sanctify this earth from all unrighteousness? Merely by sanctifying the souls of those who inhabit it. This earth that "is defiled under the inhabitants thereof" for the very simple reason that they had transgressed the laws and are still transgressing them, for the very reason that they have changed the ordinances, broken the everlasting covenant, the covenant of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, that new and everlasting covenant that is designed, given and revealed unto the children of men for the express purpose of sanctifying their souls from all unrighteousness—that is why it has been revealed from heaven. It has within it the very power of God unto salvation unto the sanctifying and purifying of our souls.

We have heard during the sessions of this Conference of many things that we can do. There is the wonderful activity that is going on to spread a knowledge of this Gospel among the children of men. After we have received the Gospel and have come up and identified ourselves with the people of God are we sitting supinely by and thinking that the Lord will do the rest of this work? We read in these passages that the redemption of our souls will be through him who quickeneth all things, him who made and fashioned the universe, who made every living thing; through him who gave us life, original life—who causes the grass to grow upon the earth, the insects to creep, the birds to fly, the fish to swim, the beasts to roam upon the field. Through him who quickeneth all things, and created man in his own image—even our Creator. Through him is this redemption of our souls to take place and not through any act of ours. He will redeem us. From what? From death and the grave. But there is something for us to do. He is our Redeemer. He also died not only that we might be redeemed from death and the grave, but that our own sins might be blotted out on the condition, however, of our obedience to his plan. Even God could not save and redeem us from our own sins unless we repent of them, unless we do our part and sanctify and purify our souls. Therefore it behooves us that we shall do our part that our souls may be redeemed from the consequences of our own sins.

To sanctify and purify our souls from all unrighteousness or in other words, the perfecting of the saints, is the second phase of this great responsibility. How is this to be accomplished? After hearing the words of the Lord and believing on him, and ceasing the transgression of his laws, restoring the ordinances that have been changed to their primitive purity, and again renewing that "everlasting covenant" that has been broken, let us go on to perfection. How? Let me enumerate a few of the things which have been revealed for this express purpose:

1. The law of tithing has been mentioned in this Conference. Avarice is a soul-destroying vice; it is the love of money that lies at the root of all evil. Obedience to this law lays the axe at the very root of all evil. Observe it then as a means of sanctifying your soul from all unrighteousness.

2. Remember the Sabbath day and attend your sacrament meetings as a means of spiritual growth and with clean hands and pure hearts partake of those sacred emblems which testify to our faith in him who died upon the cross. If you do this, you are eating and drinking eternal life into your very souls.

3. A Word of Wisdom designed for the health of the body wherein may dwell the Spirit of God. A sound mind in a sound body or as the Latin philosopher puts it: "Mens sana in corpore sano". It was given as a warning against present day evils, clearly shown to the Prophet Joseph in prophetic vision, and also with a promise of immunity against the destroying angel.

These subjects have all been discussed by various speakers during this Conference. Let me call your attention to one more requirement which if properly met, will surely sanctify our souls and prepare us for the celestial glory. I refer to prayer. The Lord has commanded that we shall pray without ceasing. Does he really mean that? Most assuredly he does. The Lord gives us no commandment that he does not mean. Of course he does not intend that we shall always be on our knees nor unceasingly speaking words of prayer, and yet he does intend that we shall pray without ceasing. Then what is prayer? "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed," as we sometimes sing and have sung during this Conference. The real prayer, the true prayer is a condition of the heart. When we bow the knee and offer up our verbal petitions, we are giving expression to prayer and this should be done at frequent intervals, every morning and every night, but the prayer itself is in the heart and must be constant and unceasing. It follows, then, if our prayers are to be effectual we must be deeply concerned over the condition of our hearts. What is lurking there? Watch and pray. Are our desires pure and holy? or are we praying for the sordid things of this world, for the gratification of our evil desires? Be sure of this that whatever those desires may be, whether good or evil they will surely find expression, for "out of the fulness of the heart, the mouth will speak." Be careful then, as to what you harbor in your hearts.

Prayer is a daily exercise in the fundamental principles of the Gospel. It is practicing faith, drawing nigh unto God that God may draw nigh unto you; it is practicing repentance, for when you turn to God of necessity you turn away from evil. When you pray you confess your sins to God and seek forgiveness, the very thing for which baptism has been provided in the plan of life and salvation, and surely we seek to obtain God's Holy Spirit, even the gift of the Holy Ghost, which has been sealed upon our heads by the laying on of hands.

The Lord has taught us how to pray. Pray for your enemies and those that spitefully use you. Do you do that? I don't know what effect your prayer will have on him who thus spitefully uses you but I do know it will do you good if you will sincerely pray for him. How? It will cast all hatred out of your heart and make you a better man or woman, and aid you in keeping that great commandment: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." But how can I love my wicked neighbor who mistreats and cheats me and otherwise spitefully uses me? Well, the Lord didn't say you should only love your good neighbor but irrespective of whether good or bad, love him as you do yourself. Let me ask: Do you love yourself because you are good? Not so! The meaner a man is the more he loves himself. And that's exactly what makes him so mean. Some people say their prayers are not answered. Perhaps not exactly as we offer them. What an unfortunate thing it would be if all our prayers were answered in precisely the way we pray. What confusion and dismay! It would completely upset the plan of the Almighty. Let me say, however, every true prayer offered in sincerity will be answered in blessings on our heads. "Ask and ye shall receive."

Then let us pray to our Father in heaven for the triumph of Zion, that his kingdom may come and his will be done on earth as in heaven: for our daily bread or the things we stand in need of day by day; for the forgiveness of our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us; (how vain will be our prayer if we do not forgive others) that we be not led into temptation but delivered from all evil. Let this be the unceasing prayer in our hearts and as sure as the day follows the night shall our souls be sanctified from all unrighteousness, and being thus sanctified we shall be saints in very deed and be prepared for the celestial glory.

The Lord has permitted us to be called "Saints." Are we that? Yes, if we have the Spirit of God. What is a saint? A saint is a sanctified being. Then let us cultivate the gift that is within us which we received by the laying on of the hands of the Elders of this Church, and if we obtain and retain this gift even the gift of the Holy Ghost, it will surely lead us into the presence of God, to dwell with him and his Son, to whom be all the praise, for his is the kingdom and the power and the glory, forever. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Temple Block Mission

As I reflect on what has been said at this Conference, I feel more deeply than ever before that communion with God is the greatest fact of life. All our words, all our activities, all our ideals find their meaning here. The spirit of religion is not the burden of duties that makes life prosaic, but it is a personal mystical union with God, to be attained each man for himself. It is a knowledge of the nearness of God. The chief characteristics of the Gospel of Jesus Christ are its divine truth and beauty. In Keat's Endymion is this lovely thought:

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever:
Its loveliness increases. It will never pass into nothingness;
But still will keep a bower, quiet for us and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing."

The Gospel of our Lord is a message of beauty, and a joy forever.

It teaches us that the way of true life is not the world's way. The Prophet Joel tells us in sublime words that "Ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the Lord your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed. And it shall come to pass afterward, that I shall pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy; your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions."

What the Christian world needs today is to know Christ; and the world can only know Christ by its coming to know the living, personal God, the Creator of heaven and earth and all things therein. He is our Heavenly Father, and in his image man is created. Jesus Christ came to redeem us, and to teach us the divine truth of eternal life. Turning to the American scriptures, the Book of Mormon, which in the years to come will be more widely read and better understood, I read these words as recorded by the prophet Nephi:

"And now it came to pass that there were a great multitude gathered together, of the people of Nephi, round about the temple which was in the land of Bountiful; and they were marveling one with another, and were showing one to another the great and marvelous change which had taken place.

"And they were also conversing about this Jesus Christ, of whom the sign had been given concerning his death.

"And it came to pass that while they were thus conversing one with another, they heard a voice as if it came out of heaven; and they cast their eyes round about, for they understood not the voice which they heard; and it was not a harsh voice, neither was it a loud voice; nevertheless, and notwithstanding it being a small voice it did pierce them that did hear to the center, insomuch that there was no part of their frame that it did not cause to quake; yea, it did pierce them to the very soul, and did cause their hearts to burn.

"And it came to pass that again they heard the voice, and they understood it not.

"And again the third time they did hear the voice, and did open their ears to hear it; and their eyes were towards the sound thereof; and they did look steadfastly towards heaven, from whence the sound came.

"And behold, the third time they did understand the voice which they heard; and it said unto them:

"Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name—hear ye him.

"And it came to pass, as they understood, they cast their eyes up again toward heaven; and behold, they saw a Man descending out of heaven; and he was clothed in a white robe; and he came down and stood in the midst of them; and the eyes of the whole multitude were turned upon him, and they durst not open their mouths, even one to another, and wist not what it meant, for they thought it was an angel that had appeared unto them."

The people heard and cleansed their hearts and understood. Then in the Holy Bible is the story of St. John concerning the resurrection of Christ. It is lovely in its simplicity; it is the comforting message of the ages.

(Gospel of St. John 20:1-19).

"The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

"Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

"Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple and came to the sepulchre.

"So they ran both together; and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

"And he, stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

"Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

"And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

"Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

"For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

"Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

"But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping; and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre.

"And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

"And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

"And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

"Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

"Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.

"Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father: and to my God, and your God.

"Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

"Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

Down through the ages, people have sought after Christ; some have found him. But the new contact with God came a hundred years ago when a little boy—a pure boy and filled with faith—went into the woods to pray for light and truth. God the father and Jesus Christ, the Son, came to him. Joseph Smith heard the message of the Father, and it was then that Jesus Christ became a living reality. Man had again been brought into communion with God.

This fundamental truth is at the very foundation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ; and it takes this new revelation to understand life and immortality. When the world will open its heart to these three historic truths, mankind will again know that life has a meaning, and a meaning for good. Men will direct their lives in accordance with God's will, and come unto greater faith and more abundant life. Knowledge alone cannot solve our social and religious problems; but knowledge with faith in God can. This thought is beautifully expressed by George Santayana of Harvard University:

"O world, thou chooseth not the better part,
It is not wisdom to be only wise,

And on the inward vision, close the eyes;
But it is wisdom to believe the heart.
Columbus found a world, and had no chart,
Save one that faith deciphered in the skies;
To trust the soul's invincible surmise
Was all his science and his only art.
Our knowledge is a torch of smoky pine
That lights the pathway but one step ahead
Across a void of mystery and dread.
Bid then, the tender light of faith to shine
By which alone the mortal heart is led Unto the thinking of the thought divine."

God lives; Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the Redeemer of the world. The beauty of his message will always appeal to the children of men, for in it they will discover that there is an infinite power in each and every child that leads him to the meaning of life. A new era opens before us, and if we will pursue the path that has been mapped out by Christ our Lord, we will grow unto perfection through service and our spirits will take flight to more distant summits from which we can become a light unto mankind. May we as a people take new courage; may our faith in the message of the Lord increase and deepen from day to day. Amen.

After the singing by the congregation of the hymn, "High On the Mountain Top," Elder William T. Jack pronounced the benediction, and Conference adjourned until Sunday morning.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

Every seat in the great auditorium and galleries of the Tabernacle was taken, and every available space in the aisles was occupied Sunday morning, October 5, 1930, when the hour for beginning the fifth session of the Conference arrived. Many people who could not get inside the Tabernacle found seats in the Assembly Hall and others remained on the Tabernacle grounds, where they listened to the services as they were broadcast by radio.

President Heber J. Grant called the meeting to order promptly at 10 o'clock, and announced that the Choir and the congregation would sing the hymn, "We thank thee, O God, for a Prophet."

After the singing, prayer was offered by Elder Arthur V. Watkins, President of the Sharon Stake.

A duet and chorus, "An Angel From on High," was rendered by Cyril Martin and Ida Hepworth, and the Choir.

ELDER REED SMOOT

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I want to express my thanks to my Heavenly Father for the privilege I have of attending this great Conference. If the people of the world, who think that Mormonism, so-called, is losing its force or its membership, could but stand upon this platform and look into the faces of this magnificent audience, their doubts or apprehensions—or wishes, in many cases—would be expelled.

I know that this is the Church of the living God. I know that the Church, as established in this latter day, is the Church spoken of by the prophets of old, and I know that the destiny of this Church shall be as prophesied, and all the requirements made of the people belonging to this Church will be fulfilled. Men holding the Holy Priesthood, men holding responsible positions, from the President of the Church down, will fulfil every requirement, and the Gospel of Jesus Christ shall be preached to all peoples of the earth, before the end shall come.

INDIFFERENCE OF THE WORLD TOWARD RELIGION

There is an indifference manifested, I think, throughout the world, toward religion. That indifference, it seems to me, is growing; I am quite sure it is among many of the people that I am called to associate with. They deny the power of God. They deny the power of the Priesthood. They deny even the work of the Savior and his mission here upon this earth.

My brethren and sisters, when we think of the fact that the Gospel has been established upon this earth for a hundred years, and thousands and tens of thousands of missionaries have been sent to nearly all parts of the earth, bearing testimony that God has revealed his mind and will and has established his Church again upon earth, the headway that we have made in that one hundred years may seem small to some, but the seed has been planted, the authority of God has been conferred upon man, and his Church organized; and I haven't the least doubt that every revelation that has been given concerning it, concerning its work, concerning the peoples of the world, will be fulfilled.

Many times in my conversations with public men, they deny, without hesitation, that there is a God. They deny that it is possible to receive a revelation from God, the source from which we claim to receive revelations.

"BELIEVE THE WORKS"

I often think, my brethren and sisters, of the time when Jesus himself was upon the earth, and of the statements that were made by him to the Jews as to his coming, his mission, his authority. They were ready to stone him; and we find the Savior answering, upon an occasion of that kind, as follows:

"If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

"But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works: that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him."

So say I to the world. If you don't believe that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has the authority to speak for God or for man, believe in the works of its members; see what they have accomplished; see what character of men and women the Church is composed of.

If it were possible I would like to have such men upon this platform today and let them look into the faces of this magnificent audience, see and hear the faith expressed by the servants of God. I would like them to understand that every one within the sound of my voice will say "Amen" to the testimonies that have been given during this Conference, and have faith that the predictions that have been made will be fulfilled.

Have you noticed—I certainly have—that active members in the Church seldom apostatize? That is natural. They are interested in the work. They know that it is God's work, and being active in it, they obey the commandments. They never cease to pray themselves. They never cease to have family prayers. They never cease endeavoring to live so that men, seeing their works, can at least believe that the Gospel of Jesus Christ has an influence upon their lives.

One of the best ways in the world to preach the Gospel is by example, and many times you can reach people in that way of preaching that you could not in any other way. So we boldly say to the world: If you do not believe in the professions and testimonies made by us as to this being God's Church, his power made manifest in the organizations and through the individuals of the Church, believe the works of this people; compare their labors and works with those of any other people upon earth; compare their honesty with that of any other body of people on earth; compare their loyalty to our government, with the loyalty of any other people on earth.

SOMETIMES A LACK OF FAITH

My brethren and sisters, we believe and we know that the Gospel of Jesus Christ, when it is manifested in the life of any man or woman, makes him or her a better citizen, and makes him or her more loyal, no matter where it may be. Sometimes some of us may lack faith. I think perhaps that is rather natural, for as I read the scriptures I find that men in the favor of God himself sometimes waver a little in their faith.

May I call your attention to the case of Gideon. Gideon, a servant of God, holding the priesthood of the living God, having a mission to perform, knowing it to be a mission, had doubts; for don't you remember he asked of God, so that there could be no doubt in his mind, that a sign be given to him, namely, that a fleece of wool which he would place upon the floor, should upon the morrow be wet with dew and the earth all about it be dry. And through the goodness of God the manifestation was made to him. Even then Gideon was not satisfied, for in order to be sure that the requirement was one for him to undertake, he then requested: "Please, Heavenly Father, let the wool be dry and upon the ground let there be dew." And with all patience it was so granted unto him. "Oh ye of little faith!"

OUR GREAT MISSION

I want to say at this time, my brethren and sisters, that I feel just as sure as I live, that every requirement made by our God has been made for a purpose, and it is our duty to live to the requirements made by this Church; and I am positive that the God of heaven will bless those who fulfil these requirements.

Of course, we all know that there is a change in attitude toward our people. I am thankful to my Heavenly Father that this is the case, but I do want to warn the people that if, through the goodness of God, that change has come, and we, through that fact, become slackers in his Church, it would be a great loss indeed. Oh, how little interest there is in religion today! I mean a religion such as the Latter-day Saints possess. How many people are there in all the world, outside of the Church, that will testify that there is a living God, and that Jesus is the Christ? Not many of them.

So, my brethren and sisters, we have a great mission to perform. The time must come when this Gospel will be preached to every kindred, tongue and people upon the earth. I have often wondered how that could be done, but modern science has solved that. President Grant can stand upon this platform and testify and his voice will carry to the farther ends of the earth. Who knows but that God will provide that means of transmission of the testimonies regarding God and his work upon this earth, in order that the Gospel may be preached to every living creature. God never made a requirement of any people in any age of the world, unless he provided a way for the fulfilment of that requirement.

BLESSINGS THROUGH OBEDIENCE

The greatest gift of God is eternal life. Is it worth living for? Is it worth sacrificing some of the pleasures of life for? To me it seems that it is worth everything—eternal life!

God has established his Church in this dispensation. He has made promises to his people, and among them is the one that if they obey his commandments, if they live according to the teachings of the Master, if they fulfil all the laws of God while living upon this earth, they are entitled to the promised blessings of God.

May God's blessings ever attend his Church. May it grow and increase in power and in numbers, and may our lives be such that people who come in contact with any member of the Church will know at once that there is something in Mormonism different from any other religion. A thorough investigation will reveal that this difference lies in the fact that we are members of the Church, that we believe in its principles; and those principles are the ones that will give us eternal life if we will live them.

May the people of the Church live in such a way, and may we all labor to the end that every prediction made by the prophets of God, as to this last dispensation, shall be fulfilled. God grant us eternal life, God grant us wisdom while we remain upon this earth, and God grant that his Church may grow in power and in strength and in influence, and reach the hearts and souls of all honest men and women in the world, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT CHARLES W. NIBLEY*Second Counselor in the First Presidency*

I rejoice in the work of the Lord. I know that every commandment that he has given to this Church, through the Prophet Joseph Smith makes for righteousness, for right living, for better citizenship; makes better husbands, better wives, better children. There is not a single thing, a single thought or idea, in all those commandments, but what is uplifting and for the bettering of humankind.

I would like to read a few verses from Solomon, the wise man, contained in the first chapter of his Proverbs, commencing at the twenty-fourth verse. These verses of scripture seem to cover the situation today as though they were spoken concerning this generation:

"Because I have called, and ye refused, I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;

"But ye have set at naught all my counsel, and would none of my reproof;

"I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh;

"When your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you.

"Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me;

"For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord.

"They would none of my counsel; they despised all my reproof.

"Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices.

"For the turning away of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

"But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil."

IN A CHANGED WORLD

The old order changeth; the new world is upon us. We live today in a changed world from even thirty years ago. At the beginning of this century—take, for example, one item—there was scarcely an automobile seen anywhere in the United States at that time. Only thirty years, within the memory of all of us, and yet today the building of automobiles, the opening of gas stations, with stores upon every street for accessories and equipment, employs, I suppose, probably four or five million men. That is to say, the old order has so changed, just in thirty years, that four or five millions of men are employed in a new occupation, which was not known, or scarcely known, thirty years ago. So rapidly do we move in these days. Necessarily all that affects our conditions of life. It affects our expense account. Automobiles have now become necessities. We are almost compelled to have them. Indeed, the working man goes to work now in a cheap automobile and can well afford it to save time going from his home to his work.

These changes affect employment. Especially do they affect employment when an industry of that kind, going at full blast, stops all at once, or practically stops; the demand ceases. It is a great calamity come upon the nation—maybe it isn't a calamity at all, but a providence of the Almighty to stop our mad rush of speculation, in which stocks go tumbling to the bottom, and men who were rich, almost beyond compare, yesterday, are practically penniless today. And so industry stops, and men are thrown out of employment. They are not idlers. I would not plead for the idler, for one of the revelations through the Prophet Joseph Smith says, in these words:

"The idler shall not eat the bread nor wear the garment of the laborer."

THE UNEMPLOYED NEED HELP

We do not approve of idleness. In our Church industry is one of our principal doctrines: "Work out your salvation in fear and trembling before the Lord." But I do plead for those who are out of employment at this time. There is not time to go into a discussion very fully regarding these changes that come about so quickly, but here they are; they confront us; they demand solution. The best we can do, temporarily, is, as the President of the United States has pointed out, for our municipalities, our counties, our states, and civic organizations, to do everything they can to put in motion some work, that men who are willing to work may find employment.

The Lord tells us, in another revelation, that men ought to be diligently engaged in a good cause, without being commanded. We ought not to wait till the bishop asks us, or till the President of the Church asks us to do something to help relieve this situation, to try to help our neighbors and our friends.

Whoever can do anything in the way of providing employment for this poor person who has no work, ought to do it without waiting to be asked; for "He who waits," the Lord says, "to be commanded in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant."

Let every man and every woman who can do anything do so. We nearly all can contribute something towards relieving this situation; and let me say, even the poor can help, for after all is said and done, it is the poor who help the poor, generally speaking; it is not the rich. Brethren and sisters, let us try to do what we can to see that employment is furnished for those who are out of employment, and who perhaps are in absolute, abject need. They should be taken care of some way.

NATIONS PERPLEXED

Now, I have probably spoken as long as I should. I feel a great concern in respect to this matter. I see changes coming upon the face of the earth. I see the perplexities of nations. England is perplexed today over this situation; so is Germany; our own country, too. War is still extant; there is one at this moment in China; an uprising in India, and also in Turkey. Wars are going on upon the face of the earth. We may think that wars have ceased, that peace is here. But not so. There is perplexity of nations. This is one of the signs of the end, of the coming of the Son of Man. The warning is that "Nations should be in commotion and perplexed" because of the situations arising which the wisest of statesmen can scarcely solve.

The scripture I read at the beginning says: "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them. But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely and shall be quiet from fear of evil."

However, we can help to solve our own little affairs by keeping the commandments of the Lord, by being kind to each other, by considering our neighbors. My brother, my sister, I have sympathy, and we should have sympathy, and do have, I am sure.

HOW TO HELP THE POOR

The Lord help us to build up the kingdom of God, to sustain it, to pay our tithes and our offerings. If we would just pay our fast offerings once a month, if the five hundred thousand of our people in the United States would only pay thirty cents a month per capita on fast day, that alone would be $150,000 a month, or in ten months $1,500,000. With that we would have abundance to give to the poor whose necessities are demanding attention.

Now let us, my brethren and sisters, keep the commandments of the Lord, and build up his kingdom. Let us love the Lord our God, seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all things needful shall be granted unto us. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We will be pleased to hear next from Elder J. Reuben Clark. Brother Clark has just been appointed Ambassador to Mexico. All Utahns are proud of the honor that has come to one of our citizens.

ELDER J. REUBEN CLARK

My brethren and sisters, it is indeed an honor to be asked to say a few words to you this morning. I recall a statement that was made by the great Dr. Karl G. Maeser. He said: "There are two occasions in a man's life when it becomes him to say little. The one is at the beginning of his work, and the other at the end of it." I stand at the beginning of my new work.

I am proud and grateful for my ancestry. I am proud and grateful for my association with you. I am grateful for the testimony which has come to me of the truth. I pray that always there shall be with me the Spirit of God.

As President Grant has said, I am to be appointed American Ambassador to Mexico. I have had some residence in that country, and I have come to have for that people a sympathy and a love I have not felt for any other people.

Mexico is our neighbor. We should treat Mexico as a neighbor. The great Mosaic law which had in it the doctrine, "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," taught also: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." On that great day in the Temple, during the last week of the Savior's mission on this earth, when they were trying to tempt him into some kind of a confession upon which they could base a prosecution, a lawyer asked him what were the great commandments, and he replied:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself."

James, in his epistle, speaks of the law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" as the "royal law" and while we are accustomed sometimes to think that nations do not deal one with another on such a basis, I may be permitted to say that the fundamental principle of international conduct, international relationship, and law, is that you shall ask the other nation to do nothing which you are not yourself willing to do, and that you shall complain about nothing which the other nation does and which you yourself do.

When John Adams went to Paris to assist Franklin and Jay and Lawrence in the negotiation of the treaty of peace with Great Britain at the end of our Revolutionary War, he found them involved in a discussion as to whether or not they should pay the debts that were due to the Tory colonists. When the matter was presented to him he said that he wanted the Tories paid, that he had "no notion of cheating anybody."

What we thus said in our pride as a young, new-born nation surely we can say now that we have the power and the strength that has come to no other nation during the whole history of mankind.

God grant that there comes to me in my work—for I go to it with something of a knowledge of what it means—his Spirit to guide me, that I may represent the people of the United States adequately in my life, in my attitude, in my work. God give to me the faith and the prayers of you, my brethren and sisters, that I may be able to perform my mission honorably, I ask this in the name of Jesus, Amen.

Upon request of President Heber J. Grant the Choir and congregation arose and sang the first and last verses of "America."

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Presiding Bishop of the Church

I regret, my brethren and sisters, that through some trouble that is not yet discovered, the amplifiers on the public address system are not serving satisfactorily this morning. The technicians are working actively to try to discover just what the trouble is. Apparently, the cables leading from this building to the panel have been affected by steam in the tunnel, and there has been some short circuit which has interfered with the effective transmission of the energy.

I rejoice with you in this splendid Conference, and I am tremendously impressed with the sight of this magnificent audience. I hope that I may be able to speak in such a way that I can be heard. I rejoice in my membership in the Church. I appreciate the consideration and kindness shown me by the First Presidency, the other General Authorities, presidencies of stakes, bishoprics of wards, mission presidents and the members generally in my labors.

DESTINY OF THIS WORK

I have absolute confidence in the destiny of this great work. What is that destiny? It is, as I see it, to bring to the people of the earth, everywhere, living faith in God and to promote righteousness, truth and peace. Yet there are people who, for some unknown reason, seem to fear that the fulfilment of the destiny of the Latter-day Saints would threaten the welfare of other peoples. Can there be any question as to the fact that, if the destiny is as I have stated it, it is only for the advancement of mankind generally? There is in the heart of every Latter-day Saint nothing but the best of feeling toward all men. For we are all desirous that, as we have received the light and message of the Gospel, others also may receive it; even as many as are willing to listen thereto, and to receive of the blessings which follow acceptance and observance thereof.

WELFARE OF CHURCH MEMBERS

We have been favored with splendid instructions by all those who have spoken in Conference thus far. There have been discussed various problems that affect the welfare of this people; and not only of this people but of mankind. I want to say to you that I am sure, because I have occasion to have some contact with them, that the First Presidency are vitally concerned with the welfare of every Latter-day Saint, and, for that matter, of mankind everywhere; and that they are concerned, not only with the spiritual, but also with the temporal and material progress of the Latter-day Saints.

MATERIAL AFFAIRS, PART OF OUR RELIGION

Understanding, as we do, that we are eternal beings, and that we have come upon this earth for an important purpose, and that in our mortal state we must live, eat, wear clothing, and partake, to some extent, at least, of the comforts and conveniences of life, we appreciate the fact that material and temporal, as well as spiritual, things are a part of the Gospel. This is particularly so if we cultivate in our hearts the idea that all that we obtain, all that we have, all that we do, we are doing and using with an eye single to the glory of God, and to the advancement of his work. If we can get that spirit in our hearts and minds, we shall realize the fact that material and temporal things are a part of our progress and development, while here upon the earth in preparation for eternity.

INJUNCTION TO WORK

One of the problems that is confronting us at the present time, in common with the rest of mankind, is that of unemployment and the decrease in industry. From the earliest history of mankind, we learn that in the days of Adam the Lord gave him this injunction: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." Later on, in the time of Moses, the Lord declared to his people, in regard to the Sabbath Day: "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it thou shalt not do any work."

WORK DAYS PER WEEK

So, since there was one day for rest, there were six days for labor. In the meantime, with the growth of industry, many of those engaged therein have gotten the idea at times that seven days per week are necessary for work. Consequently, many industries have been working regularly seven days a week, and preventing their employees from enjoying the fruits of the Sabbath Day, when, as a matter of fact they could, in many instances, limit their work to six days. But nowadays, with the increased development in mechanical appliances and equipment, men are coming back to the realization that six days a week is sufficient, and that even a five-day week may be advantageous. Thus, men may be able to earn enough in five days per week, due to improved conditions in industry, when they are working properly; so that they would have two days for leisure and for worship.

NECESSITY OF WORK

Now, I say, the importance of work has been stressed not only in previous ages of the world's history, but, also, more extensively in this period. The Lord has revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith, as contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, the instruction that labor is necessary for mankind, as one of the fundamentals in our progress in this life and throughout eternity. The Lord has specifically declared: "Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer." That involves physical and mental labor, and it involves also labor in a spiritual sense.

VALUE OF WORK

Thomas Carlyle declared: "Blessed is the man that has found his work. Let him ask no other blessedness." Again, J. H. Patterson says: "It is only those who do not know how to work that do not love it. To those who do it is better than play; it is religion." A certain artist says, regarding success: "The greatest single element in any one's career is work. This is the despot that escorts you to the winning post." Another writer declares—"Work! Thank God for the might of it, the ardor, the urge, the delight of it. Thank God for a world where none may shirk, thank God for the splendor of work." I am sure that every one of us who has labored, and does labor, has appreciated the value of work and the importance of it; that it is a part of our lives; that it develops us. It develops our physical strength. It develops our mental keenness. It gives us courage. Stimulates desire for achievement. It inspires in us consideration for our fellow men. Every one of us is expected to labor, to learn the value of labor, to appreciate the joys of achievement, and the benefits that come therefrom.

RESULTS OF LABOR

When we consider the tremendous results that have occurred through the ingenuity of mankind, and through the application of that ingenuity to the production of commodities that make for progress and development, and provide comforts and conveniences, we can appreciate the wonderfully beneficial results of labor from the material standpoint. I am reminded, by the way, when we speak of ingenuity and inventiveness, that we, in America think we are in the forefront. I noticed, however, recently, that America stands only about seventh or eighth in the matter of inventiveness. The little country of Switzerland stands first of all the nations in inventiveness, Germany next, France next, and so forth.

RIGHT TO WORK

Now, as it is necessary that men should work, and as they have been enjoined to labor, as idleness has been condemned as being unfruitful and tending to degradation and demoralization, at the same time, it follows that there ought to be the opportunity to work. Every man has the right to work, and some provision should be made whereby he can obtain work. In earlier days men were able largely to provide their own employment. In ancient days people lived simply, choice land was freely available, men had their flocks and herds, and they cultivated the land to the extent that they found it necessary in order that they might draw therefrom a sustenance.

SPECIALIZATION

Nowadays, with the complexity of civilization, it is not so easy always for men to secure employment. With this increase in complexity of industry and of civilization men are learning special trades and professions. It is a day of specialization. One of the Brahmanist proverbs says, with regard to trades and the importance of them: "The parent that does not teach his child a trade, teaches him to be a thief." Whether that be true or not, the fact is that with present conditions the learning of trades and the application of those trades to industry is of great importance.

MAN'S STEWARDSHIP

If those who labor have in their minds appreciation of the fact that that which they do and the opportunity that is given to them to work is, in fact, a blessing from God; that of the things that they acquire, since they are only tenants here upon the earth, part at least really belongs to the Lord; and if they cultivate that appreciation, they will then be willing, if they are taught the principle, to observe the law of tithing which has been discussed this morning, and at other times during this Conference, which means the giving of one-tenth of the product of one's labor and of one's increase to the Lord, for the promotion of righteousness, truth and faith. Where people observe that principle they receive blessings.

TITHEPAYERS AND EMPLOYMENT

In connection with that, and this question of unemployment, I am reminded of a statement made by President William R. Sloan, of the Northwestern States Mission. He stated, the other day, that through a careful investigation made in his mission, it was shown that in the case of every full tithepayer, there was not one who had lost his job in the midst of this depression. Every one of those who were paying full tithing has been able to retain his work. Is that, to you, any evidence of the benefits that come through the observance of tithing? That is not, however, the primary purpose of tithing. The primary purposes are to train us in obedience, to help us to overcome selfishness, to give of our service and our means to the building up of the work of God, and to the extension of these things which make for the welfare of mankind.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

I need not discuss with you in detail the present economic conditions. We realize what they are. Our staple industries in this state and in other parts of the country are depressed tremendously because of the low prices of those products. Wheat, wool, sugar, and the metals, which affect us directly, are low in price. They are affected by over-production, decrease of demand, and lack of proper distribution. The result is depression and resulting unemployment. It has been suggested, and it seems to me a very desirable thing, that there should be provision made by the government for the registration of all those who are not employed, and special efforts made to try to provide employment for them. There are positions and jobs open, in some instances, that might be filled by those who are most worthy, if their names and the kind of work that they are able to do were available.

STIMULATION OF INDUSTRY AND CONSTRUCTION

It is, of course, a very desirable thing that industries should be stimulated in this locality and other localities, where possible, to take the raw materials and to produce manufactured goods therefrom that are in demand. In connection therewith, any possible construction that can be done at this season of the year and during the winter time, in order to save trouble and suffering to those who are out of employment at the present time, would be very helpful. I want to indorse the recent editorials in the Deseret News and in the Salt Lake Tribune, with regard to the urging of construction work that can properly be undertaken during this fall and winter, by the cities, counties, and states, to the end that those who are out of employment may be able to get some help, at least, in that direction.

HOW THE CHURCH CAN HELP

How can the Church help in this respect? The Church has been charged with being materialistic. Now, the Church is not in a position, as it used to be when it practically occupied this community entirely, to undertake public works. But it can help in trying to put members of the Church in contact with opportunities for jobs. There can be no objection, surely, on the part of any one to that. We should not undertake to open employment offices for people generally, because that is not our function, but we are justified in trying to contact with those who need employment, among the members of this Church, and to help them.

HELP MEMBERS TO HELP THEMSELVES

It is our business also, as bishopsrics of wards, to see that no one suffers. The Church is carrying a heavy responsibility to see to it that none of the active members of the Church suffers for the necessities of life. But in all of this, the effort of the Church authorities, the bishops, presidents of the stakes, and relief societies, is to help people to help themselves. The policy is to aid them to become independent, in order to be able to serve and to help to build up the Church, as well as the community, rather than to have to depend upon the Church for assistance. Yet in times of need,—and there are such times that come to many people—the Church properly steps in and undertakes to help them, and to bring into action other agencies which can help to promote better conditions and the avoidance of suffering.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

I want to call your attention to the fact that there have been suggestions made whereby, in every community throughout the Church where there is unemployment, conditions can be improved. In this city the presidencies of the six city stakes, and the bishoprics of the wards have organized the Deseret Employment Bureau,—a central head—where members of the Church in these stakes can come to seek employment. They are first registered and the necessary information obtained regarding their addresses, qualifications, references, and membership, and then those in charge seek to find employment for them. The result has been that out of about 1800 men who have registered there for the nine months of this year, about 1200 have secured some employment. Also, the General Board of Relief Society, which has an employment bureau for women, has done at least as much in the way of getting employment for women and girls during the same period. Surely, that is a very helpful thing.

EMPLOYMENT PLAN

But that is not all. These six city stakes and the wards included therein have undertaken not only to provide a control employment bureau as a place of final reference after local efforts have been exhausted, but they have undertaken to organize in each ward an employment committee, consisting of a high priest, a seventy, and an elder, together with a relief society member, under the direction of the bishopric. This committee's function is to seek out those in the ward who are out of employment, list their names, addresses, and qualifications, and then in connection with all the priesthood members in the ward, to try to place them in contact with employment. If the priesthood are unable to get employment for them, then they are recommended to the control bureau, which represents the stake agency.

RESULTS IN MAR VISTA WARD

In this connection, I want to just briefly tell you what is being done in one of the wards in California, which is carrying out this very thing. Brother Orson Hewlett told this story of the Mar Vista ward in Los Angeles. They have a committee of this kind. Every Tuesday evening, when they hold their priesthood meeting, those who are out of employment are asked to raise their hands, their names and addresses are taken, and the kind of work they can do noted. Then if there is any one there who can suggest any opening for them—and there are often opportunities that men know of right there in that meeting—they are referred to those places. After these names are taken, this committee and others of the priesthood undertake to try to find them employment. The report is that splendid results have been obtained. Not only that, but the complete census of that ward has been taken and, in connection therewith, there have been listed, in type-written form, the names, addresses, and kind of work that those who are out of employment can perform. The result is that they are making headway and helping in that way to relieve suffering and avoid trouble and distress. I am sure that, if the priesthood quorums throughout the various wards of the Church will carry out this plan wherever unsatisfactory conditions prevail, a great improvement will be manifest.

BENEFITS TO THE PRIESTHOOD

We notice from the Deseret Employment Bureau reports that the applications for employment in the last few months have decreased somewhat. Whether or not that is due to the fact that employment conditions are improving, I am not prepared to say. However, I want to say to you that if all the wards and stakes, where any unemployment is found, will organize these priesthood committees for welfare work and for employment, and if the relief societies will also organize for this purpose, as is being done in many of the wards, that a great deal of trouble will be overcome. The priesthood quorums throughout the Church will help materially in putting the man in contact with the job, thereby providing gainful effort, and overcoming the necessity of providing charity. In addition thereto, the indirect benefits accruing therefrom to the various priesthood quorums will produce a finer social atmosphere, develop a greater cooperative spirit, promote brotherly love and fraternal fellowship, increase attendance at priesthood meetings, increase tithes and offerings, and produce splendid brotherhood.

I appreciate the blessings and privileges of the Church. I realize the fact that there is divine guidance through the inspiration given to those who lead this Church. I pray that we may sustain them, and labor together diligently, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

There are four brethren who have returned from missions who have not yet reported—Brother Andrew Johnson from the Swedish Mission, Brother J. A. Cahoon from the Tongan Mission, Brother Hyrum W. Valentine from the German-Austrian Mission, and Brother Edward P. Kimball from the German-Austrian Mission. We will ask these brethren if they are here to come to the stand and address us, occupying not more than ten minutes each in their remarks. Brother Valentine will be the next speaker after the Choir sings the first hymn in our hymn book, entitled, "The Morning Breaks, the Shadows Flee."

This hymn occupies a place of honor in our hymn book, and I think, justly. Brother George Careless, a former leader of the Choir, composed the music. As there are only twenty lines to the hymn, I am going to take the time to read it all.

"The morning breaks, the shadows flee;
Lo! Zion's standard is unfurled.
The dawning of a brighter day,
Majestic rises on the world.

"The clouds of error disappear
Before the rays of truth divine;
The glory bursting from afar,
Wide o'er the nations soon will shine.

"The Gentile fulness now comes in,
And Israel's blessings are at hand;
Lo! Judah's remnant, cleansed from sin,
Shall in their promised Canaan stand.

"Jehovah speaks! let earth give ear,
And Gentile nations turn and live;
His mighty arm is making bare,
His covenant people to receive.

"Angels from heaven and truth from earth
Have met and both have record borne;
Thus Zion's light is bursting forth,
To bring her ransomed children home."

The Choir then sang the hymn, "The Morning Breaks, the Shadows Flee."

ELDER HYRUM W. VALENTINE

Former President of the German-Austrian Mission

My brethren and sisters, I can assure you that I feel that this is a very signal honor for me, but I feel tremendously weak and most humble in this responsible position.

I have enjoyed exceedingly the spirit of this Conference. I have been thrilled with the messages that have been borne in upon us, and I give myself willingly over to the inspiration of the Lord, that I too may be the means of adding to or emphasizing the messages that we have already received.

I thank the Lord for my membership in this Church, and I have been made to say frequently and recently that I believe the time has long since passed when we should speak of the duties and obligations that rest upon us, as members and workers in this great and glorious service; for I believe that it is not so much a duty, and not so much an obligation that is resting upon us, but it is a divine privilege and opportunity to be a member of this Church; and the greatest blessing that can ever come to us in this world or in the world to come, is to be called upon to render service in this great and glorious cause. I thank the Lord for such a testimony in my heart, and I pray that he may give me the power to take advantage of the opportunities and blessings that are afforded me in this divine work.

We will not know the divinity of this work except by participation therein. I have often said, and I desire to repeat, that of all people in the world we are the six or seven hundred thousand who, if the opportunity were given, and if it were made possible for all to speak with one voice, would be able to rise upon our feet and say, "I know this is the work of God"—a literal fulfilment of the promise of the Savior of the world, when he said: "They that do the will shall know of the doctrine." And I say the six or seven hundred thousand people that we have as members of this Church can rise and say that they know of themselves that this is the work of God.

May we press on, and may we realize that there are specific things that we must do, and not only be members of the Church, in order to realize the growth, the progress, the opportunity, the blessings that are ours in this great work, through our activity and participation. Where in all the world is there such an opportunity for work and service for boys and girls, little children, adults, and those who are advanced in years, as in this the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints?

This organization has sometimes been compared with the German army. It should not be compared with any army or any navy, but it should be contrasted. This is the Church and Kingdom of God, the perfection of an organization for growth, for progress, for development, for construction; whereas an army, a navy, is an organization that may be effective, it may be efficient, but if it is it is effective and efficient for destruction and disintegration. And for that reason the two cannot be compared, but contrasted.

Thank God for our membership! Thank God for our leaders! Thank God for the divinity that is characterized in every activity of this work! May the Lord help us to be faithful and true and diligent and energetic, grasping our opportunities, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER EDWARD P. KIMBALL

Former President of the German-Austrian Mission

I am deeply appreciative of this honor, although I face this responsibility with timidity, realizing that the time of the General Conference is so valuable. However, if I may have the Spirit of the Lord to aid me in expressing some of the things that have been in my heart during the sessions of this Conference, I sincerely hope that the few minutes I occupy will not be wasted.

Naturally, when one returns from the mission field, his thoughts are on missionary work, and mine are on missionary work, particularly during this Conference. I have rejoiced in the admonitions that I have heard the brethren give with regard to better missionary work.

I should like to make a plea this morning in behalf of the at least thirty-eight thousand Saints who are in the European missions. These are the only people I know in the mission field. I realize that if we could take our charge more seriously, if we could begin earlier in the preparation of our missionaries, we could bring a great blessing to those people. This thought was never brought home to me as directly and emphatically before as it was about one year ago, in a city in Germany.

In the German-Austrian Mission we are doing missionary work in ninety-one fields. In these ninety-one fields there are seventy-two organized branches, and thirty-three of these organized branches are entirely in the hands of the local priesthood. President Widtsoe is laying great stress upon the desirability and the advisability of giving our brethren and sisters in those missions the same opportunity for development which has been given to us by activity in the quorums and organizations. He is pointing out to the missionaries and to the Saints that all the officers and the leaders of this Church have been men and women who have come up from the ranks, who have come up from the common people.

We are beginning to realize in those missions that it is not possible for all to come to Zion. I rejoiced when a letter went out from the First Presidency of the Church a year ago, urging the mission presidents and missionaries to encourage our people to remain in the missions, to develop themselves there, and to build up the Church. In reading the revelations of the Lord I have been thrilled to find that it was never the intention that the Saints should all come here. I have come to a conclusion that it is not intended by the Lord that there shall be two types of Latter-day Saints—one type in the missions, who are under certain restrictions, and a different type here at home.

I maintain, my brethren and sisters, that when a group of men and women who have accepted the Gospel in the same way we have are ninety per cent faithful in the payment of their tithing; when they are more than that faithful in the keeping of the Word of Wisdom; when they are ninety-five per cent faithful in attending their meetings, the promise which was made by the Lord in the 133rd section of the Doctrine and Covenants will become operative in their behalf, namely, that in the days when the missionaries should be sent out, the people of the world should hear the fulness of the Gospel in their own tongue, by those who are ordained to this work—not necessarily men who are sent from the center stakes of Zion.

About a year ago we called one of our fifteen young, full-time German missionaries upon a mission. He comes from a large branch. His father has been in the Church about thirty-five years, and has borne the Melchizedek priesthood for probably twenty-five years. The young man was born in the Church. I had the opportunity, six months after he went into the field, of visiting a conference in the branch from which he comes. His father naturally was interested to know what kind of a record his son was making, and when I told him that the boy was measuring up in every manner to the responsibility of missionary work, he replied something like this: "Why shouldn't he? Before you call our boys on missions they must have a testimony of the Gospel. They must keep the commandments, including the Word of Wisdom, the law of tithing. They must attend all their meetings."

Now, my brethren and sisters the day of the make-shift, temporary, front trench organization in the missions is past, at least it is in the European missions, and the mission from which I come is moving rapidly toward permanency. We desire soon to put before the Authorities of the Church a building program. We desire that our Saints there shall have the same privilege of worshiping in desirable places that you have. I don't believe that the Lord is a respecter of persons, either in or out of the Church. I don't believe that he intends that you, here in the shadow of the temples, shall worship in marble palaces, and that our brethren and sisters over there shall always worship in stables and vacated factory buildings.

The thing that we are trying to do now is to develop them along the lines of self-government, and I am proud to testify to you that in the thirty-three branches where the local brethren have charge of the work we are making marvelous progress. I say to the credit of my predecessor, Brother Valentine, that we have built upon the sure foundation which he laid.

The Doctrine and Covenants says: "To some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he was crucified for the sins of the world; to others it is given to believe on their words." And I believe that if the members of this Church went down into their own experiences, into their own hearts, they would find that their testimony has come to them more through believing on the words of those who do know. I maintain that it is possible for every man and woman to have a testimony. I don't believe that we should allow our young people to be converted to this Gospel through the flesh. It cannot be done. Give them all the education we want; give them all the logic and the science it is possible to get, the same as Paul; but even Paul, when he was left merely to the workings of the flesh, was not a servant of the Lord. It was only when the finger of God touched his heart that he received his testimony.

I believe that missionaries are made in the homes. I believe that our brethren and sisters should, in their lives, set an example of righteousness before their children, so that by the time these children reach the age when our young people are ordinarily called on missions, they may not only know according to the flesh, according to the mind, the principles of the Gospel, but that their hearts shall be touched with a testimony which will lead them to go out into the world, seeking first the kingdom of God, desiring to know whether God lives and whether this work should come to all, and knowing when it is given, that it is going to transform the lives of those into whose lives it has come, as it has done in hundreds of thousands of cases.

I bear my testimony to the Saints that there is no desirable or honorable profession or business in this world in which a man cannot reach the utmost heights and still remain a Latter-day Saint. I thrilled when I heard that a full-souled, converted Latter-day Saint had been appointed Ambassador to Mexico. I thrill when I think that an Apostle of the Lord, on an equal footing with every other citizen in this land, stands at the head, practically, of the influence in the Senate.

I tell you, as I look over the Church and as I look at the missionary work today, the work of the Lord needs the best brains, the best heart, and the best testimony that can be had. If we are gaining in respect in the eyes of the world, there is a greater responsibility upon us. Roosevelt spoke a powerful truth, a few years ago, when he said: "The greatness of the fathers becomes to the children a shameful thing if they use it only as an excuse for inaction, instead of as a spur to effort for nobler aims."

Now, my brethren and sisters, we of the younger generation, let us not sell our birthright for a mess of pottage. Let us rise, and raise the standard, and show those who have gone before us that even in our days of affluence, even in our days of plenty, even in our days of ease, it is still possible for a testimony to burn within the heart of a Latter-day Saint in this day, as in the days of the other generations that have gone before us.

Let us not live in the past. That is what is the matter with the nations and the churches of the world today. They are living in the past. We have done wonders in the last hundred years, but if we want to know what the Church is going to arrive at in the next hundred years, I can give you the key: Look now into your own hearts; look into the lives and the testimonies of your boys and girls, and you shall see what the Church is going to accomplish in the next hundred years.

God give us the power and the disposition to train our boys and girls into a knowledge that the work of the salvation of mankind has been committed to the Church of Jesus Christ as an organization. God grant this, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER HYRUM G. SMITH

Presiding Patriarch of the Church

I desire, my brethren and sisters, to have the Spirit and blessings of the Lord, to express my gratitude for your faith and prayers, and for the mercy and blessings of the Lord that I am able to be present upon this occasion, to enjoy in a degree the blessings of health and to enjoy the teachings and testimonies of my brethren. I am pleased to see this house filled with those who are not here to be seen of men, but to serve the living God, and to receive further strength and enlightenment to honor him in the work that is sacred and important in this day and time.

HAPPINESS THROUGH BLESSINGS OF THE GOSPEL

For some reason or other there has never come into my life that happy privilege which has come to many of the missionaries of going into the world and seeing people hearken unto their testimonies and come from a world of darkness into a new world of light and understanding. But it has come to my heart to be happy when I hear the testimonies of my brethren, for I realize that joy has come to their hearts through the blessings of the Lord upon their humble words in defense of truth and righteousness. So I share with them the great joy of seeing our brethren and sisters accept the truth and come out of the world—all the nations and kindreds and tongues of the world—fulfilling the great promises of our Lord in gathering his children to the truth.

STRIVE FOR PEACE

I am grateful for the peace that exists in the Church today. It has always been my pride to be a peacemaker, and to abhor contention and strife. I would like to bespeak for the Church a greater degree of peacemaking. We should all be peacemakers, every one of us, first with ourselves, in our homes, and then with our neighbors. I bespeak for you, my brethren and sisters, a further degree of energy and diligence in the preparation for peace in our own homes and in our own hearts. Then the strength of our testimonies, through our works, will continue to grow and bear fruit, even in spite of the fact that war and contention may be around us.

MAKING A PROPER USE OF OUR AGENCY

I realize also that it is our right to do as we please; in other words, we have our agency. The Lord has never taken it from us, and I am of the opinion that he never will, so long as we do as we please in a manner that will not interfere with any one else in his right to do as he pleases. Yet we should be wise, prudent, and careful in the use of our agency. We are naturally prone to do the things that we know how to do and the things that we like to do. We get into the habit of doing things, sometimes in spite of the fact that we know better than we do. We know we should do better. We know we should do differently than we do, yet we know we have our agency. Therefore, I sincerely admonish my brethren and sisters to strive more diligently to do the things they know best to do, and then strive to do better all the time the right thing.

I have heard it said and preached that there are many among us who pray: "Oh Lord, help us to be right, for our minds are already made up." That is largely due to the fact that we are in the habit of doing about as we please. I hope, my brethren and sisters, when you go to your homes, after this Conference, that you will do very much as you please, but please be more careful, more prayerful, more humble, and more willing to do the things you have been taught, the things you know are better than your own way, even better than you have ever done in the past. By this means we will all grow in the spirit of brotherly love, in the spirit of the Lord, and in the spirit of peace.

THE WORK OF THE LORD

I realize that the time is well spent, but this is a glorious privilege to stand here and look into the faces of thousands of my brethren and sisters who I am sure know as well as I do that this is the work of God, a marvelous work and a wonder. There is nothing in all the world today more wonderful than the work of the Lord, especially the work which has been entrusted to the hands of the Latter-day Saints.

Every part of my body, every bit of strength that I possess, every atom of my being, bears testimony that this is the work of the Lord. In fact, I know nothing else in all the world so well as I know that this is the work of God. I pray for greater strength, greater courage, a greater degree of obedience, that I may go forth with you, my brethren and sisters, and live in such a manner as to enjoy the blessings the Lord has in preparation and in store for us.

BLESSINGS THROUGH KEEPING COMMANDMENTS

I assure you, my brethren and sisters, through the spirit of testimony that fills my soul, that the Lord is not going to leave us, nor this people, without his blessings. If you will use your agency in honoring him, through keeping his commandments, he will bless you in your homes, in your stores, in your fields, in your places of business. He will bless your herds and your cattle and your folds. He will bless you in all your righteous endeavors to do good; he will open up the way before you, that you may have a greater desire to share with others, and to prepare your sons and daughters to go upon missions in defense of his work, in a spirit of true unselfishness. I know that the blessings of the Lord are rich in preparation for the faithful of Israel, both scattered and gathered, and I pray that his Spirit and blessings may continue to grow in your hearts and be at your hand, that you may serve and honor him and be in very deed what you profess to be.

I bless you and promise, my brethren and sisters, that in whatever capacity you are called to labor, whether at home or abroad, peace, contentment, and a greater degree of courage will come to you in your work.

THE NEEDY AND UNEMPLOYED

I pray also that the Lord will bless those who are unemployed, that through a spirit of willingness to work and to share they may enjoy the spirit of peace and the opportunity to provide their necessities. I pray the Lord to bless all the needy, and leave none to suffer unjustly or unnecessarily. As his servant, I bless the Church to this end, that in the Church, through using the powers which God has given us, we may not suffer nor allow our neighbors to suffer unjustly, nor unnecessarily.

May the Lord bless us all and continue to inspire those whom he has called to lead Israel, from his servant, the President of the Church, down to the least and last one called, whether in the priesthood, in the auxiliary organizations, in the temples, in the schools, in the fields or shops, in the offices, or wherever they are called to labor.

I bless the Church and those who are working honestly and willingly to honor and serve the Lord in righteousness and truth, that in their hearts peace may abide, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

There appeared in the Deseret News last night, occupying nearly an entire column, a list of influential citizens who are engaged in marking Utah Pioneer trails—landmarks along the trails. We would like all of our people to take interest in this matter. It is something that every citizen of Utah should be interested in, without regard to creed or religion. We are pleased to see many of the most influential men of the City and State engaged in this movement.

We would like every one to remain in this building after the benediction until the Choir has withdrawn and become stationed in the place where they are to sing for the Movietone News. Their singing is to be heard probably by about thirty million people through the instrumentality of the talking pictures. The Fox Movietone people are here to take the picture.

I wish to say that we are obtaining most marvelous and wonderful response from the broadcasting by radio of the singing of the Choir and the renditions on the Organ every Monday afternoon. We have received letters from all over the country giving expressions of delight regarding these recitals. The broadcasting company that has charge of this work has written to us expressing delight and appreciation. It is no small thing for our Choir and our Organ to be heard all over the United States. This advertises Salt Lake City in a most remarkable way. We are grateful to the radio broadcasting people for giving us this privilege. We are grateful for the loyalty of our Choir and our organists for giving their services in these special recitals. We are thankful to the employers of Choir members for releasing them to come here and give those broadcasts, and I say without fear of contradiction that they are one of the greatest advertisements for Salt Lake City that could possibly be had. In fact we know that other cities (I won't mention the names of any of them) are complaining and asking for the same privilege, but they do not happen to have the Mormon Tabernacle Choir nor do they have the great Tabernacle Organ. But they would like to advertise their own towns.

An anthem, "The Song of the Redeemed," was rendered by the Choir, led by Evan Stephens, the former leader of the Choir and composer of the music to this anthem.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder John F. Bowman.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p. m.

THIRD DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The closing meeting of the 101st Semi-Annual Conference was held Sunday, October 5, 1930, at 2 o'clock, President Heber J. Grant presiding.

The Tabernacle was crowded to capacity and thousands of people listened to the radio broadcast of the services, in the Assembly Hall and upon the Tabernacle grounds.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

Elder Henry H. Rolapp offered the opening prayer.

The Choir and congregation sang "The Spirit of God Like a Fire is Burning."

ELDER CHARLES H. HART

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Canadian Mission

It has been a pleasure to share with you, my brethren and sisters, the instruction and inspiration of these Conference meetings. Some of the meetings have not been broadcast, some of the best. Last evening, for instance, we had very wise and rich instructions from the Presiding Bishop of the Church and from the Presidency of the Church, each of those four individuals, and again this morning at the Assembly Hall at the M. I. A. gathering where our President spoke under the inspiration of the Lord and was very greatly blessed.

I had the opportunity of attending the Canadian missionary reunion last evening, and I was a bit late in getting around to the Assembly Hall meeting this morning, but did get there in time to hear President Grant. He spoke of the wonderful instruction contained in the Era, particularly some of the short editorials. I read one a short time ago entitled "The Disappearing God." That title is one that had been used in an article published in Scribner's for June, in which the author, Mr. Henswood Ward, in his concluding sentence said:

"The God that used to hear my prayers is disappearing, is being nebulized out of existence by the Holmes, the Ames and Millikins."

Mr. Ward refers to a book written by a former minister and now the editor of a Christian magazine and says:

"After I have read it I can think of nothing but the massacre of God that is being made by the best religious thought of the day."

The editor of the Era goes on to say that a great educator from California, standing near the Seagull Monument and listening to the story of how the seagulls saved Utah, remarked: "I can believe that the Almighty intervened to save a people as prayerful as were the pioneers."

Then he went on to say:

"The trouble with the world today is that to be considered educated a man must know all about the gods of mythology, but he need know nothing whatever about the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the true and living God."

And so the world today does not believe very strongly in a personal God, although there are some Christians who are coming to believe in a personal Deity. There are too many of them that believe in that God expressed by the Russian poet Derzhaven:

"O Thou Eternal One whose presence bright
All space doth occupy, all motion guide;
Unchanged through time's all devastating flight!
Thou only God—there is no God beside!
Being above all beings! Mighty One,
Whom none can comprehend and none explore,
Who fill'st existence with thyself alone—
Embracing all, supporting, ruling o'er;
Being whom we call God, and know no more."

Not the God of the Old Testament, nor the God of the New Testament. Not the God of John, as recorded in his first chapter:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

* * * * *

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us," etc.

It is not the God of Paul, as described in the first chapter of Hebrews, first three verses:

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets,

"Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds;

"Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high."

Paul is considered even a little "off" by some modern Christians. It was an eye specialist to whom I took one of our missionaries for special treatment who characterized Apostle Paul as a neurotic—Paul, of whom it was eloquently said by Bossuet: "He went into polished Greece, the mother of oratory and philosophy, and there established more churches than Plato had acquired disciples, by an eloquence that was thought divine. He pushed his conquests still further. Rome even listened to his voice. He brought the majesty of the Roman fasces to the feet of Jesus in the person of a proconsul;" then the declaration is made that the day would yet come "when her citizens would deem themselves more honored by an epistle of St. Paul addressed to them than by all the far-famed harangues delivered in the forum by Cicero."

In stopping at the home of Daniel Webster while passing through a part of our mission territory, in the State of New Hampshire, I found this sentiment being distributed, a declaration of the man who is voted by Harvard, the oldest university in America, as being one of the seven great orators of the world:

"I love to dwell on the tender recollections, the kindred ties, the early affections, and the touching narratives and incidents which mingle with all I know of this primitive family abode. I weep to think that none of those who inhabited it are among the living; and if I ever fail in affectionate veneration for him who reared it and defended it against savage violence and destruction, cherished all the domestic virtues beneath its roof, and through the fire and blood of seven years revolutionary war, shrank from no danger, no toil, no sacrifice, to serve his country, and raise his children to a condition better than his own, may my name and the name of my posterity be blotted forever from the memory of mankind."

So if our Brother Kimball takes just pride in doing honor to his distinguished father, we can understand that that is a sentiment which the American people approve as shown in purchasing at a high price the few lines from the great orator which I have just read to you.

Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, paid one of the finest tributes to the Latter-day Saints that has been paid to them, in his "Roundelay of Salt Lake," and apologized for some disparaging words that he had written against them in earlier years. He said of the pioneers of the middle west:

"But I say to you there is nothing in the pages of history so glorious, so entirely grand, as the lives of these noble Spartan fathers and mothers of Americans, who begot and brought forth and bred the splendid giants of the generation that is now fast following the setting sun of their unselfish and all immortal lives."

I thought this morning in the M. I. A. gathering when I witnessed those splendid young people coming forth from that meeting, and I knew there were many thousands more in the Church of like people, of what Professor Roswell H. Johnson said concerning us. Among the many good things that were given to us during the past year or two, he said this in reference to our Church:

"The eugenic situation in Mormonism is better than in other cults, because the Church has made, in its young people's organizations, a definite and systematic effort to teach better mate selection. This effort is superior to that of any other cult known to me.

"The Church is extraordinarily solicitous to provide buildings largely for the joint social use of the young men's and young women's societies, and to promote outdoor activities, to foster such companionship. In fact, in the Mormon Church every young person is provided a wider acquaintance with eligibles of the other sex than is to be found in any other cult known to me."

So last evening in meeting those splendid young missionaries I thought what a happy mating it would be if some of those young people, now that they had completed their missionary work, would begin mating. The young men would be assured of very noble and pure women and the same thing on the part of the young women, they would be assured noble men. I have congratulated some of those young people who have married since they returned.

We in the Canadian Mission are happily very close to the real shrines of the Church. I have often thought what other sects would do if they had a spot where the prophet of the living God was born and one where a sacred record was delivered to him, his boyhood home and the sacred grove where the Father and the Son appeared to him.

These young people in assembling at Vermont where we met in conference for the first time this year were very greatly exhilarated by the beautiful spirit of peace and of love which pervaded those places which are recorded as sacred precincts. The grounds are very beautiful and well kept by Brother Smith and his family, and the neighbors from surrounding places came there and listened attentively and respectfully to the things that were presented. The reactions that we got from our missionaries in having the privilege of going to the place where they realize that the prophet of this dispensation was born, the grove where he offered the prayer that brought to him the Father and the Son, the sacred hill where a volume of scripture was brought forth, and the place where that record was translated, all those things help to impress the testimony of the Gospel upon our young people.

I must not talk longer. I might read you some of the expressions of these young people who had the privilege recently, of visiting some of these places. We held conference for the first time at the monument in Vermont. They all testify of the strengthening of their testimonies and thank the Lord that they have had the privilege of standing on what they regard as sacred ground.

I know there are other shrines of other denominations within the limits of our territory, but I know of none of them that claims the distinction of having a place where a prophet of the living God was born or where an angel of God appeared or where God the Eternal Father and his Son Jesus Christ appeared. May we treasure these sacred memories, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I asked for a list to be furnished me of people prominent in the Church who had passed away since our last Conference. I am surprised to find that the name of P. Rulon Christensen, president of the French Mission, was omitted. He filled a very splendid mission and we are grateful for his fine labors. We extend our sympathy to his family.

I am also surprised that I myself did not think of one of the general officers of the Church, one of the assistant historians, Brother Junius F. Wells, the instrument in the hands of our Heavenly Father, by direction of President Brigham Young, of traveling all over the Church and establishing the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. It fell to my lot to be one of the officers of the first Mutual Improvement Association of the young men, organized by Brother Wells. Three of the four officers are living today, Counselor B. Morris Young, Hyrum H. Goddard, the Secretary, and myself. Henry A. Woolley, the President, has passed away.

I was intimately associated as a partner in business and in a church capacity with Junius F. Wells, nearly all of my life. I never heard him speak an unkind word of anyone. If he could not speak good of people he said nothing. He did us honor and credit wherever he traveled at home or abroad. He was a worthy son of a worthy father. His heart and soul were wrapped up in Mutual Improvement work. He gave to that work the very best that was in him. It is a source of regret to me that I could not be present at his funeral. May the blessings of the Lord attend his family.

PRESIDENT ANTHONY W. IVINS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Before beginning my remarks I desire to express the gratitude I feel this afternoon that my life has been prolonged and the privilege granted me of meeting again with this vast congregation of Latter-day Saints, these people of American birth, people of English birth, people from the Scandinavian countries, people from that wonderful nation,

Germany, people from France, and from the islands of the sea. It is a miracle of the ages that these representative people are gathered together, baptized into one faith, bound together by a single brotherhood where the prejudices of the past may be forgotten, and they have become one in the service of the Lord, looking steadfastly forward for the coming and establishment of the kingdom of Christ his Son.

I have opened the Bible at the scripture to which Brother J. Golden Kimball called our attention at the beginning of the Conference. The Lord here tells us that when a man speaks in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not nor come to pass, it is evident that the man spoke presumptuously and without authority. It conversely follows that if a man prophesies and the words which he utters come true he is a true prophet.

NEWSPAPER HEADLINES

A few weeks ago, unfolding the morning paper, as it is my custom to do before going to my daily tasks, I read the following headlines: "Jobless Fire Idaho Forests; idle men start blazes in order to procure work; one thousand acres of timber on fire." "Rebels begin rule in Argentina, after battle in streets. Government quits after rebellion takes many lives. Argentine Army and Navy mutiny." "Santo Domingo made shambles by storm. Deaths near two thousand. Damage set at twenty millions of dollars."

The following morning the paper reported four thousand bodies, victims of the tornado which had swept the city, had been cremated. The same paper contained a map designating the parts of Brazil, Argentina and Peru which were in open rebellion to their governments, in South America, and told us that nearer home, in Illinois, a party of American men and women, returning from an evening spent at a theater were held up and robbed of one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

On my desk, at the same time was a local paper which gave notice to the people of the city and state that a defaulting employee who had been arrested, charged with having embezzled one thousand dollars from his employer, was released by the police department, after the gamblers of the city, to whom he had lost the embezzled money, had been assessed and returned the money which the defaulter had lost to them, with the threat that if they refused their gambling dens would be closed. It logically follows that if they complied with the demand made they would receive protection and be permitted to continue their nefarious occupation.

SIGNS OF CHRIST'S COMING

Contemplating these occurrences and those of the past six months, since the last General Conference of the Church was held, my mind reverted to the words of Christ our Lord uttered just prior to his betrayal, trial and crucifixion. As Jesus came out from the temple at Jerusalem his disciples called his attention to the manner of construction of the buildings and the great stones which the workmen had placed in the walls. The Redeemer answered them saying:

"Seest thou these great buildings? There shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down."

Passing on to the Mount of Olives his disciples spoke to him privately saying:

"Tell us when these things shall be? And what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the World?"

"And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you. "For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many."

And then he went on to tell them that it would be at a time when they would hear of wars and rumors of wars, that nation would rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; that there would be famine and pestilences and earthquakes in divers places.

He declared that Jerusalem would be trodden down by the Gentiles and her people scattered, but with the assurance that at a period designated as the latter days, when the times of the Gentile nations would be fulfilled, they would be gathered again and restored to the heritage promised by the Lord to their father Abraham.

He declared that prior to his coming to assume dominion over the earth upon which we dwell the fulness of the Gospel which he taught and exemplified in his life, would be restored to earth and carried to all nations, kindreds, tongues and people; that those whom he would call would go into all the world, calling the people back to faith in a living God, and service to him who created the heavens and the earth, the sea and the fountains of water, and warning them that the hour had come when the righteous judgments of an offended God, whom they had ceased to serve, whom they defy, and whose holy name they blaspheme, had come.

He declared that after testimony of the restoration had been borne by the faithful witnesses whom he would choose, he would speak to the people of the world by the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and of tempests and the waves of the sea heaving themselves beyond their bounds, and earthquakes which would cause men to fall to the ground and not be able to stand. It was to be a time of commotion which would bring perplexity and distress to the nations, such as the world had never known. "And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in power and great glory."

Nearly twenty centuries have passed since the declarations to which I have referred were made. It cannot be claimed by critics, as is so often the case, that there is an error in dates, and that the declarations were made after the events referred to had occurred.

FULFILMENT FOLLOWS

Now, what of the fulfilment?

The spot upon which the temple of Solomon was to be erected was designated by the Prophet Gad. It was built at Jerusalem, upon Mount Moriah, said to be the place where Abraham built the altar upon which Isaac was to be offered a sacrifice to the Lord. At least 150,000 men were employed in the construction of the temple. It was without doubt the most expensive, elaborate and richly adorned edifice erected up to the time of its construction, about a thousand years before the birth of Christ. Gold was used lavishly in its adornment, at least seven million dollars' worth as we count values.

The temple was desecrated and a large portion of its priceless adornment carried away by the armies of Egypt and the kings of Israel, after the Ten Tribes had revolted. It was finally destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, the great king, at the time the Jews were carried into captivity to Babylon, about 600 years before the birth of Christ. The Bible tells us that he carried away all the treasures of the house of the Lord and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon the king had made in the temple of the Lord.

It was about eighty-seven years later, after the fall of the Babylonian kingdom to the Medo-Persian armies, that Cyrus, the Persian king, issued a proclamation granting permission to those of the Jews who desired to do so to return to Jerusalem and rebuild the temple which had been destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar.

A large number of Jewish families availed themselves of this opportunity and under the leadership of Zerubbabel and others returned to Jerusalem, rebuilt the temple and restored the ritual which had been established there by King Solomon.

After the conquest of the Medo-Persian kingdom by Alexander of Macedon, known as Alexander the Great, the Greek general Artiochus Epiphanes, took the city of Jerusalem by storm, put many of the inhabitants to death, profaned the temple, and dedicated it to the idolatrous worship of Jupiter Olympus.

Forty years before the birth of Christ, Herod the Great became king of Judea. He was an Idumean or Edomite by birth, a descendant of Abraham through Isaac, being descended from Esau, his eldest son, and was not in sympathy with the Jewish people, or their religion, but through the influence of Rome had become the titular king of Judea. It was this man who ordered the slaughter of the children, after the birth of Christ, in order to remove one whom he feared might seek to succeed to the throne which he occupied.

He undertook the restoration of the temple on a far more elaborate plan than any builder who had preceded him in so far as size and substantial construction were concerned, but not with the priceless embellishment which Solomon had lavished upon it. He declared that he would build it so strong that it would never again be destroyed. This construction was in progress at the birth of Christ, and was finished during his ministry.

During the war of the Maccabees, when the Maccabaeus brothers, Jonathan, Judas and Simon sought to throw off the yoke which the government established by Alexander the Great had fastened upon them, ambassadors were sent to Rome with a petition to the senate asking for support in their wars with the Greeks.

The petition was regarded with favor, and a treaty entered into by which Rome pledged herself to come to the aid of the Jews, and the latter agreed to assist Rome against her enemies in case of need. Rome notified Greece that if her oppression of the Jews did not cease at once she would make war upon her both by land and by sea. The text of this treaty, which is available, was written upon plates of brass, and sent to Jerusalem. One of the few instances where a message was written upon metal plates in ancient times. As a result of this treaty Palestine became a Roman province, and remained so until after the birth and crucifixion of our Lord.

This was the condition at Jerusalem at the time Jesus made the statements regarding the destruction of the temple to which I have referred.

Jewish and Roman thought were incompatible, and in A. D. 66, thirty years after the crucifixion, a general revolt against Rome occurred, and the Jews took possession of Jerusalem.

Vespasian and his son Titus were sent with a Roman army to bring them back into submission, and after a siege which continued about four years, one of the most frightful and atrocious sieges of history, characterized by unspeakable horrors, the city was taken by Titus, who burned the temple, leveled the city to the ground and scattered the Jewish people to the four corners of the earth. Historians tell us that the very foundation stones were dug up by the Romans in the hope that treasure might be found buried there.

THREE CENTURIES LATER

It is said that the Roman emperor, Julian, three centuries later, in his hatred of Christianity, which had become the dominant religion of his country, seeking to restore the pagan worship, sought to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem, but met with so many obstacles, some of which appeared to be supernatural, abandoned the undertaking and returned to Rome with the statement: "The Nazarene has triumphed."

I have gone briefly over the history of the past in order to bring before you, my brethren and sisters, the undeniable evidence that the words uttered by Christ our Lord, in which he declared the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem and the scattering of the Jews have been literally fulfilled.

SIGNIFICANCE OF SCRIPTURE

You may ask, what relationship to us has this scripture to which I have called attention? We who are assembled here, members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, gathered in conference nearly two thousand years after the events referred to occurred.

It has very great significance, my brethren and sisters, and it is for that reason that I have called your attention to it. It tells us how unchangeable and certain is the fulfilment of the words of the Lord as he has uttered them through his servants the prophets.

The fulfilment of prophecy came in the past and generally comes through such natural means that we hardly observe it or know that it is coming. And so I feel that there are many others of the declarations of the prophets to which I might turn, the fulfilment of which is before our very eyes, and almost without our knowledge or attention.

LIGHT AND KNOWLEDGE

Seventy years have passed away since I became a member of the Church by baptism. During that period of time there has radiated from the presence of God our Father a dispensation of light, increasing knowledge and intelligence, which is the glory of God, to a degree never before known, nor even dreamed of by our fathers.

With these increased conveniences and blessings which have come to us, there should have been manifested in our lives both by example and precept, greater faith in and service to our Father who is in heaven, who is the author of all these blessings.

I ask you, my brethren and sisters, and with you I ask the Christian world at large, has this been the case? Are we a better people in our morals? Do we observe with greater reverence the Sabbath day to keep it holy? Do we revere the name of the Lord and hold it more sacred because of his increased blessings? Have we become less selfish and grasping after wealth? Do we think more of the poor and unfortunate, or do we in our hurried struggle of life forget them and leave them to suffer while we live surrounded with abundance? Do we love and serve our country more, and more devotedly honor its laws?

I leave you to answer these questions.

VISIT TO ST. GEORGE

A short time ago, in company with President Grant, I visited my old home at St. George. Early in the morning before it was light, I rose and walked out to the little cemetery and stood by the graves of my parents. As the light increased I walked down the narrow streets and read the inscriptions on the tombstones. I remembered every one of the men and women whose names were inscribed upon them. I thought of them all and could remember something in their lives—every one from the humblest to the most honored—which had led me to love and honor them.

I knew these men as I have known no others. I knew the sacrifices which they had made, that they had given all they had to give for an ideal. I had seen them face danger with the courage of Spartans, and perform acts of mercy with the gentleness of women, and when their mortal race was run and they were face to face with death, meet it with the sublime resignation of martyrs.

They had been my teachers, the guardians of my youth. They taught me faith in a living God, that he is the same good Heavenly Father that he ever was, and will watch over and bless all those who put their trust in him. They taught me that birth into this life was not the beginning of my existence nor death the end of it. They taught me to defraud no man, though the thing may be small. They taught me to love virtue and refrain from any habit which, when my record is read from the house top, as it will be, would bring the blush of shame to my cheek. They taught me to love my country and honor and obey its laws; that the government under which it is my privilege to live is a God-given heritage, and that it was my duty to defend it against all enemies, be they foreign or domestic, if necessary at the cost of life itself.

A SILENT PRAYER

As I stood there in the gray dawn, in that silent city of the dead, I breathed a silent prayer of thanksgiving to my Father in heaven that my lot had been cast with these humble, God-fearing men and women, and prayed that as I had been with them and served them in mortal life, so might I be with them for service in the life to come. And I knew that if I proved my devotion to the truth as they proved theirs that my prayer would be answered.

I desire to say to you, my brethren and sisters, that had I been brought into any other cemetery within the boundaries of this state and walked there and communed with the people who have given their lives for this same ideal I would have found exactly the same condition.

EARLY DAY FIDELITY

I could not refrain, and that was what led me to quote from these daily papers as I did in the beginning of my remarks, from drawing the contrast between the conditions which existed at the time when the example and influence of these men dominated the politics of this State and those which exist today, if we are to believe the reports which come to us through the daily press of the country.

I do not remember an instance where an innocent man was convicted of wrongdoing, or where a known criminal escaped punishment. There were no men in the State prison who had violated the trust reposed in them by their fellow citizens who had elected them to office, nor men out of prison who, if justice were administered, would be inside. Men were taught that public office was a public trust and must be administered with fidelity and honor, and they did it. I wonder what their reaction would be if they were here today to witness the changed conditions which exist in this modern world of ours, a world so different from that in which they lived that it can scarcely be recognized as belonging to the same planet upon which they lived.

GOOD MEN NEEDED IN OFFICE

I have no desire to go back to that day, to exchange automobiles for ox teams, which I have driven, nor to exchange our wonderful harvesting machinery for the cradle with which I have harvested grain, and the flail with which I threshed it. But I do appeal to you, my brethren and sisters, to return to the old paths of virtue, honor and integrity which your fathers trod. No matter what the development of science or of invention may bring to us these virtues remain the same. They are eternal truths and the advancement of our so-called civilization cannot change them.

No one will deny that we are living in perilous times. No one who is familiar with the Scripture will deny that we are living at the time when our Lord says his glorious appearance is near.

Only the day before yesterday the press advised us that one million dollars was being subscribed by the lawless element in Chicago for the purpose of removing from office the Commissioner of Police because of his activities in the suppression of crime.

If it is true that organized crime has fastened its tentacles upon our own city and state, as reported in the quotations which I made in the beginning of my remarks, is it not time that we arouse from the lethargy of indifferent citizenship and demand reform and see to it that good men and wise men are selected to control our public affairs?

There are such men, equal to any of the past. They are to be found in all political parties. They are not confined to any religious organization, but are all around us in every vocation of life. Such men now represent us in political life, in national, state and city affairs. As I know many of these men I cannot think of others for whom I would desire to exchange them. I regret that I cannot feel so toward all.

I make no plea for any candidate, for any political party, or any church. But I do plead with all the people, and particularly the church, and I refer to all Christian people, to unitedly resolve that the sacred heritage bequeathed to us by our fathers be sacredly preserved, that this country of ours may continue to be a light to the world, reaching out its hands to all people, guaranteeing to all men liberty under the law, but license to do wrong to none. I regard it as my duty and the duty of every other professed Christian to assume this attitude if our country is to be rescued from anarchy, violence and chaos.

My brethren and sisters, I have studied the history of the past. I know the story of the rise and fall of Rome, of Babylon, of Egypt, and of other great nations, and the one outstanding thing that brought that about was the corruption of the officials who were placed in charge of affairs of state. I do not wish to continue to quote scripture in order to demonstrate that we are living in a time when the Lord has said that these very things shall exist. But he has warned us against them. He has declared the destiny of this nation and of all other nations. I wish simply to say that if they are to persist, if they continue, it will be when the people return to the Lord God of heaven and in justice and righteousness serve him, both in civil and ecclesiastical affairs. And if this shall fail these very elements that have resulted in the destruction of the civilizations of the past, if they shall be permitted by us to persist, will eventually bring to us perplexity, confusion and final chaos.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters, and may he help us all to magnify our callings, to stand righteously for that which is right and immovably opposed to that which is wrong, is my prayer, and I ask it through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

The Choir rendered the anthem, "That Sweet Story of Old," solo part by Cannon Lund.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We have as usual—and this you have heard before—more speakers than we have time. We would like to hear from all mission presidents. We have the authorities to present, and we would like to hear from our sisters. But there is only one way we can do it, and that is to pull the coat tails of those who do not look at the clock, as we will have to limit each of them to five minutes.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

President of the Central States Mission

I have been greatly impressed during the past summer in reading the History of the Church which has recently been compiled by President Brigham H. Roberts, and in finding therein the expressions of the leaders of our Church who have long since passed away.

I commend to the men and women of this Church, especially the youth, the reading of that history. I hope that it may be found in all the homes of the people.

Those men bear witness, and the history of them gives evidence, that they were in reality servants of the living God. No one could accomplish what Brigham Young did, and those mighty pioneers who were with him in the beginning of this great work in this western country, unless God had been with. I think we ought to become more familiar with the work of our people, that we may realize what it cost to establish the Church of God in this land. The Lord has provided a background of history that will refute any charge that could be brought against this people. The historical record is wonderful and the doctrinal record is just as certain. The Lord selected mighty men, and according to the Prophet Joseph Smith, they were chosen before the foundations of this earth were laid, to establish his work in the day and age in which we live. I believe, my brethren and sisters, that things do not happen by chance; but that the Lord provides for all the things that have come to pass. Then he has placed the responsibility on his people to do their best to carry out his purposes. He gave a revelation in which the free agency of man is referred to as follows:

"Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness;

"For the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good they shall in nowise lose their reward."

I bear testimony to you, my brethren and sisters, that the men who have stood at the head of this Church in this land from the days of Brigham Young until now have been men of God and have exercised the privilege that God gave them, and that the Church has been stabilized and led just as though our Eternal Father had been here. For

I am convinced that Jesus Christ, who gave his life for the children of men, has never at any time since the organization of this Church been very far from it. I bear my testimony to you in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JAMES H. MOYLE

President of the Eastern States Mission

My brethren and sisters, I am pleased to say that the missionaries in the Eastern States are in exceptional good health, and are performing a splendid work.

There is probably nothing that indicates this more, in view of the distressing shortage of employment, than the fact that the number of tithe-payers has materially increased, with about twenty-four per cent increase in the amount of tithing paid. In confirmation of what has been already said, none, so far as I know, of those who pay tithing, is unemployed, with one exception, and he lost his temper and quit his job.

In confirmation of what President Grant has said, I can testify to the fact that there is a marked change taking place in the sentiment of the people of the country toward our people. The Church is really, as he said, coming into its own, and I can conceive of nothing, unless it be the providences of God, that has made the marvelous change that has taken place. Naturally, no doubt, for I believe that is the way the Lord works. I am sure that the organ recitals from this tabernacle have performed a marvelous work in softening the minds of the people and helping to bring them to a realization of the fact that such music does not come from a low, uncultured and base people, but rather those with high, noble and pure conceptions. The work too on this temple block, at the Bureau of Information, I believe is being very helpful in changing the attitude of the many travelers and tourists who come to Utah. They meet our people and become acquainted with them and their accomplishments. They constitute a great auxiliary force in refuting the scandalous stories that have been so frequently circulated about us. These people frequently manifest their friendliness toward our missionaries, as they very frequently report in our conferences.

One of the most notable developments in the Mission is the changed attitude which has taken place toward us, particularly since the Centennial celebration. We have comparatively little trouble in getting notices into the papers. They treat us well. Many of them will publish much that we want them to do. We gathered something over a thousand clippings and some of them splendid, lengthy articles, dealing fairly with our people, concerning the Centennial celebration.

I am sure the periodicals and daily newspapers are ready to publish, if prepared in the right way, the most important and interesting facts relating to our organization, the culture "Mormonism" is developing, our accomplishments in matters of health, superior methods of training, educating and developing the young; our unparalleled missionary system and method of developing preachers which enables the Church to carry on without a paid clergy, and which insures the highest percentage of all church-going attendance without a paid preacher; a charity system, which is equally unique, not only in its completeness, but which is carried on so as to insure one hundred per cent of the money contributed going to the charity for which it was contributed, without anything being deducted for collection or distribution. I know of no other organization in which that is accomplished.

These are of the utmost interest to all thinking people interested in the development and progress of human welfare, and when once understood arouse interest in learning what is behind it all; in other words, the material benefits or "fruits of Mormonism" once known arouse a desire to know why and from whence they come, and induce a study of the principles of the Gospel.

During the last five months we have developed preaching the Gospel, as predicted in the Book of Mormon, from the house tops, or more literally over the radio free of charge in a number of large and prominent cities in the Mission. This is being done by young inexperienced missionaries. They write their own addresses and deliver them, first submitting them to us for revision. But in only a few cases has there been any substantial revision. Young men coming to the Mission at nineteen and twenty years of age. One, and I think the one who has led most successfully in obtaining this privilege, came to the Mission only twenty years of age. At first we were given only ten or twelve minutes in which to speak, the balance of the half hour to be devoted to music. Oh, if we could have more missionaries who could sing! If you will furnish us with singers we will secure the radio for preaching the Gospel free. It was not long before the time was extended to a full hour in some cases, a half hour for preaching and a half hour for singing and music. And in all cases the time to preach has been extended.

I would like to call attention to one other very interesting development. We are now exhibiting Mormonism in the fairs and large exhibitions, in which we lay special stress upon the Word of Wisdom and its benefits upon our educational system, our training of the young; and our charity system. We are calling attention notably to the fact that not a dollar is expended in collecting and distributing funds for charitable purposes.

This affords unexampled opportunities for Gospel conversations and the distribution of tracts by the tens of thousands. More than five thousand were distributed by half a dozen missionaries in one day from our booth in the great Eastern States Exposition recently held at Springfield, Massachusetts.

The best feature of it all is the presentation of a few of our finest missionaries, whose very presence attracts attention and radiates the spirit of the Gospel of our Redeemer.

My time is up. May the Lord help us to appreciate the great work in which we are engaged, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER MILES L. JONES*President of the East Central States Mission*

I am very pleased, my brethren and sisters, to have the opportunity of visiting with you upon this occasion. I have had the privilege of attending every session of the Conference and I have enjoyed them to the fullest extent.

I heartily endorse what was said by President Grant and President Moyle, also by President McMurrin, in regard to two or three items. President McMurrin referred to the shortage of missionaries. I was asked today by one brother if volunteers would be accepted. I want to say, brethren and sisters, if you have volunteers they should be recommended and called in the regular way. We can use one hundred of them in the East Central States Mission.

President Grant referred to the wonderful work that is being done by the Choir. I can bear testimony to that because in passing along the streets of Louisville and other cities we find every Monday afternoon that those programs are being broadcast so that even the people in the streets are able to hear them; and they are doing a wonderful amount of good because they make many friends for us and give us an opportunity to talk upon the principles of the Gospel.

Just a few days ago we held a series of meetings in one of the cities close to Louisville. The next morning after holding these meetings, as my wife and I were leaving the city, we met one of our local brethren who remarked that he had just been talking to one of his neighbors who belongs to another denomination. In the course of this conversation he said:

"In our services last night our minister referred to a certain class of people in this manner: 'There is a little community of saints here that meet together as a family, and they are the best people in all the world, and they have a prophet to lead them.'"

I want to tell you, my brethren and sisters, there is a community in Bath County that meet together as a family. They are among the best people in all the world, and they have a prophet to lead them. And in practically every county in this nation there are similar communities, and they are led by a prophet of God, even President Heber J. Grant, who stands at the head of this Church today. I know of his integrity. I have traveled with him, I have eaten with him, and I have slept with him. I know that his heart and his soul are wrapped up in this work, and he is God's mouthpiece upon the earth.

May our Father's choicest blessings ever abide with each and every one of us, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER ARTHUR WELLING*President of the North Central States Mission*

My Brethren and Sisters: I bring you the greetings of the missionaries and saints of the North Central States Mission, all of whom are well and enjoying their work. That the drouth, unemployment and the low price of wheat have produced a lean year in the semi-arid states of Montana, the Dakotas, and the wheat producing Canadian provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, you need not be told. Minnesota has fared better. But our people are not complaining. They are holding their own. So far we have not fallen off in tithing paid nor in number of converts baptized. We hope our people will continue their good work until times shall mend, and everything be all right again.

We are glad to testify of the changed conditions of friendliness toward our people already spoken of in this Conference. An illustration of this friendly interest, arising largely, no doubt, from attention given tourists on this block, from radio sermons of leading brethren, and from the broadcast of Tabernacle Organ and Choir recitals, may interest you. Within the recent past two of our capable and charming lady missionaries have been entertained at the home of the Governor of one of our States, where they were graciously and cordially received by the Governor's wife, for whom they sang some of the songs of Zion, and at whose invitation they joined in prayer before leaving her home. This good woman was full of praise for leading brethren and sisters with whom she and her husband's party had been associated here. The more people know about you, the better they receive your missionaries abroad. To be a Mormon missionary from Utah is no longer a reproach, but a distinction.

It must not be inferred, however, that this friendliness implies a very general acceptance of the Gospel as we teach it. Not so. Men applaud the perfection of our Church organization, the fact that "it works," and that it puts tens of thousands of its people to work. The financial system of the Church, tithing and fast offerings, are the admiration of some and the envy of others. Our missionary system, and the Word of Wisdom, etc., receive commendation of intelligent people everywhere. But there they stop. That God the Eternal Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, are real personages, capable of appearing to men as we affirm they did to Joseph Smith in the Sacred Grove in western New York in 1820, few men of the world believe. If Latter-day Saints were willing to abandon Joseph Smith and his claims to seership, throw overboard the first great vision with all that it implies as to the actuality, and the reality of the personality of God, the rest of Mormonism could be popularized over night. Stand by these declarations of divine origin for our religion, and the doctrine of Deity inherent therein, and you stand alone, your only consolation, if such it be, that you stand alone with God.

Your missionaries in the field believe in and love to testify of "God the Eternal Father, and of his Son, Jesus Christ, and of the Holy Ghost;" and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the true and living God. They also believe in good men everywhere, and are grateful for their growing friendship. Of you, here at home, they like to think as "The salt of the earth." "By their fruits shall ye know them" is a text they love. To you they look to vindicate what they proudly boast as "The fruits of Mormonism."

"Oh ye that embark in the service of God," your missionary would say to you if he could, "See that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day."

God bless the youth of Israel and the missionaries of his Church everywhere in the world, we humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER NOAH S. POND

President of the Northern States Mission

I pray in my heart that we may be able to take to our homes in the wards and stakes and in the mission fields the spirit and instruction of this great Conference.

Sister Pond and I are happy in the work in the Northern States Mission. The auxiliary organizations and the Aaronic Priesthood, I believe, are being properly supervised and more than ordinary progress is being made. As a Church and as missionaries representing the Savior in the mission field, we cannot but acknowledge the eternal fitness of these men, times and occurrence of things, just as Columbus was led to discover the new world, although his reward was the return to the old country in chains. Just as John Milton was led to the steps of the palace of Whitehall Chapel three hundred years ago with his plea for "Liberty of the press," although diplomacy drove him into seclusion and exile. A courtier at the court told him that one of two things would happen, he would either be locked up in the castle or lose his head. But the intellectual germ of Milton's "Plea" fell into the hands of Englishmen, Frenchmen, Germans, Scotchmen, Yankees, Turks, Japs and Russians; and liberty and freedom were born and realized. Galileo, Luther and Washington are further examples of the eternal fitness of men and messages.

Joseph Smith, God's great prophet, came in the right century and to the right nation and country. He could not so successfully have delivered his message in an earlier century or in another country. And these things are marvelous in contemplation, but we see our Father's regulatory and supervisory guidance of time and events for the benefit of his people.

I am happy to testify of the truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I am happy to have the privilege of testifying to the people of the earth. God bless our leaders today and all who follow. May we have that testimony of the Gospel, the richest gift of God, that will ultimately lead us into the kingdom of our Father and bring us eternal life, is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER WILLIAM R. SLOAN

President of the Northwestern States Mission

Since our last Conference it has been my happy pleasure to go on the streets of Portland one evening and witness a street meeting being held by the missionaries there. Sister Ada Strong of Salt Lake City was speaking and gave a most excellent discourse on the divine mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith. A well-dressed gentleman walked into the crowd and stood right near my side. He said in an undertone voice, loud enough that I could hear what he was saying: "There they are, telling the same old story, and there is nothing to it."

I wish that gentleman were here today. I wish that he could witness this vast gathering of men and women, the cream of the earth, and I wonder if he could then make such a statement. I wish that he might hear this wonderful choir that we have listened to today with so much pleasure and interest, I wish he could hear this world-famed organ of ours; and I wonder if he then could say there is nothing to this work.

Is it possible, brethren and sisters and friends, that a young man such as Joseph Smith was, with five colleagues, one hundred years ago—these boys as they were, all under thirty-one years of age, six of them together in a room—could effect and establish an organization out of which has grown a Church that today stands the marvel of the world? It is ridiculous to think that, brethren and sisters, in the light that this man thought of it. So I want to give you that thought today.

I am happy to contemplate the words of men like the grand old man known as the Dean of American Education, Dr. Winship, who said that Utah stands positively in the forefront of all the States of the Union in her activities for the saving of the youth. He said that he had praised Utah and the Mormons in every State of the Union, and had never had anything to apologize for.

Dr. Nixon Carver said:

"I have never found more sound and wholesome personal habits than among the Mormons; I have never mingled with a people who showed fewer signs of dissipation; I have never studied groups of people who seemed better nourished and more healthful; I have never known of a people who took greater pains to educate their children." "This gives a clue to the success of the Mormons as colonizers and Nation Builders." "I have studied the philosophy of the world, both ancient and modern, but the greatest of all philosophies is the philosophy of Mormonism."

George Wharton James, an American writer, said:

"The boy Joseph Smith was but a hundred years ahead of his time. Yet, he being dead yet speaketh. The work he began has never ceased. Who can explain Joseph Smith? What is their test? Is it not beyond all reason that a lad, born of poor parents, devoid of any save the commonest education, too poor to buy books, should have accomplished what he did in less than forty years, unless there was some great reason for it?"

"Let anyone, even a literary genius after forty years of life, try to write a companion volume to the Book of Mormon and then almost daily for a number of years give out 'revelations' by the score that internally harmonize one with another, at the same time formulate a system of doctrine for a new church, introduce many new principles, resuscitate extinct priesthoods, and formulate a system of church government which has no superior on earth."

"To deny to such a man wonderful power over the human heart and intellect is absurd. Only fanatical prejudice can ignore it. However he may be accounted for by the reasoning mind, Joseph Smith the Mormon Prophet was one of the wonders of his time."

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the great novelist and spiritualist, said he believed that Joseph Smith was a true medium.

Many of the notables whom I could mention are just as loud in their praise and have a true appreciation of this wonderful Church and its organization.

I remember a year ago listening to the words of President Nibley when he said among other things, "Brethren, make sacrifices for missions." I would like to tell you just one instance that has come to pass in my own observation.

Two boys from a nearby Stake, brothers they were, both received calls to go on missions. Their father was in poor circumstances and had a heavy mortgage on his property. He was unable to even pay the interest that had accumulated for a number of years. These boys willingly accepted the call and came to Salt Lake City. One of them was called to the Southern States and the other to the Northwestern States. After they had attended the mission school for two weeks the older boy said: "Brother, we have only twenty dollars between us, not enough to take us both to our fields of labor. You take this money and go to the Northwest, and I shall go back home and help father on the farm."

The younger brother said: "No, brother, you are the older, you go." But the older remonstrated, and said, "No, you shall go." And finally the younger boy took the twenty dollars and came to the Northwest. The first thing he knew his brother had not gone home, but had gone to the Southern States. And these two boys are in the field today. Last year that good father not only was blessed by having two sons in the mission field, but his finances were such that he paid all of the back interest on the mortgage, and he was able to make a substantial payment on the principal of the mortgage on the property.

God bless you. The missionaries in the Northwest, I think, are as happy as young men and young women could be. I want to say that the Lord has greatly favored me and blessed me in my association with the leaders of this Church, and I love, respect and admire them. And I am blessed in the wonderful companionship that I have with one of the sweetest companions in all the world. She too is enjoying her work in the mission. I pray God's blessings to be with you and with us, that we shall continue onward and upward with this work unto the perfect day, which I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

SISTER LOUISE Y. ROBISON

President of the Relief Society

In an address given by our dear President Grant in Relief Society Conference last Thursday afternoon, he said, "I have no fear for the Church of Jesus Christ as long as the women of the Church are devoted to its principles." This implies a great responsibility, also a challenge to us to analyze ourselves and find if we are meeting the requirements.

Attention has been called most forcibly by speakers in this Conference to the disregard of law by the people of the United States. This should be the concern of every mother, and she should ask wherein she can help correct this situation.

A simple suggestion would be to avoid criticism of any person in authority, either civil or religious, before our children. It is an easy matter to cause distrust in their minds. They have not the philosophy to reason things out and the world is insecure to them. Unfortunately when we break down the confidence of our children in those holding authority, it is not long before the advice of parents is questioned.

The cause of prohibition, in which we are so interested, is often weakened by the comments made in the home. If a parent, in whom the child has confidence, criticizes an enforcement officer or expresses the opinion that the law can never be enforced, the effect it must have on young people is soon apparent. We must remember that the men and women of the future will be only as strong as we help our boys and girls to be in our homes.

Speaking of prohibition, only last summer I heard the Commissioner of Education of Idaho, speaking in defense of prohibition, declare that it is a mistake to say there is more drinking among business men now than formerly. He referred to a group of Union Pacific men who met in Nebraska less than twenty years ago, and before the first evening was over there were few men who had not been drinking. Approximately this same group met in Denver within the last two years. Mr. Gray, the president, heard there were four men who were drinking. He found them, put them on the train and sent them home, dismissed from the company.

I have a testimony that this is the Church of God, that the Prophet Joseph Smith really did have his mission given him by our Father in heaven. May all mothers have the Spirit of God to be with them that they may never say anything unlovely or unworthy! May we, as Latter-day Saint mothers, ever be true to the covenants we have made, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

SISTER RUTH MAY FOX

President of the Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Association

My brethren and sisters, last Sunday evening I attended a missionary farewell. The young man was quite bashful and while he was getting up he heard a dog bark on the outside. So he opened his remarks by saying, "How I envy that dog!"

I have been feeling that to be in a comfortable chair by the radio at home would be a very happy condition. However I realize that I am not standing before you because of any merit of my own, but I am here to represent my counselors and the young ladies of my board and about twelve thousand splendid officers in the Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Association.

I am very proud and happy to stand here and represent them. In that capacity I would like to remind the audience that one of the books on our reading course this year is "The Life of the Prophet Joseph Smith," written by our late Brother George Q. Cannon. We feel sure that if you will read it and encourage your family to read it your sympathies will be renewed for the founders of this Church and your faith will be increased.

This morning as I sat in this great congregation I felt that it was a very great privilege and blessing to be one of the ten thousand who were here assembled. I testify to you that the words that have fallen from the lips of the brethren who have spoken from this stand have been verily the words of God, given to us by the voice of his servants, and so I think I cannot do better than to remind you of the Savior's words when he said:

"Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock;

"And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock.

"And everyone that heareth of these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand;

"And the rain descended and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell; and great was the fall of it."

My brethren and sisters, you and I are building our houses upon the rock. May God help us to build them so strong that no matter how hard the winds may blow or the rains descend our houses shall never fall. God grant it in the name of Jesus, Amen.

SISTER MAY ANDERSON

General Superintendent of the Primary Association

This splendid Conference would not be entirely complete without reporting that the children of this Church are being cared for, that the children's organization, the Primary Association, has about one hundred thousand members, with about ten thousand women who are all striving to help in the work of prevention rather than the work of cure.

The Church asks us to teach the children the principles of the Gospel, to take care of their leisure time activities, and to bear in mind that every boy and girl born in the Church has the right to a strong body, that he and she may make their way in the world as fairly as possible.

For the religious instruction we are using the Articles of our Faith, and we think it the greatest code of moral conduct that was ever produced. As we are using it we shall probably send into the homes of the people of the Church thousands of little cards bearing the Articles of Faith.

For the supervision of the leisure time activities of the children we are providing safe and sane activities that will give them joy and pleasure, that will help them to be happy and good.

In our labors for the health of the children of the Church we use that wonderful blessing, that divine revelation, that has been given to us, the Word of Wisdom. In our health program we include a hospital where we hope to take care of any boy or girl who needs medical or surgical aid and whose parents are not able to provide the necessary care.

Now, how shall we connect up with you, my brethren and sisters, to put this thing over splendidly? I am happy for this opportunity to say that we hope the Bishops will stand with us in helping to get the boys ready for the Priesthood. We hope the Mutuals will stand with us in getting the boys ready for Scouting. We hope that every home in this Church will stand with us to provide the right foundation. We shall plead, and we hope not in vain, that there will be no home in our Church where boys and girls will know anything about liquor. We hope there will be no home-made wine in any home in our Church. We hope there will be no coffee, no tea, no tobacco. We plead with you, my brethren and sisters, to make life safe for the boys and girls. Prevention is eminently better than cure. There is nothing that is more favorable nor better than the home. We can only add to what you do.

One other thing that we are doing and have been doing for a long time is to persuade the people of our Church that activities for boys and girls should be in the daytime and that there should not be any inducement offered to our youngsters to be out at night. Night is dangerous, and when boys and girls go out on the streets away from their fathers and mothers no one can tell what is happening. We hear some strange stories, and we are saying to you with all the ardor of our beings that we want you fathers and mothers to stand with us to make this world safe for our boys and girls.

Let us live the Word of Wisdom in what we eat and what we drink and also in the way in which we take care of the time God has given us. That you will stand for the finest homes in the world, for the finest children from such homes, and that the Primary Association may be indeed a real help in the Church, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The time has expired, but I cannot refrain from saying a few words.
I am grateful for the splendid attendance we have had here today.

It has been remarkable. I am thankful for the rich outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord. I am grateful for the splendid singing that we have listened to and for all of the inspired remarks that have been made; particularly am I thankful for the splendid testimonies averaging from three to five minutes—all kept within the time. I am very grateful indeed for these testimonies. I wish we had time to hear them at greater length, but the simple declaration of a knowledge of the divinity of this work from the men and women who stand at the head of the missionary work and the auxiliary associations in this Church is a source of great satisfaction, and these testimonies cannot be denied. No matter whether people believe them or not, those of us who have the inspiration of the Spirit of the Lord know that they are true, because we have that same testimony ourselves.

I did not make any remarks at the close of the last Conference because the time had expired. But I have made up my mind that in the future even if the time has expired I am going to say a few things that are in my mind.

APPRECIATION OF ELDER ROBERTS' WORK

I want to express my gratitude, my thanks, my love and my blessing to Brother Brigham H. Roberts for the marvelous and inspiring energy that he has put forth in producing the six great volumes of the history of this Church. It is a monumental labor and he has worked at it day and night. I know of no man who has been more diligent in his labors for the Church, day in and day out, than Brother Roberts has been preparing this great history, and he has the gratitude of all the brethren of the Presidency and the Apostles for the diligence, the great care and attention that he has given to the production of these volumes. He is still busily engaged, more perfectly arranging the indexes, etc., for the history. I rejoice in this wonderful accomplishment.

GRATITUDE FOR WORK OF CHOIR

I was thrilled by the United States Marine band concert that was held in this building recently. I enjoyed it very much. But the real thrill came when I heard the two selections that were rendered by our Choir. I have never heard our sweet singer, Sister Laurinda P. Brewerton, who sang the solo part in "Inflammatus," sing better at any time than she did on that occasion. It seemed to me that she was inspired. I know that the band must have been inspired.

I rejoice in the broadcasting. I repeat the gratitude of the General Authorities to the employers of the members of our Choir who are excused each week in order to participate in this broadcast.

BLESSING AND TESTIMONY

I wanted to say this much, and I want to leave my blessing upon all the General Authorities, the General Officers, the Presidents of Stakes, the Bishops of Wards, the Presidents of Branches, Presidents of Missions and all men and women in any place of responsibility in this Church. They have my love, my confidence and my blessing, also the blessing of my Counselors. I leave my blessing upon all Israel, and upon all honest people the world over. I thank God that I know he lives, that I know that Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of the world, and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the true and living God, and all the doubt of all the world cannot change the knowledge that God has given to me and to the Latter-day Saints by the hundreds of thousands. May God's blessings attend you all, I ask, in the name of Jesus, our Redeemer, Amen.

The anthem, "Worthy the Lamb," was rendered by the Choir.
President Anthony W. Ivins pronounced the benediction.
Conference adjourned for six months.

Prof. Anthony C. Lund conducted the singing at all of the sessions of the Conference. Edward P. Kimball and Frank Asper played the accompaniments, interludes, etc., on the great organ.

Stenographic reports of the discourses were made by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

WILL FIND THE BOOK

An Introduction to the Study of the Book of Mormon

By J. M. SJODAHL

To be mighty interesting and illuminating

"Some of the contents of the book has appeared in the IMPROVEMENT ERA and other Church publications during the last ten years, and friends have been good enough to say, repeatedly, that they would be glad to have those contributions in some form more convenient for reference. Acting on their suggestion, I have collected some papers previously published and others that now appear for the first time, and respectfully submit them in this form to the public. In doing so, it is my sincere prayer that the testimony here offered may be of benefit to the reader, and especially to honest seekers after the truth."

"Time is the supreme test of a prophecy. He who undertakes to foretell events must know that Time in its merciless pursuit will find him out. Of all the pretenses of the false prophet, prophesying is the most hazardous. Religious impostors often display qualities of leadership in controlling the affairs of their followers. The more modest their pretenses, however, the more likely are they to escape detection and exposure. But when spiritual leaders assume to exercise the exalted function of prophecy, and have the courage to publish their prophecies, they place their reputations before the bar of the world, and as the weight of Time presses out the vintage of the centuries they must sink to a deserving oblivion or be exalted to a place in the skies. Time is a foe of Fraud, but the never-failing friend of Truth."

Now that the claims of Joseph Smith as prophet have been set up before the world for a century, it is proper that the verdict of Time should be ascertained. To disclose these findings, this volume is given out. Only a few of the well-known prophecies are here considered.

All this is clearly set forth in

A veritable epic of empire-building

The Life Story of Brigham Young

By SUSA YOUNG GATES AND LEAH D. WIDTSOE

WITH A FOREWORD BY HONORABLE REED SMOOT

"This book presents the life story of a New England cabinet-maker, who, well into his thirties, entered upon a career that made him an empire-builder of the West; the founder of a hundred cities; the governor of one of the territories of the United States; and one of the outstanding figures of the nineteenth century."

Thus does Senator Smoot begin his enthusiastic foreword to this notable biography. "A graphic, gripping story," he terms it, and every reader undoubtedly will agree with his definition of this life of the indefatigable, indomitable Brigham Young, which was written by one of his daughters and her daughter. The entire record of the great Mormon leader is unfolded from his birth in a little Vermont town to his death at the age of seventy-seven as head of the church, the success of which was due to his courageous and arduous leadership.

A Thrilling Story of CENTURY ONE OF CHURCH HISTORY

HERE is a new story of "Mormonism," told with a completeness and charm that will thrill Latter-day Saints with a pride of achievement and at the same time win the admiration of the critic, be he friend or foe. In a COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH, B. H. Roberts has done a masterful piece of research and has set down the record of Century One—1830 to 1930—in a brilliant appraisal of momentous events. The reader with a sentimental interest will be fascinated with this narrative of truth stranger than fiction; the reader who approaches the new work with the critical vision of the historian will find it fair in statement, authentic in fact, copious in detail and sound in judgment.

A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH was written by Elder Roberts at the instance of the First Presidency of the Church, with a commission to make it exhaustively complete, from the remotest beginnings to the close of the Centennial Conference of April 6, 1930. The final volume ends with an account of the Conference itself, making the history technically inclusive of all that happened in Century One of the organized existence of the Church. Thus it is a fitting commemoration of one hundred years of struggle and achievement.

This monumental work is not to be confused with any former history, journal or chronicle. Though its nucleus is the history of "Mormonism" published a few years ago in AMERICANA, running serially for six years through that magazine, yet this History is NEW—new in its wealth of material, new in method of treatment and new in its physical representation of the book maker's art.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The first session of the Conference commenced at 10 o'clock, Saturday, April 4th, 1931.

All the brethren of the General Authorities of the Church were present and seated on the stands, and the great Tabernacle auditorium and galleries were filled, the attendance being unusually large for a week-day session of Conference.

President Heber J. Grant presided and announced the opening hymn, "Now let us Rejoice in the Day of Salvation," which was sung by the congregation.

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Wilford A. Beesley, President of the Salt Lake Stake.

The congregation sang the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I do not recall that at a first session of a General Conference held on a week day I have ever seen as large an attendance as we have here today. I rejoice in the interest of the Saints in our Annual and Semi-Annual Conferences. It is a remarkable thing for people by the thousands to come from all parts of the United States, also from Canada and Mexico, to these meetings. It shows the interest, the faith and the love of the people for the Gospel of Jesus Christ that has been revealed in our day. On behalf of the General Authorities of the Church I welcome you here. I earnestly and sincerely pray that while we are assembled together we may be blessed of the Lord, that those who speak and pray and sing may do so under the inspiration that comes from our Heavenly Father.

It has been customary for very many years to read to the people a statement of expenditures and statistical matters at our Annual Conferences.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

The expenditures by the Church for the year 1930 are as follows:
Stake and Ward Purposes:

There has been returned from the tithes to the Stakes and Wards for the construction of Ward and Stake meeting houses	$ 887,678.43

Others who have passed away:

Peter G. Johnston, one of the Church Auditing Committee for many years.

Benjamin Goddard, formerly manager of the Bureau of Information from its inception until just prior to his death.

George C. Smith, secretary for many years of the Tabernacle Choir.

Zina Young Card, daughter of President Brigham Young, and active in Church work from her young girlhood days.

Brigham Morris Young, son of Brigham Young, loyal and true all the days of his life to the Church and its interests and a worker in the Salt Lake Temple from the day it was dedicated until the time of his death.

Evan Stephens, formerly director of the Tabernacle Choir, and one of the men to whom we owe so much—to him and Brother George Careless, perhaps more than almost to any other men—for writing our beautiful hymns and for taking such a deep interest in all of our musical affairs.

DECRIES PROPAGANDA

I desire to bring to the attention of the members of the Church some very regrettable and most annoying circumstances. I have taken occasion in times past to denounce the conduct of persons both within and without the Church who have palpably sought to bring disgrace upon the Church and reproach to its leaders in the circulation of propaganda for and the unlawful practice of pretended "plural marriage." Notwithstanding the positive, unequivocal declarations which I have made from time to time on this subject, and in spite of the vigorous and unvarying prosecution within the courts of the Church, from the tribunals of the bishops to the Council of the Twelve Apostles, of cases arising out of violations of the law of the Church forbidding absolutely the practice of plural marriage—notwithstanding all these efforts on the part of the authorities of the Church to suppress the unlawful practices and propaganda of these people, we find that there are still a number, relatively small we hope, who persist in teaching the doctrine and maligning the leaders of the Church.

PUNISHED WHEN FOUND

Wherever the Authorities of the Church have been able to locate such persons and secure sufficient definite evidence to warrant their conviction, they have, without fear or favor, been dealt with and excommunicated from the Church. This procedure is the limit of Church jurisdiction. We have been, however, and we are entirely willing and anxious too that such offenders against the law of the State should be dealt with and punished as the law provides. We have been and we are willing to give such legal assistance as we legitimately can in the criminal prosecution of such cases. We are willing to go to such limits not only because we regard it as our duty as citizens of the country to assist in the enforcement of the law and the suppression of pretended "plural marriages," but also because we wish to do everything humanly possible to make our attitude toward this matter so clear, definite, and unequivocal as to leave no possible doubt of it in the mind of any person.

TO PROTECT THE UNWARY

There are always to be found in any large group of people some who are uninformed, credulous, and easily susceptible to the persuasions of more forceful personalities. Such persons are often well-meaning and at heart very devoted to the Church. It is a matter of sorrow and deep regret to us that some such members of the Church have been inveigled by designing men and fanatics into the support and practice of unlawful relations. It is largely for the protection of such class of people within the Church and similarly minded converts to the Church that we feel the necessity of stressing this unpleasant subject so much.

The machinations of the proponents of unlawful marriages are, of course, carried on largely in secret. The Church has no adequate way of thwarting their endeavors before much harm is often done; although the officers of the Church, from the highest to the least, are definitely instructed to be constantly on the watch for such teaching and propagandists. We have hesitated somewhat to make public statements or denials to charges and false assertions published in literature sent out by these enemies of the Church and its administration, because we have felt that added publicity to their pernicious statements would be gratifying to them and probably useless in stemming their activity. There is scarcely a man among the leading authorities who has not been defamed by them, both in print and speech.

WIDELY CIRCULATED

They have circulated their literature as widely as possible with their available means, even sending defamatory pamphlets to the missionaries of the Church in their fields of labor, extending to Europe. We suppose that in some instances this material may fall into the hands of investigators, weak members of the Church, and others who already, by reason of misrepresentation, are prejudiced against us. There are some, undoubtedly, among these who give credence to that which they read, although, of course, we should be able to expect and we do expect that no missionary of the Church would credit such false assertions.

FALSE AND SLANDEROUS STATEMENTS

These publications are not only slanderous of the leaders of the Church but they are calculated to cast a blemish on the fair name of our State. Their authors are apparently without conscience as to the truth of their statements, seeking only to influence those who are uninformed and gullible. They have charged me and many of my brethren here with the commission of crime and have manufactured circumstances as fictitious as the imagination may conceive. We have felt that it was beneath us to make reply to such false and malignant accusations. We have believed that neither the people of the Church nor those outside the Church with whom we live as neighbors and fellow citizens would expect us to answer. If there are any of our brothers or sisters or friends who feel that there are any circumstances which warrant an answer or defense on our part, we assure any such we shall be glad to satisfy them on their request. And when we say our friends we mean our friends, not those who write anonymous letters, or individuals who make false statements about us.

Perhaps we are presumptuous, but we feel that our standing in the community as men of integrity and honor is a sufficient rebuttal to these infamous charges made against us.

PRESIDENT WIDTSONE MALIGNED

In most instances the misrepresentations and false accusations have been made by way of recital and innuendo, with an apparent effort to shield the authors and publishers from legal responsibility. In one recent instance, however, they have been bold enough to print a libelous attack on President John A. Widtson, supposedly because they knew of his expected presence here for conference. The circumstances recited are wholly fictitious and false, and are presented, undoubtedly, with the purpose of creating prejudice against him and injuring his work in Europe. We think that the high esteem in which Doctor Widtson is held, not only in the Church but in his State and as a national figure, makes unnecessary any reply to such calumny. However, if he desires he may have the facilities we can afford to protect himself and to prosecute the defamers of his good name.

ABSOLUTELY FORBIDDEN

Now, in conclusion, let me state again, as I have done many times before—and my statement is meant for every member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, for our neighbors and friends who dwell in the communities where we live, and for the whole world—that the Church does not countenance, aid, abet, tolerate or sanction in any way, shape or form the contracting of so-called “plural marriages,” but that on the contrary it absolutely forbids the members of the Church from entering into any such unlawful relations or teaching or encouraging such practices, and that it will continue in the future as it has done in the past to deal with and punish to the extent of its authority any persons who violate these injunctions. I do not know how to make it plainer or more forceful. If I did I would do so.

As I read this I recall that the statement is made that the leaders of the Church can practice these things. So when this is published I will say that this applies to all the General Authorities of the Church and the members, for fear these falsifiers will start another falsehood.

THE POSITION OF THE CHURCH

I want the officers of our Church, our missionaries, all who in any manner represent us, to know beyond any doubt whatsoever that this is the straightforward, honest, unequivocal position of the Church, and I want them all to know that any person or persons who question this assertion cast reflection upon the honor and integrity of the men who stand at the head of the Church as its General Authorities, for this statement sets forth not only my own views and purposes, but it is sustained in every detail, in letter and in spirit, by each and every member of the First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve Apostles, the Presiding Patriarch, the First Council of Seventy, and the Presiding Bishopric, to whom it has been submitted and by whom it has been unanimously approved.

And I wish to say that I want it understood that so far as God gives me power to give His word to the people, it is the word of the Lord.

THE PEOPLES' WELFARE

Now, I cannot do more. Of course the circumstances to which I have called attention are very provoking and annoying to us. It is easy to become angry when we contemplate the harm and incalculable injury that some of these perverted, vicious men have perpetrated on the Church, but I do not speak in anger. I have in mind only the welfare and the progress of the great cause which we represent and love, and the people who are within the Church and those to whom we are carrying the Gospel. It hurts me to see the advancement of the work retarded by such regrettable activities within the Church itself. We may always expect to be assailed from without, but it seems to me we can reasonably hope that within the Church our solemn statements of fact and principle will be received at face value.

It may be that among those who so malign the Church and its leaders are some who are conscientious in their endeavors. I am sorry that they are so simple and misguided as to permit themselves to be allied with those who, by reason of their propaganda and activity, are among the most malicious enemies of the Church. I pray that their eyes may be opened and their course set right. I pray also that all the people of the Church in all parts of the world may unite in a determined effort to abolish from the inside of the Church at least these insidious efforts and unlawful practices which are calculated to bring so much reproach upon us.

DENIES CHURCH IN DEBT

The same people who are publishing these slanderous statements have also said that the presiding officers of the Church have used the credit of the Church and involved it in debt to the extent of $23,000,000, mortgaging its property to secure this indebtedness.

The fact is that during my administration no part of the property of the Church has ever been mortgaged, and the Church itself is entirely free from debt.

In proof of what I have said, I read the statement of the Church Auditing Committee, as follows:

"April 4th, 1931.

President Heber J. Grant and Counselors,
Dear Brethren:

It gives us pleasure to state that our examination of the reports of the First Presidency's office, which covered the Presiding Bishop's department, disclosed the fact that the Church is entirely out of debt.

The accounting system of the Church is modern and complete.

Respectfully submitted,
Henry H. Rolapp,
O. W. Adams,
Auditing Committee."

CONTRARY TO LAW

It is against the law of the land to enter into polygamy. In section 58 of the Doctrine and Covenants, we find the following:

"For verily I say unto you, my law shall be kept on this land.

"Let no man think he is ruler; but let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will, or, in other words, him that counseleth or sitteth upon the judgment seat.

"Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land."

"Wherefore, be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet."

STATEMENT SUSTAINED

I would like all those in this congregation who feel to sustain this statement that I have read to you to manifest it as the Apostles and all of the General Authorities have done, by raising their right hands.

(The congregation responded by raising their hands).

I have never seen such a lot of hands held so high in my life.

All those who are opposed to this statement will please raise their hands.

(No hands were raised).

Our enemies do not seem to be here.

QUOTES PROPHET'S PRAYER

The Prophet Joseph, at the dedication of the Kirtland Temple, in the prayer offered on that occasion, among other things said:

"We ask thee, Holy Father, to confound and astonish, and to bring to shame and confusion, all those who have spread lying reports abroad, over the world, against thy servant or servants, if they will not repent, when the everlasting gospel shall be proclaimed in their ears;

"And that all their works may be brought to naught, and be swept away by the hail, and by the judgments which thou wilt send upon them in thine anger, that there may be an end to lyings and slanders against thy people."

We say Amen to the prophet's prayer on that occasion.

READS FROM SCRIPTURES

In my remarks today I desire to read from the holy scriptures some of the words of the Savior, and also from the revelations that have come to us in our day.

"Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

"Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

"A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

"Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire.

"Wherefore, by their fruits ye shall know them."

What kind of fruits do the people to whom I have referred bring forth? I know of no more outrageous falsifying in my life than has been indulged in by these people. One man by the name of Lorin C. Woolley said that Anthony W. Ivins and Heber J. Grant went to Los Angeles, that he followed them, that they went into a hotel and that Anthony W. Ivins married a plural wife to Heber J. Grant.

Anthony W. Ivins and Heber J. Grant were never in a hotel together in Los Angeles. Heber J. Grant has never suggested to any human being during his entire administration as President of the Church that anybody should ever enter into plural marriage. On the contrary, every man or woman who has ever opened his or her mouth to him on this subject he has taught to the contrary.

"And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand;

"And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it."

Those who have heard my counsel for at least twelve years, to say nothing of that of my predecessors and others, to obey the laws of the land and do not do it, are building their houses upon sand, and they are absolutely certain to fall.

"Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying,

"Master, which is the great commandment in the law?"

"Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

"This is the first and great commandment.

"And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

"On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

THE BARLOW CASE

I call to mind that we tried a man by the name of Barlow for entering into pretended plural marriage years ago. This man brought to us a letter purporting to come from Owen Woodruff, who was dead, telling him to send the person to Mexico, stating that Owen Woodruff married this girl to him. And there was not a word of truth in it. I went to his stenographer and confronted her, and she acknowledged that she wrote the postscript on the letter herself. After Owen Woodruff had been dead for years a man whose name I will not mention because he repented of his sins, acknowledged that he performed that marriage.

What do you think of such falsifiers talking about the leaders of the Church apostatizing and that they are the reformers?

FAITH AND WORKS

"What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?"

"If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food,

"And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?"

"Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone.

"Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works; show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works.

"Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well. the devils also believe, and tremble.

"But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?"

"For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also."

The Latter-day Saints are a people of great faith. But I regret exceedingly that there are many among us who fail to do the works of God. We fail to live up to the requirements of the Lord. I am sorry that there are scores and hundreds of people who are not living the Gospel as they should do and observing to be honest, conscientious tithe-payers, observers of the Word of Wisdom, and who are not doing the other things that devolve upon us. Let us reform. Let us show our love of our fellows by keeping the commandments of God and setting an example before them that shall be worthy of imitation in all respects.

QUOTES FORMER SPEECH

I recall that on the first of June, twelve years ago—we had not been able to hold a conference immediately following the death of our beloved and revered President Joseph F. Smith in November, because of an epidemic of disease that existed—I was sustained to be the President of the Church, and I wish to quote a part of what I said at that time:

"I feel humble beyond any language with which God has endowed me to express it, in standing here before you this morning occupying the position in which you have just voted to sustain me. I will ask no man to be more liberal with his means than I am with mine, in proportion to what he possesses, for the advancement of God's kingdom. I will ask no man to observe the Word of Wisdom any more closely than I will observe it. I will ask no man to be more conscientious and prompt in the payment of his tithes and offerings than I will be. I will ask no man to be more ready and willing to come early and to go late, and to labor with full power of mind and body, than I will labor, always in humility. I hope and pray for the blessings of the Lord, acknowledging freely and frankly that without the Lord's blessing it will be an impossibility for me to make a success of the high calling whereunto I have been called. But like Nephi of old, I know that the Lord makes no requirements of the children of men, save he will prepare a way for them whereby they can accomplish the thing which he has required. With this knowledge in my heart I accept the great responsibility without fear of the consequences, knowing that God will sustain me as he has sustained all of my predecessors who have occupied this position, provided always that I shall labor in humility and diligence, ever seeking the guidance of the Holy Spirit; and this I shall endeavor to do."

PLEDGE KEPT

Twelve years have passed away. But I can honestly and conscientiously say to this large assembly that I have day by day, month by month, and year by year, lived up to that pledge which I made at that time.

COUNSEL FROM THE LORD

The Lord says:

"Draw near unto me and I will draw near unto you; seek me diligently and ye shall find me; ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. "Whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name it shall be given unto you, that is expedient for you;

"And if ye ask anything that is not expedient for you, it shall turn unto your condemnation." * * *

"And as ye all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning, even by study and also by faith."

Again from the Doctrine and Covenants:

"See that ye love one another; cease to be covetous; learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires."

"Cease to be idle; cease to be unclean; cease to find fault one with another; cease to sleep longer than is needful; retire to thy bed early, that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated.

"And above all things, clothe yourselves with the bond of charity, as with a mantle, which is the bond of perfectness and peace."

NOT NECESSARY TO BE COMMANDED

I would like to read you the whole of this section known as Section Fifty-eight, but I see that the time has practically expired, so I will read only a part of it.

"For behold, it is not meet that I should command in all things; for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant; wherefore he receiveth no reward."

I have met any number of people who have said the Word of Wisdom is not a command from the Lord, that it is not given by way of commandment. But the Word of Wisdom is the will of the Lord and the Lord says in the words that I have just read that it is not meet that we should be commanded in all things. If you love your neighbor as yourself, if you love God with all your heart, might, mind and strength, does he need to command? No.

Listen to the following:

"Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness."

Can you, by your own free will, accomplish righteousness in the world as well by failing to obey the will of the Lord as you can by obeying it? I say No. One of the best ways in all the world to bring to pass much righteousness is to set an example as a conscientious, God-fearing Latter-day Saint, observing all of the requirements of the Lord.

"For the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good they shall in nowise lose their reward.

"But he that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with a doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned.

"Who am I that made man, saith the Lord, that will hold him guiltless that obeys not my commandments?

"Who am I, saith the Lord, that have promised and have not fulfilled?

"I command and men obey not; I revoke and they receive not the blessing.

"Then they say in their hearts: This is not the work of the Lord, for his promises are not fulfilled. But wo unto such, for their reward lurketh beneath, and not from above."

I commend the entire section for your perusal.

GRATEFUL FOR KNOWLEDGE

I rejoice beyond all the power that God has given me to express my feelings for the knowledge that God is directing the affairs of the Church of Christ. I rejoice beyond all the ability that I have to express my feelings that he has given me a knowledge of the divine mission of our Savior, the Redeemer of the world, the Son of the living God. I am happy beyond expression to know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the living God and an instrument in the hands of God of restoring again to the earth the Gospel of Jesus Christ with the power and priesthood given to him by the Apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ, who held that authority when they were here upon the earth.

PRIESTHOOD PROPERLY EXERCISED

I rejoice in knowing that the Lord through the inspiration of his Spirit has guided this people through all the changing scenes through which we have had to go. I am thankful that even when the Prophet Joseph and others were in Liberty Jail one of the greatest of all the great revelations that have come to this people was given to him. I rejoice in knowing that all these charges of tyranny and oppression and of a dictatorial management of the Church are absolutely false. There is not a man of the General Authorities of the Church but that desires to do—what? To exercise the priesthood exactly as the Lord says it should be exercised, and I will read the identical words. I really do not need to read them as I can repeat them from memory:

"No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

"By kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile—

"Reproving betimes with sharpness, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and then showing forth afterwards an increase of love towards him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee to be his enemy;

"That he may know that thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death.

"Let thy bowels also be full of charity towards all men, and to the household of faith, and let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven.

"The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever."

The enemies of the prophet could imprison him, but he had access to God Almighty and was inspired and blessed of him.

May the Lord help every one of us who professes the name of Jesus Christ and testifies to the divinity of the work in which we are engaged to live it in honor, in virtue, in truth, is my prayer, that our example may proclaim by our works the truthfulness of it. I bear testimony before God to the divinity of this work, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Presiding Bishop of the Church

I endorse fully and unequivocally, my brethren and sisters, every word that has been spoken by President Grant this morning. I sense the responsibility that rests upon me this morning in speaking to you, and trust that I may enjoy your confidence in that which I may say, that I may be led to speak those things that are true and helpful.

EASTER CELEBRATION

Throughout the Christian world, yesterday, today and tomorrow, the most important event in Christian history, and in the earth life of Him who is the source of Christianity, is being celebrated. That is the crucifixion and resurrection of the Savior. The Latter-day Saints are fully in accord with the spirit of this occasion. Not only that, but we understand also that this is, actually, the time of year when the Savior was born. We recognize that his life and teachings, and the doctrines which he declared, are divine. We accept him in every sense of the word as the Son of God. We realize that his atonement was necessary, that men might come unto salvation, receive forgiveness for the transgression of Adam, and be rescued from spiritual death, and have the opportunity of gaining salvation and exaltation in the presence of the Lord.

RESURRECTION AND LIFE

We acknowledge and believe fully in the resurrection from the dead—the literal resurrection of the body. The Savior was indeed the first fruits of the resurrection. Through him we also may be resurrected. The time of our resurrection will depend upon our works here, and upon our faith and action. I would like to speak for a moment in regard to the life of Christ. "Though he were a Son," we are told, "yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered: and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." He passed through practically every experience that is possible for man to experience. He walked the path of humility. He said to the people:

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

"Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; For I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

"For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

POWER IN HUMILITY

He taught them the spirit of humility, and exemplified the power therein. There is a vast difference in meaning between humility and humiliation. Humiliation means shame. Humility does not mean lack of self-respect. It means strength and fortitude. It involves high moral courage. It leads to faith, trust in God, and to good works. It promotes gratitude. It overcomes vanity. It develops the strength to stand for right and truth. It involves clear thinking and sound judgment, because those who are humble are not likely to be misled by the trickeries of the world. It is evidenced by love of fellow-men. Humility manifests none of the elements of hypocrisy or self-righteousness. Remember the Savior's parable of the Pharisee and the publican. Humility is the opposite of highmindedness and pride. In it there is safety. Humility tends to keep people level-headed. Pride overbalances them. Pride tends to blind the eyes to the light and to close the heart against the truth. We are warned continually in the scriptures with regard to the dangers of pride, and advised of the benefits of humility. We have listened this morning to the testimony of President Grant, given at the time he accepted this position as the President of the Church, and of his pledge at that time to labor in humility and diligence for the welfare of this work.

HUMILITY LEADS TO FAITH

The very basis of this work is the spirit of humility, of striving to understand clearly the work of the Lord, and of righteous living. So when I say that humility leads to faith, I am sure that all of you who have had experience in the mission field realize that only those who are humble in their hearts are prepared to receive the truth and the light. Those who are proud have their hearts closed, their eyes blinded, and they are not willing to receive the Gospel. That of itself is evidence of the importance of so living in lowliness of heart that we can discern clearly between right and wrong.

CONTRITENESS OF SPIRIT LEADS TO GOD

Only those who are contrite in spirit can enter into the presence of God. As the prophet Isaiah declared:

"For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones."

The Savior illustrated this fundamental requirement when he placed a child in the midst of his disciples, saying: "Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." On another occasion he declared: "Whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased, and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted." So humility is a means of triumph, paradoxical as that may sound. But that triumph is not of the nature sought by those who are proud at heart.

HUMILITY—A DIVINE GIFT

A day or two ago I read a newspaper item which told the experience of an able and intelligent man, who in the pride of his heart, had committed a crime, and had been sent to prison. He had been in prison for some time, and he declared, in this newspaper statement, that he had finally found humility, and used this expression: "The gift of the gods is humility." Whatever his belief in a Divine Being may be, he expressed, at least, a true principle, that through humility we come to understanding, repentance, and peace of mind.

SPIRITUAL EFFECTS OF DEPRESSION

The economic depression that we have suffered in the last year and a half has had a serious effect, not only upon the financial condition of the people of the world, but upon their spiritual attitude. Evidences are many that, as a result of this adversity, people are becoming more humble, are cultivating clearer thinking, and greater sanity. If the effect of these unfavorable economic conditions shall be to cause mankind generally to resist arrogance and to promote human welfare, then it will have proven a benefit in disguise to that extent at least. Surely, if there is anything that is necessary in the world today it is that spirit expressed by the prophet Micah:

"He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

The tendency of the natural man is toward pride, highmindedness and covetousness, as stated by the President this morning. The Spirit of the Lord, which should guide men, is the spirit of humility, of faith, of clear thinking, of courage, of sound judgment, and of the desire for truth and light. History of nations evidences the extent of their progress as a result of their attitude, whether it has been that of pride and haughtiness, or whether it has been that of right living.

PRIDE LEADS TO DESTRUCTION

Humility is a state of mind, and not a condition, necessarily, of finances. It is too often true that people who gain financial prosperity are led away by pride of the heart and the desire for the things of this world. As I read history there has been no nation that has ever fallen because of prevailing humility among the people. But there are many instances of downfall due to pride. So long as nations have maintained a humble spirit they have been able to endure and to grow; but whenever they have become steeped in pride, they have been led to destruction. When Mary, who was to become the mother of the Savior, came to Elizabeth, the mother of John the Baptist, the latter was led to prophesy these words:

"He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree."

The wise man, Solomon, declared:

"When pride cometh, then cometh shame; but with the lowly is wisdom. * * *

"Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall.

"Better is it to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud. * * *

"Before destruction the heart of man is haughty, and before honor is humility. * * *

"By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches and honor and life."

DANGERS IN HIGH PLACES

There is a tendency very often for men, when they are elected to positions in public office by the people, to consider that they possess some superior power as a result thereof. I am reminded of a statement made by former President Calvin Coolidge. He said:

"It is difficult for men in high office to avoid the malady of self-delusion. They are always surrounded by worshippers. They are constantly, and for the most part sincerely, assured of their greatness. They live in an artificial atmosphere of adulation and exaltation, which sooner or later imperils their judgment. They are in grave danger of becoming careless and arrogant."

Surely we should ourselves maintain, and we should influence not only all of the officers and members of this Church, but also, as far as possible, the people of this, the greatest nation upon the earth today, to cultivate and maintain a spirit of lowliness of heart, in the midst of prosperity. If the people of this country will but recognize the source of the blessings which they enjoy, realize that intelligence, judgment and ability are given them of God, and that they should use them for the welfare of mankind, and not solely for their own selfish aggrandizement, then this nation will continue to grow and prosper, and will be able to overcome the present unfavorable conditions. The result will be to promote greater equality among men, and finer consideration for one another. On the contrary, if the spirit of pride and vain ambition shall prevail throughout the country; then the future welfare and progress of this nation, or any nation, under such conditions, will be seriously endangered.

With the increase of temporal prosperity among us as a people in common with the rest of the country generally during the past few years, the continuance of faith and devotion to the Gospel by some of those who have been successful in financial affairs is jeopardized. Not that wealth necessarily means loss of faith; but there is an unconscious tendency in the midst of success to supplant humility of spirit with high-mindedness. We tend to forget our obligations to the Lord, and our need to obey the divine commandments and to impart of our means to build up his work. This tendency becomes evident not only among parents, but also, and particularly so, among the children through indulgence shown them, through the luxuries which they enjoy, and through lack of instruction and obedience to divine principles. What is the result under such conditions? It follows that those who give way to feelings of pride lose the spirit of the Gospel and forfeit their enjoyment of spiritual gifts which would lead them on to righteousness. The Church suffers through their neglect, but they suffer far more through the loss of their spiritual standards.

INSTANCES OF POWER THROUGH HUMILITY

If time would permit, there are many instances that could be cited of men in high places who have shown their strength by their humility. The truly great are possessed of humility of heart. The Savior is the most outstanding example. Lowly as a child, strong in courage, fearless in declaring the truth, determined to fulfil his responsible mission, confident of his position, acknowledged by discerning men for his capacity, he exemplified fully the power of humility. His apostles showed the same spirit. Notwithstanding they were endowed with power from on high, yet were they indeed the servants of the people. In these days, in the affairs of this nation, the two most outstanding characters, Washington and Lincoln, demonstrated this same spirit. In the Church, the Prophet Joseph Smith, and every one of his successors, as well as the other Authorities of the Church generally, have been possessed of that spirit of humility in the midst of their great responsibilities.

THE SPIRIT OF THE PRIESTHOOD

We have heard from President Grant this morning the recital of a part of Section 121 of the Doctrine and Covenants with regard to the spirit to be exercised by those who bear the priesthood. Let me repeat a portion of it:

"Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen?

"Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men. * * *

"No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

"By kindness, and pure knowledge."

The spirit of the priesthood is indeed the spirit of humility, of faith, of courage, of diligence, of confidence, of determination, of persistence for the right and the truth, and of consideration for our fellow men.

I desire that the Lord may help us all so to live as to maintain this spirit, that even though we may enjoy prosperity and success, we may recognize the fact that these things come to us through the blessings of the Lord and that we should impart of our means for the cause of righteousness. If we have the spirit of humility we shall recognize the importance of giving of our means and our time for this cause, which makes for the welfare, the progress, and the salvation of mankind generally.

May we all strive continually "to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly" with the Lord, I earnestly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT RUDGER CLAWSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, this is a great gathering of the Latter-day Saints for religious instruction, and it is to be expected that we will here be taught the true principles of religion. Let me say that religion is a serious and solemn thing—serious for the reason that it involves the question of salvation, individual and general salvation, and this, I take it, is an extremely important matter.

GOD'S GREATEST GIFT

The Lord spoke to the Prophet Joseph Smith, upon one occasion—you will find it recorded in a revelation in the Doctrine and Covenants, Section 6, the thirteenth paragraph—these very impressive words:

"If thou wilt do good, yea, and hold out faithful to the end, thou shalt be saved in the kingdom of God, which is the greatest of all the gifts of God; for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation."

So we see from this that salvation is something that is greatly to be desired.

Permit me also, brethren and sisters, to quote a very significant passage from the Book of Mormon, namely:

"Adam fell that men might be, and men are that they might have joy."

WHAT SALVATION IS AND HOW OBTAINED

I think that it is apparent to all that no man could have permanent joy without salvation. Joseph Smith, the Prophet, defined salvation, in brief, in the following comprehensive language:

"Salvation is nothing more nor less than to triumph over all our enemies and put them under our feet, and when we have power to put all enemies under our feet in this world, and a knowledge to triumph over all evil spirits in the world to come, then are we saved, as in the case of Jesus, who was to reign until he had put all enemies under his feet, death being the last enemy."

It would seem, therefore, that knowledge is a vital factor in the matter of salvation, for every one who does not obtain knowledge sufficient to be saved, will be condemned. The principle of knowledge is given through Jesus Christ. It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance.

Salvation comes to the children of men through the atonement made by our Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose precious blood cleanses from all sin, and redeems and saves fallen man in the presence of God, always upon the condition of repentance and submission to the will of God.

THE REWARD OF THE FAITHFUL

The will of God is set forth in great simplicity, clearness and power in the standard works of the Church, the Bible, the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price.

Speaking of those who attain to the highest rewards in the kingdom of heaven, the Lord said, in a revelation given to Joseph Smith, the Prophet, and Sidney Rigdon, dated February 16th, 1832, that which follows:

"And again, we bear record—for we saw and heard, and this is the testimony of the gospel of Christ, concerning them who shall come forth in the resurrection of the just—

"They are they who received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on his name and were baptized after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given—

"That by keeping the commandments they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power.

"And who overcome by faith, and are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true.

"They are they who are the church of the first born"—or in other words, the Church of Jesus Christ, for he was the first born:

"They are they into whose hands the Father has given all things—

"They are they who are priests and kings, who have received of his fulness, and of his glory."

These words correspond, in spirit and doctrine, with the teachings of the Savior and his apostles in the meridian of time. It would be well if the Latter-day Saints would give heed to these words, and it would be well if the world at large, the children of men generally, would give strict heed to these words, because in rendering obedience to the will of God they will find salvation.

TESTIMONY

I testify to you, my brethren and sisters, solemnly, that I do know that this is the true Church of God; that Jesus was the Christ; that Joseph Smith was his prophet; and that it was given to Joseph Smith to stand at the head of this last dispensation, the dispensation of the fulness of times. I testify to you that whatever authority of God is resting down upon this people, has come to them and to us from the Lord, through the Prophet Joseph Smith. Hence I do certainly revere his memory, and I regard him as a great man and a great prophet. We know—at least, we believe with all our souls—that Joseph Smith now mingles with the Gods in the spirit world, and, with his brethren there, is planning for the salvation of the people.

This is the testimony I bear in all humility, and I do it in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER STEPHEN L. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The burden of my thought today is that of gratitude. My heart is mellowed and deeply touched by the great blessings which I enjoy.

GRATITUDE FOR BLESSINGS

I am thankful for the privilege which I now have to be once again in the councils of my brethren; to be associated in general conference with the Church; to stand where I can look into the faces of men whom I have come to love and honor and respect. I cannot contemplate my membership in the Church, the testimony of the divine authenticity of the work in which we are engaged, the high privileges which have come to me, to labor in the advancement of the great cause, these blessed associations with my brethren in the priesthood, without rendering to God, my Father, the gratitude and thanks of my heart.

I am grateful for the kindness which on every hand I have met, at the hands of my brethren and my sisters. God has been good to me, and I now thank you, my brethren in the holy priesthood and my sisters in the Church, for your kindness and consideration.

JOY THAT PASSES UNDERSTANDING

I am glad once again to be able to engage in the activities of the Church. I want to let my voice be heard in proclamation of the holy Gospel. I want to bear my testimony to all mankind that God's work is established, and that within the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are to be found the principles of eternal life, the satisfactions that are enduring and the joy that passes understanding.

I have had some time for contemplation and reflection. I have had opportunity of introspection and the analysis of my thoughts and feelings, and I have definitely reached the conclusion that there is no happiness for me except in the philosophy and high conceptions which the Gospel of Christ brings to me. I enjoy the pleasant things of life. I enjoy and appreciate the beauty of the earth and that which it provides; but I prize above all these a contentment of mind, a peace of heart, brought to me in my testimony of the truth. I know that God lives. I know that my God is my Father—more than a mere principle; more than an irresistible, dominating force in nature. He is my eternal parent. I am his child. My spirit was begotten of him. I know that the Savior of this world is the Son of the living God. His existence is a reality to me. The example and the teachings of his earthly life constitute the ideals to which I aspire. I ask for no higher nor more comprehensive philosophy.

THE INSPIRED OF GOD

I know that the Prophet Joseph Smith was divinely called. I know that his mission in life was to restore the everlasting Gospel, and I believe in the revelations which God, in his mercy, gave to the Church and to mankind, through him. I honor the name of the Prophet Joseph Smith. I feel that no greater and higher honor could come to me than to win some day, when my ministry shall have been completed, his approval for my labors, because I look upon him as the earthly head of the kingdom, the beginner of it, the inspired of God, to receive the initial revelations for the restoration of the Gospel. I prize my knowledge of him, as I prize my knowledge of the very Lord of the universe. And all the men who in proper order have succeeded him are prophets of the living God. Their place in the kingdom has been won and established.

It is so with our present prophet, standing at the head of the Church today. We honor and respect and love him for his devotion to the work of God, and for his integrity, his absolute integrity to the Lord, to the work, to the people, and to the world. I cannot understand how the word of Heber J. Grant can be questioned by any living person who knows his life and his record. No more honest, aggressively honest man have I ever known, and our confidence in his word and in his honor should be supreme.

CONSIDERATION FOR ONE ANOTHER

I am grateful for the kindness that the Gospel of Jesus Christ brings. All the words of our Savior are kind and considerate. The very plan of life and salvation is of the essence of charity and kindness and love. There is no compulsion, and one of the most grievous errors, in my judgment, into which the creeds and sects of religion have almost universally fallen is that of dogmatism, and such rigorous ritual as to deprive their proponents of these elements of kindness, and mercy, and tolerance, and consideration. Every man is an individual. He is entitled to be treated as a separate entity. Into his human tabernacle has come an individual intelligence of eternal life and duration, and I can conceive of no higher principle, no more salutary conception than that of the recognition of the individual differences of men and of women. Of these the Gospel, when properly understood and interpreted, takes note, and every man, in his place and circumstances, is given adequate and individual consideration. We are not all expected to be cast in one mould. We are as different in our thoughts and thinking, in our capacities and abilities, in our receptiveness, as we are in appearance. But the Gospel makes allowance for all of these. It gives to each one the opportunity of activity as his capacities and abilities may warrant, and it brings to each one a tolerance and compassion commensurate with the weaknesses and frailties of each individual.

THE FRUITION OF GOD'S PURPOSES

We are not perfect. We make no such pretensions, but we are striving to do good. We are striving for betterment and progression, and we are offering to the world the most progressive of all the philosophies and programs which have been offered for the advancement and improvement of individuals, as well as nations and groups.

I believe that God is blessing this great work. I believe that faster, perhaps, than we know, there is being brought to fruition the great purposes which he has announced for the human race. I see on every hand the evidences and the testimonies which we are told are to follow the testimonies of his chosen witnesses. We do not know how soon the ultimate consummation of his work will be effected, but we do know that we are moving forward, and it is ever my hope that all of us may be in the line of progress, that our service may ever be at the disposal of those who preside over us, and of the great cause. I feel that as every man gives his best to this high endeavor, he will grow in stature; he will grow in goodness; he will grow in love of God and love of the work.

I desire to give my best. I desire to unite with you in an effort to preach the true conception of the Christian doctrine. I desire to serve my God to the best of my meager ability. And now I praise his holy name for his great and glorious work, for these high conceptions that he has given to us to feed our very souls, to enliven us with love and reverence and worship, and the desire for goodness.

THE SUPREME CHARITY

I apprehend that the adversary of truth is at work in the world. I believe that he is touching and influencing the lives of many men, and that their conduct is inimical to the progress of our work, and yet I almost hesitate to call them enemies. After all, mankind are of one great brotherhood, some weaker than others, and it would seem some are vicious and malicious, and intentionally do great harm. Thank God I am not the judge of my brother and my sister. I am persuaded sometimes to believe with him who says that the supreme charity in all this world is to judge not, but to leave the judgment of our fellow men in the hands of him who is the great and just judge of all. As I desire mercy for myself, I plead for mercy for all mankind. "God forgive them. They know not what they do."

I pray that the spirit of love and tolerance and mercy, which the Gospel brings, may ever abide in our hearts, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The hymn, "Redeemer of Israel," was sung by the congregation.

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Anthon E. Anderson, President of the Logan Stake.

The Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The second session of the Conference commenced promptly at 2 o'clock p. m., with President Heber J. Grant presiding.

The congregation sang the hymn, "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Thomas A. King, President of the Garfield Stake.

The hymn, "Prayer Is the Soul's Sincere Desire," was sung by the congregation.

ELDER REED SMOOT

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I want to thank my Heavenly Father for the privilege of meeting with you this day. In the first place I want to endorse with all my heart and soul the remarks that have been made during the morning session. I think they were most timely and I wish to say to the people of the Church, no matter where they may live, these things apply to our every day life and if adhered to will make better men and better women of us.

NOT ASHAMED OF THE CHURCH

The examples that we set wherever we go are but one way of preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I have never been ashamed to acknowledge that I am a Mormon, if you please, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and in so doing I cannot recall one instance in my life when it has redounded to my disadvantage. When I see, as I have seen in times past, members of the Church shrinking in certain society or associations from letting people know that they are members of the Church of Jesus Christ, I have only pity for them. If the principles of the Gospel were lived by every man who professes to be a Latter-day Saint we would be the ideal people of the world, and I believe that we are even under present conditions.

PROHIBITIONISTS

Do we believe in prohibition? I cannot but say, without a question of doubt, that there are a greater number of Latter-day Saints who not only believe it but practice it than in any other community of like number or any other place in all the world. It means so much to us and the world, and we profess so much for those who live it. I hope and trust that it will grow in the hearts of the people until every man bearing the priesthood of the living God can say, "I am a prohibitionist. I am proud of it." Acknowledge it. I testify to you that there has never been a place where I have been present, in this country or in foreign lands, where it has mortified me in the least degree to acknowledge it by word or action—I not only profess to be a prohibitionist, but that I live that law and have done so all my life, thanks to that mother God gave me.

INGERSOLL'S VIEWS REGARDING ALCOHOL

There has been a great deal of talk lately to the effect that the prohibition law should be repealed. Would it be better for the world? I do not believe so. No one can claim that Robert G. Ingersoll was a fanatic religiously, and I know of no one who has expressed himself upon the curse of alcohol stronger than has Robert G. Ingersoll. I would that the whole world would study what he said is the result of its use. And while this question is before the nation, if you please, and many I find, even among our people, believe it would be best to have the prohibition law repealed, I want to call your attention to what Robert Ingersoll said regarding alcohol:

"I am aware that there is prejudice against any man engaged in the manufacture of alcohol. I believe that from the time it issues from the coiled and poisonous worm in the distillery until it empties into the hell of death, dishonor and crime it demoralizes everything that touches it from its source to its end.

"I do not believe that any one can contemplate the object without prejudice against the liquor crime. All we have to do gentlemen, is to think of the wrecks on either bank of the stream of death, of the suicides, of the insanity, of the poverty, of the ignorance, of the destitution, of the little children tugging at the faded and withered breasts of weeping and despairing mothers, of the wives asking for bread, of the men of genius it has wrecked, and man struggling with imaginary serpents, I believe every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this damned stuff that is called alcohol!

"Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affections, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachments, blights parental hope, and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life. It makes wives widows, children orphans, fathers fiends, and all of them paupers and beggars. It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, invites cholera, imparts pestilence and embraces consumption.

"It covers the land with idleness, misery and crime. It fills our jails, almshouses and asylums. It engenders controversy, fosters quarrels and cherishes riots. It crowds our penitentiaries and furnishes victims for the scaffold. It is the life blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman and the support of the midnight incendiary.

"It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer, it violates obligations, reverences fraud and honors infamy. It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue, slanders innocence.

"It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, helps the husband to massacre his wife, and the children to grind the patricidal ax. It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God and despises heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box and stains the judicial ermine. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislature, dishonors the statesman and disarms the patriot.

"It brings shame—not honor, terror—not safety, despair—not hope, misery—not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend it calmly surveys its frightful desolation and unsatiated with havoc, it poisons felicity, kills peace, ruins morals, blights confidence, slays reputations and wipes out national honor—then curses the world and laughs at its ruin."

Is there anyone who can deny these statements? What more trouble and sorrow could come to a mother or a father, a sister or a brother, than to have one of their loved ones addicted to the alcoholic curse? What right thinking person can believe it should be sanctioned by law? No, God grant that it shall never come to our fair America again.

I do not say that the present administration of the law is perfect. I do not say that it has been enforced to the length it could be. But I do say and I do claim that it is a thousand times better than if we had today the open saloon, the hell-holes of Satan himself.

EASTERN STATES MISSION ACCOMPLISHMENTS

There are so many questions of vital importance, my brethren and sisters, that could be spoken of and which have been referred to by those who have addressed this Conference. If I do trespass a moment I want to make reference to the Eastern States Mission, and acknowledge the splendid work accomplished by Brother James H. Moyle, the president of that Mission. He has made it possible to reach not only the few that come to church, but also the thousands who listen to our Elders' sermons by radio. The last two nights I have read the speeches that have been delivered over the radio in the Eastern States Mission by our Elders. Brother Moyle tells me that the radio speeches do not cost the Mission a cent, and I have not the least doubt that they have reached tens of thousands of people who had never heard of Mormonism or had had one principle of our Gospel explained to them by a member of the Church. He informs me that almost all of these speeches have been prepared by young missionaries themselves. Many of them are masterpieces. It would do this great congregation and all the thousands who are listening in over the radio a great deal of good to hear them delivered from this stand.

GOD AT THE HELM

This work is growing. The God of heaven is at the helm. He has never made one prediction through his prophets in any age of the world nor in this day and dispensation that will not be literally fulfilled. I know it as I know that I live. God grant his blessings unto the President of the Church, the General Authorities of the Church, the organizations of the priesthood, and all the people of the Church. Remember, brethren and sisters, you belong to the most remarkable organization in all the world. God give us power and strength and the determination to do our part to bring about the purposes of God in establishing His Church in this day and generation, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JAMES E. TALMAGE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

About 420, probably 421 of our present era, as we reckon the years, Moroni, an ancient Nephite prophet, the last of a long line, closed the record of his people, and left the seal of his testimony upon all that had been inscribed upon the metallic plates which were made to receive the account of the Lord's dealings with that people, from the time they had been led from Jerusalem, across the deep, to this American continent. I pray you heed these words of his:

"And again, I exhort you, my brethren, that ye deny not the gifts of God, for they are many; and they come from the same God. And there are different ways that these gifts are administered; but it is the same God who worketh all in all; and they are given by the manifestations of the Spirit of God unto men, to profit them.

"For behold, to one is given by the Spirit of God, that he may teach the word of wisdom;

"And to another, that he may teach the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;

"And to another, exceeding great faith; and to another, the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;

"And again, to another, that he may work mighty miracles;

"And again, to another, that he may prophesy concerning all things;

"And again, to another, the beholding of angels and ministering spirits;

"And again, to another, all kinds of tongues;

"And again, to another, the interpretation of languages and of divers kinds of tongues.

"And all these gifts come by the Spirit of Christ; and they come unto every man severally, according as he will.

"And I would exhort you, my beloved brethren, that ye remember that every good gift cometh of Christ.

"And I would exhort you, my beloved brethren, that ye remember that he is the same yesterday, today, and forever, and that all these gifts of which I have spoken, which are spiritual, never will be done away, even as long as the world shall stand, only according to the unbelief of the children of men."

THE EVIL GIFT

And now I pass over several paragraphs of comment upon what has gone before, and read you another admonition from this ancient revelator:

"And again I would exhort you that ye would come unto Christ, and lay hold upon every good gift, and touch not the evil gift, nor the unclean thing."

A very strong contrast is here drawn. The principal gifts of the Spirit are listed in other scriptures, in the Bible, in the volume of latter-day revelation, the Doctrine and Covenants; but the enumeration I have read to you is perhaps as comprehensive as any. The prophet plainly proclaims the fact that these are characteristic of the Church of Christ. Miracles, as the manifestations of such gifts are sometimes called, will not be done away as long as men are receptive to the operations of the Spirit of the Lord, as long as men are willing to receive and to heed.

But the admonishment is: "Touch not the evil gift, nor the unclean thing." What is meant by that? Satan from the first has been a great imitator; he is an experienced strategist. Never has the Lord set his hand to do a specific thing for the good of his people upon the earth, of outstanding feature, but that Satan has attempted to imitate it in some degree.

FROM GOD OR FROM SATAN?

The Lord manifested himself to Moses, and talked to the man face to face. Moses records the fact, and adds that he could not have looked upon the Lord with his physical eyes, but that the glory of the Lord was upon him, and he was able to see with his spiritual eyes.

Then came Satan, the audacious, the father of lies, and represented himself as being the son of God in the distinctive sense. Moses was able to discern and perceive.

"And it came to pass that Moses looked upon Satan and said: Who art thou? For behold, I am a son of God, in the similitude of his Only Begotten; and where is thy glory, that I should worship thee?

"For behold, I could not look upon God, except his glory should come upon me, and I were strengthened before him. But I can look upon thee in the natural man. Is it not so surely?"

Oh, that we all had such power of discernment. That is a gift of the Spirit, to which we are entitled and we will have it as we live for it. With that gift we shall be free, to a great extent, from the deception that otherwise might lead us astray.

As the Lord gives revelations, so does Satan, each in his way. As the Lord has revelators upon the earth, so has Satan, and he is operating upon those men by his power, and they are receiving revelations, manifestations, that are just as truly of the devil as was his manifestation to Moses, to which I have referred.

BEWARE OF DECEPTION

We need the power of discernment. We need the inspiration of the Lord, that we may know the spirits with whom we have to deal, and recognize those who are speaking and acting under the influence of heaven, and those who are the emissaries of hell. Many have been led away in this Church. Go back to 1830. In September of that year, a few months only after the Church had been organized, Satan was at work, and men were receiving revelations which were put forth to offset those that were given to the Church through the Lord's chosen revelator, the Prophet Joseph Smith. He had been instrumental in translating the ancient records, and he had been given the aid of the Urim and Thummim. Hiram Page found a peculiar stone, and used that, as the devil seems to have influenced him, until the Lord had to speak and declare that that which Hiram Page had given unto the people was not of him, and that when he had revelations to give to the Church he would give them through the man who was sustained as the revelator at the head of the Church, and not through somebody else. Read Doctrine and Covenants, section 28.

Nevertheless the Lord makes plain in the scriptures of these days that his wondrous gifts, the gifts of the Spirit, can be possessed by those who live for them and they will be given severally, according as the Lord will, and he wills to give them unto those who will use them rightly, and not unto those who would dishonor them.

FALSE PROPHETS

The Lord does not work miracles to satisfy idle curiosity or to gratify the lust of the evil-doer. When you hear, if hear you should, of men who are receiving revelations concerning the conduct of this Church, and those men are not such as you have sustained by the uplifted hand before the Lord as your representatives with the Lord, and as his prophets and revelators unto you, you may know that those men are not speaking by the power of God.

Now, do not be deceived. If men come to you and tell you that they have received manifestations and revelations telling of great developments that are to come, beware! So live that you may have the power of discernment. When they tell you that it has been made known to them that great wealth is to be taken out of the hills, under their direction; that they are to bring it forth with the prime purpose of using that wealth for the building up of the Church, for the erection of a great temple, toward which eventuality the eyes of the Latter-day Saints are turned, you may know that they are not of God. No temple will ever be built as the result of the gifts of a rich man, or of a few rich men. In building temples the Lord requires a specific kind of money. It must be sanctified money. It must be the money of sacrifice, and he needs the pennies of the faithful poor as much as the gold pieces of the rich.

We may all have part in building the great temple to which reference is often made, as we have all had the privilege of taking part in building the temples that have already been erected.

SPURIOUS IMITATIONS

Satan has tried to appear as an angel of light in earlier dispensations. He is doing so today. John the Revelator warned the people of this very day in which we live. He wrote for our warning of what would take place. He saw evil powers, and he calls them the spirits of devils, working miracles and deceiving the people. It was so in olden time. While the Lord was speaking through Isaiah and the other great prophets of pre-meridian time, Satan was at work with his witches and wizards, with his soothsayers, giving spurious messages and trying to lead the people astray.

When the Christ came in person manifesting his inherent power over men and evil spirits, when he cast out unclean spirits that were afflicting men, there arose many who undertook to exorcise the demons, and to imitate the work of Christ so far as was possible. And when the Gospel was again brought to earth, and the Priesthood restored in this, the last dispensation, there was a great revival and increase in the manifestations called spiritualistic phenomena, in the effort to put something forth that looked like the original and the genuine, and so lead people astray.

Oh, ye Latter-day Saints, ye men of mighty testimony, ye women of wondrous assurance, shall you, shall we, forget what the Lord has given us by way of certain knowledge, and be led away by false lights, by those who are receiving spurious revelations, as they call them, for guidance?

SATAN A LIVING PERSONAGE

Now, I know that it is not quite in accord with the advanced thought of the day, according to certain cults, to believe that there is a devil, a personage, a reality. Many who pose as super-thinkers seek to dismiss, with the old ideas, the old stories, fables they call them, that form the bulk of the very word of God recorded as sacred writ, the fact of Satan's existence.

But there is a personage known as Satan. Before he was cast out from heaven he was called Lucifer. He is just as truly a personage as are you or am I, though he is not embodied. He is in that unembodied state in which we existed prior to our birth into the flesh. And we read, as the Revelator tells us, and as Jude attests, that he was cast out from heaven because of his rebellion, and all his angels or followers were cast out with him; numbering a third of the spirit-hosts of that particular class in heaven. So they were many, and they are many.

In the land of the Gergesenes Christ freed a man who was grievously afflicted by evil powers; but first he called upon the demon to give his name, and the spirit answered, through the mouth of the man: "My name is Legion, for we are many." If we could form any estimate of the number of a third of the hosts of heaven at the time spoken of by the Revelator, and compare such with the number of people living upon the earth at any one time, we would see that the great general in command of them all, Satan, can assign a legion to every one of us, and to every human being on the face of the earth, to deceive and lead the soul astray, if it be possible.

Satan foresaw what would come to pass, and the prophet Nephi realized fully the claims that would be set up in the last days, these days. Read what goes before in the twenty-eighth chapter of Second Nephi, before that which I shall read to you, and you will see that the prophet is referring to the time in which we live. He tells us that it will be necessary in this day that the kingdom of the devil shall shake, and he foretells that the devil will "rage in the hearts of the children of men, and stir them up to anger against that which is good."

"And others will he pacify, and lull them away into carnal security, that they will say: All is well in Zion; yea, Zion prospereth, all is well—and thus he deceateth their souls, and leadeth them away carefully down to hell.

"And behold, others he flattereth away, and telleth them there is no hell; and he saith unto them: I am no devil, for there is none—and thus he whispereth in their ears, until he grasps them with his awful chains, from whence there is no deliverance."

LATTER-DAY WARNING

In the present dispensation the Lord has warned his people against the doctrines of devils voiced by men in the service of Satan. Read Doctrine and Covenants, section 46, especially verses 7 to 9.

I trust that we may have the power of discrimination, the gift of discernment, that we may know the spirits with whom we have to deal, that we may not forget the voice of the Shepherd but that we may know him, and follow him, and be true to our profession, looking to those whom we sustain as being our representatives before the Lord, for through them will come whatever is necessary that this people, as a people, that this Church, as his Church, shall receive. I hope that none of us shall be defiled through dallying with the evil gift, the devil's gift, the unclean thing, which is abominable in the sight of the Lord. I so pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Sixty-one years ago today I first beheld the light, here in this valley, and I am informed there was deep snow upon the ground. How different from that is the beautiful weather we have today for the commencement of our Conference, and how joyful it causes us to feel that we can meet together in the name of the Lord without animosity toward any soul, but with kindness in our hearts for all people. We have come into this sanctuary to worship our Heavenly Father, to listen to his servants as they speak to us under the inspiration of his Spirit.

HUMBLE BUT GREAT MEN

It is a wonderful blessing that we enjoy in these times of stress and uncertainty to feel sure of divine guidance, to have absolute faith in a personal God who is interested in us and who hears and answers our prayers.

I have been thinking today of the humble but great men who have led this Church from its organization. I have known personally all the Presidents since Joseph Smith, the Prophet. Although a small child when Brigham Young passed away I knew him; I have sat upon his knee and I remember with deep appreciation his kindness to my mother and to me when father was in England as a missionary. I have been well acquainted with the other Presidents and believe that they were all men of God. It is inconceivable that our Heavenly Father would choose any other kind to preside over his Church.

I have known the members of the Quorum of the Twelve since I was a small boy, and since I became of age I have been intimate with all of them. They have been a remarkable group of men. I can testify that those who have remained faithful have indeed been servants of the Lord.

I have been acquainted with most of the First Council of Seventy, and they have been good men, of exceeding humility.

The two Patriarchs of the Church who have served in my time have been exceedingly faithful and have indeed blessed the people.

I have known all the members of the Presiding Bishopric since

I was a youth and have been on intimate terms with most of them. They have certainly honored their bishopric and have sought to be what the Lord would have them be.

It has been my privilege to be personally acquainted with most of the Stake presidents during the last forty years and they have certainly presided over the people in a way that I am sure the Lord is pleased with their service.

While I have not been personally acquainted with all the bishops of the Church since my youth, I have known most of them. They have indeed been fathers of the flock, a wonderful group of men.

The auxiliary leaders of the Church, both men and women, have been faithful and true and have ministered for the blessing of our Father's children whom they have been appointed to serve.

UPHELD AND SUSTAINED BY RIGHTEOUS MEMBERS

In addition to these leaders, I have known thousands of the rank and file of this great Church, men and women of many nations who in humility and faithfulness have accepted the Gospel to become identified with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints both here and in other lands. These, too, have prayed for and sustained their leaders during the past century, and during my experience in the Church I have yet to know of one person who has been observing the commandments of the Lord who has raised his or her voice against those who were called to preside over this Church. That is really remarkable because all have had their agency and could have refused to sustain their leaders had there been evil in the men who have been called to direct them. Surely if they had not been good men some of this great army of people who are living near to the Lord would have discovered wrongdoing and would have made it public. As it is only those who have been cast out because of their unworthiness or who have transgressed the laws of the Lord have raised their voices in condemnation of the leaders of the Church.

One of the greatest testimonies to me of the divinity of this work is that a multitude of people—not only those who assemble here in these great General Conferences but all Israel—having the opportunity in Stake Conference four times a year to express themselves by voting either to sustain or refuse to sustain those who preside over them (every one exercising free agency) continue to uphold their leaders. Surely the Spirit of the Lord prompts the faithful, humble people to sustain his chosen servants.

I am grateful to know that the Lord has spoken and that this is his Church, and that he will continue to support those whom he calls to minister if they will be faithful in the future as they have been in the past.

EXPERIENCES OF EARLY LEADERS

Within the last few weeks I have been reading a journal of my grandfather, George A. Smith who, when a boy seventeen years of age, was a member of Zion's Camp. He was large in stature and slept at the foot of the Prophet's bed at night to see that no one should enter the tent who did not belong there. I have read his personal experiences, some most painful and others miraculous. In his youth he was sent out to preach the Gospel of our Lord. His was the experience of other men who have been called to the ministry. Those of evil minds made false accusations against him and his associates but he continued faithful and the Lord vindicated them and magnified them in the eyes of the people and gave them a testimony of the divinity of this work that was so positive that no task was too difficult for them to undertake for the dissemination of truth. Grandfather was among the group sent to England to preach the Gospel in 1839. There the adversary sought to discourage them in every way. Their journals written at the time disclose the fact that they were misrepresented by evil men and attacked by evil spirits, but the Lord preserved them and they performed a great labor. Eight of the Quorum of the Twelve were there at that time. Among those called to go to England were men without means to pay their way but they started from their homes on foot. Due to prolonged illness one of these men was too weak to walk two miles to take a stage coach but was helped that distance by a friend. They had faith in God; they knew that this was his Church and so they went their way and friends not of the Church were raised up to give them money and pay their passage across the ocean, where they delivered their message and many faithful people accepted the truth as a result of their ministry.

TOOLS OF THE ADVERSARY

The journals of these men inform us that even in that early day there were those who became identified with the Church who were not thoroughly converted; they did not repent of their sins, and failed to keep the commandments of the Lord. While his desires were plainly manifested unto them they refused to do what he required at their hands. They did not pay their tithing, would not observe the Word of Wisdom and were immoral. These the adversary could use and he prompted them to criticize and oppose the servants of the Lord who were unselfishly laboring day and night to disseminate the truth.

We may not, therefore, expect the leaders of the Church in our day to escape the shafts of the adversary hurled by those who are in his service. Righteous people will have no desire to speak evil of those who are doing good but the adversary will use those who, having transgressed the laws of the Church and the laws of the land, are themselves in darkness.

WHILE IN A DUNGEON

I desire to read a portion of Section 121 of the Doctrine and Covenants. President Grant quoted from it this morning but he did not read that which I will refer to. This revelation was given to the Prophet Joseph Smith while he was a prisoner in a dismal dungeon in Liberty, Missouri. In the anguish of his soul he prayed to the Lord:

"O God, where art thou? And where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place?"

"How long shall thy hand be stayed, and thine eye, yea thy pure eye, behold from the eternal heavens the wrongs of thy people and of thy servants, and thine ear be penetrated with their cries?"

He knew that the Lord could hear and would understand. He knew that the men he associated with were good men, that they suffered persecution and bondage, not because of wrong doing but because of enemies from without and evil men who were within the Church. The Lord answered his prayer as follows:

"My son, peace be unto thy soul; thine adversity and thine afflictions shall be but a small moment;

"And then, if thou endure it well, God shall exalt thee on high; thou shalt triumph over all thy foes.

"Thy friends do stand by thee, and they shall hail thee again with warm hearts and friendly hands.

"Thou art not yet as Job; thy friends do not contend against thee, neither charge thee with transgression, as they did Job.

"And they who do charge thee with transgression, their hope shall be blasted, and their prospects shall melt away as the hoar frost melteth before the burning rays of the rising sun;

"And also that God hath set his hand and seal to change the times and seasons, and to blind their minds, that they may not understand his marvelous workings; that he may prove them also and take them in their own craftiness;

"Also because their hearts are corrupted, and the things which they are willing to bring upon others, and love to have others suffer, may come upon themselves to the very uttermost;

"That they may be disappointed also, and their hopes may be cut off;

"And not many years hence, that they and their posterity shall be swept from under heaven, saith God, that not one of them is left to stand by the wall.

"Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the Lord, and cry they have sinned when they have not sinned before me, saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I commanded them.

"But those who cry transgression do it because they are the servants of sin and are the children of disobedience themselves.

"And those who swear falsely against my servants, that they might bring them into bondage and death—

"Wo unto them; because they have offended my little ones they shall be severed from the ordinances of mine house.

"Their basket shall not be full, their houses and their barns shall perish, and they themselves shall be despised by those that flattered them.

"They shall not have right to the priesthood, nor their posterity after them from generation to generation.

"It had been better for them that a millstone had been hanged about their necks, and they drowned in the depth of the sea."

Brethren and sisters, history will continue to repeat itself and temptations will be presented to all of us. We should keep the commandments of the Lord that we may enjoy the discernment of spirits that we may be not led astray.

MARKING THE TRAILS

This is a beautiful valley in which we are now living but it was a wilderness when the forebears of many of us came here. We are enjoying the fruits of their sacrifice and labor and we should remember them with deep appreciation.

Those early pioneers were a remarkable group of men and women, most of whom have gone to their reward. A movement has been started to mark the route of the pioneer, that those who now travel in comfort may have their attention called to the courage of those who blazed the trail and made it possible for us to live in this favored land. Opportunity is being offered that we may all make our contribution to a fund that is intended to mark the trail over which those heroes came, many of whom are buried in unmarked graves. Others struggled into this valley, footsore and weary but with undaunted courage, because of their faith in the Father of us all. A state-wide committee has been organized to plan, and we will be permitted to participate in erecting monuments and markers in different places, to call the attention of the passerby to those who preceded us, and we should determine that they will not be forgotten because of carelessness or indifference on our part.

GRATITUDE FOR BLESSINGS

All my life I have been associated with this Church and its faithful members and rejoice that I have been considered worthy to be identified with them. Men and women such as are sitting in this congregation today have been an inspiration to me. I thank you, my brethren and sisters, for the joy I have had in being your associate in this work, this work that the Lord has given to the earth for the last time, for we are assured that it will never again be taken from the earth or given to another people.

I thank my Father in heaven for the knowledge that this is his work and that I have enjoyed the benefits that have come to me as a result of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It has not been difficult for me to see how those who have observed all the counsels of the Lord as near as they could, have been happy because the more of his commandments that I have kept the happier has been my life. The most contented and the happiest people that I know are the members of this Church who are conforming their lives to the teachings of our Lord. Knowing this I am grateful beyond expression for my membership in his Church. I am thankful to be directed by men such as preside over us. I am grateful to these men who are the Presidency of the Church for the encouragement they give me. I pray that they may live long and be happy. I pray that the Lord will bless my associates in the Quorum of the Twelve, that he will reward presidents of Stakes, bishops of Wards, and mission presidents and all who are unselfishly giving their time and the very best portions of their lives to develop faith among the children of our Heavenly Father and give them a better understanding of his glorious truths.

This is his Gospel; it is the power of God unto salvation to all those who believe and obey it.

Knowing that in the not far distant future I must stand in the presence of my Maker to give an account of the days I have spent upon the earth and realizing how serious it might be to me if I did not speak the truth, I testify to you that I know as I know that I live that this is God's work, and I bear witness of it in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

ELDER MELVIN J. BALLARD

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

There came a time, in the life of Paul, when he found the Church beset with just such difficulties as have been referred to as existing, in some instances, with some members of the Church today, and to his associate in the ministry, Timothy, he said:

"Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

"For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

On another occasion it is recorded in Matthew that:

"There shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect."

THE GIFT OF GOD WITHIN US

Christ regarded the bestowal of the Holy Ghost upon the membership of the Church, as the fundamentally important thing he could do for them after he had concluded his own personal ministry. He would not even allow the apostles to go forth and preach without that endowment from on high; but after the Holy Ghost was come he would fully qualify them to understand the truth, he would endow them with power to preach it. And what a marvelous change came over the lives of these men when they were endowed with this power from on high!

The membership of this Church have received that same companionship. How important it is for us today, as perhaps never before, to stir up the gift of God that is in us, that has been given us through the putting on of the hands of those authorized servants of God, that we, by the guidance of that holy inspiration, may be able in these troublesome times, as has been so well stated here this afternoon, to enjoy the gift of discernment, to see and understand the spirits that are in the world.

LEST YE BE DECEIVED

In the forty-sixth section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants I read the following:

"But ye are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally; and that which the Spirit testifies unto you even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men; for some are of men, and others of devils.

"Wherefore, beware lest ye are deceived; and that ye may not be deceived seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given;

"For verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do; that all may be benefited that seek or that ask of me, that ask and not for a sign that they may consume it upon their lusts."

SEEK SPIRITUAL GUIDANCE

I believe, as I have observed, that there has never been a time when we needed spiritual guidance as we need it today. This is truly a time when the wisdom of the wise has perished in material things, and the understanding of the prudent is hid. I am sure that the Lord gave the gift and power of the Holy Ghost to the membership of the Church for their guidance and comfort in all things, even as he has indicated in the revelation I have just read.

I believe that it is the privilege of the membership of this Church to seek that guidance, even in material things. There is a key given in the ninth section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants, which would be very profitable for the Latter-day Saints to follow even now. You remember the circumstance of Oliver Cowdery translating portions of the Book of Mormon, and then all became darkness to him and he could not proceed. He inquired of the Lord to know why it was, and the answer came that he had taken no thought save it was to ask the Lord, and left the burden of responsibility there.

"Behold, I say unto you, that you must study it out in your mind; then you must ask me if it be right, and if it is right I will cause that your bosom shall burn within you; therefore, you shall feel that it is right.

"But if it be not right, you shall have no such feelings, but you shall have a stupor of thought that shall cause you to forget the thing which is wrong"— that shall turn your heart away from the thing that you had contemplated.

You do not know what to do today to solve your financial problems, what to plant, whether to buy or sell cattle, sheep or other things. It is your privilege to study it out; counsel together with the best wisdom and judgment the Lord shall give you, reach your conclusions, and then go to the Lord with it, tell him what you have planned to do. If the thing you have planned to do is for your good and your blessing, and you are determined to serve the Lord, pay your tithes and your offerings and keep his commandments, I promise you that he will fulfil that promise upon your head, and your bosom shall burn within you if the thing you have planned to do is right, and you shall know by the whisperings of the Spirit that it is right. But if it is not right you shall have no such feelings, but you shall have a stupor of thought, and your hearts will be turned away from that thing.

DECEPTIONS OF THE ADVERSARY

I know of nothing today that the Latter-day Saints need more than the guidance of the Holy Spirit in the solution of the problems of life. I know also that that same unerring wisdom of the Holy Spirit can detect the deceptions of the adversary. I have been led recently to feelings of pity for groups of people who have been deceived by lying tongues, by deceptive spirits.

I was in Independence the other day with Brother Bennion, visiting the mission, and stood by a foundation that has been partly made and has been filled with earth as the rains have been washing in the excavations. I conversed with groups of people who claimed to have received revelations to build a temple there, and had now come to confusion, split up and divided. Across the lot is a large building, partly completed, erected by another group who claim they have had visions and revelations, and they are in the midst of confusion, doubt and uncertainty.

As I look back over the history of this Church, I find that the Prophet himself had to rise up against those who sought to displace him. When Brigham Young became President of this Church he said: "Let any who want to lead a party away do so, and raise their hand against God's authority. They will not prosper." His words have been fulfilled. Whether it is in connection with those factions that have broken away and gone off to Texas, or anywhere else; they have come to naught, and they will come to naught. Those who broke away in this country, under the name of Morrisites, or Godbeites, or any other "ites"—what has become of them? Oh, that men and women would be wise enough to see what will happen to those who seek to steady the ark!

The Lord promised long ago that the majority of the leadership of this Church never would lead this people astray, and they never will, and they are not leading this people astray today. Every faction that rises will come to naught, just as sure as you and I live.

How my soul rejoices to see this work progressing, developing, going forward, although there are these deceptions. Yes, the elect would be deceived, if it were possible, by the miraculous things that sometimes appear among others. There were those, in the days of Christ, who healed the sick and followed not after him, and some of the disciples wanted to know if they should not rebuke and restrain these who were thus manifesting certain power. Christ told them to leave them alone; they were not competitors of his.

It does not disturb me to see evidences of this character today elsewhere, because here is the light, here is the truth, here is the power of God, and here is the authority of the holy priesthood. I am sure that every Latter-day Saint who is observing the commandments of the Lord, not seeking for these things, to consume them upon his own lusts, will have witnesses and testimonies of the Holy Spirit that will guide him to detect the falsehoods, to detect the deceptions that are at work.

USING NEW METHODS

We are in a period of peace, so far as the Church is concerned, from the outside. You who have been attending these Conferences now for the last few years have been hearing the warning from this stand, that when the time of peace came to the Church, and there was no enemy from the outside, we should not be lulled into a sense of security, feeling that the battles were all fought and won, and that the enemy had quit the field; for he would pursue new methods in seeking to destroy this work. He has not succeeded in injuring it by mob violence.

I went over part of the trail with Brother Bennion the other day, where Zion's camp traveled during the Missouri troubles. I stood at the spot where the Prophet, chained, uttered that great rebuke to the guards; I stood at the shrine erected to General Doniphan, who was ordered to execute the Prophet, but had the courage and manhood to refuse to do it. As I contemplated the struggles and sorrows and difficulties and the journeys and the hardships of the hundred years, my soul rejoiced that under all these trials the Church was not shaken. There stood men and women in its ranks with clear vision, with understanding, and with determination to stand or to die for the truth. They stood like beaten anvils, unafraid, and have preserved to us our heritage, blessings and privileges of faith and standing in the true Church until this hour.

But the enemy is not arraying persecution against us from the outside just now. Nevertheless, he is at work, seeking to deceive within, for he will by new methods try to destroy this people; but he shall not succeed any more than he succeeded through persecution or mob violence. I am sure that the great heart of this Church is sound, that we are of a sound mind, and that there is no fear for Zion, for her future is glorious.

[A PERIOD OF GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT]

My visit to two missions since the last Conference inspired me with the thought of great things that are to come to this Church. We have not begun to die, but we are entering into a period of growth and development that will be extended, and thousands, yea, countless thousands of the blood of Israel who have not yet been touched, will be found. God is opening the work among the nations of the earth. More people have been listening to our messages than ever before. Places are being thronged, and I see him at work preparing for the fulfilment of his great purposes, for Zion shall arise and shine, and those who seek to stop her progress will be as helpless as the dogs that bark; while the Church, the mighty caravan of God, goes on majestically towards its destiny. No power can retard its progress.

The only fear that I have is for us as individuals. The work will go on. It will succeed. It will fulfil its holy purposes. The great secret is, shall I keep the light burning clearly in my own soul, to see and understand the course that I am to take; that shall keep me on the good ship Zion, and not fall overboard or run off with some whim or will or notion of someone else.

MEN OF GOD

I declare to you, with all sincerity of heart, that I know, personally, that the declarations that President Grant made concerning the honor, the integrity and the faithfulness and devotion of these leaders, are true. I know it. They are men of God. They are not living double lives. They are living what they have taught the Latter-day Saints to live, and thank the Lord you know it. We don't need to argue it with you, for you have a witness, a testimony in your hearts, that convinces you that it is the truth.

Yes, glorious things await Zion, and the evil one knows it, and he will try, if possible, to stop the work, try to divide our ranks. He will try to disturb us, but he shall not succeed. These little disturbances will pass. The work will go on. God's glorious purposes will be accomplished. I am as sure of it as I am that I live. I bear witness and testimony of it to you this day, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS*Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

It is a matter of great satisfaction to me, my brethren and sisters, to find that my feelings are in complete harmony with those expressed by the speakers in this Conference, both this forenoon and this afternoon. I know that they have spoken the truth, that they have counseled us in righteousness, and if we will obey this counsel our lives will be happier and we will be more secure in our salvation.

MEN OF GOD

I have known all of the Presidents of the Church except the Prophet Joseph Smith. I was sixteen years of age when President Brigham Young died. I have been personally acquainted with his successors, and with many of the noble men of this Church who have been associated with them in the conduct of the affairs of the Church.

I have seen the work prosper and grow, and truth triumph, and I know that these men have been men of God, including those who stand at the head of the Church today. I am glad to be associated with them and to be in harmony with them, because I know they are worthy servants of God; I know that they are trying to live their religion, to live by the principles and the doctrines which they teach. I hope that you will not discover in my remarks anything that would lead you to think otherwise than that I am in complete harmony with them.

I want to say that although I did not have the privilege of knowing the Prophet Joseph here in the flesh, yet I know, just as well, that he was a prophet of God, divinely called and inspired, and the work which he brought forth is evidence of that fact.

SEEKING SALVATION

I know that the Gospel is true. I have proved it from many angles, to my entire satisfaction, and have had the seal of the Spirit of God to impress the truth of it upon my mind. I rejoice in this testimony and in the knowledge I have that there are thousands of men and women in this Church who are faithful in keeping the commandments of the Lord and in doing his will, who know the truth of the work and are trying to work out their salvation in fear and trembling before him.

I remember hearing a president of a Stake, while speaking from this stand at one of our General Conferences, make the remark that in his Stake there were people who were candidates for every degree of glory. That no doubt represents the conditions in the Church today, hence the necessity for our speaking of certain simple principles and truths, over and over again.

A STRONG ARGUMENT

A strong argument in favor of prohibition was brought forth this afternoon by Elder Smoot, who read from Robert G. Ingersoll's declaration of the evil results of strong drink. I thought, in that connection, that there is a stronger argument to present to Latter-day Saints than all that—one that appeals to me, at any rate, more forcefully and convincingly—and that is that it is the expressed mind and will of our Father in heaven that we abstain from the use of intoxicating drinks. Then too, there are other things referred to in the Word of Wisdom which our Father has told us we should not indulge in. Tobacco is one of them, and others are strong drinks and hot drinks, which have been interpreted by the Authorities of this Church, whom we have sustained as prophets, seers and revelators, from the days of the Prophet Joseph down to the present time, to include tea and coffee. I accept the interpretation of the Word of Wisdom made by these, the servants of God, just as much as if tea and coffee had been mentioned in the Word of Wisdom. To me, our Father in heaven has spoken and said: "It is my will that you do not use tea and coffee. It is my will that you do not use intoxicating drinks. It is my will that you do not use tobacco." Have I any respect for the will and wishes of God, my Heavenly Father? If I have, and have faith in him, and in the revelations that have come to us through the Prophet Joseph Smith, I will keep that Word of Wisdom as I understand it, and as it is interpreted by the Authorities of this Church.

There are thousands of men and women in this Church who regard this matter just as I do, and who are keeping the Word of Wisdom, but I am sorry to say there are thousands of others who seem to have very little respect for the will of God as he has given it to us in this important revelation.

WAR IN HEAVEN

We read an account of a war that took place in heaven. It is recorded in the twelfth chapter of the book of Revelation—that a third of heaven's hosts, rather than do the will of God, were drawn away in rebellion, and were cast out and down, and are not permitted to have bodies for their spirits, or to obtain any degree of glory. On the other hand, those who stood with our Captain, our King, our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, on the platform: "Father thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever," are here enjoying the blessings of this life and are in the way of salvation. One might say that platform pertained to the spirit world. It did pertain to the spirit world, but it pertained as well to this, our second estate.

THE WILL OF THE FATHER

The Savior repeatedly, while here in life, made the declaration that he came not to do his own will, but to do the will of his Father who sent him. After his death and resurrection, when he appeared to the ancient inhabitants of this, the American continent, and established his Church, and preached the Gospel to them, he renewed that statement in a very forceful way, as recorded in the twenty-seventh chapter of III Nephi, verse 13. He said:

"Behold I have given unto you my gospel, and this is the gospel which I have given unto you—that I came into the world to do the will of my Father, because my Father sent me."

Then he goes on with his comments, and in the twenty-seventh verse we have this further expression of our Lord:

"Therefore what manner of men had ye ought to be? Verily I say unto you, even as I am."

I associate the two expressions, that he came to do the will of his Father who sent him, and that we have come also to do the will of our Father who has sent us. And what manner of men ought we to be? Even as he was. If we do the will of our Father, as he did it and as he taught it, it will make us like him, and will save us with him in our Father's kingdom. If we do the will of our Father it will not only be the keeping of the Word of Wisdom, but every commandment which he has given will appeal to us as the will of our Father, which we must observe. Every law of the Gospel will have the same appeal to our souls.

OTHER REASONS FOR OBSERVING WORD OF WISDOM

This is the strong appeal: If we will not abstain from the use of tobacco, from tea and coffee and intoxicating drinks, because of their evil effects upon our bodies, and upon our minds and our spirituality; then, for the love of God, our Father, and to be in accord with his mind and will, we ought to observe that Word.

There is another responsibility in connection with it, devolving upon us, and that is, we owe something to our parents. Men and women, boys and girls, who have been born in this Church of faithful, true, Latter-day Saints, are under obligation to their parents to honor them; and when we do not keep the Word of Wisdom but indulge in these things, we not only do not honor them, but we dishonor them, and that we have no right to do.

God has set his hand to save his children and invites us to assist him in this great and glorious work, and when we live contrary to the teachings of the Gospel we hinder instead of helping his cause, and some of us perhaps will do more injury to the cause than all the good we do. None of us, at any rate, can afford to deviate from the word and will of the Lord.

I know that this work is true. I know it is good. I thank God that I have lived as well and as nearly to his laws as I have thus far, and I hope and pray that I may so continue and make improvement as long as I live upon the earth, so that I may be accounted worthy to dwell with the sanctified and the pure, so that I will not be disappointed when life here is ended. I would like you, my brethren and sisters, to enjoy the same blessing.

In closing, I appeal to those who have not been keeping the Word of Wisdom, in the name of the Lord and for his sake and consideration, that you hereafter do not use tea and coffee, that you do not use tobacco, that you do not use strong and intoxicating drinks. I appeal to you in behalf of the President of this Church, God's mouthpiece unto us, and those associated with him, that you do the things that will please them. If you would uphold and sustain them, observe these things. That will give them more encouragement than anything else that we can possibly do in this mighty work.

May God add his blessing unto us, each and all, according to our need, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Temple Block Mission

An American prophet, King Benjamin, whose history we read in the Book of Mormon said on one occasion:

"And again I say unto you as I have said before, that as ye have come to the knowledge of the glory of God, or if ye have known of his goodness and have tasted of his love, and have received a remission of your sins, which causeth such exceeding great joy in your souls, even so I would that ye should remember, and always retain in remembrance, the greatness of God, and your own nothingness, and his goodness and long-suffering towards you, unworthy creatures, and humble yourselves even in the depths of humility, calling on the name of the Lord daily, and standing steadfastly in the faith of that which is to come, which was spoken by the mouth of the angel.

"And behold, I say unto you, that if ye do this ye shall always rejoice, and be filled with the love of God, and always retain a remission of your sins; and ye shall grow in the knowledge of the glory of him that created you, or in the knowledge of that which is just and true."

Then we have the words of Jesus as recorded in the thirteenth chapter of Mark, the Evangelist, which read: "My words shall not pass away." The words and teachings of Jesus Christ, our Lord, shall not pass away. They shall live in the hearts of mankind forever. From Jesus Christ as from no other teacher in the world's history men have gathered an idea of God and his teachings which have proved themselves to be the greatest teachings in the history of civilization. They have endured the changes of time and survived the vicissitudes of life. "In him as in no other being, humanity has found an ideal of character before which men of all generations bow their heads." We are living in a changing, dynamic age. It is called the greatest age of the world's history. There are so many influences leading mankind into all manner of theories and interpretations as to what life means. I have faith, however, in the youth of the world; I believe in humanity. There is much more goodness than wrong; much more righteousness than evil. Man is divine, and all are children of the same God. The knowledge of the divine will always remain to guide us to better spheres. Yet I am not unmindful of the fact that there are ills besetting human society.

There is today an unprecedented challenge to law and authority. There is a prevailing hatred between nations; men and men. There is a growing aversion to work. There is an excessive thirst for pleasure, and a gross materialism seems to be growing; and as the materialism grows man is forgetting the spiritual life that has been taught us by Jesus the Christ, and those who have taken up his work and his cause. These ills have become common to human society, but there is a power in the world that is destined to overcome them and that is the power of God, manifested in the mind and the soul of man.

When Elder Ballard in his sermon quoted the words of Paul to Timothy in which Paul declared that God had not blessed us with the spirit of fear, but with power and strong minds, I was reminded of Stevenson's lovely story entitled "The Lantern Bearers." In this story, Stevenson describes a boyhood game, which consisted in carrying beneath one's coat a bulls-eye lantern. Those admitted to the society were permitted to carry lanterns, and when the members met on some hill or desert waste to talk with each other, their lanterns were the bond of fraternity. It united them all as by a sacred cause. When one member met another, he would ask: "Have you your lantern ready?" Then would come a responsive "Yes," and their coats were unbuttoned and the glow of the light revealed. From this Stevenson derived his philosophy of life. I wonder if we have our lanterns aglow and ready to show the way.

I believe that the message of Christ is slowly, gradually, and surely touching the hearts of mankind. I believe that ultimately righteousness will prevail over wrong; and the Gospel of Christ prevail. Men will stand in the dignity of their divinity, and not only live, but declare by their lives the great work and power of the Master.

Boys and girls in our universities are confronted with all kinds of ideas, but ideas that have been advanced by men who are sincere. If the boys and girls will keep themselves clean and pure and unspotted, and look to their best selves, and the best that is in life, they will be safe, and they will come to a knowledge of the great truths of God.

I remember once in passing the large gate of the University of Denmark, in Copenhagen, noticing a beautifully carved eagle above the entrance. I suppose it is there to this day. I remember the Latin expression beneath the eagle, which reads in English: "The eagle is looking toward the celestial light." Every time a University student passes through the gate he takes his hat off, looks up to that eagle and to the motto, and with thoughtful mind says: "This day may I look toward the celestial light."

This has been the teaching of our fathers and our mothers, to look toward the celestial light. In that light, in that illumination which is and may become common to us all, there is happiness, and peace, and sunshine, and all in life we may ask for.

The pioneers of Utah, our fathers and mothers, understood the joy of divine illumination, for they were men and women of toil, and of great faith in God. They understood life, for as they conquered the elements, the finer instincts of altruism and generosity and love swelled in their hearts. They grew in a knowledge of earth and heaven. They knew the worth of life. They had their lanterns ever ready; and never did they fail to keep to the light which never failed.

The light of life is Jesus Christ, our Lord. He has told us to deal direct with God through his name. The soul is to be unafraid. We are to love God. That love becomes tremendous and real. It becomes an infinite power. "If thou canst believe," says Mark the Evangelist, "all things are possible to him that believeth." And again in Mark we read: "Have faith in God." "The time is fulfilled." "The Kingdom of God is at hand. Repent and believe the good news." Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We have received the following greeting from President Castle Murphy of the Hawaiian Mission:

"Aloha to the leading brethren and sisters and the Church in general, from the missionaries and the good people of the Hawaiian Mission. May you have a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord in every session of the One Hundred and First Annual Conference of the Church, is the fervent prayer of each of us who labors in this choice land of love, music and flowers—Hawaii."

The congregation sang, as a closing hymn, "Do What Is Right."

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Harold B. Lee, President of the Pioneer Stake.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock Sunday morning, April 5th.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Sunday morning, April 5th, at 10 o'clock, President Heber J. Grant presiding.

The Tabernacle was crowded to capacity, every seat in the great auditorium and galleries being taken and every available space in the doorways and aisles being occupied. Thousands who could not find accommodations in the Tabernacle assembled in the large Assembly Hall and on the Tabernacle grounds, where they listened by means of the radio to the Conference services.

The Tabernacle Choir and the congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

Elder J. Emmett Bird, President of the Kolob Stake, offered the invocation.

The Choir sang the anthem, "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy."

PRESIDENT ANTHONY W. IVINS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I do not remember an occasion, my brethren and sisters, when it appeared to me that a greater number of members of the Church were present than are here this morning. I feel humble and grateful that I am permitted to be here with you, recognized with you, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

It is a beautiful morning. The sun shines brightly without. As I walked through the grounds I noticed that the buds on the trees are beginning to burst, to put on their new summer clothing, and awake to newness of life.

Then, when I look at these Easter lilies, with their purity of color, I remember that this is the day when Christian people throughout the world commemorate the resurrection of Christ, our Lord. It seems appropriate that it should come on such a day, that the occasion should come when the earth is awakening from its long winter sleep, its frozen condition, to new life and new energy.

EASTER

The word "Easter" is derived, according to a note which I have here, from the Anglo-Saxon word "Eostra," who is the mythical goddess of spring. Prior to the seventh century A. D., no uniform date had been fixed upon which this event, the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, was commemorated. I find that Rome observed the 26th of March; that Gaul observed the 21st of March; Italy the 18th of April; while Christians of Egypt observed April 27th, as the day on which the tomb of the Redeemer of the world was opened, and he came forth with his resurrected body.

Regardless of the date, whether it be upon April 5th, as we commemorate it today, or upon any other day which might be designated, it does bring to our memory, and we commemorate it as one of the greatest—perhaps I might be justified in saying the greatest event that has occurred in the history of the world.

It is true that the creation of man, and the placing of him here upon earth by God, our Father, was the beginning of all things as they now pertain to us; but if the decree of death which was pronounced upon our first parents, and which has been the heritage of man from that time until the present, had been definite and perpetual, if no means of redemption from it had been provided, the purpose of God our Father in placing us here would have been, to a great degree at least, futile.

A REDEEMER PROMISED

He promised, in the beginning, that he would provide a Redeemer; that the penalty of death, which was pronounced upon humankind, because of transgression, should not be eternal, but that at a time, designated as the meridian of time, he would send to earth his Only Begotten Son, through whom the bonds of death were to be broken and the restoration of the spirit and body of man became an accomplished fact, when mortality would be no longer a burden to us, but when with glorified bodies we should stand in the presence of God, our Father.

I am just quoting in a general way, because of the limited time, the facts as they are to be found in holy writ. The Bible tells the story very definitely and understandingly to those who read. That the Israelitish people, from whom we are descendants, looked forward to a time when a Redeemer would be provided, is a well-established fact. Israel had been reduced to a condition of servitude. The independence of Judea had passed into other hands. Rome dominated, and the Jews were tributary to her. Their prophets looked forward to the day when deliverance would come. They expected one to come to sit upon David's throne. They looked for a deliverer, a redeemer, who would come surrounded by the panoply of war, and restore to Israel the kingdom which had been wrested from them. The advent of Christ, the humility of his birth, the simplicity of his life, did not appeal to them.

"HE WHO WAS TO COME"

When he was baptized in the River Jordan, John, who administered the ordinance, bore witness that he was the Son of God. John had preached repentance and baptism; bore witness to the world that one would come after him, the latchet of whose shoes he was not worthy to unloose. And yet it is evident that John himself was not certain, because while in jail at the decree of Herod, the king, he sent messengers to our Lord, with this question: Go and ask him if he is really he who was to come, or, are we to look for another. Christ answered them and said: Go back and tell to John that which you have seen. The blind see. The deaf hear. The sick are healed. The poor have the gospel preached to them. Let the mind of John revert to the words of the prophets, who had long before declared that he should come in humility, and not in the glory of the world.

Christ, our Lord, came to earth first, to break the bands of death, and make the resurrection from the dead an established fact. He came to teach us the story of human life, for he lived it, as we should live it. He came to teach us the source from which we came, and to which we shall return.

THE WITNESS HE BORE

He bore definite witness that he came from the presence of the Father, as we come from the presence of the Father. He bore definite witness that he returned to the Father; that he went to sit upon his right hand, as it would be the privilege of all of those who accepted and followed him to sit upon his right hand. He bore witness to us that whoever had seen him had seen the Father; that the glory of the Father was not only manifest in his ministry and the doctrines which he taught, but that he was in the exact image of his person. When men said to him: "Show us the Father," did he not answer: Is it possible that you have been with me so long, and ask this question? Whoever has seen me has seen the Father—thus establishing the divinity of the declaration made in the book of Genesis:

"God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him; male and female, created he them."

KING THOUGH HE WAS

He taught us the doctrine of humility. King though he was, he rode into Jerusalem upon the colt of an ass—not in a chariot, not with military attendants, not with the blare of trumpets and the beating of drums, but under the most humble circumstances that the human mind can well conceive.

He was born into the world as we are born into it, the son of a righteous, God-chosen mother. He lived very much as we live. He grew up as we grow up, except for the manifestation of his wisdom and godly calling which characterized even his childhood, his youth. He died very much as we would have died, subjected to the same conditions.

It appeared, after all, that the end had come. He had taught the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead, but his disciples did not fully understand, and when they saw him give up the ghost, and laid his body away in the sepulcher prepared by his devoted friend, Joseph of Arimathea, who is said to have been the uncle of Mary, his mother, it appeared to them that the end had come. And they said: After all, there is nothing to it. I am going back to my fishery. I shall go back to my life as a publican. I shall pursue the avocation that I pursued before I knew him.

HE WAS NOT THERE

But when the good women came up that Sunday morning which we commemorate today, not expecting to find his sepulcher empty, but expecting to administer to him the last rites which it was customary among the Hebrew people to administer to the dead, he was not there. An angel of the Lord was there. The great stone which Pilate had ordered to be placed before the opening of the sepulcher, and sealed with a Roman signet, had been rolled aside. The body of their Lord was gone. The linen cloths were there, in which his head had been bound. The angel asked them why they sought the living among the dead.

You are all familiar, you who read the scripture, with the story of his glorious resurrection. You all know that his disciples could not believe it when word was taken to them that he had been raised from the dead. To them it appeared to be an impossibility. While they were met together, with the doors closed, and he appeared before them, they looked upon him in wonder and some doubted. Thomas said: I will not believe until I see the marks of the nails in his hands and feet, and the wound of the Roman spear-thrust in his side. And he did see them. Then he bowed down and worshipped him as his Lord and God, just as we worship him today.

He taught us the doctrine of forgiveness. He said to the sinful woman when her own people would have stoned her to death: "Go thy way and sin no more." Among his last words he said, of those who were responsible for his death: "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do."

HE LIVED AGAIN

He lived again. It was after his resurrection that he authorized his disciples to go into the world and preach his gospel, and promised them that the signs should follow—not during his mortal life had he given them such general authority.

The Bible bears witness that not only the body of Christ arose from the grave, but that many of the graves were opened, and people, with their resurrected bodies, went forth into the great city, and appeared unto many.

He appeared after, with his glorified body, to the inhabitants of our own continent. They saw him. They heard his voice. He taught them the same doctrines that he taught to his people in the promised land, or in Jerusalem. So we know that he lived again.

My brethren and sisters, this is the great lesson that he teaches us: This is what I have endeavored, in few words, to present to you: Just as Christ lived and died and was resurrected from the dead, so do we live and die, and so are we resurrected from the dead, or else there is no truth in the revealed will of the Lord as it is written in the holy scripture.

IT WAS A REVELATION

I admonish you all to read the last book of the Bible, the revelation given to St. John. We call it the Apocalypse. Reflect for a moment on the manner in which it came. John tells us that it was a revelation of Jesus Christ, our Lord; that he sent and communicated it to him through the agency of an angel—he did not go himself; and then the wonderful revelations which are made regarding the earth and its inhabitants, the future which is before us, were delivered by this personage to John, the divine disciple of Christ our Lord, who had been banished to the isle of Patmos by decree of the Roman governor.

And what did he tell John? John says: He showed me these things. I saw that the graves were opened; and the dead came forth, that small and great arose from them; that they appeared before God to be judged according to the things which are written in the books, according to their works. All men, he declared, are to be the beneficiaries of the redemption wrought out by Christ, our Lord. The sea gave up the dead which were in it. The graves were opened, and the dead came forth, and death and hell gave up the dead that were in them. They came to judgment, every man and woman according to the works done while they were in mortality, as we are in mortality now. Revealing to us definitely the obligation that we are under to God, our Father, to live righteous lives, to accomplish good purposes, to fulfil the mission for which we have been sent to earth, in a manner that will be pleasing to God our Father, and justified when the balance sheet is struck.

"NO MORE DEATH"

And then what else did John tell us?—I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the old heaven and the old earth had passed away. And there was no more death, neither weeping nor sorrow, for all of those things had been done away.

Does this bring a degree of resignation to us? Does it bring happiness to us in time of trouble and sorrow? What does it all mean? It means that every wife who has stood at the bier of her husband, whom death has called, has hope that the separation is only temporary. It means that every husband who has laid away his wife has that same hope, if he understands. It means that mothers who have mourned the loss of children, relatives who have mourned the loss of friends that have been separated from them by death, have joy and consolation in the knowledge, the definite knowledge which has come to us, that there will be restoration from death in the life to come.

It is a wonderful thing to me. I glory in it. So I bear witness to this large congregation of people that we are redeemed from this change from mortality to immortality, which we call death, through the redemption wrought out by Christ our Lord. He is our Redeemer. He is our Savior and if we are true to him, we will be entitled to sit upon his right hand in the mansions of God our Father, when our mortal lives are ended. Every covenant, every promise made to men and women upon earth, which is sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, will go with us into the life to come.

A MAN OF SORROW

Who was this man that made all of this possible? He was not a man of wealth. He was not a man of great national notoriety. He had no home to call his own. He had no place to lay his head. He was not a man who sought the praise of the world, not one to magnify himself to the exclusion of others; but one who, while in reality a king, was not a king as we interpret that word to mean in human life. He washed the feet of his humble followers. He was not well known in Jerusalem, where he ministered; it was necessary that someone point him out that the officers of the law might know who this man was that was making such great disturbance. A man of humility! A man of sorrow! It is said of him that no one ever heard him laugh, but many people saw him weep, weep because of the sins of the world, weep because of his love for an unbelieving people, his own people, to whom he came but who rejected him as a malefactor and an imposter.

THE EARTH IS HAPPY

My brethren and sisters, these are things which these Easter lilies have brought to my mind. These are things which this springtime day recalls. How like our own lives! How like mortality is the earth itself! Winter time comes. The earth appears to die. Ice and snow enfold it. Should it continue so, the earth would not be habitable. It would become like the frozen country to the south of us which Byrd has so recently explored, devoid of vegetation, devoid of life, bleak, hopeless, uninhabitable. But the Lord has so provided that the sun comes back to us, or the earth moves back to the sun, the winter snows and ice are melted, and springtime comes. These trees, barren now of leaves, shoot out their buds, and put on their summer garments. The birds sing again. The earth is happy. So do I see our own lives illustrated in these things of mortality with which we are surrounded. God help us all to appreciate them. God help us all to understand that the resurrection from the dead is a reality, not a mythical thing, but a reality; and that it may apply to us all, I pray, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT CHARLES W. NIBLEY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

It is a great responsibility, my brethren and sisters, to stand before a congregation like this, and I feel the need of your faith, your sympathy and your prayers, for of myself I am not able to enlighten your minds; but if the Lord will favor us, and will favor me with the power of his Spirit, then by that power the mind is enlightened.

I bear witness to the truth of that which has been delivered by President Ivins. We believe literally and truly in the resurrection from the dead. It is taught in our books of scripture—the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, as well as the Bible. So we have good ground for our belief with respect to that.

ON STRANGE TIMES

The world has fallen on strange times. The times are out of joint. Troubles have been ere now, and many of them, in the history of the world. But history gives us no example of anything like the world-wide troublesome conditions that prevail at this very day. There is perplexity of nations. And it is in fulfilment of the word of the Lord. The Elders of this Church for a hundred years have been preaching this Gospel, from the Bible, from the Book of Mormon, from the revelations given through the Prophet Joseph Smith, and proclaiming that the time of the end is nigh at hand, that the Savior of the world, our Redeemër, would come again, and that the time of his coming was nigh.

AS A YOUNG MISSIONARY

I myself, sixty-two years ago this summer, went from this city as a young missionary, twenty years of age, to proclaim this very doctrine, bearing witness that the Book of Mormon was true, and that Joseph Smith was in very deed a prophet, raised up to warn the world in this last dispensation—the dispensation of the fulness of times. Of course many times we were not listened to, even with tolerance. We were ridiculed, decried; contumely heaped upon us. Nevertheless, the Elders persevered, knowing of a certainty that what they went forth to preach was true, was revealed from heaven. They were converted by the same spirit that Peter said converted the Apostles. The Savior asked the Apostles:

"Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?"

"And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

"He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?"

"And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

"And I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

What rock? The rock of revelation. And by the spirit and power of revelation, the spirit and power of the Holy Ghost, the Lord has made us to know and understand in this day that this is indeed and of a truth the work of the Lord.

TROUBLE AND DISTRESS

This nation of ours, which is the best in the world, the freest, the most choice land upon all the earth, so we are told in the Book of Mormon—"a land choice above all other lands"—is going through a series of troubles. All is not well with us by a long way. I don't think we are as badly off in these mountain valleys as they are in many other parts of the United States. I think there is a little more of a feeling of safety right here than I can find anywhere else in the country. At least I feel it so, and I believe many others do.

IN EFFECT AN INCREASE

Certainly a very large proportion of our community have been kept steadily at work and their wages have not been reduced. Among these could be mentioned all of the federal employes in the state, including all postoffice employes and mail carriers. And there has been a considerable proportion of our people employed by the state, by the different counties, and by the different municipalities. Also a very large number of school teachers throughout the state, and employes in hundreds of different companies, large and small, have remained unchanged. And the same with all Church employes in offices, schools and temples.

All these taken together would probably amount to one hundred thousand men and women drawing the same salaries that they were paid in 1928-1929. Now the government's bulletin states that prices are thirty-two per cent lower than they were in 1928. That means then that these people, instead of having their wages reduced, have had in effect an increase of wages of thirty per cent or better. So taken all together Utah is not in such a bad fix, after all.

But the country as a whole is going through a period of trouble and distress.

"AFTER YOUR TESTIMONY"

As I have told you, we young Elders preached that this was the dispensation of the fulness of times—the last dispensation; that there would be no other following this dispensation of the Gospel. The Lord has given notice that these are the last times, and the people must be warned. "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," and so forth. We have been trying to do that faithfully.

Among other things, in warning the people, we have quoted—many of our Elders have done—from the eighty-eighth section of the Doctrine and Covenants, beginning with the eighty-eighth verse:

"And after your testimony cometh wrath and indignation upon the people.

"For after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground and shall not be able to stand.

"And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea heaving themselves beyond their bounds.

"And all things shall be in commotion; and surely, men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people."

These are among the warnings that were given and have been given with the preaching of the Gospel. I myself have felt: "O, well, it is true; I know it will come to pass; but it will not come in my time; I am not likely to be troubled with it." Well, the last few weeks, the last few months, the last year, the world has witnessed what it has never witnessed before in its history. So many of these calamities that this revelation calls our attention to have come upon the children of men, and fear begins to enter into the hearts of the people.

I do not think it is a good thing to frighten people. I don't preach this doctrine in this way. I only call attention to these truths, for they are true—these prophecies are true. More and more will these things occur in our history, as time goes on. For the Lord's work will be accomplished, and he will accomplish it in his own way.

A FAMINE IN THE LAND

Meanwhile it is our work to build up the Church and kingdom of God, to preach the Gospel. I said last evening in the priesthood meeting: "What a dearth there is for missionaries to preach this Gospel!" Do you know there is a famine in the land, you elders of Israel, bishops, presidents? Positively there is a famine in the land, "not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord." You presidents of missions and others testify of it. People are hungering for the word of God. A perfect famine exists, and this Church is the agency by which that can be supplied, and the only agency in all the world that can supply it. We are somewhat derelict in our duty in respect to this matter. There is no use mincing words, brethren and sisters. You sisters can do much to encourage the brethren, and you do. I think you are better than the men are, more faithful. The splendid work that these sisters do in the Relief Society, Sister Robison and her helpers, Sister Fox and her helpers, Sister Anderson and hers—the great work they are doing in helping along these matters is worthy of all praise. And sisters, you can say to your husbands, your brothers, your sons: "We can spare a missionary. We can sacrifice that much for the Church."

SACRIFICE AND SAVING

I have begun to think lately that there is not a sufficient spirit of sacrifice among us. There are two things that we have lost lately—sacrifice and saving. We don't know how to save a dollar now, to put away a dollar for a rainy day. Not one family in a dozen thinks of it. They will tell you: "Oh, we don't have enough to live on as it is." The wife or the daughter will say: "Why we haven't any money to spare. I haven't had a new dress for so and so, and so and so."

Senator Smoot told us the other day that of all the nations of the earth the one that suffered the most in blood and treasure in the late war—France—is the most prosperous nation in all the world today. And why are they prosperous? I will tell you in two words: they work and save. We won't be prosperous, and no other people will be prosperous, only upon those conditions. We have lost the idea of saving. I know many families, in fact most that I do know—their children see more picture shows in a month than I ever saw—well of course we did not have picture shows in my day. They have money to spend to fill these picture shows. I do when I am dragged into one by some of my children and I try to laugh and enjoy it, and sometimes do get a laugh out of it. But, oh, there is so much trash in it all. And yet these places are full every day. They are full today you will find if any of you should go there. I hope you won't go and spend your money so foolishly. But we fill these picture houses. If you were to say to the mother of those children that must see everything that comes to town: "Why not practice a little self-denial and have these children do without a picture show. Save that money and put their names on the tithing record," she would very likely reply, "Oh heavens, would you want to stop the children from going to a picture show, a little thing like that?" So I repeat, we have lost the forcefulness of these two words—sacrifice and saving.

WORTH EVERYTHING

I believe with all my heart that this Gospel of ours, this Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, this priesthood of the Son of God that has been conferred upon us is worth everything. I ought to be ready to sacrifice everything for it. I covenant in my prayers time and time again to "dedicate all unto thee." Yet the words are meaningless, if I am not ready to say: "I will go on a mission; glad to go; glad to sacrifice for the work." The children wouldn't be able to see so many picture shows, but they will be just as good children, let me tell you, just as able, and I believe more so, because a lot of what we call education is not very good education. I would rather have faith implanted into the hearts of children, faith in this work, a true testimony of the Gospel, than mere intellectuality. Do not misunderstand me. I am in favor of education. I believe in it. If there is any people in the world who have proved they are in favor of education the Latter-day Saints have proved it by the millions of dollars that we have poured out for education. I wish we had educated men with degrees everywhere—if only they would retain their faith as they get their degrees. For this faith is worth more than degrees. That is the point I would like to send home.

"GIVE US FAITH"

Oh God, increase our faith, and give us faith enough, power enough that we may be able to sacrifice, and in order to make the sacrifice that we will save dollar by dollar first and then be ready and willing to say: "Here it is. I am going to spend it for the upbuilding of the kingdom of God."

There is a famine in the land, again I say, not for bread, but for the word of God, and the responsibility, my brother, my sister, rests on you and me and all of us to supply this want, this extreme need.

That the Lord will give us faith and persistence and courage; that he will stay the powers of evil from us; that we may be kept as in the hollow of his hand; that all things may be overruled for the good of them who serve him and keep his commandments, is my most humble and earnest prayer.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters. You are the best there are, after all is said and done. You are the salt of the earth, because you and your fathers and mothers have sacrificed. They knew what the word meant and they followed it, and they lived through it. My parents did, far more than I have had to do, but they did it, and that is why I am here, because of their help and their example.

Now, derelict as we may be in some things, we are the chosen of the Lord. You bishops and counselors, you presidents of stakes, presidents of missions, great responsibilities rest upon you. You are called of God, brethren, and sisters likewise, called in the same way, by the same power. Let us honor that call. Let us be faithful. Let us resolve anew, here and now, that we will, God helping us, keep his commandments. And we will sacrifice, and we will save our means, and be prudent and frugal and wise in all things.

I humbly pray that his blessings may be with us to this end, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

Elder Melvin J. Ballard sang a solo, "I Know That My Redeemer Lives," the Choir and congregation singing the chorus.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

We are favored today by having with us Dr. H. E. Barnard, of Washington, D. C., Director of the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. We will ask him to please come to the stand and address us.

DR. H. E. BARNARD

Director of the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection

Oh, how I wish every father and mother, every lover of children in this great country of ours, could be here with us this morning, to sit, as I have been sitting, and receive the inspiration given you in your great Church, from your leaders; to hear this wonderful music swelling out from this great Tabernacle! I am sure they would all realize, as I realize, that our children are in good hands, and that the citizens of tomorrow will be finer citizens even than the citizens of today.

I speak to you as a messenger from Washington, representing the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. How fortunate it is that this conference, called by the Governor of Utah, will be held in this city immediately following this great conference of your Church. Certainly there has never been a time more opportune to hope for the children of the future everything which is guaranteed to them by the Children's Charter, adopted at the close of the White House Conference in Washington last November.

May I read to you the first paragraph of that great Charter, because I know every member of your Church, and every citizen of the country, wishes for every child spiritual and moral training to help him to stand firm under the pressure of life:

"For every child understanding, and the guarding of his personality as his most precious right; and for every child a home, and that love and security which a home provides."

May I, speaking for the twelve hundred members of the White House Conference, who have labored for a long time to bring together facts on which we can build a finer world for our children, bring you my grateful thanks for the opportunity you have given me to stand before you this morning.

ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles and President of the European Mission

My dear brethren and sisters, I must confess that during the last few years I have thought with longing of you and these great assemblies, when the time of the General Conferences has arrived. The opportunity to mingle with you now, and to feel of your spirit, and this day to declare with you my faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, fills my heart with gratitude.

THE SAME SPIRIT AND PURPOSE

I am grateful for the testimony of the truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which has been given me—the greatest gift that I possess. I rejoice this day that the spirit which I have felt in these gatherings yesterday and today is quite the same spirit as that which I have felt in the small gatherings in the various European countries. The Latter-day Saints who live the Gospel of Jesus Christ speak and hear by the same spirit. They understand one another by that same spirit. This is one great church, whether in Salt Lake City or in the far distant branches of the missions, one people, with one understanding, with one purpose, with one holy desire to please the Almighty Father.

I think I am safe in saying that the work of the Lord is going forward satisfactorily in the European missions. Never before, because of the new inventions and discoveries for the dissemination of truth, has the testimony of the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ been so widely scattered, and made to reach so many people, as at this time.

GREETINGS FROM THE EUROPEAN MISSIONS

I bring you greetings from the faithful, devoted, intelligent mission presidents who have charge of the affairs of the European missions. They and their wives are doing splendid work. Your sons are safe in their hands.

I bring you greetings from the Elders themselves, young men, but desirous of doing their work with all their might, and accomplishing a wonderful work, through the assistance of their Father in heaven.

And I bring you in particular greetings from the membership of the Church in the European lands, a body of faithful men and women, loving the Gospel just as we love it here; ready to sacrifice and to save, if they can, as President Nibley has suggested; ready to do whatever may be demanded of them, insofar as their strength permits. They live in the outposts of Zion, but they are ready and willing to labor there, and to help maintain and retain those outposts until such time as in the providences of the Lord we may have larger units of the Church, even in those far-distant countries.

A NEW DAY

Opposition and oppression have very largely vanished from our work in the European lands. A new day has dawned, and it seems to us, who labor there, that if the Lord will only bless our efforts it may be possible, in the near future, to bring a convincing message of the truth of this work to the hearts of thousands in those lands who are honest in heart.

SPIRITUAL INDIFFERENCE

We have many difficulties; there is no question about that; there are difficulties on every hand; the greatest difficulty, perhaps, that we have to contend with is the spiritual or religious indifference of the present day. It is an indifference which seems to cover the earth everywhere. It takes the form of a resentment or revulsion against organized religion—not so much a contempt for religion itself, for the principles of it, but rather a contempt or near-contempt for the organized forms of religion, for the churches themselves. Every man seems to be willing to do as best he can under the law, to live a wholesome and a proper life, but unwilling to conform to the regulations and practices of any church.

It is commonly said throughout the world that there is no need of a church today. In pondering upon this subject the thought has come to me and has lingered with me, that perhaps this rebuke of organized religion is a rebuke to the fundamental conception of religion as taught in the world today.

MAN-MADE GODS

Out of the thunderings of Sinai came the word of the Lord. The first commandment was: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Throughout the long ages after that command was given, men gradually forsook their graven images, their worship of stock and stone, and gradually Jehovah, the God of Israel, became the God of many, or perhaps most of the foremost people of the world. Gradually the simple conception of God as the father of humanity prevailed, or began to prevail upon the earth. Then, after the days of Jesus, when men should have known better, when the Christ, and God through him, had been revealed, men again departed from the truth, and made unto themselves gods, this time in an immaterial realm, but man-made just as truly as the man-made gods of wood and stone and iron of earlier ages.

I believe that the spiritual resentment in the world today has resulted from the idolatry which still lingers upon the earth, the attempt to force men to worship a God that is man-made, an incomprehensible God, an essence, one who is so far from us in understanding that men cannot bow down before him as they should, and pray to him as a child should pray to his father.

THE TRUE GOD

The Latter-day Saints are able to answer this great need of humanity and to define God properly. In the mission field, whether in Europe or elsewhere, it is the greatest message that the Church has to give to the world today—the true definition and the true conception of God our Father, the maker of the heavens and the earth. He is a personage who is literally our father in a pre-existent state, to whom we can speak as sons or daughters speak to their father; with whom they can take counsel and be intimate; a God to whom we may express our inmost desires, and from whom we may expect answers from time to time to satisfy our hearts' inmost desires.

I pray in my heart and by word of mouth that the true conception and knowledge of the Father of us all, may, through our agency, be spread abroad among the nations, to make happy the many thousands, tens of thousands and millions of honest souls who today are lost in a modern type of idolatrous worship. It is perhaps a strong word to use, but a thought or conception may be as man-made as is a material thing.

We find, as we travel about in the European missions, that men respond to a correct doctrine concerning divinity. They are eager to learn the truth about their Maker. When the superstitions of the past and the crust of misunderstanding and false teaching are broken through, then men and women rejoice in the new understanding of man's relationship to the Maker of us all.

JOSEPH SMITH'S FIRST VISION

I rejoice in the glorious first vision given to the Prophet Joseph Smith, the greatest of the visions and teachings of these latter days. On that occasion God himself and his Son Jesus Christ stood before the boy, kneeling in humble, earnest prayer, in the little grove in New York State. Joseph then held converse with God. In humility and simplicity he dared to state his heart's need, and God spoke to him, and commissioned his Son to speak yet further to him, so that the lad might understand and might be prepared for the great work for which he had been chosen before the foundations of the earth were laid.

This is a glorious gift of these latter days, and we must stand upon it firmly, without yielding. We must teach forever and to all people the truth of the fatherhood of God, of the sonship of man, of the eternal relationship of God and man. Then we shall be blessed, and God will look down upon us in mercy and give us strength to do the things that we are required to do, that we may win full salvation on this earth and in the life to come.

AUTHORITATIVE LEADERSHIP

Men ask for more than a knowledge of God. Men do not know the truth of themselves. Men are suffering, hungering for authoritative leadership. Men have been led by men so long, churches have been made by man so often, things have come through human agencies for so many years, that in this day of high intelligence, of the greatest knowledge of the world, men resent the thought that when they deal with the greatest of all realities, religion and all that pertains to it, they must follow man-made leadership—leadership that is of one type in one church, of another type in another church; leadership that may be subject to parliamentary debate and rule, that may be determined by the voice of a community.

The world is hungering and reaching out for authoritative leadership. Mankind has long followed the prophets of old, which indeed have been of human service, but today men say: "Moses was a great prophet; Isaiah, Jeremiah, Malachi, were all great prophets, but they belong to the past. We live today. We want the same authoritative leadership today that was enjoyed by the people of the past."

The world is asking for a living prophet, one who can interpret the prophets of old to the people and generations of this day. We have this very offering to make to the world. We are able to give humanity what they need in the way of authoritative leadership; for we declare in all solemnity, without hesitation, that God not only spoke to the Prophet Joseph Smith, but conferred upon him the power and authority of the eternal, everlasting, unchangeable, indestructible Priesthood of Almighty God, the power by which the heavens were made, and the earth was made, and all the things we know were made. By that power, or the portion that was given to the Prophet Joseph Smith, the work that the Lord intended for the salvation of mankind will be established and conducted and continued until the purposes of the Lord have been completed.

TEACHERS OF THE WORLD

The world is looking for such authority. We must stand upon our feet as men and as women possessing the true knowledge and authority of God, and teach it without hesitation to all the world. We are not to be taught of the world. We are the teachers of the world. We must be as interpreters, as men and women who, with full knowledge and authority, fit the knowledge of the world into the great scheme of salvation.

The Lord said to the Church through the Prophet Joseph Smith in the early days of the Church:

"Again I say, hearken, ye elders of my church, whom I have appointed: Ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my Spirit.

"And ye are to be taught from on high. Sanctify yourselves and ye shall be endowed with power, that ye may give even as I have spoken."

This is a wonderful message to all Latter-day Saints, to the Elders of Israel, who preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We are not here to be taught; we are here to teach. Whatever offering of good the world may make to us, we must use in declaring faith and repentance and the other principles of the Gospel, and the consummation of the purposes of the Lord. We are not to be taught by the world. We are the teachers of the world.

At the head of this Church stands a living prophet, one who speaks with authority. He is the mouth-piece of God to this generation. He is a man, it is true, as every prophet who has spoken, but a man who possesses the authority of the prophetic power, and who has the right, in this day, to interpret the things of humanity for the good of the cause of the Lord.

We have the authority of the priesthood. We are teachers to all the world. As we magnify our commission and rise to the full possibilities of world teachers, we shall be blessed and made powerful. Joy will fill our hearts; power will come to our hands, and the things that need to be done we shall be able to do.

So run my thoughts as I consider the work that has been done in European lands during the last few years. I am happy that I have had the privilege of laboring in those lands. I am grateful to President Grant and his associates for that great privilege.

THE SEARCH FOR ETERNAL TRUTH

Men seek a religion that may be used in daily life, but they want that practical religion tinged, suffused, mingled and mixed with eternal truth. They want everything in terms of the truth which has accumulated throughout the ages, and the truth which God has in his keeping to give to his children in the future.

The purpose of man's life is happiness and joy. "Men are that they might have joy." A simple purpose, but difficult to attain, so the history of the world has shown. Yet, if we take eternal truth as the woof of the pattern, and human experience as the warp, just as we make a pattern of linen or of cotton, making truth go this way, and human experience the other way, then we shall weave into it that thing which we call human happiness, a joyful life—the desire of man since the world began.

I pray the Lord to bless the Latter-day Saints, to bless each one of us within his own home, in his own place of residence, within his own field of labor, that we may rise to the authority, understanding and sacrifice that should be practiced by the people of this Church. May we all be messengers of joy to the people of the world, to assist in their redemption, I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ORSON F. WHITNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

THE SPIRIT OF THE LORD

In what I am about to say, I hope I shall have the Spirit of the Lord. It is all-important that we should possess that Spirit, whether we preach or sing or pray. Prayers unprompted by it do not ascend to Heaven; sermons uninspired by it fail to touch the heart of the hearer; and the songs that are sung in our worshiping assemblies, if not in tune with it, are but discords in the ear of Deity.

GOD'S GREATEST GIFT

The Savior, when instructing his disciples regarding the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, told them to partake of it in remembrance of him, and he promised that if they remembered him they should have his Spirit to be with them.

Why did he not promise them gold and silver, houses and lands, and all the other "good things of this world?" These were his to give; for "the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," and he gives it to whomsoever he will. But he had something better to bestow than that which perishes with the using, and he wanted his disciples, his choice friends, to have it. So he promised them the Holy Spirit—the power to lay hold upon eternal life, his greatest and most precious gift.

A SPIRITUAL FEAST

The Spirit of the Lord is the food of our spirits. Without it they would starve. In the Eucharist, as it is called, we partake of Christ; but it is a spiritual, not a temporal, partaking. The bread and water, or bread and wine, used in that ordinance, are not, as some suppose, the transubstantiated body and blood of our crucified Lord. They are but emblems, symbolizing his sacrificial atonement. "Eat, this is my body; drink, this is my blood"—the alleged words of the Savior when instituting the Sacrament among his Jewish disciples, are to be interpreted, not literally, but figuratively. If not a mistranslation, they are certainly a misinterpretation.

THE SOURCE OF LIFE AND LIGHT

The Spirit of the Lord is the life and light of the world. It is the fountain of revelation, manifesting eternal truth and making known to man the mind and will of his Maker.

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

So says Paul the Apostle, and he adds:

"But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so, the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." (1 Cor. 2:9-11.)

And that Spirit is given to every member of the Church of Christ, so that he or she can comprehend divine purposes and be led and guided into all truth. The eye that sees not, the ear that hears not, the heart into which the things of God have not entered, are the eye and ear and heart of "the natural man," who "is an enemy to God," as the same Apostle declares. Those to whom the Spirit has revealed the Truth stand upon another plane entirely.

LETTER AND SPIRIT

The Spirit of the Lord interprets the Word of the Lord, and those who take that Spirit for their guide cannot be deceived so long as they heed its promptings. If they do not heed, but allow their own selfish desires to influence them; or if they take the dead letter for their guide, and ignore the living spirit, they are liable to be led astray. "For the letter killeth but the spirit giveth life." (2 Cor. 3:6.)

The good old Bible, which the Latter-day Saints accept as "the word of God as far as it has been translated correctly," contains many passages which, if only the letter be relied upon and the spirit ignored, are bound to be of a misleading character.

THE WORD MADE FLESH

One instance has been cited, that pertaining to the Eucharist. Here is another. In the first chapter of the Gospel according to St. John, its author is made to say: "No man hath seen God at any time" (1:18), a statement which, if taken literally, not only puts the Beloved Disciple in the attitude of disputing Moses and the prophets, but actually makes him contradict himself. For the very same chapter in which that surprising statement is found; opens with this declaration: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. * * * And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth." (1:14.) Jesus Christ was God in the flesh. "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." (Col. 2:9.) And He was seen by multitudes of men.

But long before the divine Word was "made flesh," men had seen God, and none knew it better than John. Adam had seen him, Enoch had walked with him, Abraham had conversed with him. Moses and Aaron, with Nadab and Abihu and seventy of the elders of Israel, "went up into the mountain and saw the God of Israel." So says the Bible. But all this would have to be blotted out if the saying were literally true, that "no man hath seen God at any time." There could be no surer way of tearing out the foundations of the Christian religion and destroying all our hopes of salvation, than to establish as a fact this fallacy.

In the Pearl of Great Price (Book of Moses 1:11) that prophet and seer, having seen God, tells how he saw him in these words: "Now mine own eyes have beheld God; but not my natural, but my spiritual eyes, for my natural eyes could not have beheld; for I should have withered and died in his presence; but his glory was upon me; and I beheld his face; for I was transfigured before him."

JOHN'S TRUE MEANING

What John meant to say—and probably did say—was this: No man with his natural eyes hath seen God at any time. Or, as Joseph Smith puts it: "No man has seen God at any time, except quickened by the Spirit of God"—which means precisely the same thing. (Doc. and Cov. 67:11.) That John was mistranslated, or misinterpreted, is evident.

We all have spiritual eyes—the eyes of our spirits. By means of them we "walked by sight" and "kept the first estate"—our pre-existent spirit life; thus earning the right to a second estate—this mortal life, where we "walk by faith," with our spirit sight temporarily obscured. But when a seer is needed, "a choice seer," God sends one into the world; puts his power upon him, and thus enables him to use his spirit eyes and "see out of obscurity," to behold God if need be, and to comprehend the things of God in the only way that they can be comprehended. Such a seer was Moses, and such a seer was Joseph Smith. They both saw God.

SPIRITUAL THINGS SPIRITUALLY DISCERNED

It is not man's native intelligence nor his scholastic culture, that enables him to understand spiritual things. They are spiritually discerned, and the Spirit that discerns them can be had only in one way—God's way, not man's. Hence, after faith, repentance and water baptism, comes spirit baptism, whereby the Holy Ghost is given to those who become members of the Church of Christ.

The things of God should be surveyed by the light of the Spirit of God, not by the flickering candle of human wisdom. In our attitude toward divine revelations, the laws and ordinances of the Gospel, we should never take a shallow, material dollar-and-cent view, but always the higher, broader, deeper, spiritual view.

A CASE IN POINT

Many years ago, when I was a Ward Bishop, I was sitting with my counselors one evening for the settlement of tithing. A brother who was a member of the Ward came in, tossed a roll of bills upon the table, and when asked the usual question, "Is this a full tithing?"—a question necessary at such times, in order that the reports may be full and accurate—he answered, "No it is not; but you may be thankful to get that much."

"Thankful," I echoed, "What makes you think I ought to be thankful for it? You are not paying it to me. I am only an agent to receive and pass it on to the higher authorities. I am glad, of course, to know that you pay your tithing even in part; but I do not see why I should thank you for it. I pay my tithing in full, but nobody thanks me, nor do I want any thanks for it. I esteem it a privilege."

WHEN THANKS ARE OUT OF PLACE

Now, I believe in commendation and encouragement. I love to hear kind and generous expressions of appreciation for any good thing well done by anybody. But I do not believe in thanking people for keeping the commandments of God, nor for rendering service to him in any capacity. We do not thank them for coming into the Church. We rejoice over them, but a vote of thanks in such a case would be ridiculous. And it is just so with other things. To hold office in the Church of Christ is a great honor—none greater. A vote of thanks could add nothing to it, and would be entirely out of place.

We do not confer a favor upon the Almighty by obeying his laws, by receiving his blessings; though we please him, no doubt, by so doing. And when we stand before him at the last day, having "come up through great tribulation" and made our calling and election sure, I think I can hear Him say: "Well done, good and faithful servant, or good and faithful handmaid—enter into the joy of thy Lord." But I cannot by any stretch of imagination, conceive Him as saying: "Thank you, my child, for coming to Heaven!"

A SPIRITUAL DIVIDEND

Now, as to the Law of Tithing. What we render in obedience to that divine law, is not ours; it belongs to the Lord. We may consider it ours, if we will, up to the point of dropping it into his treasury; but right there even our apparent ownership ends. And it is unseemly in anyone to consider it his or hers, or to complain of the use made of it by the Lord's servants, those appointed by him to receive and disburse it according to his will as made known to them.

Moreover—and this is the great desideratum—the main fact to which I wish to call attention. You know it as well as I do, but we all need reminding. When we obey the Law of Tithing we do it not to please men, but to honor God, and we draw from Him, in return, a spiritual dividend far more precious and of much greater consequence than the dollars and cents or other means that we part with in rendering unto the Lord his own.

THE LAW OF CONSECRATION

The Law of Tithing is sometimes referred to as the revenue law of the Church—and such it is; for it provides means to carry on the Church's work in some of its most important phases. But in taking that view, let us not lose sight of a higher consideration. The Law of Tithing was given to supersede, for the time being, a greater law known as the Law of Consecration, the object of which was and is to sanctify the Lord's people and "prepare them for a place in the celestial world." To that end it was designed to do away with selfishness, greed, pride, envy, poverty, and all the ills that spring from such conditions. For none of these things can be admitted into the kingdom of heaven. It was to institute an order of equality and consequent unity, in which every man, employed at that for which he was best fitted, would be "seeking the interest of his neighbor and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God." It is an ancient law. It was practised by Enoch and his people, and later by the Apostles and their proselytes at Jerusalem, and by the followers of Christ, both Nephites and Lamanites, upon this chosen land. A brave attempt to practise it was made by the Latter-day Saints, soon after this Church was organized. But they lacked experience, and did not completely rise to the occasion. Selfishness within, and persecution without, prevented a perfect achievement. So the Lord withdrew the Law of Consecration and gave to his people a lesser law, one easier to live, but pointing forward, like the other, to something grand and glorious in the future. That lesser law, the Law of Tithing, is as a schoolmaster, a disciplinary agent, to bring the Saints eventually up to the practise of the higher law, and meanwhile to keep their hearts open for its reception when it returns. Those who obey the Law of Tithing will be prepared to live the Law of Consecration. Those who do not obey it will not be prepared. That is the whole thing in a nut shell. We are tithed that the Church may have means to build and maintain temples and tabernacles, to found and sustain missions and schools, and otherwise carry on its great work throughout the world. But that is not all. The spiritual dividend that we draw from heaven as the reward of our obedience, is the principal purpose for which the Law of Tithing was instituted. All the rest is incidental or secondary.

WHY WE FAST

The same argument applies to fasting. We are not required to fast merely to provide the bishop with means whereby to feed or otherwise minister to the poor. That is not the main object. We fast, primarily, for the purity of heart, the clearness of mind, the spiritual strength and uplift that comes from the observance of this sacred requirement. We are benefited physically, mentally and morally, by temporarily abstaining from bodily food, and thereby securing the spiritual food that more than takes its place. And, as an indirect result of our act of self-denial, the bishop, by means of the fast offerings (which should equal the cost of the food ordinarily used during the fasting period) is enabled to care for the poor that we "have always with us," and always shall have until God's higher law is practised by his people and there shall be "no poor among them."

BODY AND SPIRIT

The body as well as the spirit is essential. The two combined, "inseparably connected" by the resurrection, constitute the immortal soul; and it is the soul that goes on to perfection—the Gospel's paramount aim from the beginning. But the spiritual is above the temporal, the substance greater than the shadow that follows it; and happy is the man who recognizes this truth and honors the divine injunction: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things (food, drink, clothing, etc.) shall be added unto you."

THE SICK WORLD'S PANACEA

What do you suppose is the matter with this sick world at the present time? And what is the panacea that will restore it to perfect health? The matter is, that it has turned away from God and exalted the material over the spiritual. Like the dog in the fable, crossing the brook with a piece of meat in his mouth, and losing it in an attempt to possess what looked like another piece of meat in the mouth of another dog, but which was only a vain reflection of himself in the water—even so this selfish, greedy, money-loving world has grasped at the shadow and lost the substance. As a result the Ship of Human Progress is lopsided and in danger of going on the rocks. The cargo, unevenly bestowed, has unbalanced the vessel, and the pilot has been thrown overboard.

Right the ship, ye would-be arbiters of human destiny! Right the ship! Put the temporal under hatches, and place the spiritual at the helm, where it belongs; and the danger will disappear. That is the panacea, and there will be no relief—no permanent relief from the evils that afflict and threaten this world, until that sovereign remedy is applied; until proud, self-sufficient man, acknowledging his own weakness and his own folly, turns to the Source of all power and all wisdom, in response to the sweet invitation of the Savior: "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden! and I will give you rest." Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I wish to read for the benefit of our distinguished guest, Dr. Barnard, the following:

"And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ, the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents.

"For this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized.

"And their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of the hands.

"And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord.

"And the inhabitants of Zion shall also observe the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

"And the inhabitants of Zion also shall remember their labors, inasmuch as they are appointed to labor, in all faithfulness; for the idler shall be had in remembrance before the Lord.

"Now, I, the Lord, am not well pleased with the inhabitants of Zion, for there are idlers among them."

We very much appreciate having our eminent visitor here, and would have been happy had he seen fit to make further remarks.

As a closing number, the Choir sang the anthem, "The Heavens Are Telling."

After the benediction, which was pronounced by Elder Walter A. Jensen of the Lost River Stake, Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The fourth session of the Conference commenced promptly at 2 o'clock p. m.

The attendance at this meeting was similar in number to that at the morning meeting.

President Heber J. Grant, who presided, in calling the meeting to order announced that the Tabernacle Choir and the congregation would sing the hymn, "Praise to the Man Who Communed With Jehovah."

After the singing, Elder Henry W. Henderson, President of the Pocatello Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The Choir then rendered the anthem, "Send Ye Swift Messengers."

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I believe that I realize as much as I ever did the responsibility which is upon me in standing here to address this assembly. It is a great honor to have this privilege. It is also a great responsibility, for I realize that those who occupy this position at a General Conference of the Church should have something to say that will be edifying, strengthening and encouraging, that will build up the members of the Church in their faith.

I pray that I may have the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord, and your faith and prayers, for the few moments that I stand here.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL

I have rejoiced in the admonition, the testimony, and the presentation of the principles of the Gospel, as they have been declared by our brethren who have spoken. In my heart I feel thankful that I have the opportunity of living in this day, when the Gospel in its fulness, its simplicity and its power, is on the earth. Today all men have the opportunity of receiving the truth, for the Gospel is being proclaimed among the nations of the earth and the privilege is granted to those who repent and accept the Gospel of receiving the remission of their sins, through the ordinance of baptism, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, through the laying on of hands of those who have the authority of the holy priesthood. The Lord has made the promise to all who will repent and remain faithful, exercising a spirit of humility and diligence, that they will be entitled to the guidance of the Spirit of God. This Spirit will lead them and direct them throughout their lives.

TO AVOID DECEPTION

We are living, as it has already been stated, in a day of trouble, of tribulation, when men's hearts are failing them. The Lord pointed out this day while in his ministry, and admonished by prophecy those living now to watch and pray, that they might not be led astray, that they might not be found unprepared, should they be so fortunate as to be here at the great day of his coming.

Much has been said by way of warning and for the guidance of this people by the previous speakers, so that we may be prepared to discern between truth and falsehood, and that we may detect those who speak falsely and do not love the truth. I would like to present another phase of this matter, because I feel that it is timely. Several times within the past three months I have been approached by individuals and have received communications through the mails, making inquiry concerning a certain purported revelation said to have been given many years ago to President Joseph F. Smith, in which he saw the destruction of many great cities and many countries of the world and other very unusual things. Inquiry has also been made regarding a purported vision given to the Prophet Joseph Smith in relation to the same things, and which has been in circulation for many years. It is evident that these things are again being circulated and many of the people are becoming agitated over them wondering if they are true or not, and some of the people have been deceived.

BRANDED AS FALSE BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH F. SMITH

At the October Conference of the Church in the year 1918, which was the last General Conference attended by President Joseph F. Smith. I made some remarks in relation to these two so-called visions and pointed out the fact that they were not true. At the close of my remarks President Smith arose and also spoke of them. Let me say that this communication that has come into my hands recently, and about which I have been asked for advice, was being circulated very extensively at that time. It is a purported revelation given to Joseph F. Smith many years ago.

As I have said, at the close of my remarks at that General Conference of the Church, President Smith arose and said:

"Again I feel that it is an opportunity for me to say a few words. This wonderful, mysterious revelation, that I have been said to have received a great many years ago, was given in French, and I never knew but two or three words in French in my life. Consequently I could not have been the originator of that revelation. I want you to understand that I have denied it, I suppose a hundred times, when people have inquired about it. It was gotten up by some mysterious person who undertook to create a sensation, and laid the responsibility upon me. I am not guilty. When the Lord reveals something to me I will consider the matter with my brethren. When it becomes proper I will let it be known to the people, and not otherwise.

"The ridiculous story about the red horse, and the black horse, and the white horse, and a lot of trash, that has been circulated and sent around as a great revelation given by the Prophet Joseph Smith, is a matter that was gotten up, I understand, some ten years after the death of the Prophet Joseph Smith, by two of our brethren, who put together some broken sentences from the Prophet that they may have heard him utter from time to time, and formulated this so-called revelation out of it; and it was never spoken by the Prophet in the manner in which they have put it forth. It is simply false, that is all there is to it."

Now, I think we are fortunate in having President Smith's own expression in regard to these purported revelations. It seems strange to me that now, some twelve years later, we still find them in circulation. But the thing that astonishes me more is the fact that members of the Church seem to be bewildered and in wonderment whether or not these purported revelations were indeed given to the Prophet Joseph and to President Joseph F. Smith.

FALSE SPIRITS IN THE EARTH

In a revelation given to the Church in May, 1831, when matters of a similar kind were being circulated among the people, the Lord said:

"Hearken, O ye elders of my Church, and give ear to the voice of the living God; and attend to the words of wisdom which shall be given unto you, according as ye have asked and are agreed as touching the Church, and the spirits which have gone abroad in the earth.

"Behold, verily I say unto you, that there are many spirits which are false spirits, which have gone forth in the earth, deceiving the world.

"And also Satan hath sought to deceive you, that he might overthrow you."

Then the revelation goes on further to give instructions in regard to the receiving of revelations, and the duty of members of the Church in regard to matters of this kind.

A KEY FOR OUR GUIDANCE

I would like to say, for the benefit of the members of the Church, that we have a key given us by revelation, by which false spirits may be known, by which false revelation may be known. There is only one man in this Church, at a time, who has the right to receive revelation for the Church. The Lord has said that his house is a house of order, not a house of confusion, and therefore one is appointed to speak. One has the right to receive the word of the Lord and give it to the Church. We all have the right to receive revelation for our own guidance. A president of a Stake has the right of revelation for the guidance of his Stake. But no man has the right to receive revelation for this Church, except the one whom the Lord has called. If he receives a revelation it will be declared without question, if it is intended for the Church, in a manner by which we may all know the source from whence it comes. And when we find people secretly distributing what are said to be revelations, or visions, or manifestations, that have not come from nor received the approval of the Authorities of the Church, we may put it down that such things are not of God.

We do not need to write to ask questions in regard to these things. We do not need to question them for a moment, because the Lord is not going to give a revelation to any high priest, any elder, or seventy, for this Church. It will come through the one who is so appointed. And if the Lord is not going to choose those who have standing in the quorums of the priesthood, you may be certainly assured that he is not going to choose some one who does not hold the priesthood at all. So our minds may be at rest in regard to matters of this kind.

BY THE SPIRIT OF TRUTH

Furthermore, in this same revelation to which I have made reference, the Lord also says:

"Therefore, why is it that ye cannot understand and know, that he that receiveth the word by the Spirit of truth, receiveth it as it is preached by the Spirit of truth?

"Wherefore, he that preacheth and he that receiveth, understand one another, and both are edified and rejoice together.

"And that which doth not edify is not of God, and is darkness.

"That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day."

Now, think of that. If we will follow the spirit of light, the spirit of truth, the spirit that is set forth in the revelations of the Lord; if we will, through the spirit of prayer and humility, seek for the guidance of the Holy Ghost, the Lord will increase our light and our understanding; so that we shall have the spirit of discernment, we shall understand the truth, we shall know falsehood when we see it, and we shall not be deceived.

Who is it that is deceived in this Church? Not the man who has been faithful in the discharge of duty; not the man who has made himself acquainted with the word of the Lord; not the man who has practiced the commandments given in these revelations; but the man who is not acquainted with the truth, the man who is in spiritual darkness, the man who does not comprehend and understand the principles of the Gospel. Such a man will be deceived, and when these false spirits come among us he may not understand or be able to distinguish between light and darkness.

But if we will walk in the light of the revelations of the Lord, if we will hearken to the counsels that are given by those who stand in the councils of the Church, empowered to give the instructions, we will not go astray.

"WHOSO TREASURETH UP MY WORD"

In the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, as the Lord revealed it to the Prophet Joseph Smith, not as you find it in the Bible, but as you find it in the Pearl of Great Price, we find this expression:

"And whoso treasureth up my word, shall not be deceived, for the Son of Man shall come, and he shall send his angels before him with the great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together the remainder of his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

I repeat: "And whoso treasureth up my word shall not be deceived." Therefore let us go to with our might in the labor of this Church, and in the study and understanding of the principles of the Gospel, these principles of light, and as we study them the Lord will reveal to us further light, until we shall receive the fulness, in due time, of the perfect day, and we shall not be under the necessity of being subject to doubt and seeking for advice when confronted by matters of this kind, because the Spirit of the Lord itself will teach us.

The day is coming, so Jeremiah says, when it will not be necessary for one man to teach his neighbor, saying, "Know the Lord," for they all know him, from the greatest to the least. And that will come when we, in all full purpose of heart, are willing to serve the Lord and keep his commandments and hearken to the counsels that come to us from those who preside; which I pray we will do, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

THE WORLD'S GREAT NEED

The greatest need of the world today is religion. The greatest need of the people of the United States is religion. At this moment mankind needs most the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The heavens have been opened, the voice of the Lord has been heard, the angel spoken of has flown through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, "Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come."

To supply this vital need, the Department of Education, under the direction of the Presidency of the Church, has prepared a course in religious instruction to be given side by side with the training of the public schools.

ASSIGNMENT OF WORK

To the Primary organization has been assigned the task of giving this religious instruction to the children of the first six grades. In the junior seminaries, religious education is given to the children of the 7th, 8th and 9th grades; in the seminary, to those who attend high school; and institutes are being established to give a proper appreciation of religious truth to our sons and daughters who go to college.

ATTITUDE OF COLLEGE MEN

The indifference, if not the actual antagonism, toward religion on the part of many who are college-trained, is due primarily to the fact that their religious education has been neglected. Their religious ideals and motives have not been developed along with the growth of ideas and ideals in science, literature, and the arts. Our aim, therefore, is to produce a generation of college men and women who will understand, appreciate, and enjoy Gospel incentives, motives, and ideals, with the same interest, enthusiasm, and devotion that they develop for the new ideas they acquire in science, literature, and art.

IMPORTANCE OF RELIGIOUS THOUGHT

To any who regard training in science, language, and mathematics as most valuable, I put these questions: Is not religion more weighty than other subjects? Is not character of more consequence than a knowledge of science? Honesty of greater moment than a knowledge of mathematics? Dependability more important than a knowledge of languages?

Give your children all the training you can in these other subjects, but see to it that along with their school instruction they are given this most valuable branch of education—a study of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, a study of the life and teachings of our Lord and Savior. For the prime purpose of this line of Gospel education, this training in religion, is to make people happier and better.

FAITH IS THE BASIS

Let me make it clear and definite that religion is not founded primarily on logic; religion is founded on faith. Faith, like electricity, is hard to define; but, like electricity, it has tremendous power. Faith is that satisfying something which comes into humble human hearts as a result of prayerful life and righteous living.

Affection, like faith, is not based on the logical operations of the human mind. It does not obey the dictates of the will, neither is it controlled by the rules of logic.

HAPPINESS THE AIM

We are endeavoring to teach faith—faith in our fellowmen, faith in God, faith in a life beyond the grave.

It is said that the most lonely, lonesome, and unhappy individual is he who says he does not know—the man who has no faith in God, no faith in a life beyond. We are aiming so to bring up our young folks that they will escape the unhappiness of unbelief. And while the faith of which I speak is not often created by reason, nevertheless reason can justify this faith, and can ward off attacks which may be made upon it. In the language of the scripture (Heb. 11:1), "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

HONESTY MEANS PROGRESS

Outstanding among the elements in the Gospel plan is common, every-day honesty. "We believe in being honest."

Men who do not keep their word, who fail to fulfil their contracts, or who can scarcely do business without cheating, are men who obstruct the progress and prosperity of the country.

Imagine a community made up of such people. However gifted they might be mentally, they could not prosper; one man could not trust another. Nothing could be bought or sold without the closest inspection. There could be no cooperation. Everyone would have to spend a great deal of time watching his dishonest neighbors. Honesty, therefore, when it is practised by an entire community, is a great labor-saving device.

Lincoln's chief trait, all his life long, was honesty. Pervasive honesty was the outstanding mark of his personality. From the beginning to the end it stayed with him. "When other traits seemed to be changing, this universal honesty was always there." (Morse.)

NOBILITY OF HONOR

Our nation is united in teaching Boy Scouts the value, the nobility, of honesty and of honor. "On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country." This is their chief lesson.

"I cannot do so in honor." With these words—words which will be remembered forever—King Albert of Belgium refused to let the German army pass through his country. As long as there are mothers' tongues to teach their children, just so long will mothers hold up with pride and commendation the honor, the honesty, the integrity, of the Belgian people, who, against tremendous odds, "stood to their guns and maintained their honor, intact and immortal." (Van Dyke.)

Our own Karl G. Maeser had the highest regard for honor. Though a great teacher of science and literature, he was most of all an instructor in the Gospel, a builder of character. He used to say: "Place me behind prison walls ever so high, ever so thick, ever so strong, yet in some way, at some time, I may escape; but draw a chalk line around me and have me give my word of honor not to cross it, can I ever escape? No, never! I die first!"

WHY AMERICA HAS PROSPERED

Our country has had a growth and prosperity no other country has ever known. These unusual blessings have come because of honor, honesty, dependability—qualities which religious training brought into the lives of the people.

While many of our countrymen who are rich ridicule religion, a wise man (Babson) has said that these same prosperous Americans are indebted for all they possess to the family prayers once held daily in the homes of their fathers.

SOBRIETY INDISPENSABLE

Next to honesty, one of the most important elements in the Gospel is sobriety.

"In the rudimentary state of society," says Carver, "where each individual worked and acted most of the time alone, and where, therefore, there was little interdependence, drunkenness was not so vicious as it has now become. But in our interlocking civilization, no personal habit or vice, except lying, so unfits a man for useful service as does drunkenness. If you had to take your choice between riding behind a locomotive engineer addicted to drunkenness, and addicted to any other vice, there is not much doubt as to which you would choose.

"Apply a similar test to anyone in any other responsible position, and you will reach the conclusion that the person who is addicted to drink is about the least dependable, and the least desirable, citizen you can name. There are fewer places where he is of use and more places where he is a menace than is the case with the victims of almost any other vice."

THE HIGH VIRTUES

Honor, honesty, dependability, sobriety—these rank high among the virtues. Living in accordance with them has brought to our country a growth, a prosperity, unknown to other nations.

Before taking public office in state or nation, every official is required solemnly to swear that he will support, obey, and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of his own State.

It is said that among our public officials there are some who hold their hands toward high heaven and take this sacred oath of office one day, and break their solemn pledge the next. The story of Washington and the cherry tree told to every American child, the honesty of Abraham Lincoln told to every American youth, the Boy Scout oath, the honor of King Albert of Belgium, the sterling worth and character of our own Dr. Maeser—these in the past have been the standards of our country. Have our ideals changed? Have we given up these old-fashioned virtues? Do some public officials have no regard for the most solemn oath that public men can take? Are there officials who regard the Constitution of the United States as only a scrap of paper? Can this nation—the land of Washington, Franklin, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Wilson—the nation founded on honor, honesty, and dependability—can it endure if this undermining of its very foundation continues? I say it cannot. Nothing enduring can be built upon falsehood. Without honor, without honesty, without dependability, no nation can stand.

A PLEDGE TO OUR COUNTRY

I have personally made a solemn public pledge not to participate in any function, social or otherwise, where the law is broken—I refer particularly to the prohibition law; and furthermore I am working on a program whose purpose is to seek out those who also are willing to invite good citizens to come to the support of the Constitution of the United States.

You who are willing to cooperate are invited to get signatures to the following pledge:

I hereby pledge to the Republic of the United States and to myself:

1. Not to participate in any function, social or otherwise, where the law is broken.
2. Not knowingly to cast my vote for any candidate who does not live in accordance with the law.

WHAT ONE INDIVIDUAL MAY ACCOMPLISH

The influence of a single person who will live in accordance with the law and who will work to get others to do likewise is effective and far-reaching.

A few examples:

"Mr. Chairman, since I stand with Abraham Lincoln for the law," said one committee member, "and, further, since I have pledged myself, as have President and Mrs. Hoover, not to participate in any function where the law is broken, if you are going to serve liquor on this occasion, I shall ask to be excused from this meeting."

The liquor was not served.

"But just a minute," said one of those who had been invited. "I do not desire to create a scene at your fine dinner, nor do I wish to make myself appear ridiculous or non-appreciative; therefore, if liquor is to be served, I shall ask you now to excuse me, since I cannot in honor participate in a function where the law is broken."

No liquor was served.

A WHOLE CONVENTION RESPONDS

At a convention recently, where nearly a thousand delegates were registered, wine was served in unlimited quantities. Before the next convention, one member wrote the following to the officials of the organization: "I am for the law. I appeal to you to recommend to the Society that at our next meeting we pass a resolution informing the people of the United States that this Society stands for the Constitution and the laws of our country; and that, while some of our members may not like the Prohibition law, yet while it remains on our statute books we pledge ourselves to live in accordance with its provisions and to assist the President and other officials in their efforts to enforce it."

No liquor was in evidence at the next convention.

If one prominent business or social leader who breaks the law were placed behind prison bars, this one act would create for the law an immediate respect so strong that it would reform a whole city.

A CALL TO PATRIOTS

Thus, "in these last days," and "from the top of the mountains," as a representative of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, I appeal to the people of the country to come to the support of the Constitution of the United States.

And in accordance with the motto of our nation may we in God so trust that "government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

At the request of President Grant, the Choir and congregation arose and sang the first verse of the hymn, "The Spirit of God Like a Fire is Burning."

ELDER HYRUM G. SMITH

Presiding Patriarch of the Church

I am very grateful, my brethren and sisters, to be present upon this occasion. I don't remember having ever attended a Conference that was more blessed of the Lord. I have been thrilled with the testimonies and remarks of all the brethren, and with all the songs that have been sung. The Spirit of the Lord, and the spirit of the Gospel have touched my heart in testimony of their divinity.

I am thankful for the wonderful privilege of associating with men who the Lord has chosen to stand in the leadership of the Church in this important time of the world.

BLESSINGS THROUGH SACRIFICES OF OTHERS

For several months past, about the most important meetings of a public character which I have attended have been funerals. I have attended a number of them of late, due to the fact that a great number of my relatives have recently passed away. At these services, of course, the addresses and the remarks of the brethren have been largely tempered with the spirit and teaching relative to the resurrection, the great mission of life, and the great blessings that have come to the human family through the atonement of Jesus Christ.

I am always impressed with the spirit of devotion and humility when I hear my brethren and my friends speak in remembrance of the great experiences, sometimes called sacrifices, which our parents and forefathers endured, that we, as younger members of the Church might enjoy the multiplicity of blessings and privileges of the present time, for many faithful souls gave their lives for the cause of this Gospel.

Personally, I am grateful for the blessings which have come to me, because of the sacrifices of others. I feel my unworthiness of the great blessings that have come to me, the great privileges and opportunities, especially the responsibilities. I do not say this in any manner of boasting, but I wish to say it by way of reporting the growth of the Church as seen from my particular viewpoint.

HELPED BY PATRIARCHAL BLESSINGS

I think my predecessor, the late John Smith, holds the record in point of time for any officer holding one position in the Church. He was Presiding Patriarch for over fifty-six years. During that time he was instrumental in administering to members of the Church something over twenty-one thousand recorded blessings. During the last nineteen years nearly twenty-one thousand recorded blessings stand to my credit in the office.

A great many faithful Latter-day Saints are struggling with their responsibilities in life. Many times they have come to the office, fasting, with a prayer of faith and a keen desire for help to guide them in handling those responsibilities. And in their patriarchal blessings many have received the desired consolation.

ANSWERS TO PRAYERS

I am grateful for the faith and the prayers of the members of the Church. I believe in prayer. I know that the Lord hears and answers prayer. I have heard little children pray, and almost immediately have seen the answers come. I have seen adults and older people pray with faith, and have seen immediate and soul-satisfying results. I am converted to the devotion and the practice of prayer. I believe in it, and I practice it myself. I teach my children to pray. They pray for others as well as for themselves. My children, all of them, pray for the President of this Church, and for his associates, for the members of the Church, for the missionaries, for the sick and for all who need the favors of the Lord.

Through the kindness of the Lord, a great many testimonies have come to us in our home relative to the answering of our prayers. I will not take your time to tell these stories, but our family history is replete with testimonies that are soul-satisfying, relative to the answering of our prayers. So I believe in prayer.

I thank you for your prayers, my brethren and sisters. I have felt the benefit myself. I am very grateful to you personally for your faith and prayers.

I regret very much that I am physically unable at the present time, and have been for some time past, to visit with the people, and to carry on my duties as I would like to do. However, I feel very grateful that my strength is returning, and I hope to be able soon to discharge my duties in full.

I pray that the Lord will bless you, my brethren and sisters, throughout the Stakes, Wards, and Missions, and in the auxiliary organizations. My heart is filled with blessings for your success, for your happiness, for your peace in carrying on the great work.

A STRIKING EXAMPLE

I realize that we are living in a peculiar time, when conditions are not just as we would like to have them: many are out of employment.

A very striking example came to me only a few days ago. A convert to the Church, a well educated man, who was trained for the ministry in one of the religious organizations of the land, left his family at home in Canada, and came here to Salt Lake City, where he received his patriarchal blessing. After searching in vain for employment he decided to "hike" back home, a distance of two thousand miles, which he covered in eight days, he reports. He found his patriarchal blessing of great value in overcoming his despair. He acknowledged the hand of the Lord in his blessings, for he realized that he had been spared and blessed; and that he and the Church were still good friends.

This example is only one of thousands who manifest faith in their blessings and who acknowledge the Lord as the Giver of them.

FOR COMFORT AND BENEFIT

I commend to you the faith and the devotion of the good men who are authorized, in the Church, to administer the ordinance of patriarchal blessings. These blessings are for those who understand them and who have a knowledge of their use and value in the Church. They are indeed valuable instruments for the comfort and benefit of faithful members of the Church.

My heart is filled with sympathy and a desire to bless the entire membership of the Church, to see the Lord's work prosper, and to see faith increase in the hearts of our fellow members.

I pray the Lord to magnify, bless, inspire, protect, preserve, and spare those who preside over the Church and who stand as its leaders today.

BLESSES THE PEOPLE

In the name of the Lord, I bless you all with peace and with prosperity, notwithstanding the uncertainty of things at the present time. You will go to your homes, and plant, cultivate, and reap, but not in vain, for the harvest will be satisfying and satisfactory; the blessings of the Lord will be upon your lands, and upon your possessions, and upon your faithful labors. Therefore, be honest with the Lord in your tithes and in your offerings; that the great promises concerning this land and its people may be fulfilled.

I pray God to grant these blessings, that they may be upon the Church, its leaders and its members, and all the organizations in the Church, to the honor and glory of the Lord and his work, and I do it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

In his farewell address to the American people George Washington said:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens.

"Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in the exclusion of religious principle.

"Let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion."

ELDER DAVID O. McKAY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?"

"Lord, thou knowest that I love thee."

"Feed my lambs."

"Jesus said to him the second time: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?"
* * * Feed my sheep."

This was one of the last and one of the most important injunctions that Jesus gave his apostles, following the resurrection. The Savior's charge to watch over the flock and to feed the lambs is as applicable at the present time as it was in the days of Peter. The Church of Christ must particularly accept this responsibility.

During the few moments that I stand before you I desire to direct your attention to the work that the Church can do in this regard and at the same time co-operate in the great national movement of Child Health and Protection.

THE LOST AND FOUND

In the fifteenth chapter of St. Luke there is recorded a very significant message from Christ, relative to the lost and found. That message is embraced in three remarkable parables, one the parable of the lost sheep; another, the lost coin; and a third, the prodigal son.

In the first the straying one seems to have become lost through stupidly wandering away for the necessary things of life. Perhaps the wandering was prompted by just a desire to seek the necessary things of existence.

The second, however, relates to a different kind of lost one—one that seems to be wholly unconscious of having wandered away; and the third, to another class, one who deliberately and wilfully becomes estranged from God.

I am not sure that I have applied these parables properly, but certainly there are just such classes of young men and young women who wander away and become lost. There are those in the world who become so absorbed in gaining a livelihood, and so interested in the material things of life, that they lose sight entirely of the religious ideals, the significance of which President Grant has just called to our attention, as other speakers have during this important Conference.

Of the second class, those who are unconscious of being in the dark, there are many such—speaking of the nation at large. It is admitted that in the United States there are twenty-seven million children who, though nominally Protestant, are not receiving any religious instruction. There are eight million children, if I remember rightly, less than ten years of age, who receive absolutely no religious instruction. I think we may consistently place this large group in the second class named,—little children growing up in darkness, unconscious of the light. They are like this Easter lily before it blooms. They have an existence but are struggling out of the darkness of humanity. They may never bloom into the sunlight of the Holy Spirit. Now, that is a tragedy.

Of the third, we see around us every day young men who wilfully and deliberately choose the pathway of indulgence, which leads them away from the Holy Spirit, and leads them away from the testimony of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It is a great mission, the greatest in the world, to reach out after these young people, to extend a hand to the child, following Jesus' injunction to Peter to bring the lambs into Christ's fold. Indeed, there is nothing greater.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SUCH A MISSION

I think the President of the United States expressed the importance of such a mission most impressively when he said:

"These questions of child health and protection are a complicated problem, requiring much learning and much action, and we need have great concern over this matter. Let no one believe that these are questions which should not stir a nation, that they are below the dignity of statesmen or government. If we could have but one generation of properly born, trained, educated, and healthy children, a thousand other problems of government would vanish. We would assure ourselves of healthier minds in more vigorous bodies, to direct the energies of our nation to yet greater heights of achievement. Moreover, one good community nurse will save a dozen future policemen."

TWO PICTURES

In accordance with the spirit of the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, Elder Fielding K. Smith, a local artist, at a suggestion, drew two pictures which I have in my office. One is the picture of a home out of which comes a young man, a youth just entering his teens, but he doesn't follow the pathway that leads to good citizenship, through the school, the church, supervised recreation, etc.

He wanders back and forth until he comes in contact with a rough-looking character, with his cap pulled down over his face, who entices him to the "easy way." Standing a short distance away is a policeman, ready to take the two of them into custody, and back farther in the picture stands the prison: Over that scene is written the cost to the country of that kind of supervision, necessary, it is true.

In the other picture another young man is coming out of the same home, walking straight along the pathway until he meets his day-school teacher, who leads him into the path of learning. He meets a Sunday School teacher, and other officers in his church. You see him in supervised play, developing into a good citizen, and over in the back ground is the school-room, the church, the playgrounds, trips to the woods, association with older people.

THE COST

The first is costing the United States Government today $16,000,000,000 annually. Mark O. Prentice who organized the National Crime Commission in 1925, says that when we include all the cost of crime the figures come close to $20,000,000,000. "Every year the United States loses more money in its war on crime than the $11,000,000,000 advanced to Europe during and since the war." It is stupendous.

The cost of training the child, if we can reach him properly and in time, is less than one-fifth that amount annually, and yet the cost of punishing the criminal is centered upon only about one million of our citizens; this other, upon the other hundred and nineteen million, if we take the entire population; and the majority of the one million are at an age that averages less than twenty years.

Here is a real challenge to America! I rejoice with you that the chief executive has accepted the challenge and determined to call the attention of the nation to the prevention of crime, rather than to its punishment.

WHAT THE CHURCH CAN DO

Now, what can the Church do? Much. As I stand before you today my heart is filled with gratitude to God for having revealed this organization. When I think how easily we may reach every child within our domain, when I think that we can go to him with the assurance that we can lead him into the presence of God, if he will but live up to the principles of the Gospel, I feel a spirit of appreciation overwhelm me. Thank the Lord for his revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith! When we realize that the Church, almost in its entirety, was given before Joseph Smith was twenty-five years of age—a few other revelations came later; when we think of the utter dependence of that youth upon God for his wisdom, not having the learning of man, it seems to me we are forced to the conclusion that he received light from a higher source than any man could give him; and we know that is true.

How may we reach these youth? In some of the organizations of the Church every boy and girl should be enrolled. His name or her name should appear on some record, if not on several records, throughout the Church, and some teacher or some officer has the obligation of coming in contact with that individual boy or girl.

PERSONAL INFLUENCE

There are two ways to stem criminality. One is by united, concentrated public opinion. The other, and more effective, is by personal contact. There are many in this audience who can look back with gratitude to the visit of some kind man, somebody who put his hand on your shoulder and said: "Don't do that," or "I commend you for not doing this, my boy." Some word of commendation, some gentle hand led you back into the path that has given you the success to which you have attained. Personal influence,—we must not lose sight of it. That organization which can supply that personal influence with the least waste of effort, and with the highest degree of efficiency, is the most potent organization in the world.

You have before you, bishops, the following means in your hands: the Priesthood, Relief Society, Sunday School, Young Men's and Young Ladies' and Primary Associations, not to name the Church schools and seminaries. I say bishops, because the bishop is the head of these organizations, and if the bishop will accept the responsibility of formulating and of assigning the list, as I am going to outline it, there need not be a boy or girl who within two months may not have had a personal visit from an efficient officer or teacher.

For example, we have in the Priesthood quorums of the Church approximately 10,411 officers.

We have in the Relief Society 10,000 teachers. That excludes the 20,000 visiting teachers. I am naming only the others.

The Sunday Schools, over 27,000.

The Young Men and Young Ladies, combined, 25,000.

The Primary, 13,500.

Now there are some duplications in this, of course, for which we should make allowance. That makes a total of over 86,000 officers and teachers; and I haven't included the instructors in the Priesthood. These are just the officers—86,000. If we assign to each of these but five persons, you can see at once that that army of officers and teachers could come in contact with over 430,000 men and women, boys and girls.

SEEKING THE LOST ONE

But many of those 430,000 need not the personal visits. The ninety and nine are safe within the fold. It is the one that is lost whom we should seek.

The Chief of Police of Berkeley, who visited this city recently, said:

"Our investigations reveal the fact that we have four hundred in our schools who need personal visiting. The others are going along without much concern, but these four hundred are the potential criminals in our city."

So we find in each group there are one or two, three or four, who need special care, special guidance. How best can we reach them? In this way: Let every teacher in the quorums, every teacher in these auxiliaries, have before him the list of these potential delinquents. Be not satisfied with the good class you have Sunday morning or Tuesday night, but feel that the work is not done until you have carefully considered that other list which you hold in your hand, in regard to which you will report to your bishop at least once a month your success in reaching those whose names are found thereon.

We know you can't bring them all in. We have tried it. But you can bring some, "and if you labor all your days," says the Lord through the Prophet, "and bring, save it be one soul unto a knowledge of the truth, how great shall be your joy in the presence of your Father!" And who knows what that soul may be in that kingdom? Through loving effort you might discover some "inglorious Milton."

"I passed a stagnant marsh that lay
Beneath a reeking scum of green,
A loathsome puddle by the way,
No sorrier pool was ever seen.
I thought, how lost to all things pure,
And clean and white, those foul depths be!
Next day, from out that pond obscure
Two queenly lilies laughed at me.

"I passed a hovel, round whose door
The signs of penury were strewn.
I saw the grimed and littered floor,
The walls of logs from tree trunks hewn.
I said, 'The gates of life are shut
To those within that wretched pen.'
But lo! from out that lowly hut
Came one to rule the world of men!"

ACCOUNTING FOR EVERY ONE

I have touched upon only one phase of this great national movement, which is one of the cardinal activities of the Church of Christ, and that is the duty of accounting for every one. God inspire us as we go from this Conference, to bring into the fold every child, every youth, and as far as possible, every man and woman, for there isn't one who is not God's child. And when we are thus working we are carrying out the great purpose of the Almighty, the very purpose for which he established his Church on earth, namely, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.

I bless you, my fellow workers, that you may be inspired to co-operate, not only with the officers who preside over you, not only with the President of the United States, but with the Savior, who said of old, as he says today: "Lovest thou me? Then feed my lambs."

God help us to follow that injunction, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER BRIGHAM H. ROBERTS

Of the First Council of Seventy

I am laying aside the remarks that I had prepared to deliver during this Conference, should I happen to be called upon, and this for special reasons that have occurred to me during the last few minutes. In the first place, I realize that this congregation has been together for a long time. It has been a strenuous day throughout, and according to the announcement of President Grant, I am to be the closing speaker of this meeting.

It has been, to me, a glorious day. Many great and important themes have been developed. I was thrilled with the beautiful discourse of President Ivins on the subject of the resurrection, and pleased with the reassertion of our faith in that simple story that he developed chiefly from the New Testament. And in all the other addresses there has been more or less of intensity of thought in reference to organized effort to achieve righteous ends. All through, I repeat, this has been a strenuous day in our worship.

It seems to me that if I could get the spirit of it, it could be a fitting close to proceed in a manner that would permit us to relax a little the intensity of our intellectual effort. So I am going to proceed in a way that perhaps may have that effect. I trust it will.

To begin with, there is no reason on earth that I know of why I should refer to the opening address of President Heber J. Grant, on the first day of our Conference, because that was a complete thing in itself as he delivered it—in the introduction of it, in the development of it, and in the closing admonitions of it. From my youth I have been delighted in the defense of the faith and of the Saints, and have made some efforts, humble ones, of course, in that direction. I was pleased beyond all expression that at this time, when falsehood had reared its head, and slanders would spread their baneful influence to hinder the progress of the Church, the Church itself was able, through its President, to make a complete and comprehensive denial and denunciation of all those things. I am sure President Grant has created for the Church, at this Conference, a permanent document that will be useful in all time to come as a standard to which we can refer in denial of false charges, now and hereafter on the points treated; because I do not suppose that the enemies of the Church will cease their efforts; and others will arise—even if these present ones were supposed to be crushed—others will arise to perpetuate their evil work.

Yesterday afternoon, as I entered the building, you were singing that wonderful hymn of Montgomery's on "prayer":

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, Uttered or unexpressed."

I presume that it is inconvenient, and perhaps hardly tolerable to sing all the eight verses of this beautiful hymn, though each verse is in itself a gem; but if we may not sing all the eight verses, I have often thought that I would like to see the Church adopt the practice of singing the last verse of that hymn. If we could put that in with the others usually sung, I should be happy over it. It runs as follows:

"O Thou by whom we come to God,
The Life, the Truth, the Way!
The path of prayer Thyself hast trod;
Lord, teach us how to pray."

One of the sweetest incidents related in the New Testament is that one where the disciples gather about the Christ and say to him: "Master, John taught his disciples to pray. Teach us how to pray." And it was in answer to that petition of theirs that the Christ gave his very wonderful instructions on prayer, and then introduced that classic of devotional exercise, the Lord's prayer; and then continued his comments upon it. He taught them how to pray, and moreover, he set them the example of prayer.

The prayer known as the Lord's Prayer may not be the prayer that would be suitable for all occasions, although it is so comprehensive and covers such important matters. I think he intended that it should be rather a sample of prayer, in simplicity, in brevity, in spirit, and you will note perhaps that it was a universal prayer. It was not a strictly Christian prayer, in that it was not offered in the name of Christ, but was an address unto the "All Father," and has become a universal prayer, given to the world through which every cult, sect or division of religion could express its attitude towards God. It is valuable chiefly for the very universal spirit that is in it.

But I call your attention to this great request, "Lord, teach us how to pray." I want to call your attention to the fact that this New Dispensation has not been left without instruction on that subject. You will find in the history of the Prophet Joseph Smith a rather singular declaration. Speaking in the early part of October, 1831, the Prophet Joseph said: "I received the following prayer, given through revelation." But it is more than a revelation to be called a prayer. It is in reality a revelation on prayer, and that is quite another matter. Very little has ever been said of it. It just seemed to drop out of the clear sky, into the record of the Prophet: but as I said, it is not only a revelation called a prayer, but it is a revelation on prayer, in that the Lord outlines for us the things, I think, he would have us hold nearest to our hearts and comprehend in our deep and earnest desires concerning the work of God in the earth.

Because it has been so infrequently referred to and used by the Church, I thought that we could now just relax our tense nerves, and could close this meeting, on the accepted anniversary of the resurrection of the Christ, by the reading of this wonderful prayer, and go hence, influenced with the spirit which I am sure it will leave; and let us indulge in the feeling of divine worship while we consider the beauty and grandeur, and express the desires that are given through revelation to this New Dispensation Church on the great theme that God would have our minds dwell upon.

During my short experience in the army I learned to appreciate the psychology of standing at attention before the officers of the army. There was a wonderful spirit that went with that custom of the army, and it tended much to improve the corps d'esprit of the companies and of the battalions and regiments and divisions into which the army was divided.

Now, what I am going to suggest is that in our spirits, at least, we here assembled draw our minds to attention to these great things that God revealed, through his prophet, to the Church. I read:

"Hearken, and lo, a voice as of one sent down from on high, who is mighty and powerful, whose going forth is unto the ends of the earth, yea, whose voice is unto men." (The foregoing, of course, has reference to the Christ.) "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

"The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth.

"Yea, a voice crying—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, prepare ye the supper of the Lamb, make ready for the Bridegroom."

Here the scene shifts, and this revelation on prayer becomes a commandment to pray:

"Pray unto the Lord, call upon his holy name, make known his wonderful works among the people.

"Call upon the Lord, that his kingdom may go forth upon the earth, that the inhabitants thereof may receive it, and be prepared for the days to come, in the which the Son of Man shall come down in heaven, clothed in the brightness of his glory, to meet the kingdom of God which is set up on the earth.

"Wherefore, may the kingdom of God go forth, that the kingdom of heaven may come, that thou, O God, mayest be glorified in heaven so on earth, that thine enemies may be subdued; for thine is the honor, power and glory, forever and ever. Amen."

So pray we, in thy words given to thy Church through the revelation of thy servant Joseph on prayer, and ask thee, O God, to accept these divine expressions concerning the going forth of the kingdom of God on the earth, that the kingdom of heaven may come, and the two be joined, to the glory of God and the salvation of the world. We so pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

As a closing number the Choir sang the anthem, "The Lord Now Victorious."

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Jesse W. Richins, President of the Twin Falls Stake.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock, April 6th.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

The fifth session of the Conference convened at 10 o'clock, Monday morning, April 6th, 1931.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah."

Elder Almon T. Butterfield, President of the West Jordan Stake, offered the opening prayer.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Israel, Israel, God is Calling."

ELDER J. GOLDEN KIMBALL

Of the First Council of Seventy

I feel as I have always felt relative to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I have no doubt in my heart that this is the work of the Lord. Surely we who have faith believe that the Lord's arm is not shortened, that he is amply able to direct and carry on this great work.

I realize the responsibility coming to any person who is called to speak to this people. I have sat on the "anxious bench" now for two days, and I feel this morning that everything I have heard and read and know has oozed out of me. I want you to know that I antedate in age and in service as one of the First Council of Seventy all of the Council of the Twelve who sit in front of me. I feel honored and have always felt honored to associate with the General Authorities of the Church. I desire to say to the people, the presidents of Stakes and their counselors, the high councilors, the bishops and their counselors, you have always extended to me the greatest courtesy and respect, and whenever I have attended a conference and returned home I have felt that I amounted to something. But after I wandered around here in Salt Lake I sort of lost that feeling, sometimes, and felt like a stranger among strangers.

I desire to refer back to a time when I was about thirteen years of age, when Heber C. Kimball sent word to my brother, Joseph Kimball, who is now in the Church Office Building, and myself, to come to his office. When we arrived there, mere boys, he said to us: "If you want your father's blessing you be at the endowment house in the morning and have your endowments."

Of course we were frightened nearly to death. I do not know how people feel when they are going to be executed, but that is the sort of feeling I had, not knowing and having no conception of what it all meant. However, we were there and we had our endowments. I did not remember much of that which transpired, but I was awed, and the impression was burned into my soul of the sacredness of that place, and the sacredness of the covenants which I had entered into when almost a child. When I was fifteen years old our father passed away, and we were left as many children are left to wander and fight our battles as best we could.

My father, Heber C. Kimball, trained fourteen years in the military service. In an excerpt which I have copied from his biography he remarks with honest pride that he was never brought before a court martial for neglect. He further says: "I was a Free Mason at the age of twenty-two in the Lodge at Victor and received the first three degrees of Masonry." He said: "I have been as true as an angel to my covenants with the Masons. No man was admitted into the Lodge unless he bore a good moral character and was a man of steady habits. A man would be suspended for getting drunk. I wish that all men were Masons and would live up to their profession. The world would be much better for it." This was said at least ten years prior to his baptism as a member of the Latter-day Church.

Now, the point I want to reach if I can, if the Lord will give me his Spirit, is just this: Heber C. Kimball made the following statement which deeply impressed me: "I would that all men and women who enter these holy temples could be made to understand that we are placed under obligations to God." Whenever we are permitted to enter the holy temples and perform those ordinances "We make covenants with the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost."

I cannot conceive of a more sacred covenant made by mortal man. That is the impression I desire to impart to you good people, especially those who hold the holy priesthood, and I think it is high time that every man who is so honored of God should understand his office and calling. I understand my calling as one of the First Council, a Seventy in the Church of Jesus Christ.

President Brigham Young said at a priesthood meeting in Logan, the same year that he died, that the Prophet Joseph Smith said to them in early days: "Brethren, you are going out to ordain Seventies, and you are to ordain them to the high priesthood. You are to ordain them to the High Priesthood and ordain them Seventy-Apostles."

President Young said: "That is the language I use, and that is the way." I think none of us would question President Brigham Young, who was privileged above most men to associate with the Prophet Joseph Smith. I understand what it all means. It means that we Seventies are under the direction of the Twelve Apostles and the First Council of the Seventy. It means that they are to open the doors to all the nations of the earth and proclaim the truth; that we are under their direction, and "whenever they need assistance they are to call upon the Seventies instead of any others." It simply means that Seventies have the apostolic calling as witnesses and preachers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to all the world.

I am not ignorant of the fact. I know what the trouble is. I want to convey that idea to you. We have 185 quorums of Seventy. They tell me that they number 10,741. There are Seventies by the hundreds in this Church who can be prepared to go out as witnesses for the Lord and preachers of righteousness under the direction of the Apostles, but the fault is not wholly with men, it is a financial question, almost entirely a financial question, because the rule is that many of the Seventies have filled missions and their sons, also. A number of Elders have filled missions and have come home and been ordained Seventies who have married wives and cannot for the present go on a second mission. That is the chief reason. Any time the Lord moves upon his servants to call upon the Seventies, I assure you they will respond for I am as familiar with the quorums of Seventy as any man in the Church. I have labored among the Seventies for nearly forty years, and I love the work and God has given me the spirit of my office and calling when laboring among them.

It is not my province nor intention to preach. I have something here that I would like to read to you but time will not permit. It is scripture; it is the word of God, and I would advise myself and every other man and woman in this Church to read the Bible. It is not read as much as it should be. The same is true of the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price. You will find within the lids of those great books many prophecies and revelations, and if you will go to God and ask him in humility if these things are true he will give you the testimony and you will know. God bless you. Amen.

ELDER REY L. PRATT

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Mexican Mission

I very greatly rejoice, my brethren and sisters, that the Lord has permitted me to be in attendance at this wonderful Conference. But I think that most of all I am thankful for the fact that I find myself in every way in harmony and agreeing with the admonitions, counsels and teachings of this splendid Conference. It has certainly been an inspiration to see the wonderful attendance yesterday and the day before. It is not so large today, due, I feel sure, to the fact that many of our brethren and sisters from this city and nearby settlements are under the necessity of returning home and taking up their labors in the pursuit of a livelihood.

But as I have meditated upon the matter the thought has come to me, surely there have been great multitudes who have listened to the teachings of this Conference, for through the instrumentality of the radio, many thousands have been brought in touch with the advice, counsel and admonitions that have come to us from the Lord through his chosen servants.

As my mind has gone back over the history of the Lord's people from the remote past to the present, I have reflected that it has been the disposition of men to stray away from the paths marked out by the Lord and of some to prefer to walk in bypaths. It has always been necessary for the servants of the Lord, through him inspired, to admonish the people, to counsel them, to reprove them and bring them back, if possible, into the right road, where they would walk in the ways of the Lord and seek after him and keep his commandments.

It is true, my brethren and sisters, that the Lord has given us our free agency. We are not forced, but we are admonished and taught. So it seems to me there is no excuse for us if we stray away.

The Lord, in speaking to his prophet, Ezekiel, reminded him that when the people set up a watchman to watch over their interests—and the Lord admonished him that he had been called as a watchman over Israel—and that watchman saw the enemy coming and danger threaten the people, it was his duty to sound a warning and blow his trumpet and advise the people of the impending danger. Then he goes on to say that if he does so and warns the people, if danger comes and they are overtaken in their sins and perish, the responsibility shall be upon their own heads. But if the watchman discharges not his duty and warns not the people, and danger comes and they are destroyed, and even if they die in their sins, yet will the Lord hold responsible the watchman that he has placed over them.

Truly, my brethren and sisters, as a people we have reason to rejoice that the Lord has placed watchmen over us who, in times past, and particularly during this Conference, have advised the people of impending danger, and in no uncertain terms. Surely, with no equivocation, we have been told where we might walk with safety and wherein danger lies; so that the responsibility of our actions in regard to the things spoken of during this Conference, I take it, now rests upon the people, upon each of us individually, and my hope and prayer is that we may walk in the way of the Lord.

It has been my experience throughout my life until now that the Holy Spirit, if left to operate freely in our lives, will most surely make known to us what is true and what is false; and it is only by quenching that Spirit that man can be led away. I admonish the people to seek for the Spirit of the Lord, to stir up, as Paul says, the gifts of God that are in you through the laying on of hands of the Elders who have confirmed you members of the Church and who have bestowed upon you, after your water baptism, the Holy Ghost. It is the witness of the Father and the Son. It is the witness of all truth, and its mission is to reveal unto us all truth as pertaining to things past and present, and it will make known and reveal to us that which we should know pertaining to things that are yet to come.

All true things might be duplicated. In the history of the Lord's people we have found that miracles wrought by his servants and by his power have been so closely duplicated by the evil one that they are hard to detect from the genuine. And in the last days, as a sign of the coming of the Savior of the world, we are admonished by him that there should be false teachers, that there should be false prophets, that there should even be false Christs; and they shall work wonderful and mighty miracles, even to the extent that they shall be able to call down fire from heaven and deceive if possible the very elect. So that it is not safe, brethren and sisters, for us to tie our faith to miracles. But I believe sincerely and firmly that there is one thing that Satan cannot duplicate, and that is the witness of the Holy Ghost, the witness that burns within us and makes us know when a thing is true. That witness is yours to have if you will live in harmony with the teachings of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

As I said in the beginning, I am happy to find myself in harmony and in accord with the teachings of the Church, in accord with the Gospel as it has been restored through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith. I have not one word or thought of criticism to offer as to the policy of the Church now or in times past. I feel perfectly secure, my brethren and sisters, in following the teachings of those whom I bear witness to you are prophets, seers and revelators unto this people. And it is a serious and a dangerous thing for us to set up our desires or our judgment contrary to that which comes through the servants of the Lord, particularly when spoken, as have been the admonitions of President Grant during this Conference.

I bear you my witness that the Gospel is true. I am happy in my ministry. I shall be delighted to continue as long as the Lord sees fit to use me as an instrument in the spread of the Gospel among the nations of the earth, and I am particularly happy to be laboring among the Lamanite people. I rejoice to bring to you greetings from them, particularly from our people in the far-off land of Mexico, where for nearly six years now they have not been permitted to have the association and the ministrations of the Elders from Zion. But they are happy and are growing and progressing in the work. The local priesthood have risen to the occasion, and our district presidents, our branch presidents and our missionaries from among the people of that land, who are actively engaged in the land of Mexico, are doing a wonderful work, and their ministry I am sure is acceptable to the Lord. They are building meeting houses. Since this crisis has come in the affairs of Mexico that has kept us from sending our Elders there and made it impossible for us to hire halls freely in which to hold services, due to the fact that the law requires that services must be held in a building dedicated exclusively as a Church building, our Saints have erected four meeting houses near the vicinity of Mexico City and are endeavoring to provide themselves with places in which they can worship the Lord freely and not be handicapped in any way.

There is no disposition on the part of the Mexican government to prohibit our work as long as we comply with the law of the land. There is no disposition to try to prevent the spread of Mormonism, or for that matter the free exercise of any religion in the land. They do require, however, that those who minister in churches in Mexico be citizens of the country and that they register with the government, also that all places of worship be dedicated as such and be registered with the government.

I pray that the blessings of the Lord may continue with his people everywhere, that the Gospel may spread, and that the Church may grow until ultimately the cause of right shall triumph in the earth. This is my prayer, which I ask humbly in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RULON S. WELLS

of the First Council of Seventy

My heart is full, made so by the spirit of this great Conference, for we have been fed the bread of life.

My thoughts have been led to consider the holy scriptures, the word of the Lord, and I shall take the liberty of quoting a few of those precious words which are found in Holy Writ.

Let me start at the beginning:

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

"And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

"And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

"And God saw the light, that it was good; and God divided the light from the darkness.

"And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day."

What a glorious beginning to the great work of creation! What tremendous forces were turned loose with the utterance of that great command: "Let there be light!"

It seems from this passage of scripture that light played a most important part in the creation of the heavens and the earth. How was that all accomplished? The Apostle Paul gives us a little idea of it, for he tells us, this great Apostle to the Gentiles, in his letter which he wrote to the Hebrews, not only how it was done, but also how it was not done. Says he:

"Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear."

No, they were not made in this way. This is man's way. When we build our homes to house our families, our wives and children and see our home in its completed form, we conclude at once that it has been made out of the things which do appear around about us. We gather the rock—quarry it from the mountain side. We hew the timbers from the forests, we gather the sand and slack the lime to make the mortar, and we gather clay and make it into bricks; and thus we build our homes. But not so with God. He has a better way—a more effective way—in creating the home of his children.

In the very beginning God created the heaven and the earth. What for? He created the worlds to become the habitation of his children. When, therefore, he considered us who were born of him in the spirit before the world was, as he stood in our midst he said unto those who were with him: "We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell." (Abraham 3:24.) The materials were not created; they were already there, but they were without form and void—the elements are eternal, but God understands the constitution of matter and the forces of the universe; so, looking out upon the great expanse, he says:

"Let us go down and make an earth whereon these may dwell."
 "These" meant you and me, my brethren and sisters, and the many millions who inhabit this globe, and the many other millions that have inhabited it from the very beginning of time.

And how did he do it? By the word of God, through faith. "Let there be light," was the beginning. There must then be something in this light possessing creative power. Let us seek a little more light by quoting more scripture:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God.

"The same was in the beginning with God.

"All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.

"In him was life; and the life was the light of men.

"And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehendeth it not."

"That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

This then was the Word that was with God in the very beginning and by whom, through his unbounded faith, the worlds were framed, and without whom was not anything made that was made, and in whom was life itself, and this life was the light of men and is the "light that shineth in darkness." This light even penetrated that darkness that was "upon the face of the deep" and there are ninety-three million miles of it between us and the sun, and how many more millions of miles there are between us and the dwelling place of God, where "He sits enthroned in the midst of all things in the bosom of eternity," we may not even guess. Science teaches us, however, that utter darkness prevails throughout the boundless space; but when God says: "Let there be light," it penetrates it all and shineth in it but the darkness comprehends it not.

Again I quote from the first chapter of John: "No man hath seen God at any time." This was quoted and properly explained yesterday by Apostle Orson F. Whitney in his excellent address, by citing these words added by the Prophet Joseph Smith: "unless quickened by the Spirit of God." Surely this clarifies it and makes it harmonize with the scriptures wherein are recorded the many appearances of God to his servants the prophets. And yet, I think there was another thought in the mind of the beloved disciple John when he wrote this paragraph which I infer from the remaining part of this verse. Let me quote it in full: "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him."

Who was it that created this world? Have we not read it was the Word that was with the Father in the very beginning, and that all things were made by him and without him was not anything made? He it was then that created the heavens and the earth. He it was then who, under the Father, created Adam and Eve and placed them in the Garden of Eden. He it was, this Son of God, known then as Jehovah, who appeared to Abraham upon the plains of Mamre. He it was who called Moses up into the mountain and delivered unto him the law of the Lord, the law of carnal commandments. He it was who came in the meridian of time and was born of the Virgin Mary. Thus he was made flesh. This Son of God, the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, who now sits at the right hand of the Majesty on High from whence proceedeth the light to fill the immensity of space, even "the light which is in all things, which giveth life to all things, which is the law by which all things are governed, even the power of God who sitteth upon his throne, who is in the bosom of eternity, who is in the midst of all things." (Doc. and Cov. 88:13). So John to whom the heavens were opened, seeing these wonderful achievements of his Lord and Master but having God the Father in mind, declares "No man hath seen God [that is the Father] at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him."

From these scriptures which I have quoted and many more that might be cited, it is evident that our Redeemer, known to ancient Israel as Jehovah and to us as Jesus Christ, was the One who appeared to the prophets and although the voice of the Father had been heard as at the baptism of the Savior: "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased," not until the spring of 1820 do we have any account of the appearance of the Father, when both Father and Son appeared to Joseph in the Sacred Grove, when this latter-day Prophet, then less than fifteen years of age, being transfigured before them and quickened by the Spirit, not only beheld them both, observing that the one was the express image of the other, but also heard again his voice declaring: "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him." A most wonderful vision which, although most unusual, was doubtless made necessary in order to dispel forever the false conceptions of the modern religious world regarding the personality of God.

What unanimity there is in the utterances of the inspired apostles and prophets of God! One of the characteristics by which we are able to recognize all true prophets of God is this: They all teach the same thing—they do not contradict each other but uniformly bear witness to the same fundamental truths. Let me now call your attention to some of the revelations given to the Prophet Joseph Smith and we shall discover that same unanimity, the same incontrovertible evidence that he too was a true prophet of the living God. Let me read:

"He that ascended up on high, as also he descended below all things, in that he comprehended all things, that he might be in all and through all things, the light of truth;

"Which truth shineth. This is the light of Christ. As also he is in the sun, and the light of the sun, and the power thereof by which it was made.

"As also he is in the moon, and is the light of the moon, and the power thereof by which it was made;

"As also the light of the stars, and the power thereof by which they were made;

"And the earth also, and the power thereof, even the earth upon which you stand." (Doc. and Cov. 88:6-10).

If the former prophets and apostles have been even in the smallest degree obscure regarding the "Light" and the part it performed in the creation and as to who that Light was, then these paragraphs which I have just read remove all dubiety and declare unequivocally that Christ was that Light which animated the universe and by which through faith the worlds were evolved or framed by the Word of God.

Now let me read a little more from John:

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth."

And again:

"He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name;

"Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

Here we are told that power was given to them that believe on him to become the sons of God. That applies to all true believers. What was that power to which he refers? It was the Gospel of Jesus Christ, through obedience to which we may become both sons and daughters of God; thus as Paul tells us the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation. But how are we to become his sons and daughters, we who were born "not of blood nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God?" No, there was only one that was thus born, "the only Begotten Son;" he was the only one begotten in the flesh but we were also born not of flesh nor blood but of God. Clearly this can only refer to our pre-existence where we were born of God in the spirit, but he gave them that believe on him the power through obedience to his Gospel to become his sons and daughters, both in body and spirit, and members in his household.

He came to his own and not only did they reject him but they crucified him, and on the third day he rose from the tomb, having overcome death and the grave, thus becoming the Redeemer of mankind. And how was that accomplished? The answer is plain: The principle of life was in him by which he became our Creator, for "in him we live and move and have our being." By that same power he becomes the resurrection, overcomes death and makes alive again for "as in Adam all men die so in Jesus Christ shall all be made alive again."

The incident recorded in the eleventh chapter of John makes this plain. It will be remembered that Lazarus, the brother of Martha and Mary, the friend of Jesus, died when the Savior was in another part of the country; but when he came up to the home of Martha and Mary, Martha came out to meet him and said this:

"Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died."

"Thy brother shall rise again."

"I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day."

Then the Lord makes this declaration:

"I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?"

"She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world."

Now let me give one more illustration of the perfect unanimity among the prophets, but in this instance as between this statement made by the Savior which I have just read and a revelation given to Joseph Smith wherein the Lord makes known to him the same truth. It is told in entirely different language and was given under entirely different circumstances and yet it sets forth in great plainness the same truth:

"And the spirit and the body are the soul of man,

"And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul.

"And the redemption of the soul is through him that quickeneth all things."

In other words, he is the resurrection and the life. Here we also learn that the redemption of the soul which is the resurrection from the dead is through him who quickeneth all things, or in other words, it is through him who is "the light which is in all things which giveth life to all things, which is the law by which all things are governed, even the power of God," as I have already quoted from Section 88 of the Doctrine and Covenants; or as John states it: "In him was life and the life was the light of men;" and as we read further in the Doctrine and Covenants, he is also the light of the sun, the moon and the stars and the earth upon which we stand and is the power thereof by which they were made; and when we look out upon this beautiful world and behold the splendor of the starry heavens, the morning and the evening red, the different forms and colors of the clouds and particularly at this time of the year when we see the swelling of the buds, the unfolding of the leaves, the blossoms and the flowers and all nature bursting into life, we may know from these numerous quotations which I have read from the revealed word that all this is through him who was in the beginning with the Father, even the Lord, our Savior, the Redeemer of mankind. As we contemplate these things let our hearts rejoice, let us lift up our souls in grateful adoration to God that he has so beautifully and inimitably adorned his great creation work. Amen.

ELDER ELIAS S. WOODRUFF

President of the Western States Mission

I had not expected to be called on to address this Conference, but I do appreciate the privilege and the honor that is bestowed upon me in thus being called.

What President Wells has said today has been in my mind and heart throughout the Conference. The thought that the light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not is apparent in all the world.

When the treasurer of the queen of Ethiopia was returning from Jerusalem, to which place he had gone to worship, he was reading from the prophet Isaiah. Phillip, an inspired servant of God was impressed to come near unto him and inquire if he understood what he read, to which he replied, "How can I, except some man teach me?"

Around the Eunuch was this spirit which has ever shone in darkness. Being unable to get into contact with it, he could not understand the word of God. But this servant of God, endowed with the priesthood and the authority to teach, was able to make that which to him was darkness, plain and as light.

As I conceive it, that is the responsibility of the missionary. The light shineth in darkness in all the world, and there are honest souls reaching upward for the light. It is our earnest prayer that the Lord will bless us and inspire us and help us to seek them out and find them and bring them to the light, that they may see the truths of the Gospel and rejoice in them.

We feel in the missions—I am sure that all the missions feel alike—that the prayers of the Saints and of our brethren are the great sustaining influence behind us in our work. Therefore, I make this appeal to you this morning, to continue your prayers in behalf of the missions, that the Lord may inspire his servants who have the task of seeking out those who want to know the truth. There are many of them. We do not know how to find them except we be led to them. Will you pray for us? Will you continue to sustain us as you have done? We in turn will do the best we can to carry the message.

I am happy to be able to say that the mission over which I have the honor to preside seems to be doing very well. The Saints are faithful, the missionaries are faithful, and they are all enjoying health, strength, happiness and joy.

May the Lord bless you. May he bless Zion and his servants who preside over the Church, and help them to be strong. May we love and sustain them, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus, Amen.

ELDER CHARLES E. ROWAN, JR.

President of the Texas Mission

My brethren and sisters, I feel grateful to my Heavenly Father for this opportunity of being associated with you and enjoying with you this wonderful Conference.

As I look over the strength of the Church and observe that all the General Authorities whom we love, revere and sustain are here, and that we have had an opportunity of listening to the inspired words as they have come from the lips of these living oracles of God, my heart has swelled with gratitude. I feel indeed grateful to my Heavenly Father for the many blessings that have come to me in my life.

It has been my pleasure to labor for ten and one-half years in a Stake of Zion, and during that period I have learned to love and revere each and every one of these brethren whom we sustain as our General Authorities. I have learned to respect and admire those who stand at the head of the various auxiliary organizations, and I feel greatly honored of our Heavenly Father in being called at this time to help carry this work into the nations of the world.

I am happy to say to you, brethren and sisters, that I bring greetings from the Saints and missionaries of the Texas Mission. Our Mission comprises the States of Texas and Louisiana. The Mission covers approximately 314,402 square miles, or is about as large as Utah, Idaho, Wyoming and Nevada. We have 22,990 square miles more than Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio combined. Within the State of Texas we have 253 counties, fifty-seven of which are larger than the State of Rhode Island. And yet in that great field I find that the people generally speaking are anxious to meet the servants of Almighty God, and I am happy, my brethren and sisters, to say to you that each and every missionary laboring in that field is enjoying good health; that they are all enjoying the spirit of their calling; that they are laboring zealously and earnestly to disseminate the Gospel truths; and that the people are receiving their message in a very fine way.

I am happy to be with you, and I bear you my testimony in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ that I know that this is the Gospel of Jesus Christ; that I know that he lives, that God our Father actually exists, and that we have been created in his image.

May the Lord bless you and may he bless us. May you in Zion so live that the tourists as they come into our country may see that you are absolutely sincere, that you are genuine in the things that you believe; and then I am sure you will make it more pleasant and more fruitful for the missionaries in the world. God bless you all, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOHN V. BLUTH

President of the Canadian Mission

If Brother J. Golden Kimball, with all the years of experience he has had and the many times he has been in this stand, has been "upon the anxious seat" during the past two days of this Conference, you may know to some extent how I feel at the present moment.

I am reminded, while standing here at this west end of the tabernacle, that some fifty-four years ago I sat in the gallery of this house in the first seat just behind where the clock is now fastened. At that time I was an immigrant boy, just over from far-off Stockholm, Sweden, unable to speak the language. The only words of the language, I knew were "yes" and "no".

Remarkable as it may seem those two words have been of considerable importance in my life. It is a matter of regret that I have not always been able to say No when that was the answer that may have been required, but I appreciate and am thankful to my Heavenly Father that I have been able to say No as often as I have done; that I have been able to retain the faith and the testimony of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ that has come to me.

It is a matter of still greater appreciation that every time when I have been expected to say Yes I have been able to do so. I do remember also in my life that there was a time when I very much desired a "yes," and she gave it. For the past forty-six years we have been living together in love, affection and happiness.

I have been upon two missions, one in the Southern States, and one in England. On those occasions I had to go as it were alone, except for the assistance of my Heavenly Father, which I need as much now as ever. This time I have the privilege of having her with me, and it is a pleasure and a matter of wonderment to me the way she has taken to this work and this mission.

I rejoice in the privilege of accepting the call that has come to me to preside over the Canadian Mission. I recognize the responsibility and I feel very humble in seeking to follow in the footsteps of those who have preceded me in that work, when I see the labor they have performed, the work that has been accomplished.

I cannot enumerate the number of States that could be covered by the area that comprises the Canadian Mission, but I did learn this much, that if one should take the lands within the Canadian Mission and divide them up between the men, women and children that comprise the membership of the Latter-day Saint Church in the Canadian Mission, each one would be entitled to 700,000 acres. From that you can decide whether the mission is extensive or whether the membership is small. As I find it, both are the case.

I rejoice in the work, and I do pray that the Spirit of God may be with me in that work, that in the labors that come to us that Spirit may ever attend us; that a love for the children of God shall be in our hearts; that we shall spare no effort, no labor, no toil, in getting to them the message of life and salvation which has come into our hearts and has given us joy, happiness and satisfaction.

When we see the hundreds of thousands of people gathering at shrines in other churches, we regret the fact that it seems to us they are as yet impervious to the message of the Gospel that we have to give them, which would give them more truth than they have now, more light and knowledge, and greater opportunity for advancement, progress, glory and salvation in God's kingdom. But all we can do is to seek our Father for the strength he can give unto us and bend every energy to cleanse our garments of the blood of this generation by neglecting no opportunity to preach the Gospel unto them and give them the opportunity to reject or accept, to have joy and gladness come into their hearts, or to have to wait another time and for other methods by which to receive it.

We pray our Heavenly Father that he may inspire the hearts of the fathers and the mothers who are here at home that they may feel to sacrifice and send their sons and daughters into the missions, that we may not go as short-handed as we are at the present time. We have at present fifty-two missionaries in the Canadian Mission, while we had eighty-two last year, a loss of thirty. We have five District Presidents who are at present working alone. In the State of New Hampshire we have but two missionaries. The field is great and the laborers are few, and we depend upon the brethren and sisters at home who have a love for the work and an appreciation of the responsibilities that are upon us, to carry the message of the Gospel to the world. May we do all that lies in our power to discharge this responsibility.

I bear my testimony to the truth and the divinity of this work, that that which the world calls "Mormonism" is indeed the work of the Lord, restored to us in these last days, which gives to the world an opportunity of knowledge and understanding and a better conception of God and our relationship unto him, the purpose of our being here and what we may accomplish. May we be blessed with his Holy Spirit to give unto them that message, and to discharge our duties and responsibilities in humility. That God may give us strength to that end, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER DAVID A. SMITH

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

It seems necessary at times that we must have skirmishes from the enemy to serve notice on us that our forces must be well organized and well trained if we hope to make the battle of righteousness decisive. The proceedings of this Conference so far have impressed me with this thought. We have in the Church an unlimited amount of defensive material at hand, and each day increases our store.

At the Priesthood Meeting Saturday evening, President Ivins called our attention to an article published in the Popular Science Monthly of January, 1930. His watchful eye is always looking for such information. The mere mention of the ancient American inhabitants will immediately attract his attention. He is always happy to talk about them. His knowledge of and interest in them has been a source of inspiration to me. He called my attention to this article soon after its publication. I quote:

"With records cut in imperishable stone the Mayas suddenly made their first appearance upon the historical scene on August 6, 613 B. C. On that remote day—the oldest date in American history—they put into operation a workable and astonishingly accurate calendar system which has been the marvel of the scientific world since it was deciphered. Why on August 6, 613 B. C.? Where were the Mayas on August 5? Had they lived, tilled the soil, developed their wonderful astronomy and admirable architecture, pursued their other arts and sciences on this continent before they carved that first inscription? If so, for how long? If not, whence did they come? Nobody knows. Step by step, along trails of tangible remains, science has been able to trace the evolution of the Egyptian and other ancient peoples back to their earliest and crudest beginnings. But not so in the case of the Mayas. So far as any concrete evidence is concerned, they might as well have dropped down from Mars or some other planet on the morning of that 6th day of August, 2,542 years ago."

Nephi, the historian of the Book of Mormon, tells us that in the commencement of the first year of the reign of Zedekiah, king of Judah, there came many prophets to Jerusalem prophesying unto the people that they must repent or the great city Jerusalem must be destroyed; and that his father, Lehi, was warned to take his family and flee into the wilderness. He also tells us that according to the word of the angel, the God of Israel, whom men should trample under their feet, would come in 600 years from the time his father left Jerusalem. Nephi stated that he would not write all details, for said he, "It matter-eth not to me that I am particular to give a full account of all the things of my father, for they cannot be written upon these plates, for I desire the room that I may write of the things of God." To me these statements of Nephi answer the question, "Where were the Mayas on August 5, 613 B. C.?" To get the full story, one must read the Book of Mormon. Recent years have brought forth many evidences to support this claim.

I have only a few minutes in which to address you, and during this time I desire, if the Lord will help me, to mention some of these evidences. Through the writings and traditions of the ancient Americans, historians and archaeologists have preserved for us a most wonderful story, a story that harmonizes perfectly with the story of the Book of Mormon. I shall not attempt to make a detailed comparison. My time will not permit.

Nephi tells us his record is written in the language of his father, which consists of the learning of the Jews and the language of the Egyptians. (1 Nephi 1:1-2.) Compare with the following:

"The Mexicans had more than one method of writing. Not only did they use hieroglyphic signs 'figurative and symbolic,' but like the ancient Egyptians they had also phonetic signs representing not a thing, an action, or an idea, but a sound. From thence to the alphabet is but a step, or, rather it is the alphabet already; but they made far less use of the valuable discovery of phonetic signs than did the Egyptians. They confined themselves almost entirely to the figurative and symbolic. The result was that the writing had to be greatly aided by the memory." ("History of Mexico," Claverijo, Volume 2, page 43.)

Lehi had four sons. Nephi became the leader. Baldwin in his "Ancient America," on page 264, makes the following statement:

"It (this civilization of South America) was originated, he says, by a people led by four brothers who settled in the valley of Tuzco and developed a civilization there in a very human way. The youngest of these brothers assumed supreme authority and became the first of a long line of sovereigns."

"They believed in God. Human in form and feeling, and yet most divine, were the gods and deities of the ancient Seneca and other Iroquoian peoples. While the divine, social, and political organization was necessarily, for psychological reasons, a close reflex or replica of the human, and although both gods and man derived descent from an original first parent, yet the first divine ancestor was a self-existing god and the first man was the creature of one of these divine powers." (Annual Report of the Bureau of American Ethnology, 1918.)

"They believed the soul to be immortal. They distinguished three plans for the soul when separated from the body." ("History of Mexico," Claverijo, Volume 2, page 3.)

"They believed in an evil spirit, the enemy of mankind, which they called the rational owl, and said that he often appeared to men for the purpose of terrifying or doing them an injury. The Mexicans, with all other civilized nations, have a clear tradition, though somewhat corrupted by fable, of the creation of the world, of the universal deluge, of the confusion of tongues and of the dispersion of the people; and had actually all these events represented in their pictures." (History of Mexico," Claverijo, Volume 2, page 2.)

"The Aztecs believed that two persons survived the deluge, a man and his wife. Their heads are represented in ancient paintings, together with a boat floating on the water, at the foot of the mountain, a dove is also depicted, with the hieroglyphical emblem of language in his mouth which he is distributing to the children of the survivors. The people held the further tradition, that the boat in which their Noah escaped, was filled with various kinds of animals and birds. After some time a vulture was sent out from it, but remained feeding on the dead bodies of the giants which had been left on the earth as the water subsided. The little humming bird was sent forth and returned with a twig in its mouth." ("Conquest of Mexico," Prescott, page 385.)

Speaking of the pyramid of Cholula, Prescott says:

"Popular tradition in regard to its building is that it was erected by a family of giants who had escaped the great inundation, and designated to raise the building to the clouds: but the gods offended with their presumption, sent fire from heaven on the pyramid and compelled them to abandon the attempt."

Referring to Quetzalcoatl, they say:

"He it is that was born of the virgin that is called Chimalmar in heaven. This Quetzalcoatl was he who they said made the world, because, they say, that this supreme god who resides in the most high heaven, when it pleased him, breathed and begot this Quetzalcoatl. To this being they built the round churches that have no corners at all. They say that it is he who made the first man. A god that was called Titlalacomac, sent a messenger from heaven with a message for a virgin that lived in Tula, that was called Chimalmar. This virgin conceived a son without knowing a man, the which was called Quetzalcoatl, and they say he is the god of the air." (Cortez Mess. Rios, No. 3738, page 25.)

"Quetzalcoatl was among the Mexicans and all other nations of Anahuac, the god of the air. He was said to have once been high priest of Tula. They figured him tall, big, and of fair complexion with an open forehead, large eyes, long black hair and a thick beard, from a love of decency he wore always a long robe. He was thought to possess the greatest industry and to have invented the art of smelting metals and cutting gems. He was supposed to have had the most profound wisdom which he displayed in the laws which he left to mankind; and above all to have had the most rigid and exemplary manners. Whenever he intended to promulgate a law in his kingdom, he ordered a crier to the top of the mountain near the city of Tula whose voice was heard at a distance of 300 miles. All his subjects were rich, and to sum up all in one word the Mexicans imagined as much happiness under the priesthood of Quetzalcoatl as the Greeks did under the reign of Saturn." ("History of Mexico" by Claverijo, Volume 2, page 14. Compare with 3 Nephi 11.)

"Quetzalcoatl after being twenty years in Cholula, resolved to pursue his journey to the imaginary kingdoms of Tlapatla, carrying along with him four noble and virtuous youths. In the maritime province of Coatzacoalco he dismissed them and desired them to assure the Cholulas that he would return to comfort and direct them." ("History of Mexico," Claverijo, Volume 2, page 12. See 3 Nephi 18:38, 39.)

Referring to the destruction at the time of the death of the Savior, we have the following statement:

"There had been a very great error among these natives and very general throughout all this new state, for they said that this world had had two endings and that the one had been by flood and tempestuous waters, and that the world had been turned upside down and that those who at that time had lived had been giants whose bones are found in the broken places, and thus, they say also that there had been another ending of the world by wind and hurricane that were so great that all there was in it was destroyed, even the plants and trees of the highest mountains, and that the men of that time were seized and taken up from the ground until they were lost to sight, and that a few people of those that escaped were converted into monkeys and lost the use of reason and lost their speech and became as we now see them. They believe as certainly that there is to be another ending and that it is to be by fire." (Historiatlaxcala Mexico, 1892, page 153. See 3 Nephi 8.)

"Some Mexican writers are persuaded that the gospel had been preached in America some centuries before the arrival of the Spaniards. The grounds of that opinion are some crosses which have been found at different times which seem to have been made before the arrival of the Spaniards; the fast of forty days observed by the people of the new world; the tradition of the future arrival of a strange people with beards." ("History of Mexico," Claverijo, Volume 2, page 14.)

In referring to the first visit of Cortez to Yucatan, Prescott says:

"The houses were some of them large and often built of stone and lime. He was particularly struck with the temple in which were towers constructed of the same solid material and rising several stories in height. In the court of one of these he was amazed by the sight of a cross of stone and lime about ten palms high. It was the emblem of the god of rain. Yet, it must be regarded as a curious fact that the cross should have been venerated as the object of religious worship both in the new world and in the regions of the old world where the light of Christianity had never risen."

Concerning the belief of this people that their god Quetzalcoatl, when he departed, promised to return again at some future date, Prescott makes the following statement:

"In a preceding chapter I have noticed the popular tradition respecting Quetzalcoatl, that deity with a fair complexion and flowing beard, so unlike the Indian Physiognomy, who, after fulfilling his mission of benevolence among the Aztecs embarked on the Atlantic Sea for the mysterious shores of Tlapallan. He promised on his departure to return at some future day with his posterity and resume the possession of his empire. That day was looked forward to with hope or with apprehension, according to the interests of the believer, but with general confidence throughout the wide borders of Anahuac. Even after the conquest, it still lingered among the Indian races by whom it was as fondly cherished, as the advent of their king Sebastian continued to be by the Portuguese, or that of the Messiah by the Jews. A general feeling seems to have prevailed in the time of Montezuma, that the period for the return of the deity, and the full accomplishment of his promise, was near at hand. This conviction is said to have gained ground from various preternatural occurrences, reported with more or less detail by all the most ancient historians." ("History of Mexico," Prescott, 218.)

"At the arrival of the Spaniards on the coast of Anahuac, the Mexican governors of those coasts were confounded at the sight of vessels so large and men of so strange an aspect and figure."

Nephi calls our attention to the fact that his people built large buildings of cement and stone. Historians have preserved for us the following statement:

"In many other ways the Mayas uncannily anticipated modern methods. They discovered the use of concrete in the construction of buildings. It appears that they erected wooden forms against which were laid blocks of stone, cut smooth in front only, to serve as a facing. Then a mixture of crushed rock and liquid mortar was poured into the space between the facing and the inner wooden form. This produced a strong monolithic wall. In their painting, they embodied the principles of perspective and foreshortening, and even developed a certain technique in presenting a three-quarters view. And devotees of the Sunday comics may be surprised to learn that the Mayas, in their carvings of human figures in conversation, originated the 'speech-balloon' without which no modern 'funny' is complete." (New Clues to the Mayan Riddle, Popular Science Monthly, January, 1930.)

"The pyramid is nearly 30 feet high and at the base measures about 100 by 120 feet. The flattish summit preserves nearly its original dimensions, having been protected by a firm cement floor and measures 60 by 80 feet. Resting on this is a low mass of earth about 5 feet high having near the middle remnants of a Spanish building, probably a church. This massive pile is composed of stone of various sizes and shapes imbedded in adobe as in many of the north side structures, but we cannot at present say whether the facings were of stone or cement. The most noteworthy feature of this pyramid is the cement or concrete floors of the terraces which are so firm and fixed as to stand out in places far beyond the crumbling slope." ("Ancient Cities of Mexico," Holmes, Vol. 1, page 275.)

"Mortar, made of lime and sand, and cement-like mixtures composed of mortar tempered with gravel, pounded stone, etc., were extensively used and their durability is remarkable. Numerous floors and roofs are still preserved." ("Ancient Cities of Mexico," Holmes, Vol. 1, page 25.)

We are told that upon the arrival of Cortez on the coast of Yucatan the people were greatly alarmed when they saw the large ships with white sails. Cortez, having heard of the tradition of the people, it is said, caused his cannon to be fired. This had the effect upon the natives of making them believe Quetzalcoatl, god of the air, had returned as promised. The smoke ascending into the heavens, the roar of the cannon, the appearance of the white men with beards, seemed to bear out this fact. Claverijo records this in the following statement:

"Montezuma was extremely disturbed on hearing their account; but, to avoid any rash step in an affair of such consequence and alarm, he held a council with Cacamatzi, king of Acolhuacan, his nephew, Cuilahuatzur, lord of Iztapalapan, his brother and other twelve personages his ordinary counselors. After a long conference they concluded unanimously, that he who had landed upon that shore, with so great an army, could be no other person than Quetzalcoatl, the god of air, who had for many years been expected in that country; for there prevailed among those nations, as we have already mentioned, an ancient tradition, that such a deity, after having, by his beneficence and innocence of life acquired the esteem and veneration of the people in Totlan, Cholula, and Onohualco had disappeared to them, promised to return after a certain period to govern them in peace and render them happiness."

After a long conference with Cortez, it seems the natives had not been favorably impressed with their doctrines or teachings regarding God. Montezuma made the statement that their god was similar to that described by the Spaniards.

"But," says Prescott, "there seems to have been much division of opinion in that body. Some were for resisting the stranger at once, whether by fraud or by open force. Others contended that if they were supernatural beings, fraud and force would be alike useless. If they were, as they pretended, ambassadors from a foreign prince, such a policy would be cowardly and unjust. That they were not of the family of Quetzalcoatl was argued from the fact that they had shown themselves hostile to his religion, for tidings of the proceedings of the Spaniards in Tabasco it seems had already reached the capital. If Montezuma had resisted their visit to his capital it was because he had heard such accounts of their cruelty, that they sent the lightning to consume his people or crushed them to pieces under the hard feet of the ferocious animals on which they rode." (Prescott, page 221.)

Yesterday, on these grounds, a few descendants of these Lamanites held a short service. They sang and prayed in English and their native language. Nephi saw in a vision that through wickedness his people should become a dark and loathsome people. He also saw that in the day when this book he was writing should come into the hands of the Gentiles and should be delivered to his people they should again become a white and delightsome people. These Lamanites, whom we met yesterday, are dark like their forefathers, but their souls are white. They have faith in the living God, that faith which leads to eternal life.

In conclusion I shall read a statement from Lord Kingsborough concerning these people. He gives the following reasons why he believes they are descendants of the Hebrews:

"Because of their division into tribes; their worship of Jehovah; their notions of theocracy; their belief in the ministration of angels; their language and dialects; their manner of counting time; their prophets and high priests; their festivals, fasts and religious rites; their daily sacrifice; their ablutions and anointings; their laws of uncleanness; their abstinence from unclean things; their marriages, divorces, punishment of adultery; their several punishments; their cities of refuge; their purifications and ceremonies preparatory to war; their ornaments; their manner of curing the sick; their burial of the dead; their raising of seed to a deceased brother; their choice of names adapted to their circumstances and the times; their own traditions, the accounts of our English writers, and the testimonies which the Spanish and others have given concerning primitive inhabitants of Peru and Mexico."

A song of their minstrel as interpreted seems to have been prophetic. To us it is prophetic.

"Enjoy the fragrant flowers that spring
 Around thy kingly state;
 A day will come which shall destroy
 Thy present bliss—thy present joy—
 When fate the scepter of command
 Shall wrench from out thy royal hand
 Thy moon diminished rise;
 And as thy pride and strength are quenched
 From thy adherents shall be wrenched
 All that they love or prize.
 When sorrows shall thy truth attest,
 And this thy throne decline—
 The birds of thy ancestral nest,
 The princes of thy line—
 The mighty of thy race—shall see
 The bitter ills of poverty—
 And then shall memory recall
 Thy envied greatness, and on all
 Thy brilliant triumphs dwell;
 And as they think of bygone years
 Compared with present shame, their tears
 Shall to the ocean swell,
 And those, who, through a royal band,
 Serve thee for crown, or plume,
 Remote from Culhuacan's land
 Shall find the exile's doom,
 Deprived of thee—their rank forgot,
 Misfortune shall o'erwhelm their lot.
 Then fame shall grudgingly withhold
 Her meed to greatness, which of old
 Blazons and crowns displayed;
 The people shall retain alone
 Remembrance of that triple throne
 Which this our land obeyed."

My brethren and sisters, I am thrilled when I read the Book of Mormon. The more I study it the more I see in it of worth. It is one of the most wonderful evidences of the divinity of this work which God has placed in our hands. I plead with you to read it and study it with a prayerful heart. Read the last chapter first. Follow that instruction to the letter, and the Lord will be with you, for he has so promised.

God help us in our efforts to carry on in his great work, is my prayer, which I ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

President of the Southern States Mission.

I earnestly pray that the word of the Lord that has been delivered to us at this Conference will take hold of us. It seems to me, brethren and sisters, that the beauty and power of this Gospel are revealed in the lives of the Latter-day Saints as much and probably more than they are revealed in the books.

Two or three days ago I saw a happy mother walking along Main Street. Her face beamed with maternal pride, for at her side, walking with her, was her son, a manly young man who had been recently honorably released from filling a mission. With every step that mother took she seemed to say, "I am the mother of this boy."

These wonderful mothers in Israel are not astonished at the gratifying progress their splendid sons and daughters make in the mission field, because they know that the testimony of the Gospel and the power to preach it were born with them. These mothers believe in their sons and daughters. My brethren and sisters, we cannot do very much with young people except we show them that we do believe in their integrity and power to fill their missions.

Recently a married man came into the Mission. After he had labored for three or four months he received the sorrowful news that his only child, about two years old, had died. The bishop comforted the grief-stricken mother and told her that if it would help her to bear her grief he would send for her husband. But she replied, "No, bishop. Ever since we have been married I have prayed and worked and saved in order that my husband could fill a mission, and if he were to come home now the happiness he would bring me would not equal the joy that fills my heart because he is preaching the everlasting Gospel."

Such a spirit, brethren and sisters, is unconquerable. It is invincible. And in that spirit of sacrifice, devotion and self-denial this glorious Gospel is being preached.

A Presbyterian minister said a short time ago: "The church that evangelizes America will be the dominating factor in evangelizing the world." Noble words. Magnificent ideal. The mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is to preach the Gospel to every nation and kindred and tongue and people, to bring about the glorious consummation, when every knee shall bend and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ. And how will the Church accomplish this? "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

God help us all to work in the spirit of sacrifice and devotion. Let us send out our splendid sons and daughters to "wake up the world for the conflict of justice," I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER ARTHUR GAETH

President of the Czechoslovak Mission

My dear brethren and sisters, I bring you greeting from the smallest mission in the Church, consisting of thirteen of your sons and eleven members. I am happy to be here to enjoy the spirit of this Conference, happy that I was able to come and obtain a companion who will return with me, so that we can continue in our work in building up that mission of the Church.

We are happy to be able to labor among the Slavic people—among the Czechs and the Slovaks—a people who have been religiously persecuted for centuries. They first received Christianity in the ninth century, when two Slavs, missionaries of the Byzantine church, came to them, and under the reign of Wenceslas, that famous Christian king in whose honor we sing one of our religious songs, they were practically Christianized. From that time on Christianity was a powerful factor in their history. But so well did the predominant church know how to inculcate the ideas of its religion into the lives of those people and into their affairs that by the fourteenth century it controlled practically one-third of all the lands, and most of the people were serfs and peasants under its dominion.

It was said at that time that the Archbishop of Prague controlled one-third of the Province of Bohemia, and he had a large retinue of priests and followers who spent a good deal of their time in riotous living. This greatly incited the feelings of honest men and women who believed in the message of Christ.

One of these was the famous reformer, John Huss, who began to preach against the corruption within the Church. He gained a following among the common people and the movement became so powerful that the attention of the Popes in Rome—and at that time there were two—was attracted to this movement. Huss was asked to come to trial on the shores of Lake Constance. His friends warned him and told him not to go, but he had a motto, the motto of the Bohemian people today, "Truth will conquer."

And so with two or three followers and with a promise of safe passageway from the king of the Empire at that time, Sigismund, he went on to Constance. There, at a mock trial, he was condemned to death and was burned at the stake.

Huss died, but his spirit lived on among the people, and for two centuries after that they were a Protestant nation. But at the beginning of the Thirty Years' War the Catholic forces came into the country and at the battle of White Mountain the Bohemians were defeated and were put in bondage. There were more than two million Bohemians living in the country at the beginning of the Thirty Years' War, and at the close, thirty years later, that number had dwindled to less than one million. The rest had been killed or forced into exile. For three hundred years after that they lived in bondage, spiritually. They were forced to accept teachings for which they had no desire and in which they did not believe. But slowly these things became a part of them, and the mass of the people became members of the Catholic church.

Then the World War came and that people succeeded in gaining their freedom and in establishing religious liberty. The educated people began to break away from the church. They began to go off into the paths of skepticism and agnosticism. The masses still remain in that church and are remaining so probably because they feel they must have some kind of a cloak and that the cloak they are wearing now is probably as good as any they could get. But the leaders and the educated people are opposed to organized religion. They want nothing of it, because the experiences they have had with organized religion have taught them that it has meant bondage to them.

We are laboring among the more educated people of the country, a skeptical people who weigh everything and who are paying attention to teachings and investigating them because they are interested in the development of their people and their country as probably no other leaders in Europe are today. They have gained their freedom. The spirit of liberty permeates their souls and they work and slave and accomplish. That is why the country of Czechoslovakia has made more progress in re-establishing and reconstructing since the war than any other country that participated in the war, except probably France.

We are proud to be engaged in service among those people. We are thankful to our Heavenly Father that we can work there, and we feel that the time will come when the teachings of the Church, because they are practical and can be applied in every day life, will take hold among those people and we will be able to bring many of them into the fold of the Church. We are only a small group, fourteen of us laboring among fourteen million seven hundred and twenty-five thousand people. We feel that we have a great mission and that we need help. We ask the Lord to bless you here at home so that you may be able to send your sons and daughters out into the world to preach the Gospel, where they can gain the experiences so valuable to life, and at the same time preach the true and everlasting Gospel to the many nations of the world who are hungering for truth.

May the Lord bless you and help you, is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ARTHUR WELLING

President of the North Central States Mission

My brethren and sisters, I too rejoice and am grateful with all my heart for the privilege and honor that has come to me as a missionary of this great Church, and for the opportunity of bearing my testimony along with those already borne at this Conference.

In the North Central States Mission we are well, and busy, and happy in our work, and the Lord is blessing our efforts. Last year, despite its many handicaps, we had more baptisms, more tithing paid, and more people paying tithing than ever before in our history. This year (1931), notwithstanding a reduction of more than one-third (from 80 to 50) in our missionary force, we feel and hope results may be even better. We are proud of our missionaries and of our Saints and friends. All that we need is more of each. There are many good people in the world. Given more missionaries, for whom we hope and pray, we shall strive earnestly to find them, and with the help of the Lord, to teach them the truth.

A book has been written by Bertrand Russell and others entitled, "If I had but one sermon to preach." If we of the North Central States Mission had but one sermon to preach to the world it would be an humble testimony that God lives, the same wise, kind Heavenly Father, who in the beginning "Created man in his image," and who continues to be interested in all his children; that Jesus of Nazareth lives, a resurrected, immortalized, glorified member of the Godhead; that Joseph Smith, the prophet of this dispensation, was privileged to converse with these two heavenly personages, Father and Son, and of them was instructed in the manner of the organization of the only authorized Church of Christ upon the earth today; that this is that Church; that in it, under the administration of President Heber J. Grant, seventh in succession from the Prophet Joseph, are held and exercised all the keys of authority in the priesthood that characterized it in the early days.

Such, my brethren and sisters, is our testimony to the world. And if, as upon one occasion long ago, some should be "pricked in their hearts" and should say, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" the answer is ever the same:

"Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For this promise is unto you, and unto your children, and to all they that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2:37-39).

If we could preach but once to the youth of Zion it would be, in humble adaptation of the third great commandment: "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God IN VAIN." In vain? What do we mean—In vain?

Consider for a moment the splendid oath and promise of the Boy Scout:

"On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and to my country, and to obey the Scout Law; to help other people at all times; and to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

Suppose the Boy Scout, having given this splendid commitment to service, should go his way forgetful that "A scout is Trustworthy, Loyal, Helpful, Friendly, Courteous, Kind, Obedient, Cheerful, Thrifty, Brave, Clean and Reverent." He shall have taken the Boy Scout Oath IN VAIN, shall he not?

Let us not, my young brethren and sisters in particular, take the name of the Lord our God, in vain. Who cares to become a deacon, a teacher, a priest, an auxiliary worker, or a missionary of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints IN VAIN? Nobody. Last of all the youth of this day and age in the Church.

"O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength, that ye be found blameless before God at the last day."

Such, my young friends, the vision toward which our fathers wrought;
Such their proud hope and faith in us, that we should carry on,
Nor carry on IN VAIN, the work by them begun.
So shall we prove ourselves in very deed their sons.
So shall we prove to skeptic friends, "This is the Place;"
This is his Church; and this the greatest day,
(Though perhaps also the most critical and dangerous of days),
That ever yet has dawned.

God bless and keep the youth of Israel. God bless and magnify his missionaries in every land and clime. God bless and save the world, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Singing by the congregation, "Come, All Ye Sons of Zion."
The closing prayer was offered by Elder Joseph F. Merrill.
Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock.

THIRD DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The Closing session of the One Hundred and First Annual Conference of the Church convened at 2 o'clock Monday, April 6th. President Heber J. Grant presided.
The congregation sang the hymn, "O Ye Mountains High."
Elder George H. Brimhall offered the opening prayer.
The hymn, "The Time is Far Spent," was sung by the congregation.

ELDER WILLIAM R. SLOAN

President of the Northwestern States Mission

Never in my life have I felt more humble and dependent upon the Spirit of the Lord than I do at this time. I was just as positive as of anything in the world that I would be the first speaker this afternoon. Something seemed to whisper that to my soul. You brethren who have never had this experience will probably never know with what feelings of timidity a man stands in the presence of these holy men to edify those present and say the things that should be said to this great body of priesthood, servants of the Lord.

It seems to me that the great burden of this Conference has been the burden that is incumbent upon us as Elders in Israel, namely, the proclaiming of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the world. As we were singing the last hymn my mind reverted to a revelation given through the Prophet Joseph to Peter Whitmer, June, 1829. I should like to read it.

"Hearken, my servant Peter, and listen to the words of Jesus Christ, your Lord and your Redeemer.

"For behold, I speak unto you with sharpness and with power, for mine arm is over all the earth.

"And I will tell you that which no man knoweth save me and thee alone—

"For many times you have desired of me to know that which would be of most worth unto you.

"Behold, blessed are you for this thing, and for speaking my words which I have given unto you according to my commandments.

"And now, behold, I say unto you, that the thing which will be of most worth unto you will be to declare repentance unto this people, that you may bring souls unto me that you may rest with them in the kingdom of my Father."

I am honored, my brethren and sisters, in being called to preside over the Northwestern States Mission, one of the grandest missions of this Church. Millions of people live within the boundaries of this great mission. Their attitude towards this Church is changing rapidly. Hundreds of them are seeking for the truth. They are reading the truth as your sons and daughters are delivering it to them from day to day, in the various parts of that mission, so far as our force will permit us to visit. We are limited in man power and in the strength of our women who have been doing missionary work and are doing missionary work there today, as is no doubt the case in all missions. Obviating that handicap we are calling a number of our local brethren and sisters within the immediate confines of the mission, to the service, and they are spending some time—some of them part of their time, others all of their time—and thus helping in overcoming the great shortage of missionaries today.

I realize the sacrifice that you parents are making. I appreciate the hard times that we are going through financially; yet I realize too that God can overrule all things for the good of his people and for the promulgating of his work.

Not long ago one of the Elders laboring in the Northwestern States Mission was worried over financial conditions at home, although his father had never mentioned finances to him. Yet, away up in Alaska he felt that all was not well. So, one evening he went out by himself to pray and he asked the Lord to remove this feeling from him that he might know of conditions at home. To his astonishment, that night when he retired a vision as it were came to him. Just as plain as the noonday sun he saw his good father going away from home and in seclusion kneeling in prayer, telling the Lord that he had a son in the mission field and his finances were such that he was worried as to whether he could retain him there longer or not; and he asked that this condition be overruled if it were the Lord's will.

The next morning the son wrote a letter to his father and outlined in detail that which he had seen in vision. A few weeks later came a letter to the son, and he in turn sent it to me. That good father said: "Son, the very night that you had that vision, I was out there in seclusion away from home, praying, telling my troubles to the Lord, and he heard me. The next day as I went along the street I met a man, not a member of the Church, who voluntarily asked me if I did not need a little money, that he had some with which he could help me. His letter said, "Son, you remain on your mission as long as you are needed."

These things, my brethren and sisters, are happening to the missionaries in the Northwestern States. They are kind, sweet, honest, willing young men and women. They are acquitting themselves admirably of the responsibilities that rest upon them.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters. Oh, may he bless these men who preside over Israel! May we, brethren and sisters, stand back of them, every man and every woman, that Zion may grow through the united efforts and support we give these noble servants of God. I bear witness to you that I know this is God's work. Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and this work will never be overthrown nor given to another people. This I do in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER NOAH S. POND

President of the Northern States Mission

My brethren and sisters, the spirit of this Conference I am sure will extend to the extreme portions of the world, farther perhaps than missionaries or the representatives of the Church may be able to travel.

While all these glorious truths have been presented for our consideration I have thought how wonderful that God, the great Creator, the Engineer, the Architect, knew the material from which he would create this earth, and the material from which he would create his sons and daughters to become inhabitants upon this earth. He knew Adam and selected him as the progenitor of the human race. Our Father knew Abraham and selected him to be the father of the faithful. He knew Noah and placed him as the replenisher of the human race after the deluge. He knew Moses and selected him as the great law-giver. He knew the Son of God as the Savior of the world, as his Beloved Son, upon whom he could place the responsibility for the redemption, salvation and exaltation of the inhabitants of the world.

God knew the prophets and apostles, the inventors and discoverers, and he called them each in his day and time. God knew the Prophet Joseph Smith and he knew you and me, and this is proven by the fact that we are here.

To Latter-day Saints it isn't so much a matter of chronology—when these goodly men and servants came or when these things occurred—as it is to know the actuality of them and to know that they did occur. These men came in their dispensations and accomplished their work.

The Northern States Mission is doing its work as creditably as it is within the power of the humble servants of the Lord who labor there to do it. The incident related by Brother Sloan might be duplicated in the experiences within our observation, but it was a goodly mother instead of a father who knew her son was upon the operation table—he needed her. She prayed and she heard his voice calling her, and he heard his mother's voice. In checking the time both mother and son knew of the prayers of each other and that they could be together in spirit although three thousand miles apart.

We have 77 organized and partially organized Branch and District Sunday Schools, in which there are enrolled 4,845 out of a membership of 7,000 in the mission. We have twenty-three Relief Societies over which Sister Pond presides, and nearly one hundred per cent of our good sisters are maintaining their Relief Society Magazine in which the lessons for the mothers are presented. Sixteen thriving Mutual Improvement Associations, with an enrollment of 741, participated recently in contest work in a way that would be creditable to any of the Wards or Stakes of Zion. We have 23 Neighborhood Primaries taught by local people and our sister missionaries.

I bear to you the testimony of my heart of the truthfulness and beauty of the Gospel of Jesus Christ that has been so forcefully preached to us during the sessions of this Conference; and say to you, brethren and sisters, that your missionary sons and daughters are doing true, active missionary work and enjoying the spirit and calling of their missions.

May our Father's blessings be upon the leadership of this great work, those that we hold in respectful remembrance of the past, and the Presidency and Apostles and other presiding authorities who guide and direct his work today, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOHN WELLS

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

This Conference has been a very profitable one for me. I have listened with deep interest to the speakers and enjoyed the beautiful music. I hope that I may be able to recall many of the things that the brethren have said, so that I may use them in His service. We have been admonished and advised regarding our duties and responsibilities, and no doubt we shall return home determined to take advantage of all this counsel, so that we may become more firmly established in the Church.

Many testimonies have been given to me. I have a testimony of the Gospel. I have been blessed with the knowledge that this is the work of the Lord; that Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of the world; that he came in the meridian of time to redeem us from the fall of Adam and laid down a plan of redemption through which we may obtain eternal life. I know that Joseph Smith is a prophet of the living God; that he came and established the dispensation of the fulness of times.

I deeply appreciate my brethren and sisters with whom I labor. I appreciate my presiding brethren, the First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, the First Council of Seventy, and my Presiding Bishop, Sylvester Q. Cannon, and his counselor, Bishop David A. Smith, both of whom labor diligently. No one could labor harder it seems to me, than does our Presiding Bishop, for the welfare of the youth of Zion. He utilizes his time, talents and energy for the building up of the kingdom of God, giving special attention to the Aaronic priesthood. I sincerely appreciate the feeling of mutual helpfulness and confidence of my brethren in the Stakes and Wards, particularly the bishoprics, for upon them rests so much of the labor of developing the youth of Zion, administering in temporal things, receiving and handling the tithes and offerings, caring for the poor, and many other duties connected with their calling. I also appreciate the close association with the Relief Society. Sixty-five thousand devoted women, presided over by an able presidency, have zealously labored during the past winter to relieve suffering and poverty in all of its phases. President Grant said that large sums have been paid out for charity. Some people say we waste it.

I hardly think so. We treat our brethren and sisters who are less fortunate than ourselves, as our neighbors, in harmony with the spirit of the Gospel.

The subject of tithing is very near to my heart. I have been delighted during this Conference to hear Elder Orson F. Whitney and some of the other brethren discuss this principle. I feel that it is important for us to get into the habit of right thinking along this line. We are flooded with magazines and newspapers, so much that many of us spend a great deal of our time in reading and thinking superficially. We should train ourselves to think straight, and when we think straight we shall be in harmony with the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The world is passing through a crisis. How long it will last none of us knows. The time of the coming of the Savior is near at hand. Whether we shall entirely recover from this serious business depression, we shall have to leave in the hands of our Father. But I appeal to you not to let these hard times and misfortunes be an excuse to neglect the payment of your tithes and offerings. We must discipline ourselves to meet these situations and in spite of our misfortunes to pay the Lord his one-tenth first and trust that his blessings may rest upon the 90% left.

In one of the Stakes of Zion, a few years ago, after I had spoken on the subject of tithing, a group of young men waited for me after the meeting and asked, "How are we to know how much tithing to pay when we don't know what our living expenses will be?" I said, "If you wait to pay all your living expenses first, you may then not have enough left with which to pay tithing."

Now, my brethren, when the Lord gives us means, monthly or otherwise, why not sit down with our conscience, alone if necessary, and find out on the first or last day of each month what the Lord has given us, and then and there tithe it and not wait until the end of the year or the end of the season. Give the Lord an opportunity to bless the 90%. This is what I call straight thinking in relation to the law of tithing.

What are we doing with the 150,000 young men and women in this Church between the ages of 12 and 20? Are we, as parents, teaching these children the importance of the law of tithing? Are we impressing upon them that this is a fundamental principle of the Gospel; that it will add to their joy and satisfaction in the Church; that the payment of tithing will give them greater faith and greater interest in the work of the Lord? We should teach our children from the time they are baptized that whatever the Lord gives them, whether dimes or dollars, it should be tithed monthly. The bishops in this Church are happy and glad to see these young people come with their tithes and offerings. When a boy is ordained to the office of a deacon, he should be taught to obey this important law, so that it will become a habit of his life. Good habits fixed in childhood or early youth are dominating factors of the lives of men and women. We owe it to the Church to teach them this principle.

The great prophet and statesman, Joshua, succeeded Moses. The book of Joshua records that after the land of promise had been occupied and when Joshua had become old, he called upon the chiefs of the tribes of Israel to meet him in the land now known as Samaria. There, on the hillside, he recited to them his labors and what the Lord had done for the Israelites to bring them into that goodly land. He called attention to the worshiping of false gods, and then closed with this statement:

"Now therefore fear the Lord and serve him in sincerity and in truth: * * * Choose you this day whom ye will serve: * * * but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Now, brethren, heads of households, give heed to your families, and may this counsel of Joshua be our motto. Let us serve the Lord. May we remember him with our tithes.

I pray that we may grow in spirituality and in the service of the Lord, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER MILES L. JONES

President of the East Central States Mission

I certainly feel my weakness this afternoon, my brethren and sisters, in attempting to report the activities of the missionaries in the East Central States Mission.

I rejoice exceedingly in having the privilege of laboring with your sons and daughters and your husbands who are engaged in the work of the Lord in that part of the Lord's vineyard. It is pleasing to me to meet with those who have returned from the mission field and hear them express themselves to the effect that they would like to be back in the service of the Lord again; showing that they had been imbued with the spirit of their work and that they still have that spirit with them.

I would like to say to the Bishops of Wards and to the Presidents of Stakes of Zion where these young men and young women reside that I would appreciate it very much if you would find something for them to do to keep them active in the work, because they are active while in the mission field and have endeavored to do their duty to the best of their ability.

About a year ago a message came from the mother of one of our missionaries, who is still laboring in the field, to the effect that his father had passed from this life. In that message the mother expressed the wish that her son remain in the field and complete his mission, and he chose to do so. Just a short time ago, two years, which is the usual term of missionary service, had passed, and learning of the financial condition at his home, I wrote to this young Elder and told him that his labors were acceptable to the Lord, and that he would be honorably released to return home so as to be in attendance at this Conference. In answer to my letter he said:

"President, I have been very careful with my means. I have practiced economy and have saved enough to maintain me for another two months, or more. While I do not like to suggest it, if it would be permissible and agreeable I would like to remain for at least that length of time."

It is needless for me to say that that Elder is still in the field. He has work ahead of him and prospects that he wants to see consummated before he returns to his home.

Just two or three weeks ago a message came from President Grant and his counselors to the effect that the father of one of our very able lady missionaries had met with a serious accident and was taken from this life. The message was forwarded to her. Her companions rallied to her support, as did also the good Saints in that district, and comforted her. I received a letter in answer to one that I wrote to her just a few days afterwards in which she too expressed herself as wanting to remain and complete her mission before returning home. She is still in the mission field.

My brethren and sisters, it fills my heart with thanksgiving when I see the faith that is exhibited by the young men and young women who go into the mission field. They are interested in the work. They want to accomplish their work in a way that the Lord will be pleased with their efforts, and I am sure that they are succeeding.

My brethren and sisters, encourage the young people to prepare themselves for the mission field, for as President Nibley said yesterday, "there is a famine in the land, not for bread nor a thirst for water, but for hearing the words of the Lord." The harvest is great and the laborers are few; the time is far spent and there is little remaining.

I pray God to bless you with every needful blessing. May he bless President Grant and his counselors, the quorum of the Twelve and all those who are engaged in this great latter-day work. I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES H. HART

Of the First Council of Seventy

I have rejoiced, my brethren and sisters, very greatly at the speeches and the music we have heard at this Conference. We have been truly fed the bread of life and by the spirit thereof, and I have felt to thank the Lord for the gift that each of our brethren has possessed at this Conference in being able to give us the measure of the word of the Lord that has been given.

It was a strong indictment against intemperance that was read at one of the sessions, and yet after experience in each of the three great departments of government I am persuaded that that indictment is not overdrawn. I have in memory the picture of a man indicted and convicted of murder being arraigned for the judgment of the court, and when I asked him if he had any legal cause to show why the sentence of the court should not be pronounced upon him, in a solemn and dramatic manner which I shall always remember, he declared that he had killed the best friend he had on earth and did not know it until he was awakened the next morning from his drunken slumbers. He appeared to be sincere. A little later he had to be committed to the insane asylum, he worried so over the fact that he had taken the life of his dear friend and left a widow and children to mourn the loss of a husband and a father who was providing for them.

I think that what we need in this country is more regard for law, constitutional law and laws passed in accordance with the Constitution of the United States. I frequently have had an opportunity to speak on the Constitution of the United States as a divinely inspired instrument, and have brought forward the testimony of such disinterested witnesses as William E. Gladstone, Premier of England, and Sir Thomas Bryce, the author of the monumental work on American Commonwealths.

There are other great Americans who enjoyed inspiration in framing the institutions of this country, and in saying this I am not denying the room for inspiration in the formation and guidance of other countries. We pray for their guidance and the guidance of the officials of not only our own nation here in America but the rulers of other nations. I have thought sometimes we have neglected some of those great characters who were instrumental in shaping the foundations of our country and those who have made comments upon them. I know that we are familiar with the work that Franklin, Jefferson and others did in connection with the framing of the Constitution of our country, but we are less familiar with the work that the great Chief Justice John Marshall did. The formation of the Constitution of the United States is really spoken of as the greatest single achievement of the eighteenth century. There was that about it that inspired Daniel Webster to love it, "to have a profound passion for it," "to cherish it day and night," "to live on its healthful saving influence," and "to trust never to cease to heed it until he should go to the grave of his fathers," "to earnestly desire not to outlive it."

Judge Marshall of Wisconsin in the case of Borgnis vs. Falk County, in a decision written by him for the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, said:

"At no period has appreciation of the great work of the fathers been more important than now. We need to sit anew at their feet, revive knowledge that the result was wrought by a body of men, representatives of the great seat of learning of the English speaking races of two hemispheres, and otherwise men of broad experience, many of whom had been students of all federal governments of all prior ages in preparation for the special task—as the historian declared, 'the goodliest fellowship of lawgivers whereof this world has record,' a body dominated by specialists, inspired by ennobling love for their fellow-men and the thought that they wrought, not for their age alone, but for the ages to come, and so sought to avoid the infirmities of previous systems of government by the people, by carefully providing that no change in letter or spirit should occur except in a particular and most deliberate and conservative way."

John Marshall, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, performed an inspired work in the framing of the Constitution of our country.

You read the 101st Section of the Doctrine and Covenants. I will not take time to read it here, the seventy-ninth and eightieth verses, and then consider the work that Marshall did in connection with the interpretation of this great document.

Marshall was not only a great man in his own age and country, but he would be considered a great man in any age and clime. Webster, in 1814, in a letter to his brother Ezekiel, said:

"There is no man in the court who strikes me like Marshall. I have never seen a man of whose intellect I had a higher opinion."

Again Webster said of him that if there was ever a human being who did not argue from the obscure to the more obscure it certainly was Chief Justice Marshall.

George R. Peck of the Chicago bar said of Marshall:

"Take him for all in all, he was the greatest judge that ever lived. By the common and unfettered judgment of the bar, lay the unanimous voice of statesmen, jurists and scholars. He was the oracle of our Constitutional law, the interpreter, the expounder and in a certain sense the maker of the Constitution. * * * Our profession looks upon him with a somewhat idolatrous feeling, but I do not think it excessive. When we consider what might have been our fate if another and not he had occupied that great seat we may well believe that providence watched over the republic."

Justice Joseph Story, a very great justice of that Supreme Court of the United States, who knew Marshall very well spoke of him and said:

"His life speaks its own best eulogy. It had such a simplicity, purity, consistency and harmony that the narrative of the events in their natural order invests it with an attraction which art need not seek to heighten and friendship may well be content to leave with its original coloring. He learned to love the Union with a supreme unconquerable love, a love which was never cooled by neglect or alienated by disappointment; a love which survived the trials of adversity; and still more dangerous trials of prosperity; a love which clung more closely to its object as it seemed less dear or less valuable in the eyes of others, a love which faltered not, fainted not, wearied not, on this side the grave. Yes, his thoughts ever dwelt on the Union as the first and best of all our earthly hopes. The last expressions which lingered on his dying lips breathed forth a prayer for his country. Such in that moment as in all the past, 'O save my country, Heaven,' was then his last. * * * He was one of those to whom centuries alone give birth, standing out like beacon lights on the loftiest eminences to guide, admonish and instruct future generations as well as the present."

It has been truly and forcibly said of him:

"Marshall found the Constitution paper and made it a power; he found it a skeleton and he clothed it with flesh and blood."

I remember hearing a great orator and judge once express the hope that he might have the leisure sometime before he passed away to read one great decision each day from the Supreme Court of the United States. If one were going to do that he might well select from the great decisions of the Supreme Court such cases as Marbury vs.

Madison, Gibbons vs. Ogden, and McCulloch vs. the State of Maryland. All these are great landmarks showing the growth of the Constitution of our country.

What we need most in this country is more respect for the Constitution of the United States and its laws and a deep conviction of the necessity of being law-abiding.

I rejoice in the testimonies that have been given in this Conference. I want to add my testimony to that which has already been given by so many in such a splendid form at this Conference. I ask the blessings of the Lord upon us in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JAMES H. MOYLE

President of the Eastern States Mission

I rejoice in the work in which we are engaged. For some reason I am impelled to say—though it is manifestly unnecessary, as President Grant needs no defense from me, but I think it is proper—that I am not only in hearty accord with his declarations relative to the enforcement of, and obedience to law; but that I have known him for nearly half a century, lived in the same Ward, associated with him in business, socially, religiously and even politically, and there has been nothing more characteristic of him than his frankness and above-board expressions. Any man who knows him will not say to the contrary. May God bless him, and may he live long to continue the splendid work which he is doing, and those also who are upholding his hands.

The Eastern States Mission is in a very healthy condition, especially the missionaries. Our winter was as open and mild as it was severe here. Branches of the Church are in a very healthy condition. I know of no better evidence of that fact, than that last year there was paid something over thirty per cent more tithing than was ever paid before in the mission, and the amount paid the preceding year was largely in excess of that of any former year. If there is anything that tests honesty and sincerity, it is the payment of tithing. Well may the old prophets have said: "Will ye rob God in tithes and offerings?" We can account for the maintenance of the payment of tithing to some extent, if not largely, because our people are generally employed by large institutions with many employes; and although hundreds of thousands, even millions, have been thrown out of employment, the honest tithepayers, I testify, as a very general rule, have not. Their sincerity, their honesty, have been so reflected, I am sure, in the stability and value of their characters that their employers have recognized the same.

The Mission has been exceptionally blessed during the past year. Indeed, I think a marvelous work has been done through the providence of God, which was commenced in this building, by broadcasting sermons and organ recitals. The hearts of the people of the East have softened marvelously in the last two years. The press has materially changed its attitude. A different atmosphere, very largely prevails. We were deeply impressed with the importance of utilizing modern agencies in the dissemination of the truth.

We organized three new departments of our activities. The first and most important, broadcasting of sermons over the radio; second, exhibiting Mormonism in a practical way in exhibitions and fairs. The largest of these exhibits was at the Eastern States Exhibition where all of the states in our mission meet annually. They have permanent buildings at Springfield, Massachusetts. Our exhibition was in a booth in the main building over which was displayed in large letters the name of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and in still larger letters, "See what God hath wrought." In the rear of our exhibit we had a small replica of the Salt Lake Temple. The booth was appropriately decorated. Streamers were used leading to the Temple, on which pertinent data were displayed concerning the Word of Wisdom, our system of educating the young, and our unequalled charity system. On a table at the entrance was an ample supply of tracts. There we distributed in eight days over 25,000 tracts. A half dozen missionaries distributed thousands of tracts daily, making friends, having conversations, and reaching people who would not permit them to come into their homes. They could not get past the butler, or the servant, ordinarily.

Then we went to the country fairs. The young artist, for such Elder Carl E. Olson (whom we made Director of Exhibitions) proved himself to be, skilfully designed, out on the green, an old oaken bucket well, over which he had written in large letters, "The well of living water," with the name of the Church above it. It attracted a great deal of attention and thousands of tracts were again distributed.

Time will not permit more on that line. I should like to tell you more about other things. We are desperately in need of missionaries and especially singers. If we are not supplied with some singers soon to take the places of those who are leaving, we shall have to give up some of the stations over which we are broadcasting the Gospel every Sabbath day. The prediction of Isaiah is fulfilled, wherein it says that "A little child shall lead them," and that the Lord would take "the weak things of the world to confound the mighty," and accomplish his marvelous works. Also the prediction in the Book of Mormon that the Gospel will be preached from the housetops is being literally fulfilled.

The first missionary who broadcast for us over the radio was Elder Carrol D. Parkinson of Preston, Idaho, a nineteen year old missionary. We had to pay for the privilege so gave it up temporarily. That was on the 11th of April last, and immediately following the great Centennial celebration in this city. We sent President Grant over a thousand clippings from newspapers; some of the largest, like the New York Times, had lengthy articles.

This great organ has been making us friends. The intelligent realize that such music can come only from a people of intelligence and elevated ideals, and not from ignorance and bigotry. And thus interest has been aroused in our people. It is certainly marvelous that where we found an opening we had without previous thought the best talent available.

The first real opening was at Wilkesbarre, Pa., a city of nearly one hundred thousand population, where two of our young elders were laboring—Elder D. Glen Brown of Provo, twenty years of age, who has been with us only seven months, and his companion John M. Anderson of Logan. They did the real pioneering, persisting in their efforts to obtain the privilege of speaking over the radio without cost. Finally the station, the oldest in the city, and the largest, was in need of something to fill in with, and the privilege was given to these young men. Notwithstanding the short notice, they met the occasion splendidly. A quartet of our missionaries sang some of our hymns which with the address was so pleasing, that they were invited to continue, and every Sabbath evening since the 18th day of May last, we have had a half hour, during which we sing the hymns of Zion and preach a sermon.

On September 10th, Elder Brown, with only two years education at the Brigham Young University, was made editor and director of radio work for the mission.

The next opening was at Wilmington, the largest city in Delaware. Sister Mary Woosley, from Malad, had won the friendship of the members of a Scottish society, partly by her piano playing; and ever since the 31st of August we have likewise broadcast there, Elder George F. Williams, of Ogden, another nineteen year old missionary, being the principal address writer and speaker. That station is the largest in the State of Delaware. It has a population of over two million within a radius of one hundred miles.

They say that there are more than thirty million people in our mission. It is the great center of wealth and of the leading educational institutions of the nation. It is singularly appropriate that in the very section where the Gospel was introduced, the most modern and effective methods should be utilized in proclaiming the Gospel. We have only about three missionaries to a million of people to preach the Gospel in this mission, but they can and are doing a marvelous work over the radio.

The next opportunity came in a still larger city, Syracuse, which has a population of more than two hundred thousand. There, another young man, Elder Earl H. Martin, was located, the only solo singer in the Mission. He won the hearts of the radio listeners by singing for several months without doing any preaching. Finally, we decided to use him elsewhere unless they permitted us to also preach. Then they gave us an hour on Sunday evening and called it a vesper service. Sometimes we deliver two sermons during the evening, with music intervening. This so aroused the other churches that they demanded the same privilege, and now we have to take turns with them.

There is no place in the Mission, where an opportunity has been given us to preach over the radio, that the privilege has been taken from us. If you will give us the missionaries, especially those who can sing, we can accomplish a great work. We have thus, in ten months, delivered 212 Gospel messages over the radio in the Mission in important and prominent cities of the East, without cost to the Church; and the work has been splendidly done by youths generally under twenty-two years. To me it is nothing short of marvelous. For some time, as we contemplated and discussed this matter, I thought that unless we could have Dr. Talmage, President Roberts or some such speaker and writer, it would be useless for us to try. They could not come to our aid. The desirability of attempting this work was pressed upon us so strongly that we concluded to utilize the material that we had at hand. If the Lord ever blessed missionaries he has those in the Eastern States Mission who have participated in this work, for they were all young and inexperienced. Some of our indifferent missionaries who could sing or write have been aroused to greater activity. Forty-one of our missionaries, some of them quite uneducated, have written addresses. Twenty-eight of them have spoken over the radio. Young ladies have written splendid addresses. Two of them have spoken over the radio. I say it is marvelous. But more marvelous and important—and more do I value it above all else—is the knowledge that I have of the divinity of this work, that God lives, that his servants, when in the performance of their duty under the call of the priesthood of God, have the inspiration of the Lord with them. He is with us, and there is a joy, a happiness and a consolation in the performance of duty, in the service of the Lord, that is inexplicable.

May we appreciate our opportunities and blessings, and may you send us missionaries who can sing, I pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The national broadcast of the tabernacle choir begins at 4:15 this afternoon. It is important, therefore, that this meeting close promptly at four o'clock, in order to permit those who desire to leave the building to do so before that time, so that the doors can be closed and absolute quiet prevail during the broadcast.

The national broadcasts of the tabernacle choir number to date approximately ninety. These have covered practically this entire nation as well as Canada. They have been transmitted to some extent at least, by short waves, to Europe. Many thousands of letters have been received expressing appreciation for these broadcasts. Some such letters have come from England.

ELDER JOSEPH W. McMURRIN

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the California Mission

I sincerely hope that the blessings of the Lord may attend me during the few moments I occupy this position.

Some of the other brethren have referred to the sensations they have had during the past three days. I have passed through all of those sensations and some I think in addition. To sit for three days not knowing what moment you are to speak is an anxious time.

I desire to read a few words given by way of revelation at the opening of the great Gospel dispensation in which we now live. The Lord says:

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say: Harken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together.

"For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated.

"And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed.

"And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

"And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.

"Behold, this is mine authority, and the authority of my servants, and my preface unto the book of my commandments, which I have given them to publish unto you, O inhabitants of the earth.

"Wherefore, fear and tremble, O ye people, for what I the Lord have decreed in them shall be fulfilled."

And the Lord says further:

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant, Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven and gave him commandments;

"And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets—

"The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh—

"But that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world;

"That faith also might increase in the earth;

"That mine everlasting covenant might be established;

"That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

* * * *

"And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth: I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh;

"For I am no respecter of persons, and will that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion.

"And also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world.

"Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

"What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same.

"For behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever."

I would like to call the attention of this congregation to the fact that in this very first revelation in the book of Doctrine and Covenants the Lord has said that the weak things of the earth should be chosen to accomplish this marvelous work to which reference has been made. It may seem a little ridiculous in the eyes of those who do not believe that the Lord God of heaven has placed his hand to bring to pass in these latter times that marvelous work which has been sung about by all the prophets, that this revelation should say, "Fear and tremble, O ye inhabitants of the earth," because of the weakness of the men and women who are called to represent the work of God in the preaching of the Gospel.

In my mind's eye I see standing in a little river, just fifty years ago this year, one of those weak missionary boys who had been appointed by his traveling companion to administer the ordinance of baptism to one who had been convinced of the truth. As he stood there in the river and thought of lifting his hand to make the declaration, "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost," how weak that poor instrument was; and in his soul he cried out to God, "Father, if there be aught wrong in this act that I am about to perform, forgive thy servant, who believes that he is possessed of divine authority."

There could not be a weaker instrument, it seems to me, on the face of the whole earth, and that humble and frightened instrument was Joseph W. McMurrin.

I have met a great many of these weak men right here in Salt Lake City who have been assigned to the California Mission, and sometimes as I have hearkened to them and have noted their weakness, they could hardly make answer to simple questions because of the fear that was in their souls. I have thought, "What can this man or this woman do in the mission field?" I am a witness that shortly after meeting them here I have met them in the mission field changed and improved. I would not want to convey the thought that they had suddenly become strong, educated, powerful men and women. No. But there had something come into their souls that had driven out fear; they had learned to know for themselves concerning the divine authority they possessed, that they had actually been called by the Lord God of heaven to represent him in the preaching of the holy Gospel, and that they were of a surety servants of the living God. Men may well tremble at the authority and power of God that has been given in this dispensation to mortal men.

I want to tell you that when men and women become possessed in their own souls of this thought, there is a strength about their presence, and about their testimony, and about their faith in God, that is marvelous and beyond my power to describe. I thank God that the promises are being fulfilled. No matter how weak we are we do bear divine authority, and through the help and blessing and power of God, and the companionship of his Spirit we are making our way, little by little, among those with whom we come in contact; and God is convincing us in our very souls that we represent him.

This is my testimony concerning the ministry that is being carried on by these weak vessels in the California Mission. We are perishing because of the lack of help. One of the First Presidency has made a declaration that has been referred to: "There is a famine in the land." He made it especially to the bishops, stake presidents and presiding men, and he said, "You are not meeting your responsibility." In attestation of the truth of this declaration I would like to say that the California Mission has been operating with 150 to 200 missionaries in years gone by, and we are now reduced to about eighty-five. We would like you brethren who select missionaries to take this declaration with you, and I hope it will ring in your ears—eighty-five. There is a famine in the California Mission because of the lack of men to proclaim the glorious Gospel of the Son of God. I hope the necessity will be met. You presiding men can change it, if you will.

God bless all, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

President of the Central States Mission

I am very happy, my brethren and sisters, to be present at another Conference of this Church. The great testimonies that have gone forth from the speakers will add, I know, to the stability and strength of the membership of the Church, and men and women will become more convinced that the Spirit of God is with these men who stand at the head and have the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ to administer in the ordinances of the Gospel.

When President Grant was addressing this congregation at the opening session the words of Solomon came to my mind: "Where there is no vision, the people perish: but he that keepeth the law, happy is he." It is through obedience to this principle that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has advanced and prospered. For a century of time it has maintained a steady growth because its people have kept the laws of God.

I was more than happy to hear the President say that the Church is out of debt. It maintains a great army of men both at home and abroad who give their time unselfishly, paying their own way, for the building up of the Church and kingdom of God. They are taken away from the great earning power of its membership for years at a time; yet we find the Church strong, strong in faith, wonderful in power, out of debt, paying its way. There is nothing else like it under the shining sun.

I draw the attention of the people of the world who have known this Church for many years and who have not been obedient to its teachings to the fact that they need the gospel of repentance, and unless they do repent they cannot inherit the glory that was promised by the early leaders to those who would accept the truth.

I know the Gospel is true. It never was so wonderful as it is today.

There never was more to do. Surely there is a famine in the land. There has probably never been a time when there was more money or more food produced, or more clothing manufactured, than at the present time in this land of America. But there is a great famine, not for bread nor for water, but for the hearing of the word of God. Elders are needed everywhere. The missionaries are working hard and doing perhaps twice the amount of work that ever was done before. We need more missionaries. We have but sixty-eight in the Central States Mission, which is one of the very oldest missions of the Church. We wish that more could come, but we will have to leave that in the hands of the Lord and with those in authority.

I endorse all that has been said in regard to the strength of the leadership of our Church. It is the Church of God in the earth. It will win, it will lead, because God our eternal Father has not forsaken it, and the power of his Spirit has been felt among our leaders, as each president has come and gone. And this Spirit has been with the membership, too, as is evidenced in the testimonies they have borne in all parts of the world, from the inception of the work until now.

I pray our Father's blessings upon us in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I asked all the Mission Presidents who have just addressed us, with the exception of Brother Moyle, to occupy only ten minutes each. Every one of them complied with my request. They spoke from three and a half to eight and a half minutes each, and for the first time in four or five years there is a little spare time at the closing session of Conference.

GEMS FROM THE DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS

I felt impressed that the splendid things contained in Section 88 of the Doctrine and Covenants ought to come before this Conference. I had several passages copied and intended to read them, but I was very pleased to hear nearly every word of them quoted by Brother Rulon S. Wells. There is, however, in that section something further which I think it well to read to you:

"For intelligence cleaveth unto intelligence; wisdom receiveth wisdom; truth embraceth truth; virtue loveth virtue; light cleaveth unto light; mercy hath compassion on mercy and claimeth her own; justice continueth its course and claimeth its own; judgment goeth before the face of him who sitteth upon the throne and governeth and executeth all things.

"He comprehendeth all things, and all things are before him, and all things are round about him; and he is above all things, and in all things, and is through all things, and is round about all things; and all things are by him and of him, even God, forever and ever."

And this from Section 84:

"And any man that shall go and preach this gospel of the kingdom, and fail not to continue faithful in all things, shall not be weary in mind, neither darkened, neither in body, limb, nor joint; and a hair of his head shall not fall to the ground unnoticed."

President Grant then presented the General Authorities and Officers and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church who were voted upon and unanimously sustained as follows:

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I rejoice exceedingly in the testimony of Brother James H. Moyle. He pleaded, oh so hard, for Brother Talmage or Brother Roberts or someone else to come to his mission and speak over the radio. We could not yield to his pleadings. We rejoice that during the last six months the Lord has seen fit to magnify the young men and the young women in the Eastern States Mission and that he has inspired and blessed them in the marvelous way he has done.

OBEY THE LAWS OF GOD

We hear a great deal about obeying the Constitution of the United States. What is the matter with our obeying the constitution of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints? What is the matter with us being honest in obeying the laws of Almighty God by paying our tithing? There are a great many people who are very active in preaching this Gospel who fail to obey it themselves. Let us obey it, and then we shall find that there is no power on earth or beneath the earth that can stop us in good works.

LOYALTY IN PREACHING THE GOSPEL

I do not believe that one missionary in every twenty that are sent into the mission field has had previous experience in missionary work. It seems to me that there should be more loyalty in preaching the Gospel than exists at the present time. I remember that when I was a young man the Church did not send boys on missions as it has to do today, but men of experience made sacrifices to go into the mission field. Men laid down almost anything that they were doing when the call came to go upon a mission. But now, if there is any excuse under heaven that we can make to stay home many of us are staying.

I want to endorse all that has been said that is calculated in its nature to inspire the leading men of this Church, all over the Church, and the members, to make sacrifices and prepare themselves to proclaim the Gospel.

THE BEST CONFERENCE

I am very happy indeed over all that has been said and done in this Conference. I pray earnestly and sincerely that the Lord will sanctify to our blessing all that we have heard. I rejoice in the fact that I have heard on all sides as far back as I can remember, "Well, we have had the finest Conference ever." It shows that the people have the spirit of the Gospel of Jesus Christ; that when they are fed the bread of life their hearts are warmed. Tears of gratitude come into their eyes for the authority of the living God, for the power that comes to the people, and it does seem as though the last Conference is always the best.

May God help us each and all to live in such way and manner that his Spirit may be our constant guide and companion, I ask in the name of Jesus and in the authority of the priesthood of the living God that I hold. May God bless the people; may he bless the General, the Stake and the Ward authorities and the officers of the auxiliary organizations throughout the Church. May he bless the missionaries at home and abroad, and may he inspire the people to do missionary work.

TO WARN OUR NEIGHBORS

I would like to call the attention of President Joseph W. McMurrin to the fact that there are three Stakes of Zion in California, that there are residing in California today probably twenty thousand members of the Church. We should remember that the Lord has told us that it is our duty to warn our neighbors and to preach this Gospel—that duty is upon all of us—we should be missionaries. There are very many men in the Church who are devoting nearly all their time outside of their daily vocations in an endeavor to bring people to a knowledge of the Gospel, although they have not been called upon missions. There are some of our Bishops who not only do their duty in their Wards, but when they find someone whom they can interest in the Gospel they preach it to him. I think one of the best preachers I have known ever since he came home from his mission as a young man is Bishop Thomas A. Clawson of the Eighteenth Ward. He is zealous in keeping his returned missionaries at work.

Let us all realize that this work belongs to each and every one of us, and let us do all in our power for its advancement.

"THE SONG OF THE HEART"

May the Lord bless our singers, not only those who belong to this great tabernacle choir, but our singers throughout the entire Church. There is no other people in the world who take greater interest in music, in singing, and in advancement along those lines than do the Latter-day Saints. Why? Because we realize that the Lord has given a revelation wherein he has said that his soul delighteth in the song of the heart, that it is a prayer unto him, and that it shall be answered with a blessing upon our heads. Let us remember the kind of songs the Lord likes, songs with the Gospel in them. I have gone to conferences where I have heard three or four anthems, with the words of which I could not agree. They were sung to good music but they were not good doctrine.

May the Lord guide us by the unerring counsels of his Spirit, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ our Redeemer, Amen.

The congregation sang, as a closing number, the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

Elder John W. Hart, President of the Rigby Stake, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned for six months.

The singing at the meetings on Sunday was conducted by B. Cecil Gates, Assistant Conductor of the Tabernacle Choir, and at the other sessions of the Conference by Edward P. Kimball.

Accompaniments and interludes were played on the great organ by Edward P. Kimball and Frank Asper.

Stenographic reports of the discourses were made by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON,
Clerk of the Conference.

An Introduction to the Study of the Book of Mormon

By J. M. SJODAHL

To be mighty interesting and illuminating

"Some of the contents of the book has appeared in the IMPROVEMENT ERA and other Church publications during the last ten years, and friends have been good enough to say, repeatedly, that they would be glad to have those contributions in some form more convenient for reference. Acting on their suggestion, I have collected some papers previously published and others that now appear for the first time, and respectfully submit them in this form to the public. In doing so, it is my sincere prayer that the testimony here offered may be of benefit to the reader, and especially to honest seekers after the truth."

Sunday Night Talks by Radio

In answer to an insistent demand the 1930 series of L. D. S. Radio Addresses given by Dr. James E. Talmage has now been issued in regular book form under the title of "Sunday Night Talks By Radio." It is printed on a good grade of book paper from type especially set for this edition, and durably bound in beautiful marbled cloth.

This book will make a beautiful as well as practical and useful addition to the library of any member of the Church. It will be especially valuable to missionaries or prospective missionaries.

A veritable epic of empire-building

The Life Story of Brigham Young

By SUSAN YOUNG GATES AND LEAH D. WIDTSOE

WITH A FOREWORD BY HONORABLE REED SMOOT

"This book presents the life story of a New England cabinet-maker, who, well into his thirties, entered upon a career that made him an empire-builder of the West; the founder of a hundred cities; the governor of one of the territories of the United States; and one of the outstanding figures of the nineteenth century."

Thus does Senator Smoot begin his enthusiastic foreword to this notable biography. "A graphic, gripping story," he terms it, and every reader undoubtedly will agree with his definition of this life of the indefatigable, indomitable Brigham Young, which was written by one of his daughters and her daughter. The entire record of the great Mormon leader is unfolded from his birth in a little Vermont town to his death at the age of seventy-seven as head of the church, the success of which was due to his courageous and arduous leadership.

380 Pages, 46 Illustrations, Bound in Dark Brown Cloth with Gold Titles.

A Thrilling Story of CENTURY ONE OF CHURCH HISTORY

HERE is a new story of "Mormonism," told with a completeness and charm that will thrill Latter-day Saints with a pride of achievement and at the same time win the admiration of the critic, be he friend or foe. In a COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH, B. H. Roberts has done a masterful piece of research and has set down the record of Century One—1830 to 1930—in a brilliant appraisal of momentous events. The reader with a sentimental interest will be fascinated with this narrative of truth stranger than fiction; the reader who approaches the new work with the critical vision of the historian will find it fair in statement, authentic in fact, copious in detail and sound in judgment.

A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH was written by Elder Roberts at the instance of the First Presidency of the Church, with a commission to make it exhaustively complete, from the remotest beginnings to the close of the Centennial Conference of April 6, 1930. The final volume ends with an account of the Conference itself, making the history technically inclusive of all that happened in Century One of the organized existence of the Church. Thus it is a fitting commemoration of one hundred years of struggle and achievement.

This monumental work is not to be confused with any former history, journal or chronicle. Though its nucleus is the history of "Mormonism" published a few years ago in AMERICANA, running serially for six years through that magazine, yet this History is NEW—new in its wealth of material, new in method of treatment and new in its physical representation of the book maker's art.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The first session of the Conference convened Friday morning, October 2nd, 1931, at 10 o'clock, with President Heber J. Grant presiding.

The great tabernacle auditorium and galleries were filled with people who had assembled from all parts of the Church.

President Grant announced that the meeting would commence by the congregation singing the hymn "We thank thee, O God, for a Prophet."

After the singing of this hymn, the opening prayer was offered by Elder LeGrand Richards, President of the Hollywood Stake.

The congregation sang the hymn, "O say, what is truth?"

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

It is a pleasure to again have the opportunity of meeting the Latter-day Saints in general conference. I rejoice in the progress of the work of the Lord.

It has been my privilege during the last six months since we were assembled here in this capacity, to visit quite a number of the stakes of Zion and to be in a number of the missions of the Church, and to dedicate a great many chapels and recreational halls in different parts of the Church.

Notwithstanding the great trouble financially all over the world I believe that as a people we are suffering less than are those in other sections of the country, for which I am very grateful to the Lord.

WORK PROGRESSES

The work of the Lord is progressing all over the world without any exceptions. We are receiving calls from the presidents of all our missions for additional missionaries.

Our missionary force has been reduced very materially on account of the present financial condition at home and abroad, but the spirit of the work is progressing splendidly, and many of the local people all over the world where we have missions are engaged actively in missionary work; and in many places local people are being installed in presiding positions, thus relieving many of the missionaries from some of the activities that they have heretofore engaged in. I rejoice in the present condition of the Church and the progress it is making.

NO NEED TO WORRY

I do not think that we need to worry the least bit about any of the Latter-day Saints suffering on account of lack of food or shelter during these hard times. I am confident beyond the shadow of a doubt that with our system of fast-day donations and the work that is being done by our Relief Society, the bishops in all the various wards, with the help of the auxiliary officers, will be able to look after those who are in real distress.

I am converted to the fact that if the Latter-day Saints as a people would actually do without two or three meals once a month, as prescribed, on fast days, and give the full equivalent to the bishop, thus benefitting their own individual health and that of their families—if they conscientiously paid a full fast day donation, each and every person giving the equivalent of two or three meals one Sunday in each month—it would fully take care of those who are in distressed circumstances.

I rejoice in the fact that from many sections of the country we have received reports that our people, as a rule, who have been honest and conscientious in the mission field, in the payment of their tithes, almost without exception are retaining their employment and are getting along all right financially.

FALSEHOODS BEING CIRCULATED

I do not know that the subject is worthy of my notice, and yet it has been suggested that it might be well to refer to the continued falsifying by some people who have been excommunicated from the Church and are going around distributing papers and documents and publishing papers that are as full of lies as an egg is full of meat. I believe that the very best liars I have any acquaintance with are those who have been cut off from the Church and cast out. They seem to be very active at the present time, making statements that our property is being mortgaged, etc., notwithstanding the fact that there is no Church property mortgaged. Any person could go down to the county court house in any of the counties and find out if the Church's property is mortgaged. There is no part of the property of any one of the wards or stakes in our Church, or of the general Church property, that is mortgaged.

These people talk about the funds of the Church having been used for individual benefit and so on, so I hear. It is only fair to say that I have never taken the trouble to read what they publish in their "New Era." It would be more properly named the "Regular Liar," instead of the "New Era." I have heard that a lie can travel around the world while truth is getting out of bed, but nevertheless truth eventually overtakes the lie and steps on it.

MONEY LOANED TO SUGAR COMPANY

The fact remains that the Church has loaned some money to the Sugar Company and it has taken a mortgage for that money, and the loan is well secured. The fact remains that in helping the Sugar Company the Church is helping itself, because the first beet sugar factory ever built in the United States of America with American machinery was built at Lehi, and the Church used its credit and borrowed the money to help build it. Yes, the Church had to borrow the money at that time. Now it does not need to borrow it. The Church is the principal stockholder in the Utah-Idaho Sugar Company, and by lending it some money and taking security on real estate, it is simply protecting its own property.

PENALIZED FOR LOYALTY

I shall be very happy indeed if in the providence of the Lord there shall be a return of prosperity for the Sugar Company. We are being penalized today in the sugar business because of the loyalty of the people in response to the appeals of the Government when sugar was retailing at 20, 25 and sometimes 30 cents a pound. We built at that time twice as many factories as we can now get beets to operate, and I suppose it is just as well that we could not get the beets during the last year or two to operate all our factories inasmuch as there is no profit in the business.

I am sure that whenever the time comes that sugar will sell at reasonable prices, so that the farmers can get a little more money for raising beets, some of our idle factories can be opened, and there will be an increase of prosperity for the farmers and the people generally, if this industry can only grow and increase.

PERSONAL PROFIT DENIED

The original sugar factory was built by Wilford Woodruff and his associates and friends mainly for the benefit of the farmers, so that they might have an increased variety of crops. That was the only object.

The idea that businesses have been established by the Church for the individual profit of men who are connected with the leadership of the Church is absolutely false. Many of us borrowed money and put it into that factory at the request of President Woodruff and lost the money that we invested.

I know something about it individually because I personally borrowed a large sum of money, bought stock, paid interest on it for five years and then sold the stock for less than one half of what it cost. I gained a whole lot of experience financially out of it and have never recovered, so far as the Sugar Company is concerned. I thought I would make this much of an explanation.

SATISFIED WITH STATUS

I remember delivering a sermon here nearly a year ago—perhaps it was longer ago than that, I do not remember the exact date—in which I referred to the fact that some people had said that if the Mormons would only do away with their belief in Joseph Smith and his prophecies they might now really, with the progress they are making and the changes they are making, etc., be counted in the Christian family.

Inasmuch as the Church to which you and I belong is the Church of Jesus Christ, established by the Savior himself through the instru-mentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith, I do not think we need to worry about being admitted into the various Christian denominations. The one thing that you and I need to worry about, and the only thing, is with regard to keeping the commandments of the Lord, living our religion as Latter-day Saints.

TRUE LATTER-DAY SAINTS

I am sure that the man who is honestly and conscientiously observing the Word of Wisdom, who is a full and honest tithe-payer, and attends to his meetings and his family and secret prayers, such a man need not worry about anything that might be said concerning this Church by apostate Mormons or anyone else.

A true Latter-day Saint is living a life that is above reproach. He is living a life that stamps him in the eyes of all honest, conscientious people as a man worthy of respect and one who can be relied upon, because the true Latter-day Saint believes in God and in Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of the world. He believes in sustaining the laws of God and the laws of his country, and in living a virtuous, true, upright life. No man can be a true Latter-day Saint without being worthy of the confidence of all men, without regard to whether they believe as he does or have any respect for his beliefs.

CHANGES AMONG GENERAL AUTHORITIES

There have been some changes made since our last conference. As you all know, Brother Orson F. Whitney, one of the Council of the Twelve, and Elder Rey L. Pratt, one of the First Council of Seventy and president of the Mexican mission, have passed away. They were two outstanding preachers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, men of great ability in proclaiming the Gospel and men of great personal inspiration. They lived lives that brought honor and respect to them and thereby honor and respect to the people that they represented as general officials.

The Presidency and Apostles have nominated, as you know, although they have not yet been ordained and set apart, Brother Joseph F. Merrill and Brother Antoine R. Ivins to fill the positions made vacant by the death of these two stalwart workers in the Church. The other changes are as follows:

CHANGES IN STAKE AND MISSION OFFICERS SINCE LAST APRIL CONFERENCE

STAKE PRESIDENTS APPOINTED

LeGrand Richards has been appointed president of the Hollywood stake to succeed George W. McCune.

Hyrum B. Calder has been appointed president of the Uintah stake to succeed Wallace Calder.

Peter J. Ricks has been appointed president of the Fremont stake to succeed George S. Romney.

Joseph R. Christiansen has been appointed president of the Moroni stake to succeed James L. Nielson.

We wish to say that Brothers George W. McCune, Wallace Calder, George S. Romney and James L. Nielson have all labored diligently and faithfully in the positions they have occupied and they have been honorably released.

NEW MISSION PRESIDENTS

George S. Romney has been appointed president of the Northern States mission to succeed Noah S. Pond, who has been honorably released after having filled a splendid mission.

Leonidas D. Mecham has been appointed acting president of the Australian mission to succeed Clarence H. Tingey, who has returned from Australia in the enjoyment of health after filling a most splendid mission.

Francis Salzner has been appointed president of the Swiss and German mission to succeed Fred Tadge. Sister Tadge has returned from the mission and Brother Tadge will undoubtedly come after his successor has been installed.

NEW TEMPLE PRESIDENT

William M. Waddoups has been appointed president of the Hawaiian temple, to succeed Castle H. Murphy, who is president of the Hawaiian mission, and who was also directing the affairs of the temple. We considered it wisdom to have Brother Waddoups return to Hawaii, where he has labored for so many years and so faithfully, to preside over the temple there.

NEW WARDS ORGANIZED

Burbank ward, Hollywood stake.
 Salmon ward, Lost River stake.
 Elysian Park ward, Hollywood-stake.
 Pasadena ward, Hollywood stake.

STAKE PRESIDENT WHO HAS PASSED AWAY

James P. Jensen, president of the San Luis stake, Colorado, has passed away after an honorable, faithful presidency there.

BISHOPS WHO HAVE PASSED AWAY DURING THE PAST SIX MONTHS

Harold Winterton, Woodland ward in the Summit stake, by an auto accident.

Lawrence Gates of the Antimony ward, Garfield stake.

THE FOUNDATION OF THE CHURCH

Coming back to the suggestion that we as Latter-day Saints do away with faith in Joseph Smith, I want to announce, as I stated on the occasion referred to, that the moment any individual or individuals shall lose faith in the divine mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith, that minute they are not entitled to be called Latter-day Saints. The whole foundation of this Church rests firmly upon the inspiration of the living God through Joseph Smith the Prophet.

When I hear the song—

“We thank thee, O God, for a prophet
To guide us in these latter days,”

I never feel as though it applies to me. I never hear it but that I feel it applies to that man who was the instrument in the hands of God of restoring again to the earth the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, the plan of life and salvation, the pearl of great price, that which is of more value than everything else in all the world, namely, the plan which if you and I live it will bring us back into the presence of God our Heavenly Father, to dwell there in joy and peace eternally.

TRUTH EVIDENCED

When anybody talks about Joseph Smith not being a prophet he should look into the great and remarkable prophecies that he uttered. He should read the marvelous and wonderful revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants which the Lord has given to us through him. I am sure when people realize that the war of the rebellion was foretold and prophesied of by him, and that he gave the world a solution, so to speak, of the difficulties which brought about the war, advocating the sale of the public lands of the country to purchase the slaves as England had done, they must recognize that he was inspired of the Lord.

PUZZLES WRITER

I remember very distinctly that in the book entitled “Figures of the Past” the man who wrote it said he could not account for Joseph Smith and intimated that he must have been partially insane. He said he had visited a place where the insane were kept, and I suppose he was on a par with the man who said that Joseph Smith received his revelations at the time he was in epileptic fits. Joseph Smith was one of the stalwarts physically. He was an athlete, a very strong man.

The wisdom of the wise shall be confounded. This same man goes on to say, in paying tribute to Joseph Smith, that of all the men he had ever met, Elisha R. Potter of Rhode Island and Joseph Smith seemed best endowed with “that kingly faculty which directs as by divine right feeble and confused souls looking for guidance.” He went on to say that great credit had been given to Ralph Waldo Emerson as being a statesman ahead of his day because of his advocating the sale of the public lands for the purchase of the slaves; but he said, “What shall we say of the Mormon prophet who advocated the same thing eleven years previously, when the heavens were clear and tranquil?” At the time Ralph Waldo Emerson advocated this course there were war clouds in the heavens.

SUPERIORITY ADMITTED

We say that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the living God and that he gave to the people a solution that would have saved that terrible fratricidal war between the Northern and Southern States.

He goes on to say :

"Such a rare human being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets. Fanatic, imposter, charlatan, he may have been; but these hard names furnish no solution to the problems he presents to us. Fanatics and imposters are living and dying every day and their memory is buried with them; but the wonderful influence which this founder of a religion exerted and still exerts throws him into relief before us, not as a rogue to be incriminated, but as a phenomenon to be explained."

He also says that with hundreds of thousands believing that he is an emissary from the Most High God we cannot dispose of him by ridiculing his name.

A MIGHTY PEOPLE

All the lies that are being told about the people today are as nothing in comparison with those that were told about the prophet. He taught the people that we would be driven from city to city, county to county, state to state and finally beyond the confines of the United States, and that we would become a great and a mighty people in the midst of the Rocky Mountains. He said the day would come when not only a city, a county or a state would be arrayed against this handful of people called Mormons, but that the day would come when the whole United States would be arrayed against them.

And we have lived to see these statements fulfilled. We have become a mighty people. We have over a thousand wards and independent branches from Canada on the north to Mexico on the south. We have more than nine hundred branches in the missions throughout the world. We have splendid edifices in our wards and branches from Canada to Mexico. We have some magnificent temples that have been erected from Canada on the north to Arizona on the south, and one splendid temple way off in the Hawaiian Islands.

The work of the Lord is progressing, the people are growing in faith and a love of the truth, in absolute testimony that Joseph Smith was in very deed a prophet of the true and the living God.

DURING THE PAST ONE HUNDRED YEARS

This Gospel has been proclaimed now for over one hundred years all over the world, in every land and every clime where religious liberty has been granted, and it has gathered out people from every denomination under heaven; and as I have remarked in my public addresses, I know of no missionary in my entire experience, although we have at times had more than two thousand in the field, that has ever returned to announce that he had found that some other religion, in England, in Ireland, or some other part of the world, was the truth, the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Our missionaries have come home during the past one hundred years with increased testimony of the divinity of the mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

We have lived to see the issuing of an exterminating order by the governor of a state to expel the Latter-day Saints; we have lived to see the army of the United States of America, because of the lies of runaway judges, come against this people. We have lived to see the property of the Church both real and personal, confiscated by the highest tribunal, under the acts of Congress; and I have picked up the paper time and time again during the litigation for the return of our property and have read in bold headlines, "The United States of America versus the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," and have laid down the paper and thanked God that the United States had placed the stamp of divinity upon the utterances of the prophet of the living God.

EXAMPLE QUOTED

Stephen A. Douglas, believing absolutely that he had within his grasp the presidency of the United States, that he would be overwhelmingly elected, presumed to say that we had destroying angels, that we were in league with the Indians, that we were in rebellion against the government, that we were setting up a kingdom of our own here with Brigham Young at the head of it. Then he was reminded by The Deseret News that the Prophet Joseph Smith had said to him when he was an obscure country judge:

"Judge Douglas, the day will come when you will aspire to the presidency of the United States, and if you ever lift your voice against my people you shall be disappointed in your ambitions, you shall die a broken-hearted, disappointed man, and the conversation of this day will stick to you until the day of your death."

DEFIES STATEMENT

He defied that statement. When? He defied that utterance of the Prophet when he felt sure that he would be elected president, and this was at a time when we did not have a single vote in the electoral college for the presidency of the United States. We were a territory without a vote and there was no occasion for this man to make the speech that he did unless he felt in his heart that he could brand Joseph Smith as a false prophet. But instead of branding him as such he brought forth one of the strongest evidences of the divine mission of Joseph Smith.

May the Lord bless us during our conference sessions. May the light and inspiration of his Spirit attend us. May we, one and all, seek every day of our lives to fully live up to the requirements of the Gospel. And I can promise you that if you do so, peace, prosperity and happiness physically, intellectually, and above all, spiritually, will attend you. I ask this blessing in the name of Jesus Christ our Redeemer. Amen.

ELDER DAVID O. McKAY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have listened with great interest to the remarks of President Grant. He has outlined a course of procedure and attitude of mind and spirit which all Israel should accept and follow.

TRY THE SPIRITS

Just as my name was announced I was turning the leaves of my Bible to find the text:

"Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God."

It is a wonderful thing to be anchored in the truth. When one is anchored to a testimony that God has spoken in this dispensation, that he has revealed his truth, there is little danger of one's becoming moved from one's place by any false theory, or any half truth, or any false accusation, that may be brought into his life. All such will affect one only as the waves affect immovable cliffs on the shore. But when one is not anchored then one becomes easily moved, at least unrestful and ill at ease. So it is necessary at all times to try the spirits, to make the test. Let the Church, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, be the measuring rod. When things do not harmonize with the truths of the Gospel we can pass them by, or at least hold them in abeyance until either their truth or falsity be established.

AN EXPERIENCE IN THE MISSION FIELD

My mind recently has been drawn to the importance of our people testing the spirit of slander, of calumny, and I would like to raise my voice this morning in warning against such a spirit. It is easy to distinguish between the spirit of slander and the spirit of the Gospel. I remember an instance in England during my late mission that may illustrate my meaning. Two Elders had gone to great expense, for them, in procuring a hall, in announcing their meeting, in distributing literature, etc. Their hopes were high on Sunday morning when as they approached that hired hall, they saw a goodly number of persons accepting their invitation. One gentleman who was dressed in the garb of a Christian divine approached the hall and was greeted by the Elder who was standing at the door. The latter extended his hand, but the minister refused, saying contemptuously, "I did not come here to shake hands with you."

"Very well," said the Elder, "you are welcome," and invited him into the hall.

When the Elder reported this to me he said: "I felt somewhat discouraged and gloomy."

I said: "You ought to be very thankful for the experience that came to you that morning. That gentleman misjudged you. You know he misjudged you. You know your sincerity. You know what you had in your heart. You know also that he was wrong in his accusation and in his feelings toward you and your people. Test that spirit and see if you have not more confidence in the work in which you are engaged than you ever had before."

THE SPIRIT OF SLANDER

And so, Latter-day Saints, test the spirit of the various accusations that are sometimes hurled against our leaders and against the Church. We have always had lies, calumny and vituperation to fight and the Church of God will always have it. Our only problem is for us to be unmoved from our station.

The scriptures tell us that,

"Whoso privily slandereth his neighbor, him will I cut off.

"He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house; he that telleth lies shall not tarry in my sight."

Slander is defined as "defamation whether oral or written." "A false report maliciously uttered and tending to injure the reputation of another."

"Slander," says Shakespeare, "whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters."

"Slander is a poison which extinguishes charity, both in the slanderer and in the person who listens to it; so that a single calumny may prove fatal to an infinite number of souls; since it kills not only those who circulate it, but also all those who receive it."

Diogenes being asked, "What is that beast, the bite of which is the most dangerous?" replied, "Of wild beasts, the bite of a slanderer; and of tame beasts, that of the flatterer."

The source of slander may be found in a depraved nature. It is a weed the roots of which find richest sustenance in a soul that is seeking to destroy his fellows. In uncultured souls there is a desire to ride on the downfall of another—their souls feed on others' failures.

It was Emerson who said, referring to this depravity in human nature, that an accident cannot happen in the street but the bystanders will be animated with the faint hope that the victim may die.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S EXPERIENCE

If we look back into history we shall find that great men have suffered perhaps more from this evil than from any other one thing. I ask you to recall the father of our country. We can think of him appropriately on this occasion as the nation will soon celebrate the two-hundredth anniversary of his birth. Perhaps the saddest experience of his life was at Valley Forge, December, 1777. His army was in winter quarters, about twenty-two miles from Philadelphia. He had fewer than ten thousand men, three thousand of whom deserted to the British.

"The soldiers were thinly clad, some half naked, others with no clothing, but tattered blankets wrapped around them. So many were sick as the result of privation, and so many were without coats, blankets, hats or shoes, that one wonders how the army held together at all."

Under this stress of critical, desperate condition it must have seemed to Washington that he was abandoned not only by Congress, then in session at York, but also by most of his friends as well. John Adams had turned against him, so also had Richard Henry Lee. General Gates insulted him by sending reports direct to Congress instead of to Washington, his superior officer.

As carrions hover around a dying creature, so in Washington's dire calamity came men to seek to crush him—men who formed what has been called the "Conway Cabal," a contemptible attempt to dishonor Washington and to supplant him by a self-asserting, arrogant schemer. Falsehoods most damnable appeared in print, and lies fell like froth from unclean mouths.

In the midst of all this Washington's imperturbable conduct makes his character shine in immortal glory.

I need not refer to Lincoln who, surrounded by men who attacked him, who accused him falsely, towered as Goldsmith has said of another,

"As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

AN IMPRESSIVE INSTANCE IN CHURCH HISTORY

One of the most impressive instances in all the world of the dire effect of calumny we have in the history of our own Church. About June, 1844, Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith and the other leaders of the Church were lied about. Enemies right in the city of Nauvoo circulated some of the worst blasphemous accusations that men could contemplate or imagine. Not only that but they began to publish vituperative slander. You know that there was one issue of the Expositor which so insulted the women and cast reflections on the men that the City Council convened and declared that printing press a nuisance. Later Joseph Smith the Prophet, in speaking to Governor Ford, said: "There is not a state in the Union that would have stood it as calmly as we, that would have put up with it one hour."

But the Prophet controlled himself and so did his associates, and only legal action was taken. He gave himself up under the protection of Governor Ford, assured by the honor of the State of Illinois that he would be protected and given a proper hearing and a fair trial. After he received what seemed to be a partial fulfilment of this promise he was released; then a false charge of treason was placed against him, and illegally and without shadow of right he and his brother were incarcerated in jail. Then lies continued to circulate. We know what the result was. The best blood of this country was shed in innocence. He knew he was innocent. He knew his rights. So did his brother Hyrum, John Taylor and Willard Richards who were there with him.

But because of lies, black and damnable, the Prophet Joseph and his brother Hyrum were martyred.

Governor Ford himself tells about the falsehoods that were circulated after the martyrdom, and how the people's minds were stirred up against them. In the midst of it all what was the Prophet's attitude? A calm, Christ-like attitude. Said he, when he was going to Carthage that evening:

"I am going like a lamb to the slaughter, but I am calm as a summer's morning. I have a conscience void of offense toward God and all men. If they take my life I shall die an innocent man, and it will yet be said of me, he was murdered in cold blood."

THE MAN OF GALILEE

What was Jesus' attitude when they circulated calumny against him? Wherever he went he was pursued by men who were his enemies. They watched him in order that they might trip him. They questioned him in order that they might get him into a trap.

"How difficult it is to speak if one is speaking in the presence of people who are watching each sentence, determined if possible to catch the speaker in error. Wherever Jesus went his conduct was scrutinized by eyes that were green with envy. Everything he did was criticized, every action called forth a storm of abuse. His enemies gathered around him like a swarm of mosquitoes biting him, like a swarm of hornets stinging him—but he never complained. They nagged at him, pelted him with abusive epithets, sowed the land with lies about him, but he never grew bitter. We have known many a good man to grow sour simply because he had been misunderstood by a few people. Many a woman has grown bitter because of unfortunate experiences with those who were her fellow-workers in the Church. This Man of Galilee knew little but misunderstanding and ingratitude and criticism and abuse; but he never complained, and at the end of the day he was as sweet as at dawn. Long before he came somebody had said that when the supreme man arrived he would submit to tribulation without complaining. As men looked upon this Man of Galilee they were reminded of the great line of the prophet, 'As a lamb before the shearer is dumb, so he opened not his mouth.'"

Brethren and sisters, what is the attitude, the spirit of the vilifier, as compared with the spirit of the Christ, the spirit of the leaders of the Church, the spirit of every true Latter-day Saint? It is better to suffer wrong than to do wrong, and if we as Latter-day Saints will but hold to the truth as it has been revealed all will eventually be well. My brethren and sisters, let me bear you my testimony that in the Gospel of Jesus Christ as it has been revealed in this day lies the hope and the salvation of the human family. I feel it with all my soul. I believe I can prove it to the satisfaction of any who will honestly and prayerfully investigate the tenets and organization of the Church.

THE TRIUMPH OF TRUTH

Then let us rally around our President who this morning said, "Hold to the truth, be true to the principles of life and salvation as revealed in this dispensation."

It has been impressively said that:

"A man cannot believe in God without believing in the final inevitable triumph of truth. If you have truth on your side you can pass through the dark valley of slander, misrepresentation and abuse, undaunted, as though you wore a suit of mail that no bullet could enter, no arrow could pierce. You can hold your head high, toss it fearlessly and defiantly, look every man calmly and unflinchingly in the eye, as though you rode, a victorious king, returning at the head of your legions with banners waving and lances glistening, and bugles filling the air with music. You can feel the great expansive wave of moral health surging through you as the quickened blood courses through the body of him who is gladly, gloriously proud of physical health. You will know that all will come right in the end, that it must come, that error must flee before the great white light of truth, as darkness slinks away into nothingness in the presence of the sunburst. Then, with truth as your guide, your companion, your ally, and inspiration, you tingle with the consciousness of your kinship with the Infinite and all the petty trials, sorrows and sufferings of life fade away like temporary, harmless visions seen in a dream."

God help us to be anchored in the truth, give us power to preach it, and power to live it. Then, when slander, calumny and misrepresentation are hurled against us, they will fall as weakened arrows against an impenetrable coat of mail.

May we ever carry forward this great work in the spirit of the Master, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I feel assured this morning that we are to have a most excellent conference because the Spirit of the Lord has been with us and has dictated the words that have been spoken. I trust that for the few moments I stand here I too may be led to say that which will be pleasing in the sight of our Heavenly Father and beneficial to you.

TESTIMONY CONCERNING GREAT TRUTHS

I am grateful for a testimony of the Gospel, for a knowledge that Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of the world, the Only Begotten Son of the living God. I know that he came into the world as its Redeemer and as the Savior of men. He brought salvation and exaltation to all who are willing to accept in faithfulness all of his teachings. Moreover, I know that Joseph Smith was called of God and was a prophet, and that he was given divine authority and spoke the truth. To him were the heavens opened. He received a visitation of the Father and the Son and was called to usher in the great last dispensation known as the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. This dispensation was spoken of by ancient prophets and by the apostles of former times. The ancient prophets looked forward to this dispensation for they knew it was to be the time of the restoration of all things both which are in heaven and which are on earth. This restoration was to come through the sending of the Gospel from heaven with the fulness of the priesthood, and all things were eventually to be set in order according to the will of the Lord.

I am grateful for the Gospel as it has come to us in its simplicity, and in its fulness, with all its power and authority, for the holy priesthood cannot be separated from the Gospel which is the power of God unto salvation. This power has again been brought to men and they have the privilege of worshipping God in spirit and in truth. How grateful I am for this knowledge, and to know that I have been reared in it. All my life it has been my desire to know the truth and to have a testimony which comes from the Spirit of the Lord, and I can say that I know that these things are true.

THAT WE MAY NOT BE DECEIVED

Our attention has been called this morning to the fact that there are many spirits abroad in the world, that we are to try the spirits. As I understand this it means that we should prove them to know from what source they come. How are we going to prove the spirits and understand which are right and which are wrong unless we ourselves are walking in the light? Unless we have been studying and pondering over the principles of the Gospel we may be deceived. If we have not had in our hearts the spirit of prayer, of faith, of humility, and have been obedient to our Eternal Father, then how are we going to distinguish between these spirits and discover what comes from God and what comes from man or from some evil source?

The Lord has marked out the way. He has given us a key to the situation. It was never the intention of our Father in heaven to leave men to grope and feel their way in darkness and that without any light to guide them, and expect them under such conditions to find their way back into his kingdom and into his holy presence. That is not the way of the Lord. All down the ages from the beginning our Father in heaven has shown his kindness for his children and has been willing to give them direction. From the earliest times the heavens have been opened, the Lord has sent messengers from his presence to divinely appointed servants, men holding the authority of the priesthood who have been commissioned to teach the principles of the Gospel, to warn the people and teach them righteousness; and these men have received this knowledge, this inspiration and guidance from these messengers from the presence of God. This is true of our own dispensation. There is no need for men to shut their eyes and feel that there is no light only as they may depend upon their reason, for the Lord has always been willing to lead and direct and show the way. He has sent, as I say, messengers from his presence. He has sent revelation. He has commanded that his word be written, that it be published, so that all the people might know it.

UNTO ALL MEN

In the very first section of the Doctrine and Covenants there are some very significant things in relation to this matter as the Lord has given it both to the Church and to the world. This revelation, known as the preface to the Doctrine and Covenants, is the preface by the Son of God himself to this great body of revelation and commandment which has been given to the Church and to the world if they will receive it for their salvation. And it begins as follows:

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say: Hearken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together."

So you see, in this introduction to this preface the Lord calls the members of the Church, the people of the islands of the sea, in foreign lands, in all parts of the earth, to listen, to give heed to the words which he shall speak, that they might receive his truth and come out of darkness. And then he says:

"For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated."

HERE OR HEREAFTER

We may wonder how that will come to pass because we understand that with the best efforts we can make in sending forth and publishing this word there are many who do not hear it. Our two thousand missionaries who are scattered over the face of the earth preaching the Gospel are very few in comparison with the millions unto whom this Gospel is to be proclaimed. But the Lord will reach the hearts of the people, his word will not fail. And I do not understand even from this wording that it is necessary that every heart be penetrated and every ear hear in this life. But if they have not heard, if this opportunity has not come to them through the preaching of the Elders and through the things that have been published in the word of the Lord that has gone forth by revelation, the opportunity is going to come to them and they must hear it in the spirit world.

And so the Lord in his kindness and mercy intends to bring these truths of this restored Gospel to every soul living or dead. In this manner every heart shall be penetrated and every ear shall hear.

"And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed.

"And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days."

THE LORD'S PURPOSE

And then farther on in this revelation the Lord declares:

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

"And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled which was written by the prophets—

"The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh—

"But that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world;

"That faith also might increase in the earth;

"That mine everlasting covenant might be established;

"That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

"Behold, I am God and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding."

SEARCH THESE THINGS

I have read from this revelation with the idea of impressing upon our minds the commandment that comes from our Father in heaven through his Son Jesus Christ who is the author of these words, that it is the duty not only of the eldership of this Church but of all the members of this Church to search these revelations and commandments, that we might know them. The Elder of this Church no matter who he is who is unfamiliar with the word of the Lord as it has come unto us through the proclamation of his Son and through his servants in these latter days, is not magnifying his calling in this Church. Moreover, it is the duty of the members of this Church to make themselves familiar with the revelations as they have been given, and with the commandments as they have been taught in these revelations, or have been presented in them and given to the people, that we might know the truth which makes us free. And if we will study them, if we will put them into practice, if we will keep the commandments of the Lord, we will know the truth and there shall be no weapon formed against us that shall prosper. There shall be no false doctrines, no teaching of men that will deceive us. There are many cults and many false faiths, there are many strange ideas in the world, but if we will search these revelations then we will be fortified against errors and we will be made strong. False teachings will have no effect upon us for we will know that truth which makes us free.

The word of the Lord which he spoke when in his ministry is just as true today as it was then to this effect, that he who will do the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine, and he will not be led astray; he will not be enticed or overcome by falsehoods and these teachings that prevail in the world which tend to destroy faith in God and his revelations.

"WHOSO TREASURETH UP MY WORD"

Let me read to you this key that the Lord gave to his disciples when he was in his ministry. Speaking of the last days, the days just preceding his coming he said:

"And whoso treasureth up my word shall not be deceived, for the Son of Man shall come, and he shall send his angels before him with the great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together the remainder of his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

Now remember, brethren and sisters, if you treasure up the word of the Lord, if you study these revelations, not merely those that are in the Doctrine and Covenants, but those that are in all the standard works of the Church, and you put into practice the commandments that are here found, you will not be deceived in these perilous times, but you shall have the spirit of discernment and you shall know the truth and shall know falsehood, for you shall have power to know the spirits of men and to understand the Spirit of the Lord.

May we do this I pray, walking in righteousness, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RICHARD R. LYMAN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

It is my purpose to make a few remarks on temperance and upon upholding the Prohibition laws.

WHAT SAYS THE LAW?

In Utah it is unlawful to import, advertise, give away, exchange, dispense, or serve liquor in any form. In fact, he who has liquor in his hand, in his home, or otherwise in his possession, violates the Utah statute. The Federal Constitution prohibits the manufacture, the sale, or the transportation of intoxicating liquors.

WHAT SAYS LINCOLN?

Abraham Lincoln has been called our greatest American. He says: "Bad laws, if they exist, should be repealed as soon as possible; still, while they continue in force, they should be religiously observed."

In this day of lawlessness and disrespect for law, my purpose is to appeal to the members of my own Church, as well as to all other good citizens, to support the laws of our state and the Constitution of our country. By disregarding or breaking the Prohibition statutes, we may bring all law into disrespect.

By taking one glass of beer, leading and influential citizens, those who direct business and are owners of property, are encouraging disrespect for all law. Just as touching the little electric exciter brings into operation the mammoth dynamo so he who drinks a single glass of liquor ought to realize that he is helping to break down those fundamental barriers which the law provides for protecting him in his rights to his own property.

WHAT SAYS SCIENCE?

In this age of science and scientific investigation, it has been demonstrated beyond question that alcoholic liquor is harmful. It has been proved that alcohol is not, as was formerly believed, merely a stimulant; it is a poison, it is a dangerous habit-forming drug. Always it produces stupor. It has been shown that alcohol has much the same effect on the human body and mind that ether or chloroform has.

The great mass of people today accept the teachings of science—that alcohol, even when taken in small amounts, is harmful. Says Professor Sims Woodhead of Cambridge: “A man under the influence of a small quantity of alcohol (not drunk I remind you) has no right to believe his own senses. He cannot trust them to give him facts, and he cannot rely upon his judgment for the interpretation of the facts.”

Experiments show that when men have taken alcohol they actually feel able to do more, and think they are doing more; but measurements demonstrate that the work they actually accomplish is considerably less and is inferior. Alcohol deceives. It deadens the power of judgment; he who uses it is no longer capable of drawing correct conclusions.

WHAT SAY WE?

Liquor may make tongues wag more freely, but the thoughts expressed are less accurate, less worth-while. Who would care to carry on a conversation even with his dearest friend if that friend were drunk or even tipsy? The use of alcohol is a curse, not only to him who indulges, but to his dependents, his kindred, and his country. To enforce Prohibition, and thus to banish alcohol as a beverage, would produce benefits immeasurable.

WHAT SAY THE DOCTORS?

Dr. C. P. Bells of Toledo says that he has in his files more than $11,000 in bad accounts of those who drank and did not pay their bills before 1918. Since that period his loss from unpaid bills has not exceeded $500.

To users of liquor, Dr. Henry Smith Williams says: “You are threatening the physical structure of your stomach, your liver, your kidneys, your heart, your blood vessels, your nerves, your brain; you are decreasing your capacity for work in any field; you are lowering the grade of your mind, dulling your higher æsthetic sense, and taking the finer edge off your morals; you are distinctly lessening your chances of maintaining health; you may be entailing on your descendants incalculable misery.”

And the famous surgeon Sir Frederick Greves remarks that “the best physical condition is impossible if any alcohol is used”—that “no man is at his best who works on even a moderate amount of liquor.”

WHAT SAYS THE CHURCH?

At the time, a hundred years ago, when Joseph Smith proclaimed to the Church and the world that strong drinks are not good for man, the daily rations of soldiers included a certain quantity of rum or whiskey. Stimulants were supposed to be necessary to fortify the soldier against fatigue and hardship, to aid him on his tedious marches, and especially to give him courage in battle. In our day, science has demonstrated that alcohol does none of these things, that its effects are the very opposite. Alcohol no longer is served to soldiers, and every effort is made to prevent them from using it.

WHAT SAY THE PAPERS?

The successful enforcement of Prohibition will reduce the amount of drunken driving. Look at any issue of the Deseret News, the Tribune, the Telegram; observe how much space is devoted to drunken driving, to the accidents resulting from it, and to court proceedings arising out of it.

A recent editorial in the Salt Lake Telegram criticizes drunken drivers and also those public officials who permit these offenders to settle their cases out of court. It scores those "who cast their deadly menace across traffic, thus threatening lives and property, but who, through a streak of good luck, escape a crash."

In an editorial dated September 27, the Tribune says Utah is bound to recognize the serious problem of drunken driving and fruitless prosecutions. The public, the police, the prosecutors, and the courts have been held intermittently to blame.

"The public contributes witnesses who refuse to testify, * * * provides the friendly influence which seeks to tamper with officials charged with enforcement; places selfish interests above public welfare; and contributes the juror who does not take seriously his responsibility."

WHAT ACCOUNTS FOR SUCCESS?

We live in an age of keen competition. There may be but little difference between the work of individuals, yet one succeeds while another fails. He wins who works a little faster, a little more accurately, a little more efficiently. Intoxicants, even in small quantities, produce that little difference which changes work—changes a life—from success to failure. This poison, alcohol, if used in only small quantities, decreases efficiency.

DO PUBLIC OFFICIALS BREAK THE LAW?

Do public officials or other leading citizens violate the law in your presence?

Some maintain that there is no moral turpitude in breaking a traffic law, for example; but that stealing horses or robbing banks is a very different and much more serious offense.

Those who steal cattle or rob banks are taking only that which can be measured with money. But when prominent and influential citizens, by their example, lead young folks into a temptation that has wrecked so many human lives, they are taking from young men and women, from their fathers and mothers, and from the Republic, something that dollars cannot measure, that money cannot replace.

WILL LEADERS LEAD?

Social and business leaders, being strong characters, are able to resist temptation; to them I make special appeal. The success of our youth demands that leading citizens live the law and set examples they desire to have young folks follow. Will they not aid the youth to acquire those sterling qualities which mean success—honesty, honor, dependability, and sobriety? For these the world is always looking, and for these the world stands always ready to pay.

WHAT CAN EXAMPLE DO?

In the days of the saloon it was continuously demonstrated that many have not the ability to resist its temptations. So by the example of those who are older, the younger generation is led into a temptation that may mean ruin; to their parents it will mean disgrace. To the nation, if the great mass of the youth become drinkers, it will mean decay.

Imagine the condition where a law-breaker has an associate law-breaker for an arresting officer, another such associate as a prosecuting attorney, and a third on the bench as the presiding judge. What must be the verdict when the law-breaker is looking into the faces of members of the jury who are equally guilty of breaking the law? Heaven preserve us from such a situation. Under such conditions the life of any nation would be short. Ruin would be certain; the end of the country would be near.

Nor does it take a great stretch of the imagination to see such conditions actually existing in our own country.

"At Milton, N. H., one night last week, ("Time", September 28, 1931) an automobile careened down the street and smashed into a telephone pole. Police approached the darkened car, peered in at a bald man, pronounced him drunk, took him to the station house. When they got him under a light and saw who he was they immediately released him, preferred no charges. He was Judge Eri C. Oakes, 42, of the State Superior Court.

"Ironically, one of the first cases on his docket the next morning was the trial of a drunken driver. A jury found the man guilty; Judge Oakes sentenced him to jail for 90 days, but did not impose fine or costs, suspended sentence until the man could harvest his crops. * * * The following day he presided at the trial of a hit-and-run driver. As the trial got under way, a court attendant tiptoed up, whispered to Judge Oakes that an assistant attorney-general of the state wanted to see him.

"With a tragic, white face Judge Oakes returned from his conference. 'I am obliged to call this a mistrial,' he said. Court attendants flocked around him sympathetically, watched him walk slowly out of the courtroom. When he got home he sent his motherless 14-year-old daughter away, climbed into bed, * * * and shot himself through the head."

For our present, serious wide-spread disrespect for law, many of our well-to-do social and business leaders are in part to blame. To their patriotism I appeal, and urge that they obey the law and support the Constitution. If bootleggers were patronized only by the vicious and the wicked, their profits and business would soon disappear.

WHAT IS OUR ANSWER?

If you are undecided about whether or not to obey the law, or uncertain as to whether or not it will be wise to participate in no functions where the Prohibition law is broken, ask yourselves (Oral Hygiene, July, 1931):

1. Does it improve young men and women morally, socially, or financially, to be drinkers of liquor?

2. Can you name well-known manufacturers who hire men who drink in preference to those who do not?

3. Can affidavits be produced from citizens who drink to prove it beneficial to their health and occupation?

4. Can evidence be produced from bankers that their deposits fell off when the sale of liquor was discontinued?

5. Will manufacturers testify that it is an advantage to have saloons near their plants?

6. Do charitable organizations have more families among non-drinkers that require assistance than among those who drink?

7. Do statistics show that a man who drinks is a better citizen than one who does not?

8. Can letters be produced from wives or mothers who pray for saloons or government depositories, that their husbands and sons may have places in which to spend their time and money?

9. Do we desire railroad engineers, chauffeurs, and those who drive air-planes to drink?!

In civilized and modern America we must preserve the young people of our nation from drunkenness. Even in Russia "tremendous educational efforts are being made to eliminate drinking from the life of the peasant and worker. Everywhere, in every station, hotel, and factory, one sees posters depicting some phase of the drink evil. Most of the younger generation won't touch alcohol in any form, and I have seen the Young Pioneers (the Communist Boy Scouts of Russia) many times attempting to restrain grown-ups from overindulgence." (The Nation, June 3 and 17, 1931.)

WHY NOT DECIDE WISELY?

I appeal to you as citizens of our nation, to decide whether you are ready to follow the dignified and glorious example of our Pilgrim fathers, who went to Church carrying their Bibles; or whether you will follow the leadership of the few of our American Legion who recently rode through the streets of Detroit swinging their bottles and shouting for beer.

I am not speaking of the great patriotic body of the Legion or of its high-minded, law-abiding leaders. I refer only to the drunken few. For the American Legion I have the highest regard. For the men who stood ready and willing to give their lives for the liberty of the world, I have real reverence. But in these days, when the greatest problem before America is lawlessness, I cannot countenance the breaking of the law by even a few members of the American Legion, or a few of any other organization.

I have before made a solemn pledge, and in conclusion I make it here. Fellow churchmen, fellow countrymen—all who are living in the land of Lincoln, to you I appeal to save our country from destruction because of lawlessness and disrespect for law. This is the covenant I have made: God helping me, I promise not to participate in any function, social or otherwise, where the law is broken; and that I will not cast my vote for any candidate on any ticket unless I have reasonable assurance that the man himself lives in accordance with the law.

The hymn, "O ye mountains high," was sung by the congregation. Elder Peter J. Ricks, President of the Fremont Stake, offered the closing prayer.

The Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The second session of the Conference commenced promptly at 2 o'clock p. m.

President Heber J. Grant presided and announced that the congregation would sing the hymn, "Now let us rejoice in the day of Salvation."

After the singing of this hymn, Elder Hyrum B. Calder, President of the Uintah Stake, offered the invocation.

The congregation sang "How firm a foundation, ye Saints of the Lord."

ELDER DAVID A. SMITH

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I am happy, my brethren and sisters, to be with you here this morning and to listen to the remarks that have been made. As a member of the Presiding Bishopric much of my time during the last year has been taken by those who find themselves distressed. In an effort to discover the reason for such distress I find that a large majority have brought that condition upon themselves through their own actions. May I give you an example?

One laboring man seeking employment was put to work at a nominal salary and he understood that he was to be employed only a few days and then would be replaced by someone else. After a week he received his check. He stated that he had purchased a radio, had paid five dollars down and agreed to pay a dollar a week, and would lose his radio unless he continued in employment.

An aged brother, past the fruitful age of life, who some years ago owned clear a very choice farm, had sufficient means to spend his winters in California. He now finds himself without a farm, too old to find employment, wondering what he is going to do. It seems that he was not satisfied with the land he had and felt that he should have more. To secure more it was necessary to mortgage that which he had. Prices did not continue as they were. His land did not produce crops as it had been producing and he soon found that he could not keep up his payments on principal and interest and taxes. He thus lost his inheritance to those who held the mortgage.

On the other hand, one of our bishops called at the office to ask advice. He had money in the bank and desired to know where he could put that money to make it safe. I inquired how this money had come to him? His answer was:

"When I came from the old country I heard your father deliver a sermon in the tabernacle in which he told the people to keep out of debt, to get a little piece of land, just enough upon which to make a home, and then save. When enough money is accumulated to buy more, buy it, but do not go into debt. Live within your means. Do without some things you would like, with the hope that in time you will enjoy those things without being in bondage during the time of enjoyment. I remembered that and secured a small piece of ground, a neighbor loaned me his team and plow to do the first plowing.

"I had a little means with which to build a modest little one-room house, and since that time I have added to my holdings." He said: "I have always produced enough on my farm to pay my tithing and my taxes and then have sufficient left to keep myself and my family in comfort, and I have never been in debt."

A few weeks ago while attending a conference I was taken to the home of a bishop, a modest, comfortable little home. There were eight children in the family. He had a small farm of about thirty acres.

I asked about conditions in his ward. He answered:

"We are not suffering, at least those of us who have not contracted debts. Some are suffering; those who have gone into debt for things they could do without are finding this to be a real hard time. I will not suffer. The Lord has been good to me. I have harvested my wheat crop—turned it into the mill and taken flour—I have enough flour put away to last me during the coming year. My potato crop is promising, and my other vegetables also. We will have sufficient food to carry us through the winter and I have enough money to pay my taxes and to fill my bin with coal sufficient to keep us warm."

I have given you two sides of a great story which is at the present time a problem world-wide—what are we to do during these times of depression? A year after the close of the World War I attended a convention in the East. One of the speakers in that convention among other sayings made the following statement:

"Our experience with the army has taught us that today the people have no love for the old conventional religion. Instead, there are selfishness and pettiness. We must do away with the false social distinction and create a new church ideal for our present needs, one with social aims worth fighting for, not a mere selfish gospel of safety. Let them lift up the better faith of the Christian life. Let them practice as well as preach fraternity and draw together in one common cause."

We may well recall that from the very beginning of the world the Lord has used two methods of calling forcibly to the attention of his children the fact that they owe obedience to him and his laws. One is that of war, destruction by the sword; the other is that of famine through which he brings us face to face with his power. It seems that under the conditions of poverty we are more apt to turn to God than we are when facing the cannon or the sword. The last war developed the fact that men were turning from God. Mammon was made their God. They seemed to console themselves in the thought that man is not actually created in the image of God, that he is a spirit, a God of love, who dwells in the heart of man, which it seems to me makes of man an infidel, for under such conditions one can create his own God and worship in his own manner. At the present time we find ourselves in a condition that has followed such periods from the very beginning, and the Lord has found it necessary to remind us, as he has others in ages past, that he will not be mocked and that it is our duty to turn again to him, to meet our obligations to him, and serve him in faith. To do this is not only a duty but a privilege with a promise of blessings.

President Grant has again urged us to pay our tithing and fast offerings. How many of us are paying an honest tithe and fast offering? I shall not mention at this time the average amount paid, but suggest that when we go home we look over our tithing and fast offering record, study it carefully, and I think many will find that although they feel they are doing a wonderful work they are only paying a mere pittance. Many of us feel that we are faithfully serving the Lord, and many are. The Lord has said that we have many things to do and many things to repent of, and that we are not pardoned because we seek to counsel in our own way.

As I travel through this Church I find many men of integrity and faith who are willing to give up all in the world they have in an effort to serve God. I am not belittling in the least their work, but there are many of us who should be following, who are leaving them to carry the load. We are not measuring up, and because of those who fail to keep the commandments of God many who are striving to serve him are required to pay the penalty with them.

My brethren and sisters, let us think of these things seriously and in the spirit of faith and humility. Time will not permit me to go into more detail. Let us study our own conditions and our own affairs, not forgetting our neighbors, plead with the Lord that he will help us overcome these conditions which are so distressing at this time. He has shown the way and given his promise. Have we faith in him? Have we faith in his servants whom we sustain as our leaders? If so, we shall not be long in finding the way out.

May his blessings be upon us. May we have wisdom and judgment and love to guide us in all that we do, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER HYRUM G. SMITH

Presiding Patriarch of the Church

I am very grateful to be present on this occasion, and trust that I may enjoy the Spirit of the Lord while I stand before you this afternoon. I enjoyed this morning's session very much, and testify that the Spirit of the Lord was present in goodly portion.

I desire to express my appreciation and gratitude for the prayers of the Saints, in my behalf, and I acknowledge the hand of the Lord in his blessings, that I am able to be present upon this occasion.

PEOPLE DISTURBED OVER FINANCIAL CONDITIONS

A great many of the Latter-day Saints have been somewhat disturbed in their feelings as to how they are going to take care of themselves financially, or how they are going to support their families. Among the chief visitors at my office seeking comfort are those having had employment and lost it. I have learned of their sympathy and their faith, which are pure and sacred, and their testimonies are of great value to them.

I am grateful for the support that has come to me through answer to prayer, for I know that the Lord has blessed us, both as a people and as individuals.

FAITH IN THE CHURCH AND ITS LEADERS

I am not discouraged or downhearted. My faith has not wavered. I still have faith in the work, and know that it is true. I have faith in the leaders of the Church, and know that they are worthy servants, that they are humble and devoted to the work of the Lord, some of them going beyond their natural strength in order to perform their wonderful tasks or to fulfil their appointments. Our missionaries, too, have been wonderfully blessed and preserved. They have been attended by the Spirit and power of the Lord. They have made many friends, and their teachings have brought conviction to many honest-hearted souls.

VISITORS FROM MANY STATES AND COUNTRIES

During the summer months a great many tourists, both members and non-members, have visited my office, people who have come from the States, and in many cases those who have come from the countries of the world and from the islands of the sea. Automobiles and good roads make these conditions possible. These friendly visits from the people both far and near are doing much to spread and establish the truth.

Many who come to my office are filled with some degree of anxiety over their conditions and their circumstances, and as a rule when people are out of work and do not know from where their needs are to be supplied, they are very humble, so that I have been instrumental, in a way, in trying to cheer and comfort those who are tried in their feelings and in their conditions and circumstances.

I bear testimony that the Lord has been very gracious to the members of the Church and that he has further promises and blessings in store for them.

DISCERNING BETWEEN GOOD AND EVIL SPIRITS

I should like also to add my testimony to the testimonies of my brethren who spoke this morning, concerning the spirits that are with us to guide, inspire, and protect us. Many people have said to me: "Brother Smith, how can you tell the difference between the promptings of the Lord, or his agencies, and the promptings of the adversary or his agencies?" They say they are unable, in most respects, to discern the difference between those promptings. I have said: "After earnest and sincere prayer follow your first impression, and you will always go right." Then they say: "Well, how can I tell which is my first impression? They are usually so close to each other it is difficult to even tell which is the first impression." Then I say: "The impression made by the Spirit that is for our guide in safety in the Church is always from a good spirit, the Spirit that proclaims and announces the truth, and the truth doesn't need an alibi or crutches to support it." So if you go back and knock down all the crutches, all the alibis, all the excuses, the ifs and ands and buts that attempt to support it, that crowd and urge us—because, as a rule, I have discovered that the adversary's agencies, in their promptings, are usually of an urging, crowding, hurrying nature; while the Spirit of the Lord and his agencies are always of a quiet, sweet, peaceful and convincing character,—so that after we have done away with all the excuses, all the alibis that usually support our experiences, we can discover which is the right spirit. The spirit of conviction, of peace and of charity, which is the love of the Lord and his work, is not in a hurry, but has time to decide, time to weigh, time to consider; does not act in haste, but in calm deliberation. We learn then the truth, and we have a guide which is a companion to every member of the Church who is faithful and true, so that we are able, through the blessings of the Lord, to receive that comfort and consolation which will support us, even in time of distress.

I bear my testimony, my brethren and sisters, that the Lord does give us this guide and this support, if we are faithful and true to him.

BLESSINGS THROUGH DEVOTION

I desire to extend to the Latter-day Saints in all the Church the blessings of the Lord, and as his humble servant I pray that peace and comfort and consolation from the Lord may come to every member of the Church. I am sure in my feelings that the Lord will continue to bless and support us, but I think he is also giving us a splendid lesson for service, while he is giving a greater lesson to the world, who know him not. He is giving us a splendid opportunity to show our faith and our works. None of us has suffered in want. We have been supplied, comforted, and sustained. We have had many blessings of the land and of the things that are produced upon it. Our comfortable and happy homes and our conditions in life all proclaim the graciousness of the Lord to his people. We can retain these blessings through our devotion to the Lord.

I pray that the Lord will continue to remember us, and especially those who have made sacred covenants in sacred places, and those who have been magnified with the power of the priesthood, which is a great honor to bear. It always brings a distressful feeling to me to see members of the Church careless and indifferent and slight their covenants and their privileges. I pray that the Lord will help us, that we may not slight our privileges, that we may be true to our covenants and hold them sacred always. I pray the Lord to bless our young people when they start out in life, that they may have strength and faith sufficient to retain their companionship and association, and be true and faithful to their responsibilities in the Church.

I desire to bless you all, and I pray the favors of the Lord upon you, upon the officers and members of the Church, the missionaries, and all who are laboring for the truth; and I declare these testimonies and pray God's blessings upon you all in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION

President of the Central States Mission

I feel very happy, my brethren and sisters, to be in attendance at this conference and I appreciate the opportunity of meeting and visiting with the Saints of God at this time.

Yesterday, when President Grant was speaking, the thought came to my mind, What does it profit a person to pray to our Heavenly Father for guidance and for spiritual strength and wisdom if at the same time that person does not reverence God's authority here in the earth? It seems to me that men could not help but recognize that it would be futile to ask God for favors and at the same time disregard the council of the Authority of the Lord Jesus Christ here in the earth. The Authorities of this Church are our Eternal Father's representatives here in the earth and if men will not abide by their instructions, how can they expect to receive instruction from God, our Father; and, yet, we do find some people who will not recognize the council of the Lord's Authority here in the earth, but, they feel that they can go over the heads of the Authority of God and get what they want direct from the Father.

I have never found in my life where the Lord ever allowed an angel even to overstep God's Authority in the earth. He did not do it himself while he sojourned in the earth and he most certainly has not changed for he is the same yesterday, today and forever. He changes not, neither does he change his principles for they are eternal truths.

These principles have been revealed to us anew in this day for our guidance and for our salvation.

I bring you good tidings from your sons and daughters who are laboring in the mission field of the Central States. A fine lot of young men and women, and they are laboring earnestly and zealously and in a creditable way for the building up of the Church and Kingdom of God in the earth. There seems never to have been a time when there was a better opportunity to do missionary work than at the present time. People are paying more attention to the calls made by missionaries and they are received better. People have more time, and I have concluded it is partly because of the unemployment, a situation that exists almost everywhere at the present time. When people are busy and when their time is employed in the making of a living, and in the acquiring of money they do not have time to listen to the Gospel plan for their soul's salvation, but now, while many of them are not employed they do have time and they are more open to conviction and give better entertainment than they usually do. As a result, more converts are obtained than we ordinarily average in our mission. Environment has much to do with the progress of men generally, and where men are surrounded by business activities they are, of course, influenced by that activity, but when they are not surrounded by business engagements and have time to devote, then they are more inclined to listen, and especially is this true when times of depression exist such as we are now witnessing.

It is the natural intent of most men and women to worship God, and they are generally found to be associated with different organizations or religious sects. Men and women come into this world with a desire to reverence God and that desire continues with them unless they destroy their possibilities through living wickedly and through lack of proper respect for our Father in heaven.

I sincerely hope and pray that the spirit of this conference may continue to abide with us as a people. We have here representative men and women from all over the Church who have come here to get instructions and advice and counsel. We ought to be a good people. We ought to be a better people. We ought to grow better, and I believe that we are growing better and that we do take advantage, to a great extent, of the opportunities these conferences offer us, as we are able to listen to the advice and counsel of our leaders, who are inspired men of God and men who are appointed to represent the work of God in the earth. President Grant, who stands at the head of this organization, is the representative of God in the earth, and those who are associated with him are also appointed to act under his direction. Men who attempt to reach God and ignore his Authority in the earth are making a mistake.

May the Lord continue to enlighten and bless us with his Spirit, and may we yield obedience to the impressions of that Spirit, I humbly pray.

ELDER MILES L. JONES

President of the East Central States Mission

My brethren and sisters, I rejoice exceedingly in the opportunity of meeting with you upon this occasion. While I would much rather have remained on my seat and listened to others, yet I realize that when we are called upon we should respond and give utterance to such words as may be dictated to us by the Spirit of the Lord.

I am happy in the work in which I am engaged, the missionary work in the East Central States. It is opening up wonderfully. During the past summer the missionaries have gone out into the country districts, especially in the county seats, and there on the county courthouse grounds and on the streets have held meetings and presented the Gospel teachings to those people. We have been instrumental in making many friends. In fact, it seems that there is scarcely any opposition wherever we go, and the foundation is being laid so that in time to come a harvest may be reaped by those who may follow after the ones who have been there this season.

It may be well for me to refer to one particular occasion. Many of you recall that years ago the Saints living upon what is known as Harker's Island, in North Carolina, built a chapel, which, about the time that it was completed, was burned down by their enemies. A few of our Saints have been faithful there up to the present time, and occasionally the Elders have visited that locality and encouraged those few people. Some time ago, when those who were engaged in delivering Book of Mormon lectures and exhibiting pictures in connection therewith visited the island, a young Elder, J. Hopkins Smith, followed these lectures with a Gospel discourse, taking the entire evening, giving a good outline of Mormonism and showing just what we believe. They had wonderful success in these meetings. Before these brethren arrived upon the island one of the leading ministers there tried by every possible means to prevent them from exhibiting these views and giving these lectures, but there was sufficient influence brought to bear that they were permitted to go ahead with their meetings. After they had completed them this divine vilified them through the press, and the Elders answered him. The editor was kind enough to say that it was an open forum and that they were entitled to the same space as was the reverend gentleman. So they answered his accusations. If I recall aright two articles were answered.

Recently I have had this young Elder visit various parts of the mission. He has been in the field now 28 months, and he desires to remain until after the conference that we are holding at Roanoke in October. He is now going from one district to another, and he desired very much, in connection with the president of that district, to visit this island again. They announced ahead of time that they would be there and hold four meetings. At the first meeting there were about five hundred people in attendance, and this same reverend gentleman attended the services. He brought with him a nice easy chair, seated himself directly in front of the stand, and was there at every session. At the closing session there were more than seven hundred people in attendance. After the services had closed this gentleman came up, shook hands with the Elders, and said: "God bless you, gentlemen. You have the truth."

That shows the change in sentiment in that locality, and we find the same condition, with very few exceptions, in practically every place that we go. I have met with a number of the prominent men in the city of Louisville and other places, and have had the privilege of conversing upon the principles of the Gospel with them. It is really pleasing to me to hear of their expressions, even in public, after our conversations. So I can say that the foundation is being laid for a wonderful growth in the Church in the states in which I have the privilege of laboring at the present time.

I rejoice in having the privilege of going into the world, even again, and assisting in this great latter-day work. I am thankful to my Heavenly Father for the blessing that I enjoy in the way of health. I have never enjoyed better health in my life than I have had while in that locality, and I am happy to say also that Sister Jones is enjoying good health and enjoying the work along with me. Your sons and your daughters are laboring energetically and earnestly in spreading this work. I am glad to meet those who have been released and who have returned home. I have met a number today, and without a single exception I have heard them say that they would be glad to come back into the field again and take up the work just where they left it off. That is the proper spirit for them to maintain, and I am happy to find them feeling that way.

I rejoice in this work. I know as I know that I live that it is the work of the Lord, that the Gospel has been restored to the earth in this day and age of the world.

Just a week ago last Monday a prominent minister came into my office, and we had a nice conversation which lasted for an hour or so. He said: "I can't understand how it is that you people have prospered and grown in spite of the opposition you have had to contend with from the very organization of your church." It didn't take very long to explain that, and I went on a little further and told him that when the Gospel was upon the earth, Christ said unto Peter: "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." When Peter and his associates were killed, that same power was taken from the earth. And when the Gospel was restored in these last days who should come but Peter, James and John to restore that power. I want to say, as I said to that reverend gentleman and bore testimony to him, that Peter, James and John have come to the earth and restored the Melchizedek priesthood. This minister turned to me and he said: "Do you believe that?" I said: "No, I don't believe it; I know it." When Jesus said: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself," they were no idle words, and they apply today.

I want to say to you, that a testimony of the Gospel is one of the greatest blessings that one can enjoy today. God bless you, my brethren and my sisters. Encourage your sons and your daughters that are in the mission field. Encourage others to come out and assist in this great latter-day work, and blessings will come to you. I pray that God will continue to bless you with every needful blessing, and I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOHN WELLS

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

I am filled with gratitude for the privilege of being here today in this conference assembly. This conference has given me encouragement, and we all need encouragement sometimes. Above all, I am filled with thankfulness to my Heavenly Father for the testimony which I enjoy and the knowledge of the Gospel that has come to me.

I desire to testify that I know this work is the work of the Lord, it is the plan of salvation, and by living its precepts we can return to our Father in heaven. I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, who came in this last dispensation for the purpose of establishing the Gospel, and this is another reason that my heart is filled with thankfulness.

This morning I desire to refer to an incident in the life of the Master which has impressed me very much. On the Tuesday before his crucifixion Christ was in the temple. Here certain Pharisees questioned him on doctrine, hoping to catch him in his words, and make him an offender of the law. Mark tells us that during this day a scribe came to him and perceiving that Jesus answered them well, he asked him: "Which is the first commandment of all?" Jesus answered him in this manner:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment.

"And the second is like, namely this, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

"And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but he:

"And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices.

"And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

The present business and financial depression has brought with it many problems that were unthought of even a few years ago. Many Latter-day Saints who have been proud of the fact that they have always been givers to the Church through its various organizations are now in poverty themselves, and the outlook for the immediate future is far from being bright. At this time of the year, when families need fuel, food, clothing, etc., the bishoprics of this Church are faced with a serious problem. They need more funds. The Church is expending large sums for benevolent and charitable purposes, and the tithes of the Church are being heavily drawn on, in response to urgent calls from members of wards who are unemployed. The bishops need more funds, more fast offerings, more donations from the members of the wards, as well as the splendid assistance of the Relief Societies.

The Prophet Joseph Smith, finding similar conditions prevailing in Kirtland, appointed the first Thursday of each month as a day of fasting and prayer. The Saints were notified to come to the meetings and bring with them foodstuffs of all kinds which were distributed to the poor. After that time it became a fixed routine of the Church to hold the fast-day meeting on the first Thursday of each month, for the purpose of bearing testimony and putting in practice the teachings of the Master concerning our fellow men, by donating funds for the poor to be distributed by the bishops. Later, the day was changed to the first Sunday of each month.

There is need in this Church for a revival of the old fast-day habit, that is, the habit of fasting and prayer on the first Sunday of each month. On this day we should all attend our meetings and bring our offerings for the poor, which should be equivalent to the value of two meals for each member of the family. This will provide a steady fund for the Bishops to use for the support of the worthy poor. We have in the Church certain proved methods of gathering and disbursing the fast offerings, without expense, and the plan has worked well since the institution of fast-day.

President Brigham Young requested that not only should fathers and mothers come to fast meeting, but their children also. Attendance at fast meeting will develop in our children the habit of giving, a habit which is slowly drifting away from us. We can show no better appreciation to our Master than by getting back to the habit of giving something every fast-day, in order that the Lord's storehouse may be properly provided.

Every bishop should see that no member of his ward suffers because of the lack of the necessities of life. He should call to his aid the Relief Society of his ward and they, at his request, should investigate cases of want and suffering and recommend to the bishop what, in their judgment, would be the proper course to pursue in each individual case or family.

Those Latter-day Saints who have previously been in the habit of giving and who are now unemployed and nearing poverty, should have the special consideration of the bishops in these trying times. If there is anyone who should have special consideration, it is the faithful tithe-payer and his family who are now without employment and in need of assistance.

Certainly, the meals for an ordinary person are worth 10c each. If only the cost of one meal were saved and the five hundred thousand members of this Church paid 10c per person on fast day, there would be $50,000.00 per month available, which is ample to provide adequately for the worthy poor among the Latter-day Saints. Those who are able to pay more should follow the old rule, that is, the equivalent of the cost of two meals per person.

Benevolence is founded on love for our fellow men. It is more far-reaching than charity. Is it not inconsistent for us Latter-day Saints to say that we love God whom we have not seen, and love not our brother whom we have seen? It is one of the outstanding characteristics of our Church to take care of our worthy poor, and our part in this benevolent duty should not be neglected. All help should be given in the spirit of kindness and love for our fellow men.

In many wards of the Church the deacons are sent to the homes of the Saints with an envelope containing a fast offering card. The family places in the envelope the amount they desire to pay for the support of the worthy poor and then bring the envelope to fast meeting. Those who do not attend this meeting are visited by the deacons the same day and given an opportunity to contribute. Fast offerings are also accepted by the bishop at the meeting house on fast-day.

A Latter-day Saint who observes the fast-day in its spirit and meaning will add to his humility, will develop in his soul a deep heartfelt sympathy and love for his fellow men; he will increase his spirituality and his brotherly kindness, and he will be kept in tune with this great latter-day work. If we would win eternal life we cannot afford to neglect our duty to our fellow men.

May we, as brothers and sisters in this Church, broaden our sympathies and during these times of stress be more diligent, attend our fast meetings, get the spirit of the occasion, the spirit of testimony. May we donate more liberally for the poor, so that there will be enough in the Lord's storehouse, or in the possession of the bishops, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and care for the widow and the orphan, so that cries of the distressed shall not ascend unto heaven unanswered.

Let us demonstrate to the Lord by our works that we are keeping the two great commandments, to love him and to love our neighbor. May his blessings attend us, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOSEPH F. MERRILL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Brethren and sisters, since I have been occupying the position of Commissioner of Education in the Church, and at these conferences, sitting on the back row of these front seats, I have learned that there are many anxious seats up this way. Particularly did I observe this last April when not until the last session were most of the mission presidents called up, Sunday afternoon. They sat through the preceding sessions, not knowing when they would be called. This morning one member of the Council of Twelve said: "Brother Merrill, you need not be worried. You will not be called until Sunday afternoon, after your name has been presented for the sustaining vote of the conference."

A POSITION OF HIGH HONOR

May I say, brethren and sisters, that a very high honor has come to me in the nomination I have received at the hands of the Presidency and the Council of the Twelve, to be a member of the Council of the Twelve. I regard this as the highest honor that can come to any man. Members of this Council are called by divine inspiration to a position in the Church that requires them to be special witnesses of our Lord Jesus Christ, the highest calling that any of us can receive. But, of course, before I can be ordained I must receive your sustaining vote. I say in all humility this is a wonderful honor. I am overwhelmed with it. I cannot fulfil the expectations of the position without hard work, without fervent prayer, the sustaining confidence and vote of the membership of the Church, and the companionship of the Holy Spirit.

A KEY TO SUCCESS

My experience has taught me from my boyhood, that service in this Church cannot be acceptably rendered except with the help of the Spirit of the Lord, and that this Spirit is given only to the worthy. All my life I have been taught that the Lord helps him who helps himself. Inasmuch as he has given us intelligence he expects us, when any duty is assigned us, to do the very best we can to discharge that duty, seeking his help in the meantime. I believe that my experience teaches me also that that help may not be received, no matter how fervent the prayer, unless the prayer is worthily made. That is to say, I must work if I am going to succeed. I must pray, if I am going to succeed. All my life I have been taught, and I have experienced the fact, that the Lord does answer the prayer of the worthy. Whenever I have prayed worthily I have never been disappointed. So I believe in prayer. I know that prayer is a source of strength and of help. I have proved this many, many times.

MEN OF DEVOTION

May I say that this honor that has come to me is very great, because the nomination that I have received expresses a confidence in me of what I have come to regard as the finest body of men that live. My work the last three or four years has brought me more or less into intimate contact with the General Authorities of the Church. I have learned that they are not only capable men, but they are very much devoted to their work; that they are very anxious that this work shall go forward as the Lord has intended it should go forward. So their lives and their energies are wholly devoted to it. They are also men of deep sympathies and great love for their fellowmen.

I have often remarked that in the position I have been occupying since coming to the Church Office Building, nearly four years ago, that I have experienced the greatest joys of my life, because I have been contacting with and laboring with people who look at the work from one point of view only, the point of view of what is best for the whole, what is best for the Church. I have not seen a single instance where selfishness or selfish interest could be observed at all. These brethren, the General Authorities of the Church, are wholly devoted to your interests, to the saving of the souls of men. I love them. I have come to regard them as God's men. So I feel wholly incapable, my brethren and sisters, of being one of their number, because of my unworthiness and because of my inability. But I have been honored with the nomination. If I am sustained in the position I shall try, as hard as I know how to try, to fulfil its obligations. I have no other interests. All my time will be devoted to the cause of this Church, forwarding its interests and those of the people as best I can.

HONORED OF GOD

I spoke of being nominated by the First Presidency and the Council of Twelve. I would not have you think for a moment, my brethren and sisters, that this is all there is to it. If this were an honor given by men only I would not feel so much overwhelmed by it. But it is an honor that comes from God. These brethren are only his agents, his instruments in the call that has come to me. This is a fact that no member of the Church will question who has received a testimony of the divinity of this work. These men are God's servants. They are his prophets and they enjoy the spirit of their calling. I have had so many evidences and so many testimonies of it that I know it to be a fact. And in humility and all sincerity I testify to you that it is a truth.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE

For several years there has been growing in me a feeling that we ought to be more and more diligent in our work, particularly with our young people. I have been laboring for many years with young people, many of whom have been more or less critical, many of whom have grown indifferent to the Church; some of whom have left the Church. I have felt that if there is anything possible that I can do, that we can do for them, to save them, it ought to be done, because in their veins flows the blood of Israel. But if they are to be saved they must save themselves, through our help and through the guidance that we can give them. No one can save another. He must save himself.

TESTIMONY THROUGH SERVICE

Now then, we have been taught, as Brother Wells has said, that this is the work of the Lord, and the strength of the Church lies in the fact that hundreds and thousands upon thousands of members of the Church know that it is the work of the Lord. How do they know it? Not perhaps by some wonderful manifestation, some great miracle. They know it because the Spirit of the Lord has come into their souls, as a result of their worthiness and their service. If we do the will of God we shall know of the doctrine. I testify, my brethren and sisters, that I know that this statement is true, and you know it is true, and you have gotten that knowledge because of the service that you have rendered. I care not in what position in the Church service may be rendered. Service in any position, no matter how humble, if faithfully rendered, brings us a testimony, the witness of the Spirit that this great work is divine.

I was in a meeting last Sunday morning with a group that was called to do block teaching in the ward where I live, and I recalled that among my earliest experiences in the Church was that of a block teacher. When a boy of seventeen, I recall that when I went out with my older brother (not a brother by blood, but a brother in the Church) and tried to do my duty, I returned home feeling an uplift that was truly remarkable in the joy and satisfaction that it brought to me. I don't know, my brethren and sisters, that I have ever rendered any service in the Church that I enjoyed more, in which I experienced more joy and satisfaction, than I did in trying to do my duty as a block teacher in the Church.

So it is all the way along the line. It makes no difference, my brethren and sisters, whether we are called to this stand, or whether we are serving in the humblest position in the Church. If we do our duty, if we serve the Lord and keep his commandments, as we have the privilege and the opportunity of doing, we shall for ourselves know that we are engaged in the work of the Lord. It is that satisfaction that gives strength to the Church and that makes us a body of men and women that does not have to rely for direction only upon the General Authorities, because if we enjoy the companionship of the Spirit we are directed in our own duties, labors and responsibilities.

KEEP YOUNG PEOPLE IN SCHOOL

Now, my brethren and sisters, may I say that we are living in more or less distressing times. There is a lot of unemployment. I have been engaged primarily in the work with the young people. We are very much concerned with this condition of idleness, particularly with the young, and so we feel that if we can keep these young people employed in school during these times of unemployment, we shall be rendering a splendid service to them. So I feel to encourage you parents, who are straining every nerve and calling upon every resource that you can command to keep your boys and girls in school, to continue doing it, for their good. Perhaps enough on that particular point.

BY KEEPING PHYSICALLY FIT

It was said this morning that we are trying to keep the Word of Wisdom. We have a wonderful course of study this year in the adult department of the Mutual Improvement Association, because it is the study of the Word of Wisdom, a study of one of the requirements of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

To render service we must keep ourselves physically fit. It is incumbent, therefore, upon every member of the Church who would serve, to try to keep physically as well as mentally, morally and spiritually fit, and that can be done only by right living. God has endowed us with intelligence. Let us use it, that we may know better how to live, that we may know better how to serve.

SECURELY ANCHORED

Now, brethren and sisters, I have talked long enough. May I say that I do hope that I can function at least in some degree to your satisfaction, but may I repeat that if I do, I know it will be because I make myself worthy of the sustaining power and help of God. I want to testify to you in all sincerity that I know that this is the work of God. Elder McKay spoke this morning of being anchored in the faith, in the Church. I have felt securely anchored since I was a boy of nineteen years. There came to me at that time, as a result of fervent prayer, of many prayers uttered through a number of long years, a wonderful manifestation that I have believed has been a savior to me. I didn't know it at the time, but within three months I was to leave home to go to school, and during the succeeding ten years of my life I was engaged in college and university work. I felt that the manifestation I received at that time was to me an absolute anchor. I cared nothing what the teachings of men were, if opposed to the doctrines of the Church, for I knew, and have known from that time to this, that the Lord God lives; that he does answer prayer; that he will sustain those who are worthy of being sustained. And this sustenance comes, of course, as a result of right living and of sincere service in his cause.

May the Lord help us to be true to our covenants. May the Lord help us to keep our eyes upon these leaders—men of God, I testify to you, my brethren and sisters, whose whole hearts are given to the fulfilment completely of the obligations that the Lord God has placed upon their shoulders in the call that he has made of them. May the Lord help us to honor our callings and our positions, whatever they may be in the Church, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JAMES H. MOYLE

President of the Eastern States Mission

I am pleased to say that in the Eastern States mission our missionaries are enjoying exceptionally good health and that the work is progressing, I believe favorably, and I know that prejudice is being removed and that we are making many friends.

In addition to the usual missionary activities we have endeavored to use modern methods of reaching the public, with marked, if not remarkable, success. Many addresses have been broadcast and hundreds more would have been delivered if we only had more fairly good singers. To my mind, one of the marvelous things that has occurred in this work is the fact that all of the 329 sermons broadcast over the radio in our mission in less than eighteen months were written and read by very young and inexperienced boys and girls. Every one of them was written by your sons and daughters, with comparatively little editing, to the enlightenment and enjoyment of many thousands of people.

Our missionary system is commanding the attention and admiration of the world. It is a wonderful means of educating your children, developing their initiative, broadening their understanding, and giving them a better conception of their possibilities. It is sad to hear some of our missionaries say that they have been praying and praying that they might be permitted to complete their missions, but finally are compelled to return home for the want of money. It is a sad mistake for a ward or a stake or quorum or wealthy members of the ward to permit such missionaries to prematurely end their missions, and especially when they have become somewhat efficient and are so anxious to remain. They are doing a glorious work for themselves as well as others.

We are also exhibiting the fruits as well as principles of the Gospel in fairs and expositions, and these young inexperienced missionaries are decorating and equipping attractive booths from which they distribute in a day thousands of tracts to people whom they could not otherwise reach. We have been successful in securing booths surrounded with prominent exhibitors, and thus have become the neighbors of all kinds of business men who are exhibiting their wares. Their frequent contact with our missionaries invariably makes them friendly. Our booths are so unusual, and with our fine young men and women who radiate the spirit of the Gospel, they arouse unusual interest and command respectful consideration. We thereby reach a very different class of people from those who ordinarily receive them in tracting and street meetings. People in the East, outside of the country, largely live in apartment houses and hotels where missionaries cannot enter, and in better residences they cannot get past the butler or maid.

Our tracts are distributed free like other advertising matter, and visitors come and carry them away without solicitation. Most of the same people would close their doors to our solicitations.

Another innovation is carried on through our newly established publicity department, through which we make personal contacts with newspaper men and thereby secure a greatly enlarged publicity of what we are doing and believe, and the same is presented to readers in a fair and respectful way. This makes Mormonism more acceptable and respected.

In this activity, as well as in the radio and exposition work, we have no one with any previous experience or training for the work. Remarkable as it is, those upon whom the responsibility is placed, however seemingly inadequately equipped, are undaunted and go at the work in faith with a will, relying on the Lord rather than their own ability, with the result that they are getting hundreds of notices and friendly articles published which would otherwise not have appeared in the papers.

But, alas, we have only two-thirds of the missionaries that we formerly had. This is even cutting down invaluable opportunities on the radio, as the loss includes some of our best singers. We have no professionals. We only ask for young people who have fairly good voices, whether they have been trained or not. Their voices are more attractive there than here at home.

This is a wonderful work. I enjoy it. It is a great pleasure, and nothing have I enjoyed more than the uplifting spiritual influence which accompanies it, to discover more thoroughly and fully the depths of the truth and philosophy of the Gospel, and to make comparisons of it with the religious systems of the world.

Bishop Wells referred to a most timely scripture today—the declaration of the Savior that the great commandment in the law was—

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

"This is the first and great commandment.

"And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

I call especial attention to the next striking statement of the Savior:

"On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

The great trouble with the social, industrial, and other systems of today is that they are not based upon either of those great commandments. If they were there would be a very different brotherhood of man existing, which must ultimately come, as no other system can be permanent.

As I recently traveled through the Ohio and Mississippi valleys I saw miles of continuous fields with rich harvests of wheat in shocks, and corn standing as far as the eye could see; and yet there is unparalleled poverty stalking in the land. Half of the gold of the world is in this nation; wealth unbounded; granaries bulging, overflowing their capacity; over-production abounding; legislation of states to prevent the production of the prime necessities of life because of super-abundance,—and yet unparalleled poverty on every side. In the Latin-American republics there are revolutions; dictators and revolutions in Europe; dynasties falling; ungodly communism in Russia; threatened socialistic revolutions in Germany and unheard of mutiny in the pride and protection of the British Isles—her navy. Nothing, practically, but the dole stands between peace and revolution in old England, that land of liberty and law observance. In our own country, in the great cities, it is not an uncommon sight to see armored cars equipped with machine guns to protect the transportation of wealth—securities and moneys—through the thickly populated streets of the city, and from one bank to another. Revolution is threatening this very nation because of the unsatisfied demand of the many for social justice, or as we would put it, the lack of brotherly love that the Savior advocated when he said to the wealthy young man, "Give unto the poor that which thou hast." Under his inspiration his followers established a Christian socialistic system in which there were no poor and no rich but all things were held in common.

That same system was revealed anew and an attempt made to establish it by the great prophet of this age, Joseph Smith. Like the former day saints they were apparently unable to live it. Then a stepping stone to it was established, the ancient law of tithing. My missionary experience has revealed to me that which I never fully appreciated before, namely; that the man who pays tithing is a Latter-day Saint. They say there are exceptions to all rules, but I haven't found an exception to this one yet. I have discovered that when one is a partial tithe payer he is only partially a Latter-day Saint, and when he doesn't pay any tithing at all he is not a Latter-day Saint, because his faith is dead—it being without works. He doesn't understand the philosophy of the Gospel, or if he does he is too selfish to yield obedience to that great beneficent law. The Lord would have us give, yes, and give in abundance, and it is only thereby that we are going to preserve the peace of the world and this most powerful of all nations. The level of intelligence of man is such that the extremes of poverty and wealth cannot exist beside each other. The cry of the father and husband for work in order that he may have food for his family cannot continue long unanswered. There is nothing that brings greater satisfaction than being of service to others. The Christianity of today must meet the challenge of the many who are weak for a greater brotherhood.

Selfish and weak as we are I nevertheless maintain that we are partially meeting that challenge and developing in a notable way real evidence of brotherly love through our willingness to render unselfish service in going on missions where we give years of our time, and great sums of money are spent without earthly compensation.

Again, our charity system is notable and unparalleled, for by it a hundred per cent of that which is contributed to charity goes to the object of charity through the unselfish and unpaid-for services of our ward teachers and bishops and our splendid woman's Relief Society. These are not temporary or spasmodic efforts; they have continued without interruption for a hundred years, and the world is coming to give us credit for our response to the needs of the poor.

Another clearly unselfish service is the vicarious work for the dead—doing something for those who can make no earthly return. The breadth and depth of that saving work is hardly fathomable. It is an unselfish earthly service, nobly conceived and unselfishly performed.

What other people are attempting such altruistic brotherly love effort?

Can we not point with pride to this evidence of being imbued with the spirit of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and are we not an example in these respects at least, of making progress in the accomplishment of the purposes of the Lord; to which might appropriately be added the payment of tithing, which I think is one of the surest tests of sincerity and honesty.

Another unique conception and practice is characteristic of Latter-day Saints, namely, the Fast Day donation, or contribution of the value of the morning and noonday meal on the first Sunday of each month for the relief of the poor. Greater stress could be appropriately placed upon its observance, as fasting is good for the body, as is also the giving, for the soul.

If that practice, common to us for a hundred years, were followed by all in the United States at 25c per meal or 50c per month for each individual, it would eliminate the cry for bread. Fifty cents a month from a hundred million would be fifty million per month or six hundred million per year, which if conserved in prosperous years, for years of scarcity, would remove the possibility of extreme poverty.

We have had ever since the days of the children of Israel in Egypt years of plenty and years of scarcity, and they will probably continue to come, and suffering will exist where there might be plenty, until that system of which I speak is established in the earth, and which I believe is nearer at hand than we realize.

Out of this great financial distress there should come some great good. Nothing could be better than a greater brotherhood, a better comprehension of the responsibilities and duties of the strong to the weak. We are our brother's keeper, and those who are strong and able and more richly endowed with the ability to do good and to accomplish the most in this life, whether physically, industrially, socially or religiously, must help those who are weak. That is the greatest problem that now confronts the world.

May the Lord help us to so live that we can enjoy his Spirit. I never was happier, I never enjoyed myself so much when striving only for selfish interests as I do now in working for the great cause of human redemption. His Spirit has been with me in this great and glorious work. It has enabled me to solve problems that I apparently could not see through and which looked dark indeed. I have gone to bed at night puzzled, but with a prayer for light and help, and have awakened in the morning with an understanding as clear as the noonday sun.

The Lord is blessing this work and those who give to its service their whole hearts, souls and minds. May he help us to so live that we may enjoy the companionship of his Spirit at all times, and have that joy and peace which accompanies it, and which I have experienced during the last two years and nine months of my life, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER CHARLES E. ROWAN, JR.

President of the Texas Mission

My brethren and sisters, I rejoice in this opportunity that I have of being here at this wonderful conference. Another evidence, to my mind, that God is still guiding his people, is the nomination of Dr. Merrill to become one of the apostles of our Church.

I am happy to bring greetings to you people from the saints and missionaries in the Texas mission, and I am happy to say to you, brethren and sisters, that with but one exception all of our missionaries are enjoying health and strength, and so far as I know, every missionary in that mission is enjoying the Spirit of the Lord and enjoying the missionary work. I have had an opportunity of visiting with every one of them within the last sixty days, and I rejoice, my brethren and sisters, as I hear them bear their solemn testimonies to the people, and hear them expound the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is an evidence to me that there is still power in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

I am happy to say to you that we are making many friends among those who have prestige and influence. I find that it is an advertisement to announce to the people of Texas and Louisiana that you are a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

I am indeed grateful to my Heavenly Father for his many blessings. If I should be called upon to spend all the days of my life in the mission field, or in his service, I would not be able to repay him for his kindness to me. I am indeed grateful to him, brethren and sisters, for the fact that I was called on a mission twenty-eight years ago; that I had the pleasure of learning the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ in the Southern States, under President Ben E. Rich; that I had an opportunity to travel without purse or scrip, and that I had many things to be thankful for. I am grateful to my Heavenly Father for the testimony that I received at that time, and as I go forward now as a missionary in the great state of Texas, I find there is a different feeling, a different attitude among the people generally, and that very largely because we are becoming better understood.

May I read to you just a moment from the scripture:

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than gold and silver.

"The rich and the poor meet together. The Lord is maker of them all. By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches and honor and life."

I have yet one individual to meet, who has been out in this country as a tourist and met our people, that has not been friendly, because they have discovered that our people, in the main, are honest; and the good name that you are establishing is making it possible for us to get into the homes of the people in the mission field.

So I rejoice, my brethren and sisters, in this great calling, and as I study the Book of Mormon, as I read the revelations contained in the book of Doctrine and Covenants, and as I read the Pearl of Great Price, my testimony becomes stronger, and I feel that there is abundant evidence to prove that Joseph Smith was indeed a prophet of God. I am happy to say to you, brethren and sisters, that your boys and girls are well and happy; that I am trying as hard as I can to protect and safeguard their health; that I am trying to stimulate them to see the possibilities of the great vision of life that is before them; and that I am trying to impress upon them the seriousness and sacredness of the call which they have received from the Priesthood to proclaim this Gospel. I have enjoyed myself immensely. Never before in my life have I done anything that I have enjoyed so much as I have laboring as a missionary in that part of the Lord's vineyard.

I am happy to say, brethren and sisters, that these men whom we sustain as our Authorities are beloved by our people; that they respect them; that they reverence them. Our people generally are a praying people, and as they pray night and morning they pray that our Heavenly Father will guide and direct these men whom we sustain as our prophets, seers and revelators; and I feel confident in my heart that he is guiding them. I hope and trust that you people will recognize the important positions that you occupy here in Zion; that you will live your religion, so that when tourists and strangers come among you they will see that you are indeed a chosen people. As you treat them with honor and with respect, and as your lives are reflected in the things that you do, you will make it possible for your sons and daughters to reach their hearts.

May the Lord bless you. May you realize the importance of a good name, and may you keep alive the spirit that you received when you were confirmed members of this Church, and may we ultimately all come back into his presence to live and grow, is my prayer, and I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER WILLIAM R. SLOAN

President of the Northwestern States Mission

"Then, say, what is truth? 'Tis the last and the first,
For the limits of time it steps o'er:
Though the heavens depart, and the earth's fountains burst,
Truth, the sum of existence will weather the worst,
Eternal, unchanged, evermore."

We have been listening to those gems of truth this afternoon, and my heart has been made to rejoice in the testimonies of my brethren.

During the summer just past, we took to the Alberta Temple 400 members of our mission to enjoy the blessings of that holy house, many of them driving as far as 1200 miles distance there and 1200 miles back. One of our brethren whose health was impaired and who had been unable to work for years, his wife prevailed on him to go to the temple. "We can't both go," she said, "but you go and get a blessing." The malady with which this brother was afflicted doctors pronounced incurable. He went to the temple and spent two days with us. The third morning he left for home, traveling 150 miles. They stopped at a hotel, and he said to one of our missionary elders: "I went all this distance for a blessing and I am going home without it."

The Elder said, "Why brother, you can't go home without it, let us drive back tomorrow morning and get your blessing." You will remember brethren and sisters, that when Peter and John were entering the temple, a poor man, born with an infirmity, lay at the gates pleading for alms; and as Peter and John entered they looked upon him, and Peter said: "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk," and he was made whole. So this brother said, "In the morning we will go back."

They drove back and they entered the temple. The President laid his hands upon this brother's head and said, "Brother, this malady, this disease, will drop from your body as a robe being discarded, and you will be made well."

I was in Klamath Falls only a few weeks ago and shook hands with this good brother and his good wife, and he said: "President Sloan, I never was better physically in my life, than I am today." He too was made whole.

Sacrifice, my brethren and sisters, brings forth blessings.

I bring greetings to you from the missionaries in the Northwest and from the far off land of Alaska. Some of you have very vague ideas regarding Alaska—its climatic condition and size. If you could transport it and set it down in the United States, it would cover almost the entire country. That is the size of Alaska. As to climatic conditions, some call it Seward's icebox, but our missionaries have been holding street meetings during the winter months in Juneau, Ketchikan, and Wrangell, with success. We need experienced missionaries in Alaska. You brethren who can afford the finances, and who have had experience, here is a glorious opportunity. Your sons and daughters in the Northwest are marvelous boys and girls; and, fathers and mothers, their love for you is becoming intensified every day they remain in the mission. They love you for that which you are doing for them.

We released a splendid lady missionary not long ago. Her home is in Cardston. When she arrived there with the caravan, they drove to the temple first, circled around the city for a few minutes, and then she said, "I want you to drive me out to the cemetery." They did so, and there, on the arm of her companion, she stood over the graves of her deceased father and mother, to give her first report of the missionary labors she had performed, hoping for this privilege, and now ready to go forth and discharge her greater responsibility.

I pray the Lord to bless us in this work, to bless these men who preside; may we sustain them with our faith and prayers and our confidence I pray, in the name of Jesus, Amen.

ELDER STEPHEN L. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am very grateful that I can believe in spiritual realities. It is not difficult for me now to accept the statements of my brethren and sisters as to their knowledge of the Gospel, as to the goodness of the Lord to them. I can believe that there are powers beyond the material manifestations of man's intellect and his force. I am grateful that God has made it possible for me to recognize the presence of his Holy Spirit. I cannot contemplate complete happiness in life without that recognition.

TOLERANT TOWARD OTHERS

While I am grateful for these blessings to myself, I am aware that there are many men in the world who do not have similar blessings.

They do not believe in spiritual realities. They do not understand the operation of the Spirit. Their hearts do not respond to impressions that come from divine sources. I regard it as unfortunate that it may be so, but I do not abuse men who have not such realization. I do not attempt to pass judgment upon them. I desire to be tolerant and merciful in my feelings toward them.

INFLUENCES THAT PERPLEX

It is in my heart today to plead for tolerance. Not all of us are raised in the same environment. Not all of mankind are subjected to the same influences. We who have been fortunate enough to have our souls touched with the testimony of Jesus, ought to be very compassionate with those who have not had such manifestations. I recognize that in the educational processes of the day there are to be found many factors which militate against spiritual training. Theories of men—and I do not deprecate them, because they are often founded upon the best investigations that men are able to make—are advanced for the solution of life's problems, and in answer to questions that perplex youth. They who are subjected to these educational processes and to the teachings of the day, are not altogether to be blamed because these teachings appeal to them; and they ultimately come to place reliance upon the philosophies, the systems and the theories which are advanced.

RELIANCE UPON REASON

The youth of today are taught to reason. Their intellects are highly trained, and they rely upon their reason. I know, and you know, that if their minds can but be kept open to the reception of spiritual truth, such truth may be made to appear reasonable to them; but they demand reason. I would like them to have reason. I would like them to understand the beauties of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I would like them to come to feel the glorious impressions that a true conception of the Gospel brings, but I know that I cannot force them to these impressions. I know that our work is not one of coercion or of compulsion. I know that it is only by sympathetic, intelligent persuasion that the minds of youth, the intelligence, the reason, the sophisticated minds of youth can be made to ultimately comprehend the glories of the revealed truths of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I plead for some tolerance in their treatment.

SYMPATHY IN TEMPTATION

I recognize that in the temptations that are presented to them they are obliged to exercise tremendous resistance, if they would keep themselves clean and spotless from the sins of the world. I know that sometimes they have not the courage to resist, and that unfortunately many fall victims to systems of enticement, the like of which all the world has never known before. In their fall they have my sympathy, and I trust that they may have the sympathy of the Church.

THE GOSPEL'S GREATER MISSION

I know that we inveigh—and rightly so—against the ills to which they are subject. We urge that they do not use tobacco, tea and coffee, and liquor. We point out in strong terms the consequences which ensue from an infraction of the Word of Wisdom, given of God. We engage in a great campaign to ban these evils from the Church, and it is well that we do so. But in our ardor, in our enthusiastic endeavor to prevent our youth from falling into these sins, God help us not to drive them out of the pale of the Church. The Lord help us not to ostracise them from our companionship and the saving grace of the merciful principles of the Gospel of our Lord and our Savior. I never want a youth who unfortunately takes to the habit of smoking to come to feel that he cannot enter with welcome the doors of our churches and the association of our church people. If there is ever a time when one needs the influence of the Church it is when, in the frailty of his human nature, he has transgressed a law of God and fallen from the standard of righteousness. I know that it might perhaps be misunderstood but I cannot help saying that I want the youth of this Church to come to know and understand that this great system of righteousness, the Gospel, is something more than just a mere campaign against tea, coffee and tobacco—important as is the abstinence from those noxious poisons to the human family.

Oh, I think so much of the glorious light of truth that God has given, of the great exaltation that he holds out to us, to come back into his presence by living the Gospel, that I would not have our youth miss the epitome of it all, the prime essentials, the glorious hopes, the rewards, the promises, that await those who live the truth and conform their lives to the teachings of the Church. I would like them all to know, however, that whenever one fails to keep a commandment he cuts himself off from so much of the glorious blessings which God has promised to the faithful.

TEMPERATE IN JUDGMENT

This is a church of free agency. Man may choose for himself. We are to disseminate the knowledge, that he may choose wisely. When we have done that adequately our duty is performed.

"Judge not, that ye be not judged," are said to be the most merciful words in all the world. We are not set to be the judges of our brethren, except in special cases. God is their judge. We are not always aware of the feelings that prompt them. We do not always know the temptations which beset them. We cannot always correctly judge of the struggles which they have. May we be temperate in our judgments. Sometimes I find myself failing to distinguish between resentment at the sin and hatred toward the sinner. There is a pronounced distinction. We are not to compromise with truth. It has been given to us to preserve in its undiluted purity and beauty.

I believe in the orthodox teachings of this Church. I do not equivocate about them, nor attempt to explain away the requirements of the Gospel of Christ. But I want the Lord to give me sympathy and mercy and forbearance toward him who, in the weaknesses of the flesh, may not always sustain these standards and principles. So, to the leaders of the Church, the men and the women who guide the organizations of this great institution, I sincerely appeal to you to be considerate and merciful in your judgments, and to go, like the Savior, out to those who are sick, and bring them in for treatment, and not confine the functions and offices of the Church only to those who are spiritually well.

I pray that God will give us all wisdom and inspiration to deal with our families as we should, to assist in the salvation of the families of others, and to ever keep within our own hearts, as well as within the portals of our churches, a welcome for him who has fallen, as well as for him whom God has blessed with purity and uprightness of living. Amen.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah."

Elder Andrew Jenson, Assistant Church Historian, pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock Saturday morning, October 3, 1931.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Saturday morning, October 3, 1931, at 10 o'clock.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

The congregation sang the hymn "Though Deep'ning Trials."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder David R. Langlois, President of the Burley Stake.

The congregation sang the hymn, "Our mountain home so dear."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The words of the first hymn that we sang this morning are by Sister Eliza R. Snow, who at one time was President of the Relief Societies of the Church. The music was composed by Brother George Careless. The words of the hymn we have just sung are by Sister Emmeline B. Wells, one of the successors to Sister Snow in the presidency of the Relief Societies. The music to this hymn was composed by the late Evan Stephens.

Personally, I am very grateful for the wonderful inspiration of our brethren and sisters who have written the words and composed the music for so many of our inspired hymns.

ELDER JAMES E. TALMAGE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

There is reason for gratification in finding one's self a member of a goodly company. We can say, as yesterday many said in their hearts, and as it has been said aforetime, "Lord, it is good for us to be here."

If we put into action the admonition of which we often sing—count our many blessings, one by one—we surely shall be surprised at what the Lord has done and is doing for us. Among the blessings for which we should be devoutly thankful is the privilege of thus assembling from time to time, in local or in general capacity, to be taught, especially to be reminded, for we have been taught personally through the many years and indirectly by recorded scriptures through the centuries; but we are apt to forget.

I note at these conferences a striking feature in the matter of the addresses that are given, in that each speaker leaves something that may serve as a rich text for those who follow him; and thus the instructions are cumulative, leading on step by step.

SANCTITY OF THE LORD'S NAME

The grand summation of the whole duty of man, as presented by the President in his opening address, can not be too closely taken to heart—that we strive to keep the commandments of the Lord. Among those commandments one in my mind at this moment is that written amidst the awe-inspiring glory of Sinai: “Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.”

The word translated into our language as “vain” is an interesting one, and its usage is instructive. “In vain” is about the only phrase and marks about the only occurrence in the English language in which the word “vain” is used as a noun. It is an adjective in common usage. It comes to us from a Latin root and meant, originally, empty and void, and as the lexicographers tell us, that meaning has been maintained through all its variations.

To take the name of God in vain, therefore, is to use that name lightly, to use it emptily, to use it without effect, so far as the intent is concerned—but nevertheless, with awful effect upon the profane user. We are apt to think that this has reference to the speaking of the name of God only, and in that particular respect the commandment is sufficiently weighty and important to us. Profanity is all too common in the world—profanity of speech.

PROFANITY IN SPEECH

But beyond this there is profanity of action, which is of greater import than the spoken word, even as the prayer of the heart is greater than the prayer of the lips. Profanity in this sense is any manifestation of disrespect or irreverence for the name of God; blasphemy consists in attributing to Deity any unworthy act or motive, or in claiming for one's self the distinguishing attributes of Deity.

I listen with horror to profane swearing. One can not escape it wholly, go where one will; that is to say, as one has to meet diverse associations one is sure to encounter it. Of profanity I have not yet heard one word of defense. It is wholly demoralizing, wholly base, to say nothing of the sacrilege and blasphemy oftentimes associated in the linking of the name of Deity with our perverse expressions.

I call to mind that Chapin has given us a thought in regard to the use of profanity. “Profaneness,” he wrote, “is a brutal vice. He who indulges in it is no gentleman. I care not what his stamp may be in society, or what clothes he wears, or what culture he boasts. Despite all his refinement, the light and habitual taking of God's name in vain betrays a coarse and brutal will.”

And yet another has said: “Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is the richer or happier or wiser for it. It commends no one to society. It is disgusting to the refined, abominable to the good, insulting to those with whom we associate, degrading to the mind, unprofitable, needless and injurious to society.”

Perhaps some of you may think my remarks are inept in this particular presence. I do not believe that the habitual taking of the name of God in vain by profane speech is a prevalent vice among the Latter-day Saints. I refer to this in passing, only, as one way in which the name of God is all too frequently polluted among men in general. But there is much beyond and behind that. Profanity of the lips, I repeat, is not the only form in which this offense appears.

ENORMITY OF FALSE SWEARING

The name of God is a means of power. He is jealous—that is to say, righteously zealous of his name, because of that for which his name stands. “And ye shall not swear by my name falsely,” he spoke through his prophet of old, as is written in the book of the law, “Neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God. I am the Lord.” (Lev. 19:12.)

But, one may say, those commandments were given in the days when the law, as distinguished from the Gospel, was dominant. Very true. The people then had to be led by the code of “Thou shalt” and “Thou shalt not,” until under the tutelage of the law, as under the direction of a schoolmaster, they were brought, once erring children, to a state of preparation for the reception of the Gospel.

But the principle involved is an eternal one. The name of God is and will ever be honored in the heavens beyond, as it is required that we honor it here upon the earth, and he honors his own name and rightly demands that we honor it also.

But another phase of taking the name of God in vain is that referred to in the scripture just cited: “And ye shall not swear by my name falsely.” How that is disregarded in the world we know. In the courts of the land, yes, I will say, with reservation, in the courts of justice, the oath is administered, “So help you God,” and we witness every day practically, instances of such solemn adjuration being disregarded as soon as spoken; we see men perjuring themselves, defiling, polluting the name of God even on the witness stand. We have come to think that perjury in our courts is something to be condoned, palliated, and in some minds extolled, if by it some personal advantage can be gained.

USING THE HOLY NAME PRESUMPTUOUSLY

I ask your attention to another way by which the name of God is taken in vain, and that by the presumption of men who profess to speak in his name without authority. The Lord has been particularly careful as to those whom he commissions to use his name, may I say, officially, and having thus commissioned a man, or any being, man or angel, to speak in his name, he, the Lord, holds himself bound by what is done by that agent if it is done righteously in his holy name.

I pray you call to mind that striking instance of the Lord’s word to Israel as the hosts were journeying through the wilderness of old. He told them what he had done for them and what he would continue to do for them, and appointed one to represent him, and said unto Israel:

“Behold, I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

"Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him." (Exo. 23:20, 21.)

Having thus placed his name in men for the accomplishment of his purposes, he has uttered words of warning time and again lest it be defiled.

"For I will not suffer my name to be polluted, and I will not give my glory unto another." (1 Nephi 20:11.)

In the days of the Gospel restoration in the meridian of time the word of the Lord was given unto the people to regard the sanctity of the name of God. Did not the Christ teach in that prayer of prayers that we should address our Father with the words of praise, "Hallowed be thy name," as of old he had declared through the Psalmist, "Holy and reverend is his name?" Unto those who had undertaken to falsely assume to speak in the name of God the Lord has uttered warnings in ancient times as in this age and dispensation. Consider these words, given by the Lord through his prophet, in August, 1831:

"Behold, I am Alpha and Omega, even Jesus Christ.

"Wherefore, let all men beware how they take my name in their lips—

"For behold, verily I say, that many there be who are under this condemnation, who use the name of the Lord, and use it in vain, having not authority.

"Wherefore, let the Church repent of their sins, and I, the Lord, will own them; otherwise they shall be cut off.

"Remember that that which cometh from above is sacred, and must be spoken with care, and by constraint of the Spirit; and in this there is no condemnation, and ye receive the Spirit through prayer; wherefore, without this there remaineth condemnation." (D. and C. 63:60-64.)

Yet in this day there are men who rise up and avow as in the name of the Lord that they have received his word, and actually presume to declare it unto the people as the word of God given by authority. But in the next section, sixty-four, as we have it recorded, the Lord again spoke:

"For it shall come to pass that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion.

"And liars and hypocrites shall be proved by them, and they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known." (D. and C. 64:38, 39.)

WE BEAR THE LORD'S NAME

And now there is yet another instance, method, way by which we are too prone to take the name of God in vain and in this connection I call your attention to the thirtieth chapter of Proverbs, verses seven to nine inclusive, and ask you to heed these words, the words of Agur, the son of Jakeh, speaking from the fulness of his heart:

"Two things have I required of thee; deny me them not before I die:

"Remove far from me vanity and lies: give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me:

"Lest I be full and deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain."

What association is there between the crime of theft and that of taking the name of God in vain, so closely brought together here? Lest I steal, and thereby take the name of God in vain—making it a double crime. Do we take the name of God in vain by stealing? Latter-day Saints, this applies to us. Is not the name of the Lord written in our foreheads? Where can a Latter-day Saint go without bearing the name of the Lord with him? And if he steal, he is stealing before the Lord, and with his name displayed, thus polluting the name of the Lord, for he has taken that name upon himself.

By way of summary:

1. We may take the name of God in vain by profane speech.
2. We take it in vain when we swear falsely, not being true to our oaths and promises.
3. We take it in vain in a blasphemous sense when we presume to speak in that name without authority.
4. And we take his name in vain whenever we wilfully do aught that is in defiance of his commandments, since we have taken his name upon ourselves.

Can we pray that prayer of Agur, the son of Jakeh: "Give me neither poverty nor riches"? The first part of it I think we can. None of us welcome poverty. But can we pray the prayer? We can say it, but that may not be praying. Lord, give me neither poverty nor riches beyond my power to bear. Do not send poverty that may lead me to steal. I fear I can not bear it. Lord, send me not riches that may make me full of conceit so that I spurn thee and say, Who is the Lord? But feed me with food suited to my condition that I may develop and be thy son in very deed.

Latter-day Saints let us remember the word of God, we must not take the name of the Lord our God in vain, for surely he will not hold us guiltless if we take his name in vain.

That we may speak and act, live and serve in his name, I fervently pray. Amen.

ELDER ARTHUR WELLING

President of the North Central States Mission

My brethren and sisters, I am proud to be a missionary of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and am very pleased to be able to report for the North Central States mission that all of our missionaries are well and busy and happy in their work.

When Jesus was asked by Pilate whether he were king of the Jews a part of his answer was:

"For this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice."

We like to feel, in a modest, humble way, like that—that for this cause came we into the world, that we might testify of the truth that God, our Father in heaven, lives; that Jesus, our elder brother, gloriously resurrected, lives; that these two heavenly beings have condescended to again appear in these last days to our Prophet, and have taught him concerning the things necessary to life and salvation.

We are not in the world to find fault with those who find it difficult to believe as we would like to have them believe. Ours is not a message of criticism nor of argument, but we do love to testify in deep humility of what we believe to be the truth.

Like the brethren who have reported here, we find friendship everywhere taking the place of misinformation and prejudice of the past. We rejoice in the wonderfully beneficial effects of radio broadcasts from this city and the impressions made upon tourists who visit here. The world is full of our friends, but, my brethren and sisters, in spite of that, it seems to me the work of carrying the message of Mormonism to the world is just begun. They find it difficult to believe as we believe about the things which we regard as fundamental to life and salvation.

Like the other brethren, we too have been on the air a few times in a modest way, and we have tried one small exhibit at a fair, with satisfactory results; but in the main we are plodding along, trying to reach the people personally, individually, in their homes, in their cottage meetings; trying to find an opportunity, where they have radios perhaps, to arrange a little group meeting in which they may listen to the Tabernacle Organ, or the Tabernacle Choir, or one of the speakers of the General Authorities here at home; and by such methods as that to reach the homes and the hearts of the people, for there are many who like to hear more about the truth.

I would like to tell you a lot about things in our mission, if time permitted, but I know it does not. I would just like to say, in passing, that if heaven holds no joy—should we ever be fortunate enough to reach there—greater than the joy I have in trying to preach the Gospel, or teach the people what we understand the Gospel to be, I shall be perfectly happy and satisfied.

I love the people with whom it is my privilege and honor to associate. I love the work. It is the most satisfying thing I have ever yet found.

I want to waive that thought, however, for a very brief reference, if I may, to what has been mentioned several times already—the times of stress in which we live. There is a little angle to that to which I would like to devote attention. Blessings of adversity—I like to think that. Do you remember the story of the marriage feast? I won't take time to repeat it but it seems to me we are approaching conditions like that. The man who before must prove the oxen which he had bought, or must go to inspect the farm which he had lately purchased, has time now, if we approach him in a right spirit, to listen to some of the things we would like him to listen to.

Those who are lovers of Dickens' works will remember the lines with which he opens The Tale of Two Cities: "It was the best of times; it was the worst of times," and so on. And I submit, my brethren—particularly those who preside—it seems to me we are facing conditions like that now. We learned yesterday that this is a good time to pursue our educational work here at home. I ask you, in real sincerity, if you do not think it may also be a good time for missionary work, not only from the standpoint of the people of the world who have a little more time to listen, but from the standpoint of the men to be sent out from Zion to teach the truth. Most of us have to wear clothes and eat some food whatever we do, and many of our young people spend a little money here and there one way and another. If they are not in school and if they are not wage-earners, contributing something to the much needed funds of the family, would it be very much more expensive to maintain them in the mission field than here at home? We are constantly striving for economy, both of means and of time—the few there are of us, only fifty-one or fifty-two—in the mission in which I serve, and there are millions of people to be reached. And so we believe that economy of both time and means is a cardinal virtue. “Dost thou love life,” wrote Franklin, “then do not squander time; for it is the stuff life is made of.” And in these trying times we emphasize economy of means as well. I would therefore like to urge upon you consideration of the question if this be not also a good time, from the standpoint of the expense involved, for missionary work.

And now, in conclusion, with apologies to General Foch. These blessings of adversity, of which there are plenty—drouth, unemployment, grass-hoppers, and all—we have experienced them in the North Central States mission; but, although, as the Marshal said, his right was in retreat, and his left was broken, and his center was wavering, and so on—so it may be with us. We suffer under the continued depression and unemployment, and we are withering under the blight of the drouth, and we are still, as is perhaps the case in all the world, struggling against doubt and uncertainty and depression. But, my brethren and sisters, the situation is excellent, as the General said. So far as we are concerned we shall attack, not in criticism, not militantly, but in deep humility and in testimony of the truth, for which we go into the world. And may the Lord add his blessings and speed the right, we humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

A vocal solo, “My faith in Thee,” was rendered by Sister Lottie Spencer Davis.

ELDER J. GOLDEN KIMBALL

Of the First Council of Seventy

I feel more like saying, this morning, “Cheer up, the worst is to come.” All I know, brethren and sisters, is what I feel, what I sense, what I hear and what I see. I know of no better way to make this clear to you than to relate an incident that happened in my missionary experience, at the time I was appointed to preside over the Southern States mission. I succeeded Elder William Spry. There was only a few days notice given me. The brethren failed to inquire regarding my financial condition, my wife and children, my physical condition, or whether my teeth were all right, etc.; they just appointed me without asking me any questions, and I had faith enough to go. The itinerary was made out by Elder Spry to visit those conferences which occurred only once a year, as the mission covered eleven states. We had the means to go through that mission only once a year. In fact, when Elder Spry turned the mission over to me he handed me thirty-five dollars. I said: "Is that all you've got?"

"Yes."

"How do you get your money?"

"Why, we go to the Lord and ask him."

"Well," I said, "I don't think he is very liberal." (Laughter)

The first conference appointed was in West Virginia. I rode all day and all night on the train, and we took no berths in those days. I arrived at Crow's Nest. It is the only place I remember in the South, because it was so lonely and desolate. The Elders who were to meet me had returned because the train was six or seven hours late, so I had to find my way to the conference as best I could. I wasn't very well. I climbed the mountain and stopped with a coal miner. He treated me very kindly. The next morning I started for the conference. I had not then received the spirit of my appointment. As I approached the top of another mountain I went into the woods to pray and I told the Lord all about it. I don't think I have been able to pray like that since. When I got through praying, I did not see anything; I failed to hear anything, but there was something came over me, a happiness, a joy, that it isn't possible for mortal man to express. I suppose it was a heavenly feeling; I was actually so overjoyed and so happy that I whistled. I haven't whistled since. The twenty miles that I walked was the happiest time I have ever had. That is how I felt. I know because I was clothed upon with the Holy Spirit. I have regretted more than I can express that the same sensation has not come to me with the same power since.

I had another experience. It was prior to my going on this mission. We were involved in speculation. If we had had our way we would have owned a large holding in Canada. We got into that mess. After having gone through that experience we were as near hell as a man will ever get if he is honest. An honest man is in hell when he is in debt. I know all about the feeling. I went through the mill of the gods, and it grinds slowly, but it grinds fine. If you have anything left when they get through with you, you have had a happier experience than I have had.

Well, it was on that occasion that I made a public declaration in the Logan tabernacle—foolish it may have been. We were able to pay all our personal obligations, although it took everything we had in the world—years of hard work, fifteen years in Bear Lake pioneering—and we exchanged it all for a 320 acre farm in Cache valley. We had two hundred acres of grain and one hundred tons of hay, all ready for harvest, and were sold out at the court house door for thirty-eight hundred dollars and a thousand dollar judgment. That farm some years afterwards was sold by David Eccles, who became the owner of it, for thirty thousand dollars. I speak of this so that you will understand the dream.

After making my declaration in the Logan tabernacle, that I would never doff my hat and be servile to any man because of his money, that night I had a dream. I am not a dreamer; I believe in dreams when they come true, and I haven't any use for them until they do. It was very vivid. I haven't forgotten it, and it has been nearly forty years since it occurred. I have not repeated it but a few times. The devil appeared to me at the northeast corner of the Temple block. I was not very well acquainted with the devil. Brother Maeser used to tell us he was a great general; the man that I saw, and I seemed to know he was Satan, was of great personality in appearance, in height and bigness; he was dark and swarthy and seemed to be a real man. When he looked at me with those black eyes they pierced me to the soul. I trembled as I did in the woods when I was filled with the Holy Spirit of God. I trembled from head to heels with fear. He repeated what I had said at the Logan tabernacle. The Spirit of God came on me and thrilled me from crown to toe. I told him I would not bow to man. I then became frightened and ran like a coward. I was arrested and put in jail for four years. I saw myself come out of jail. My clothes were threadbare. I was thinner than I am now, if such a thing can be possible; but I was free. In four years from that time our creditors stripped us to the skin, and that dream came true. I do not want any more dreams of that kind.

I am in sympathy with the people. I know we have all been foolish. I am foolish. I don't think there is a bigger fool than an old fool. A man who has had experience ought to know better. One of my brethren said to me—and he is a man so kind and gentle that I had every reason to believe he would extend to me a little sympathy—I told him of one of my last speculations and he said: "If you are as big a sucker as that you ought to take your medicine." I said: "I am taking it, and it is not sugar-coated either." (Laughter)

I met a banker a few weeks ago—we were very friendly. Thank the Lord, I do not owe that bank anything, but I owe another bank. (Laughter) I said: "How are things going?"

"Well, we are taking everything but their suspenders."

I thought afterwards that I should have said to him: If that bank hasn't got any more elasticity than my suspenders, I will throw them in. (Laughter)

My brethren and sisters, in a few words I desire to say to you that I think the things of the world are better advertised than the things of God. When I hear those beautiful voices over the radio, advertising the things of the world, I am wonderstruck. If there is anything under heaven they do not advertise, and give it away at a dollar a week, I do not know what it is. By the time they get through with us—the "Lucky Strike" puts over their wonderful music—no wonder smokers' mouths water after hearing it. Men, boys, and girls who form the habit and have the appetite, I do not believe it is in our power to sympathize with them, as foolish as it is to form a habit of that kind and then try to overcome it of themselves. They can not do it. God has to help them. They have to go to the Lord. We are up against those things. I don't feel like it is right when a man is in hell, to stand over him and say: "Well, son, you are in hell. Get out as best you can. Sweat it out; swim or drown." It does not sound Christ-like to me.

I pray God to soften the hearts of the people. They are, doing wonderful things and they are going to do wonderful things. We have the organization. We have the inspiration. We have the knowledge. We know how to take care of people, if the Lord will soften our hearts and help us to give and keep giving. I pray the Lord, while the people are giving, that he will soften the hearts of bankers. As long as you can pay your interest and pay your taxes you are safe, but I want to tell you if you don't pay it they will foreclose to protect the bank and its depositors. As I was once told: "Business is business, believe it or not." I am thankful to the bottom of my heart. At my age, I would be as helpless and dependent as a child if it wasn't for the Church and its protecting care over me.

God bless the Church. God bless his servants and help them to see and understand, and above all, help us, O God, to understand people, that we may be patient, that we may be long-suffering, that we may be gentle, that we may not listen to things that are told us, until they are proven to be true. God bless you. Amen.

The congregation then arose and sang the first two verses of the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Temple Block Mission

The lovely lessons that have been given to us at this session of our conference will find lodgment in our hearts. Elder Talmage's thought that we should cultivate a deeper reverence for God will find in us a ready response; and Elder Welling's message that adversity should inspire us with greater faith in divine providence is a fine truth. Elder Kimball says that we should seek the Spirit of God as we travel the road of life, that we may be able to meet the battles and to overcome weaknesses. What would we do, if we did not have the Lord to help us?

Not long ago we had the pleasure of entertaining a Chinese priest of the religion of Buddha. He came to Salt Lake City with a letter of introduction from a noted scholar of the University of Tokyo, who had also visited our city. After a very delightful time at our home, I brought the distinguished guest to these grounds to see the buildings and to hear the great organ. As we stood before the west door of this old building, he asked if it were a place for worship. I replied that it is, and with that, he removed his hat and asked that his companion remove his. Said he in Chinese: "We are entering a holy temple of the God of the Christians." We entered the building, and I made no explanation of its history and use, but with my guests, kept silence, for I could see that the Chinese visitor and his companion wished to say nothing. Something of the spirit of beauty and prayer came over us all, and I felt that we were worshipping.

I feel that we do not reverence our sacred buildings enough; that in our meetings there is often too much noise and confusion. To this tabernacle and to all our tabernacles, we come to hear the word of God, for every building we erect and dedicate to God, is a building for holy worship. The old tabernacle of the ancient Jews had an altar which was sacred. From these emanated the Spirit and word of God. So from this altar goes forth the word of God to all who will listen. It is a house of prayer and every meeting house built by the Latter-day Saints is a house of prayer.

In attending our Sunday evening sacrament meetings I sometimes wonder if we really carry with us from our homes the desire to lift our thoughts to God during an hour of service. A part of the service is the administering of the sacrament or the Lord's Supper. There we enter into a covenant with our Father in heaven. In our act of partaking of the sacrament is there the spirit of reverence and worship? And during the entire meeting, are our thoughts given in thanksgiving and praise for the blessings we have from God who loves us all? This is an important question for you and me to answer.

I recently read a book entitled "The Story of St. Michele." At the close of one of the chapters are these words: "What we keep, we lose; what we give away, we keep forever." These words express a divine truth, for as we give to God in thought and deed, the gift comes back to us ten-fold, yea, one hundred fold. So it is in all life.

We should cultivate reverence for the things of God, and remember that every human being is a child of God and is, therefore, naturally a divine spirit. We should speak to our fellow men with reverent thought and expression; we should carry into the houses of the Lord a reverence which comes from the true spirit of worship. A beautiful lesson of reverence is conveyed in the teachings of Jesus as found in twenty-fourth chapter of St. Luke. I will read it:

"And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?"

"And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them,

"Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

"And they were told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

"And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

"But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed they had seen a spirit.

"And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?"

"Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.

"And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet,

"And while the yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye here any meat?"

"And they gave him a piece of broiled fish, and of an honeycomb.

"And he took it, and did eat before them.

"And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.

"Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures.

"And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:

"And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

"And ye are witnesses of these things.

"And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

"And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

"And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

"And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy:

"And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God."

These words express the eternal truth that Christ our Lord has risen, and has sent you and me forth to proclaim the fact unto the world. He has endowed you and me with power from on high, and the expression of this will of God, this power of God, comes in holy reverence for God's name and house; for God's home and children. May we grow in this spirit and remember the words of Paul to Timothy:

"Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

"For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

May we be blessed to this end and go forth with that joy and happiness that comes from within when we reverence and bless his holy name, Amen.

ELDER CLARENCE H. TINGEY

Recently returned from presiding over the Australian Mission

My brethren and sisters, I am almost overwhelmed in my attempt to respond to this call, and yet one could scarcely feel insecure and uncomfortable, surrounded by such a vast concourse of friends.

As President Grant announced, Sister Tingey and I have just returned from the Australian mission. Those of you who have had missionary experience know that all of our audiences in the mission fields are not friendly nor sympathetic. I have enjoyed immensely my labors in the Australian mission, and delight now in representing the good people of that land in this conference session.

We have some very splendid Saints throughout Australia, and they are working zealously and faithfully in the performance of their labors. I think in all of my association I have not met better men and better women than some of those who are holding positions of responsibility in the Church in that mission.

I have enjoyed also, far beyond my power to express, the companionship I have had with the young men who have been sent to us as missionaries—beautiful specimens of manhood, deeply endowed with the spirit of their callings. They are accomplishing a wonderful work in proclaiming the message of peace in that land.

Australia is a large country. Many people, when reference is made to it, look upon it as merely one of the islands of the sea; but quite contrary to that, it is a great continent. I was interested in President Sloan's reference yesterday, comparing the size of Alaska with that of the United States, wherein he stated that were Alaska placed over the United States, it would cover all of that portion west of Washington. If Australia were placed over the United States you would not be able to see the United States. We have one branch in our mission which is twenty-seven hundred and fifty miles from our mission headquarters. We have another branch one thousand miles north of our mission headquarters; and still another one thousand miles south.

To keep a group of men laboring in unison, and to keep a body of Saints in harmony, extending over a vast country of that sort, requires considerable help on the part of the Lord, and I am grateful to acknowledge here before you that we have had that help, and the work in that land is growing and progressing rapidly.

Unfortunately, Australia has experienced conditions which are not pleasant, financially and industrially, far greater than we are seeing here; and I hope we never see the conditions in the United States that we now have in that land. But the astonishing thing about it all, to me, is that while some of our people have been affected by it, they have stood unquestionably above the vast majority of the people of that land. Our tithes have fallen somewhat, but not in keeping with the exact reduction in the actual wage earnings of the people. There has been a definite reduction of more than fifteen per cent in the wages of the people. The tithing of our Saints has not fallen that much. I think it is a fulfilment of the promise given of the Lord that he would preserve his people, and I know that he is doing it in that land.

I hope and pray that the conditions which are now facing us will not be too severe to bear, even as has been stated by former speakers in this conference. I am reminded of an old German proverb which says: "The hard is the good." We are facing hard times, but they are good times, my brethren and sisters—good times because they are making us think more soberly, more sincerely, more deeply, into the things of life.

I was reading an article in the Literary Digest just yesterday in which this very thought is given, and it is declared that the people of the United States are making a greater demand for better literature, better types of entertainment, better ways of spending their means; and all of this, I think, speaks for progress and development.

I believe frankly that this Church, with two or three years of meager privation, will become stronger as a body, and its people will become more faithful; their testimonies will increase more abundantly. We need this, I think, definitely.

I want to bear witness before you, my brethren and sisters, that my stay in the mission field was the most enjoyable time of my life; that I return to you now with a more convincing knowledge that God lives than I have ever had before in my life. I want to bear testimony also, and I have reason to bear this witness because of a manifestation which was given me in the mission field, that our leader, President Heber J. Grant, is in very deed the one who is divinely and rightly selected to lead this people. I know it, and I can say no differently and be honorable before my God. I thank him for his leadership, and I hope and pray that the Lord will so sustain me that I will never turn a hand other than to give him aid and assistance.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters, and this Church, and particularly its leaders, with inspiration and revelation, that we may grow to be all that the Lord expected that we should be, I ask, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER RULON S. WELLS

Of the First Council of Seventy

"We believe the Bible to be the word of God, as far as it is translated correctly. We also believe the Book of Mormon to be the word of God."

I think I may safely add that we also believe the book of Doctrine and Covenants and the Pearl of Great Price to be the word of God. The scriptures have been given to us by our Heavenly Father for our guidance, for our instruction. The great work of the Lord is one of educating his children, and these are the text books from which we are to learn the ways of the Lord.

I think we may also say that salvation is rather synonymous to the term education, for we read in our scriptures, in the inspired words of the prophets, that we can gain salvation no faster than we obtain knowledge. It should be our purpose, then, to grow in the knowledge of God and in good works, day by day.

The Bible and these other scriptures are the words of eternal life, concerning which it has been said that "Heaven and earth may pass away, but my word shall not pass away." All shall be fulfilled. For this purpose they are given unto us. A great many people, in investigating the scriptures and searching in them, do it rather for the purpose of wresting them, and putting upon them private interpretations, or endeavoring to disprove them. It ought to be remembered that the Bible and the books of the inspired word are not given to us for the purpose of teaching us astronomy, geology, chronology, or any of these particular sciences. But they do have a specific purpose of educating us in the things of God. Education is important to all mankind. No man can be saved in his ignorance. How grateful we ought to be for that army of men and women who are engaged in our public school systems, our teachers, the teachers of our children, for our professors, for our scientists, for our inventors and discoverers; for these too are servants of God, engaged in the great task of educating mankind.

If we are, however, to be educated in the higher branches of education—and by that I mean those particular ones that are of necessity excluded from our public schools on account of our differing opinions—if we are to be educated in those things particularly that pertain to the things of God, we need a particular kind of teachers. For this purpose we need apostles and prophets. We need inspired teachers—men who speak as they are moved by the Holy Ghost, for “no man knoweth the things of God but the Spirit of God.” As well might a man try to teach chemistry or algebra without knowing them as to undertake the teaching of the things of God without the Spirit of God. It cannot be done in either case.

The Apostle Peter tells us something of the importance of this truth. Says he:

“We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts;

“Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

“For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.”

That is what we believe, and that which they spoke under that divine power and influence is the word of God. Such should be our teaching and such should be our teachers in these higher branches of education.

Education, then, is the purpose of the Almighty, and we are here in God's great school. Our education did not begin when we entered the school rooms, neither does it end when we emerge from these institutions of learning. And as we come forth from them we very appropriately celebrate the affair by commencement exercises, for it is another commencement for which we have been preparing ourselves.

When I speak of education I mean that all-round education which contemplates the full development of all our faculties—physical, mental and spiritual—that we may indeed become like God. It is for this purpose he has sent us here. We are in attendance at God's Great School—a school of experience in bodies of flesh and bones—the earth life school with all of its potentialities for development and growth. And when we emerge from this great school and are called hence, let us hope that we will have so far advanced in our education and training that we may receive our diplomas, and then, that suitable commencement exercises may also be given: for this is indeed still another commencement as we enter into that still higher institution of learning, God's Great University, wherein we may continue to learn until we shall attain to that perfection which is contemplated in the words of the Savior: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

Is this secular education which we receive in our public schools an essential part of our education? Most assuredly. If we have any rational idea of God we must conceive that he is a great scholar, a scientist, an inventor, a discoverer, with full knowledge of the forces of the universe, a chemist, a mathematician. He who framed the universe is surely educated along all these lines.

Fortunately for us we have been formed and fashioned in his image, not only in his physical image but also in his divine attributes; and these attributes may be developed to their God-like proportions. But they may also be distorted and perverted until they become vices. The attributes that we have inherited are all good—there are no bad ones, but we may pervert, distort and counterfeit them until they appear as vices. The thing then to do is to cultivate the genuine and reject the counterfeits, for these are the devil's counterfeits and he has counterfeited every one of them. Let me illustrate for a few moments.

Economy is a divine attribute. In the economy of God there is no waste. A God-like attribute, but men have distorted it until it does not resemble the divine attribute at all. And what is that distorted form, that devil's counterfeit? It is stinginess. God isn't stingy but he is economical. There are some people who think they are economists when in fact they are only stingy—too stingy to educate their children and send them to places of learning, places, particularly, where they can be taught the things of God. They are too stingy sometimes to send their sons and daughters out into the mission field, sometimes too stingy to properly clothe them and give them the proper nourishment, too stingy to pay their tithes and their offerings. That is not economy. Don't be stingy but be economical.

Another thing is acquisitiveness, that quality whereby we are enabled to acquire property and surround ourselves with the comforts of life. What a splendid thing it is! Think of what the Lord has acquired! "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." But this too may be perverted, and it becomes, under the power of diabolical influences, one of the greatest vices. And what is that? It is greed, it is avarice, that soul-cankering vice; it is the love of money, that thing which lies at the very root of all evil, for which men will lie, will cheat, will misrepresent, will steal, will kill. Read the newspapers, and you will find abundant proof of this. It is the leading cause of strife, of bloodshed and all the horrors of war. Surely "the love of money is indeed the root of all evil." And yet, after all it is only a perversion, distortion or a counterfeit of the divine attribute—acquisitiveness, more commonly called frugality or thrift.

Again, fear is a divine attribute. What, fear a divine attribute? Yes, indeed! Even God would fear to do evil. Burnt children very properly fear the fire. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Fear is that wholesome attribute which inspires the prayer, "Deliver us from all evil." But the devil has his counterfeit. And what is it? It is cowardice. Don't be a coward. Be not afraid of the face of man but fear God and keep his commandments.

This, however, is not the greatest of attributes. The greatest attribute of all is love. Love is the biggest thing in the world. It is a panacea for every ill, a cure for every malady. And love casteth out fear. Conceive if you can, the great love of God. "God so loved the world that he gave his Only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Think of that pure love of Christ. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." The nearest approach that we see to this divine love is, I think, the unselfish love of a mother for her children. The more exalted and glorious the attribute is, the more contemptible and vicious is its counterfeit. Lust is the devil's counterfeit, the very embodiment of everything that is vile. "And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity." Charity which is the pure love of Christ.

Let us now consider Faith. A sectarian minister—I don't think he was orthodox—once said to me: "Mr. Wells, I don't like that doctrine of yours that you call faith. Just think, to believe everything you hear. It is a positive weakness—a vice." Very true, so it is; but this is not faith; it's the devil's counterfeit—credulity. Where would this not lead us if we were to believe everything we hear? What does faith require? What shall we believe? The answer is: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Believe in his Gospel which has within it the power of God unto salvation. Believe the truth. His Gospel is the truth. Don't believe liars or deceivers. Faith is that inherent divine attribute which is cultivated by doing his will and which enables us to discern the truth. The Savior tells us that his sheep hear his voice and follow after him but a stranger they will not follow. Then what is faith? The Apostle Paul tells us in his epistle to the Hebrews: "Now faith is the substance (or assurance) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." What are the things we are hoping for? Are we hoping for the sordid things of this world? For the gratification of evil desires? Then do we hope in vain. But if our hope is that inspired by the teachings of our Lord, the hope of life beyond the grave, of a reunion with loved ones that have gone before, a life of joy and happiness in the realms above, eternal life in the presence of God, then are our hopes founded upon the truth. Faith then is the assurance that God gives us that our exalted hopes shall be realized. It is one of those divine attributes which we have inherited with all the others from our divine parents. It is a part of his image in which we were created and should therefore be cultivated but its counterfeit should be rejected.

Many illustrations of the divine or genuine attributes which under evil influences are counterfeited and distorted into vices might be elaborated but I will merely cite a few for your reflection:

Pride becomes vanity.
 Self esteem becomes egotism.
 Praise becomes flattery.
 Courage becomes foolhardiness.

All good things are counterfeited. Our government issues currency as a legal tender, in various denominations—one, two, five, ten, twenty, fifty and hundred dollar bills and of still larger denomination—but some devil will make counterfeits and endeavor, sometimes successfully, to palm them off as genuine. The government also issues coins of gold and silver from its mints but some devil will take a baser metal and gild it over with gold and likewise palm it off for genuine.

Some people say they are not religious; they are not religiously inclined. They don't mean what they say, they are thinking of the devil's counterfeit. Don't despise the pure gold of religion because the devil makes a counterfeit of it in hypocrisy. Be religious but don't be a hypocrite. Our higher education consists then in developing the genuine, the divine attributes and casting out the false, the counterfeits. To do the former is an exercise in faith, the latter is one in repentance. That we might obtain this education our first parents partook of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. We are still partaking of that forbidden fruit notwithstanding the dire consequences of earth life, its trials, its tribulations, its sorrow, its suffering and finally death. "For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." But also with the full assurance of an unconditional redemption from that fall and an exaltation predicated upon our diligence in this preparatory school during the period of our mortal existence. Blessed are we then if we have accepted the good and rejected the evil, or, in other words, developed the genuine and cast out the counterfeits. God help us to do so. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS

President of the Southern States Mission

The Lord made this wonderful promise to Isaiah:

"So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." (Isa. 55:11.)

This foreshadows the wonderful missionary work that is being done by every agency in the Church. Truly the Gospel is the leaven that is "leavening the whole lump." There is room and a congenial atmosphere in this Church for spiritually-minded people, men and women with most lofty spiritual ideals; and the intellectually great may drink from the fountain of truth until their souls are filled with knowledge, satisfying and soul-saving.

Recently there appeared an editorial in the New York Times in which the brilliant and scholarly editor gave an eloquent summary of the remarkable achievements of science during the year 1930, and he closed with these words: "The science that not only has such practical application, but that has faith in a continuing creation and that co-operates with 'a Creator continually on the job,'"

Is this an echo of that glorious truth the Lord revealed unto Nephi, of old: "For my work is not yet finished; neither shall it be until the end of man, neither from that time henceforth and forever." (2 Nephi 29:9.) And again: "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Pearl of Great Price, p. 4.)

"The works of God continue,
And worlds and lives abound;
Improvement and progression
Have one eternal round."

A noted preacher, a few weeks ago was asked this question: "What has science done to help religion?" He replied: "For example, millions of us were taught to believe in God because he made the universe out of nothing in a single week. Now we are confronted by a large array of facts showing that this particular theory of creation is untenable."

Nearly a hundred years ago the Prophet Joseph Smith declared, by the inspiration of God, that the world was made of materials that have existed eternally: In the Book of Abraham it is recorded that the Creator said: "We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials, and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell." (Pearl of Great Price, p. 37.)

How marvelous is the truth that the Prophet Joseph announced to the world!

"Praise to the man who communed with Jehovah!
Jesus anointed that prophet and seer—
Blessed to open the last dispensation;
Kings shall extol him, and nations revere."

A sailing vessel, long from port, so the story goes, when off the coast of South America, ran short of water, and the men were in sore straits. Suddenly a sail appeared on the horizon, and when the stranger drew near this message was signaled to her: "Water, we want water!" She answered by saying, "Cast down your bucket where you are!" Again the appeal was made, "Water, we want water!" And again the answer came, "Cast down your bucket where you are!" Once more the signal fluttered from the mast, "Water, we want water!" And for the third time the answer was waved back, "Cast down your bucket where you are!" This the incredulous captain finally did and it was drawn up filled with fresh water from the Amazon river, over the mouth of which they were then sailing.

In this Church there is a stream of living water that flows from the throne of God. Why go to the ends of the earth in search for the truth when it is here for you to partake of? Why seek for faith-destroying mystery? Oh, won't you drink of this living stream? For if you will your souls shall never thirst again.

I testify to the glorious truth of this heavenly Gospel. The successful work those fine missionaries are doing is the best evidence that God is with them continually.

I bear you my testimony too that the leaders of this Church are men of God, raised up and consecrated by him for the marvelous work they are divinely commissioned to do. If we are great enough to be humble and diligent we will live to see this grand and inspiring work prosper more than it has ever done, and out of these hard times there will come a magnificent revival of spirituality, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Singing by the congregation, "Zion stands with hills surrounded."

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Walter L. Adamson, President of the Blaine Stake.

The Conference adjourned until 2:00 p. m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Promptly at 2:00 p. m. President Heber J. Grant, who presided, called the fourth meeting of the Conference to order and announced the opening hymn "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire."

After the singing of this hymn by the congregation, the opening prayer was offered by Elder Robert I. Burton, President of the Mount Ogden Stake.

The congregation then sang the hymn "Come, come, ye Saints."

ELDER CHARLES H. HART

Of the First Council of Seventy

I am very grateful, my brethren and sisters, to have this privilege of meeting with you at this conference and of mingling my voice and testimony with that of the brethren in support of this great latter-day cause.

I miss my associate who usually sits at my right at these meetings, President Joseph W. McMurrin. I remember that at the last conference he read, in full, the first section of the Doctrine and Covenants, a beautiful and inspirational revelation outlining this great latter-day work. I know of no finer preface to be found in all literature than the preface to the Doctrine and Covenants.

I have rejoiced in this conference from the opening keynote speech by President Grant until the present time, including also the splendid testimonies by the mission presidents given in the inspirational way they have spoken in this conference.

An editorial from a secular paper, The Toronto, Ontario, Globe, appeared a short time ago mentioning two books which I would like to mention here. I inquired of the librarian upon my arrival home but found neither of these books in our libraries. The librarian has kindly sent for and purchased each one of these books and I have really had a feast in reading such as I have been able to read of these two volumes. One of the books so mentioned is by Mr. Linton, who marshals the facts on the subject of belief in the Bible, and is entitled, "A Lawyer and the Bible," by I. H. Linton, published in 1929. It does not equal, I think, "Nelson on the Cause and Cure of Infidelity," which President Grant is very familiar with, and parts of which he has presented to the Latter-day Saints on several occasions. At least this book is a small replica of "Nelson on Infidelity," a book which I trust that each one of us will read who has not yet done so. This book of Linton is also well worth reading.

The "Globe," published in Toronto, which has the custom of publishing each week a religious editorial, says this of Mr. Linton's book:

"Here is a statement of remarkable significance from a lawyer. Mr. Linton marshals facts showing that when unbelieving lawyers who really supposed there was nothing to the claims of Christianity of the Bible, have honestly examined the evidence, they have come out uncompromisingly on the side of the old faith and have gladly admitted that they were completely convinced by the facts. The most charitable, and the most reasonable thing one can infer from Mr. Darrow's declared atheism—"

In mentioning Mr. Darrow's name I feel the same charity in judging him as was expressed here by Brother Stephen L. Richards, and I mention his name only for the purpose of presenting some other matters that I have checked upon and think worthy of presenting here.

The most reasonable thing one can infer from Mr. Darrow's declared atheism "is that he has never examined the evidence. For lawyers admittedly much greater than he have been convinced by a logical, dispassionate study of the facts in the case.

"Simon Greenleaf was one of these. He was the greatest master of the legal subject of Evidence that modern times have known. The London Law Magazine said of him: 'Upon the existing law of Evidence (by Greenleaf) more light has been shown from the New World than from all the lawyers who adorn the courts of Europe.' His words, says Linton, 'are always listened to with respect in any court, even though it be the English House of Lords or the Supreme Court of the United States—the two most august judicial bodies in the world.'

"Greenleaf applied his massive intellect to the study of the Gospels, and fortunately his work has been preserved for this generation in his book, 'Testimony of the Evangelists.' It is a classic work in the realm of logic and faith. By a study that makes the reasoning of most men seem childish and ignorant in comparison, Greenleaf patiently examines the available evidence, subjects it to unsparing scrutiny, and vindicates in triumph the utter reliability and unswerving accuracy of the writers of the four Gospels. This great master of evidence expresses his conviction and conclusion that 'every honest and impartial man' will accept the testimony of the evangelists as unimpeachable in a court of justice. And that means, in simple honesty and inescapable logic, that Christ is the Son of God and the only Savior of men; that he died for our sins and rose again; and that all who believe in him are given eternal life."

The book of Greenleaf's entitled "The Testimony of the Evangelists"—Matthew, Mark, Luke and John—was a new book to me. I was surprised that I could not find it in either of the law libraries in this city, and upon application the general library sent for it and bought it and I have since had the pleasure of purchasing a copy for myself. It is the most valuable law book that I have ever owned or read. I have not read it all yet because a great part of it, some four hundred pages, is taken up with a very thorough synopsis of the harmony of the Gospels. The closing testimony of Dr. Simon Greenleaf is a wonderful eulogy to Christianity.

I cannot understand in thinking about it how it could happen that such a valuable book on the Evangelists should have escaped my attention for so many years. It has really been a very great treat to me to read the work that he has so well done for the Christian religion in just presenting the testimony of the Evangelists together in a way that makes so strong a case.

The work is dedicated to the members of the legal profession in such striking language. He says:

"The things related by the Evangelists are certainly of the most momentous character, affecting the principles of our conduct here, and our happiness forever. * * * These are no ordinary claims and it seems hardly possible for a rational being to regard them with even a subdued interest, much less to treat them with mere indifference and contempt."

I am going to read the closing testimony which Dr. Greenleaf gives to Christianity:

"Lastly, the great character they have portrayed is perfect—" meaning of course the Savior and speaking of the evangelists—"It is the character of a sinless being; of one supremely wise and supremely good. It exhibits no error, no sinister intention, no imprudence, no ignorance, no evil passion, no impatience; in a word, no fault; but all is perfect uprightness; innocence, wisdom, goodness and truth. The mind of man has never conceived the idea of such a character, even for his gods; nor has history or poetry shadowed it forth. The doctrines and precepts of Jesus are in strict accordance with the attributes of God, agreeable to the most exalted idea which we can form of them, either from reason or from revelation. They are strikingly adapted to the capacity of mankind, and yet are delivered with a simplicity and majesty wholly divine. He spake as man never spake. He spake with authority; yet addressed himself to the reason and the understanding of men; and he spake with wisdom, for men could neither gainsay nor resist. In his private life he exhibits a character not merely of strict justice, but of overflowing benignity. He is temperate, without austerity; his meekness and humility are signal; his patience is invincible; truth and sincerity illustrate his whole conduct; every one of his virtues is regulated by consummate prudence; and he both wins the love of his friends, and extorts the wonder and admiration of his enemies. He is represented in every variety of situation in life, from the height of worldly grandeur, amid the acclamations of an admiring multitude, to the deepest abyss of human degradation and woe, apparently deserted of God and man. Yet everywhere he is the same; displaying a character of unearthly perfection, symmetrical in all its proportions, and encircled with splendor more than human. Either the men of Galilee were men of superlative wisdom and extensive knowledge and experience, and of deeper skill in the arts of deception than any and all others, before or after them, or they have truly stated the astonishing things which they saw and heard.

"The narratives of the evangelists are now submitted to the reader's perusal and examination, upon the principle and by the rules already stated. For this purpose, and for the sake of more ready and close comparison, they are arranged in juxtaposition, after the general order of the latest and most approved harmonies."

How this remarkable book could have existed so long and the legal profession not be in possession of it and not to be found in the law libraries here I cannot understand.

"The question is not upon the strict propriety of the arrangement, but the veracity of the witnesses and the credibility of their narratives. With the relative merits of modern harmonists, and with points of controversy among theologians, the writer has no concern. His business is that of a lawyer, examining the testimony of witnesses by the rules of his profession, in order to ascertain whether, if they had thus testified on oath, in a court of justice, they would be entitled to credit; and whether their narratives as we now have them, would be received as ancient documents coming from the proper custody. If so, then it is believed that every honest and impartial man will act consistently with that result by receiving their testimony in all the extent of its import. To write out a full commentary or argument upon the text, would be a useless addition to the bulk of the volume; but a few notes have been added for illustration of the narratives, and for the clearing up of apparent discrepancies, as being all that members of the legal profession would desire."

I have been instructed and thrilled with the work the author has done. It indicates much patience and interest on the part of this great jurist, in placing and elucidating the testimony of the Evangelists and giving explanatory notes of some supposed contradictions which are not really such when they are carefully examined and considered in the light of rules of civil evidence as pointed out by a master mind and eminent authority such as Mr. Simon Greenleaf possesses.

There is much in reference to the rules of evidence that has been presented from time to time, and in fact at our Centennial Conference some of those rules to weigh and measure evidence were presented and it would be useless or unnecessary to repeat them further now.

I appreciate the kindness of my brethren, President Grant and the brethren who surround him, and the kindness of my friends and my people, and I am glad that I am regaining my strength and that I am able to appear before you and talk to you on this occasion.

My testimony corroborates the testimony given by Dr. Greenleaf in this wonderful work of his, a powerful one from a legal standpoint. I give my testimony after an experience in this Church of more than a quarter of a century, and after working with these my brethren, and I bear this confirmation of the testimony just read, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Mexican Mission

My beloved brethren and sisters, I believe that this is the greatest occasion of my life. In all my experience I have never had the privilege of addressing such a vast and intelligent audience as this should be. It is only the realization of the fact that you are all friends and brethren that makes it possible for me to stand here at this time and mingle my testimony with the testimonies that have already been borne.

In standing here I bring to you the greetings of people of a different race and a different hue from those into whose faces I am looking at this time. I bring you the greetings of about thirteen thousand people of the Pacific Isles. Every one of them would like to be here and greet you personally, to sit and listen to the words of exhortation that are given from this stand. This, on my part, is an unofficial greeting, but it is sincere nevertheless, for I know that those people with whom I have been laboring for the past ten years, each and every one, have the welfare of this work at heart.

I bring you also the greetings of not quite so many, but a kindred people who are living nearer to us, the Mexican people. There are quite a number of them in the Church, and they are faithful and sincere and reasonably energetic in the performance of their duties.

The work with that people was begun in the year 1875, when my father, as a junior companion with a party of half a dozen or more, rode his horse from St. George as far as the city of Chihuahua, in the State of Chihuahua and the Republic of Mexico, returning by the same means of transportation. Since that time various vicissitudes have befallen that mission. Men have gone and opened up the mission, then returned, and the mission has lapsed, and that has been repeated time and again. But every time that mission has been reopened people have been found who were willing to listen to the Gospel, people who had attempted, through all of the years of silence, to retain their faith in the Gospel. From those people I bring you greetings.

It is going to be a difficult problem, I realize, to shoulder the burden that has fallen upon me with the death of President Pratt. He was a noble and valiant man. He labored with all the power, zeal and energy that God gave him, to further the work among that people. He had their interest at heart, and he won their love and their respect. I pray that with the aid of your faith and prayers, with the power of God to back me up, I may have humility and faith sufficient to carry on the work that he so well and faithfully performed; that the work may not falter, but that it may go forward.

Now, if this is done it will have to be done through the aid of your boys and girls. We have in that mission at the present time forty-one of them, all faithful and energetic and lovable, all of them that I have met. It has not been my good fortune to meet them all, but I hope that within a few short weeks I shall have been through that mission and met every boy and girl that is laboring there.

It seems that the people of the Church are not entirely clear as to what the Mexican mission at present consists of. You will remember, those of you who have read the papers, that certain laws have recently been passed by the Mexican government, which forbid the entry into Mexico of priests and ministers of foreign birth; so that our own Elders were forced to leave Mexico under this rule. We have in Mexico, laboring as an ordained missionary, only one person at this time, and he is a Mexican boy. He is laboring in the vicinity of Monterey and is doing a very excellent work. All of the other work that is being done by missionaries is being done in the United States. Our mission covers a length of two thousand miles, from Los Angeles to Brownsville, Texas. In addition to that we have a very thrifty and vigorous branch in this city, and we have organized branches that are laboring under the guidance of native branch presidents in various cities in and around the valley of Mexico.

I was very much surprised when I first learned, years ago, of the work that was being done among the Mexicans in the United States, but when you look into the matter it seems a logical field, for in the city of Los Angeles alone there are said to be no less than one hundred and fifty thousand Mexicans. We are attempting to make contact with those people. We are trying to do it with six persons—four boys and two young ladies. They are accomplishing a wonderful work, but they are limited, naturally, by their number, and as much as might be accomplished with more people is not being realized. We have there a very fine congregation, however. They are diligent, energetic and faithful.

From there our labor extends, as I have said, clear to Brownsville, and we have some of the finest young men and young ladies in the Church working with those people. We hope that you who are here and who are bearing the burden of that labor will have the wherewithal to supply them. Some of those boys right now are wondering how long they will be able to stay—when their missions may be terminated by the lack of funds. I hope that they will be able to stay until they care to return, for it is an unfortunate thing when a missionary from that field has to quit his work prematurely. It takes the first half of his period to learn the language, and then if he has to go home we miss the great accomplishments that he is capable of during the latter part of the missionary period. I trust that you will be able to stand the burden, that you will sacrifice willingly in their behalf, for every one of them is interested; every one of them is laboring with diligence and energy. Most of them are enjoying good health, and you have to worry little over that. However, they are in a warm country; they have differences of food to contend with, and occasionally some of them suffer because of that. Right now we have two or three boys concerning whom we have to be very careful, because they are suffering from the changes of food that they have had to meet.

I pray that the Lord will bless us, that he will give us power to endure, for the power to endure is the genius of this Gospel. If we cannot endure, the Lord pity us. These times are trying, but if we will round up our shoulders I am sure that the Lord will come to our rescue, that we will be able to carry on, and that we will not be the losers because of these trying times. The times of thrift and prosperity are the ones that we should be afraid of, not the times of adversity.

I bear you my testimony that this is the greatest work in the world that we are interested in. I hope the Lord will bless me with power to carry on, and with strength to continue to the end, and I do it in the name of Jesus, Amen.

A vocal duet, "I would not part the curtain," was rendered by Martha Smith Jenson and Donna Cox Gunderson.

ELDER JOHN W. HART

Of the Church Auditing Committee

This is one time in my life that I was really surprised. I was sitting very comfortably in the audience, with some of my friends, enjoying the services, as I usually do. However, being called upon I feel under obligation to respond. I never did, to my knowledge, refuse anything that was required of me by those who presided over me. I am very sorry that I missed the services yesterday. I was out in the state of Montana, and came directly from there this morning. I am very happy to get here for the second day's services.

I hope and pray that the Lord will sustain me this afternoon for the few minutes that I occupy this position. I know that he comes to the rescue of those who are called upon to perform service in the Church.

I was interested in the remarks of Brother Ivins this afternoon, as it was only last May that I had the privilege of visiting him in the Hawaiian Islands, and I was very happy to meet him. I was very happy also to note the progress of the work of the Lord in that island. While I was there one Sunday I had the privilege of attending the Sabbath school. I never in all my life attended a Sabbath school that was better disciplined and better organized, and that functioned any better than this Sunday school in Honolulu. There were practically all nationalities present. There were natives, Chinese, Japanese, Americans, and other people, but to my surprise, notwithstanding this great mixture there was order, and the Spirit of the Lord prevailed.

I had the privilege of attending their sacrament meeting at night, it being Aaronic Priesthood night. I sat there and listened to the natives—and it was principally natives that had part on the program—stand up and deliver their parts in a most efficient manner, enjoying the Spirit of the Lord. Their splendid chorus of about thirty-five singers rendered most efficiently the hymn, "An angel from on high." It was wonderful! I was asked to speak a few minutes, which I did, and can say that I enjoyed the Spirit of the Lord there as much as I ever enjoyed it anywhere in my life. This all goes to show, my brethren and sisters, that wherever we go, wherever we find a congregation or an organization of the Latter-day Saints, we find that same splendid, sweet Spirit of the Lord.

I am very happy that I am a member of this Church. I have never seen the day that I have had to apologize for being a member. I have always told my own family, the people of the Rigby stake over whom I have the honor to preside, and others with whom I have come in contact, that the great thing for us to learn as Latter-day Saints, particularly the young men and the young women, is to find out God, the Eternal Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, and to know something about this great latter-day work; that if they would only inform themselves along these lines they would always have joy and satisfaction in meeting the public in any land, and discussing with them the beauties of this great and glorious plan that has been entrusted to our care as Latter-day Saints.

My brethren and sisters, I am in strict harmony with those who preside over this Church. I know that they are men of God. The Lord will inspire them as long as they hold these positions, to direct the affairs of this people in the manner in which they should be directed. I am happy to have their confidence. I rejoice in being able to associate with them, and especially when they come to the Rigby stake to have the privilege of entertaining them. They always bring with them a splendid spirit, and when they leave we are all better for their coming.

I testify to you, my brethren and sisters, that God the Eternal Father lives, that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God, and that these men who surround me here are inspired of God, and are the living oracles. May God help us to understand and know these things, and to maintain them all the time, is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT RUDGER CLAWSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, a speaker who stands before a congregation of this character very well understands that he is under a great burden of responsibility and is expected to speak the truth, and nothing but the truth. If he should advance false doctrine it would be immediately detected by those who preside in the conference, and I think likely it would be detected by a congregation of Latter-day Saints. No man can long deceive the Latter-day Saints. This, I apprehend, is because the Spirit of God rests upon them, and they are able to distinguish between truth and error. I have attended many conferences in this building, and have never yet heard a false doctrine advanced from this pulpit. I take some pleasure in bearing this testimony.

PAST AND PRESENT LINKED TOGETHER

I have reflected much upon conditions that exist. I think I am safe in saying, my brethren and sisters, that the past and the present are connected by a chain of divine historical events, and also of historical, secular events—a chain that cannot be broken. This might be demonstrated by many incidents. Let me refer to one or two.

THE GOSPEL—INDIVISIBLE AND EVERLASTING

There is the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. The Gospel was preached in the beginning, it is preached to the world at the present time, it will be declared to future generations. The teachings of the Gospel exert a profound influence upon the world. The Gospel is a code of principles which are declared to be principles of salvation to those who will receive and obey them. The Gospel is complete in itself. Nothing is to be added to it. Nothing may be subtracted from it. The Gospel cannot be divided up into sectional parts, and if it were these sectional parts could not be safely treated separately. The Gospel must be taken as a whole. It is everlasting in its nature. It existed before, it exists now, and it will exist hereafter.

AN INCIDENT FROM THE DISTANT PAST

Let me draw your attention briefly for a moment to another incident, taken from the distant past. Let us go back to the Garden of Eden, which is sometimes designated as the beginning. When Adam, who is referred to by divine revelation as the first man, as "the ancient of days," as the father of the human family,—when he partook of the forbidden fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, mortality and death were introduced into the world, which has profoundly influenced the children of men from that distant day to the present time and will influence the world of men to the very end of time. Thus the past is connected with the present and will also have a direct bearing upon the future.

A DREADFUL DAY

Perhaps I may be pardoned if I particularize just a little further. One hears a voice coming out of the past. It is the voice of a humble servant of God, a prophet, and the words that issued from his mouth were also recorded in sacred writ and took the form of a prophecy which, if it shall be fulfilled, will influence the world of men very greatly. The prophet said: "A day is coming, a dreadful day will come upon the world." I fancy I hear some one say: "A dreadful day, Brother Clawson? We have had many dreadful days." Yes, we have had many dreadful days, when news came of earthquakes, destruction by fire and smoke, and waves of the ocean heaving themselves beyond their bounds, also cyclones and hurricanes sweeping over the earth. Yes, brother, these were dreadful days, but this particular day referred to by the prophet is somewhat different. It presents rather a different view. This day is called the "great and dreadful day of the Lord,"—quite different from these other days. And then we are told in a prophecy that before the great and dreadful day of the Lord shall come there must occur a very important circumstance, and it surely must precede the dreadful day of the Lord. Let us read the words of the prophecy, which is found in Malachi, the fourth chapter:

"For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

DESTRUCTION OF WICKED

That is a dreadful day, and yet in connection with it, and somewhat related to it, is shown forth the mercy of God, for the record says:

"But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall.

"And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts."

It would seem from this that the wicked are to be destroyed absolutely, root and branch, because of their wickedness, of which they will not repent, and hence a just judgment comes upon them.

"Remember ye the law of Moses, my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments."

MARVELOUS MANIFESTATIONS

Now comes a very singular and wonderful part of this great prophecy that was uttered in the long distant past:

"Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord:

"And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse."

That is the prophecy, brethren and sisters, and I doubt not that it is greatly misunderstood by the people of the world generally. It is quite easily comprehended by the people of the Latter-day Saints, because, as a matter of fact, this great prophecy has been fulfilled, fulfilled in the present age. I refer you to our Doctrine and Covenants, section 110, relating to certain visions and manifestation given to the Prophet Joseph Smith in the Kirtland Temple. Those were very remarkable visions; nothing quite like them in this age of the world; nothing quite like them in any other age, except the manifestation given to Paul, the apostle, when he was caught up into heaven and beheld unutterable things.

In this manifestation the Savior appeared and stood upon the pulpit of the temple, and spoke to his servant, the Prophet, and to Oliver Cowdery, expressing his approval of the work that had been done in the building of that temple, and referring to the blessings that would result therefrom. Other glorious manifestations were given.

THE COMING OF ELIJAH

Finally, it was also said in section 110:

"After this vision had closed, another great and glorious vision burst upon us; for Elijah the prophet, who was taken to heaven without tasting death, stood before us, and said:

"Behold, the time has fully come, which was spoken of by the mouth of Malachi—testifying that he (Elijah) should be sent, before the great and dreadful day of the Lord come—

"To turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the children to the fathers, lest the whole earth be smitten with a curse—

"Therefore, the keys of this dispensation are committed into your hands; and by this ye may know that the great and dreadful day of the Lord is near, even at the doors."

So this important prophecy, that comes out of the past, has been fulfilled in the present, and in a manner connecting the past with the present. We cannot, my brethren and sisters, as a people, neither can the children of men, separate and detach absolutely the past from the present.

THE WORD "TURN"

Now, in respect to this word "turn," we do not understand that that means that the fathers should simply assume a sympathetic attitude toward their children, that the children should have a sympathetic attitude toward their fathers, their fathers being dead. It means, if we may rely upon the word of the latter-day prophet, Joseph Smith, that the word "turn" should be translated "bind or seal," and if that be the case what a flood of light is thrown upon this important matter! It signifies that a work must be done for the dead and that we are to manifest our faith in the Gospel and in the prediction that has been made, by our work. Perhaps I might read a word or two from the history of the Church by the Prophet:

"Now the word 'turn' here should be translated 'bind or seal'. But what is the object of this important mission, or how is it to be fulfilled? The keys are to be delivered; the spirit of Elijah is to come; the Gospel to be established; the Saints of God gathered; Zion built up; and the Saints to come up as saviors upon Mount Zion. But how are they to become saviors on Mount Zion? By building their temples, erecting their baptismal fonts, and going forth and receiving all the ordinances, baptisms, confirmations, washings, anointings, ordinations and sealing powers, upon their heads, in behalf of all their progenitors who are dead, and redeem them, that they might come forth in the first resurrection and be exalted to thrones of glory with them, and herein is the chain that binds the hearts of the fathers to the children and the children to the fathers, which fulfils the mission of Elijah."

WORK FOR THE DEAD

Possibly some one will say: "Well, are we really required then to do work for the dead?" Yes, surely to do a great work. Is that not indicated in the scriptures, that a work should be done for the dead, when the Apostle Paul said: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptized for the dead?" So you see that Paul, the Apostle, understood this principle of baptism for the dead.

BY PROXY

The question will naturally arise: "Well, how is it possible for one to stand for another in respect to this matter, one on the earth being baptized for one who is dead? It is done through the principle of proxy, a principle which is well established in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. He, himself, the Savior of the world, stood as proxy for the children of men, as set forth by the great principle of atonement. This work for the dead is to be done in a temple and, I may here say that wherever the people of God are to be found upon the earth, you will find a temple-building people, and even now we are sitting under the eaves, as it were, of the temple of God—the temple, doubtless, that Isaiah saw in vision—the mountain of the Lord's house that was to be established in the tops of the mountains. I believe that the temple seen by Isaiah is the temple that stands adjacent to the tabernacle in which we are now assembled, and let me add we have other temples, some six in number.

THE CONNECTING LINK

We are permitted, under the gracious mercy of the Lord, my brethren and sisters, to go into these temples if we are worthy, and to do a work for the dead. We should be wide awake to the importance of this matter, because we are told that they, the dead, without us cannot be made perfect, and that we without our dead cannot be made perfect. Temple work is the link that connects us with our progenitors in the spirit world. Will the Gospel be preached to them? Surely it will be preached in the spirit world to them who had not the privilege of hearing it in this world. We are told in the epistle of Peter:

"For this cause was the Gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they may be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit."

Oh, the beauty of the justice and mercy of God, who is no respecter of persons! And let it be remembered that what it takes to save one who is living, it takes just that much to save one who is dead. Therefore, brethren and sisters, look well to this matter, and let your hearts be turned toward the dead, and avail yourselves of the opportunity of sealing them to the living.

May the Lord bless us. May the Lord bestow upon us the spirit, the desire and the determination to hunt up and secure a record of our forefathers, and then to go forth and perform this important labor in their behalf.

I know that this is the Church of God. I testify to you in all solemnity that I do know that Jesus is the Christ and that Joseph Smith was and is a true prophet of God.

The great truth that I have emphasized here today came through this modern prophet, and surely there were few greater prophets than he. God's blessings I invoke upon you in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The congregation arose and sang the first two verses of the hymn, "Do what is right."

ELDER ELIAS S. WOODRUFF

President of the Western States Mission

The opening song of the conference was "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet." President Grant said in his opening remarks that when he sang that song he thought of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

Many times recently I have sung that song with great pleasure, and I have thought of President Heber J. Grant, and his counselors, and of the Twelve, and of those brethren who are appointed with them to be prophets, seers and revelators to this people. Without reservation I have been able to sing it with great joy and thanksgiving because we do have these men to "guide us in these latter days." It is a great anchor to this people. We go out among other people who are not thus blessed, who are trying to find out something about God, and they are groping in darkness. They may be following the rules of logic and reason to the best of their ability, but they are not guided by inspiration as we are.

In the Western States mission we have nearly seven thousand members of the Church. Any of them would be delighted to be present here today, as a few of them are, to listen to the inspired words of God's servants and to enjoy the spirit of this remarkable gathering. When I think of the greatness of this conference, as shown by the numbers of those who attend, I sometimes think that if all the members of the Church in the Western States mission were gathered in this tabernacle, it would be quite comfortably filled; and yet they are only a handful, as compared to the Church. Our Church is becoming numerous, and it is spread over every portion of the earth. The Gospel has been carried to nearly every part of the earth, and men and women have received it with joy and gladness.

I wonder sometimes if when we think of our missionary work we do not think of it as wholly missionary work; but quite an important part of our labors consists in looking after the interests of the saints who are organized in small branches throughout our missions. The time is coming, and coming with great speed, when the larger of our branches will assume something of the perfectness of the wards of the Church. We are beginning to do things, in some of the branches, as they do them in the wards. Our auxiliary organization are following the splendid lead given to them by those who head these auxiliary organizations. Our manuals and our Church magazines are informative and helpful to them. Our people read them with joy and gladness and follow their instructions—so much so that the branches are becoming a little more proficient all the time in the work of teaching each other.

The spirit and genius of this Church is that we help each other. Sometimes members of the Church get the impression that those who are unworthy or unfit should be cast out, and not permitted to enter into the house of worship. We welcome them that they may grow with us from a degree of weakness to a degree of strength. The Church was intended to be an organization for mutual helpfulness, and so Latter-day Saints are expected, and it is their duty, to help each other, to labor together for the improvement of each other.

Our branches are doing those things with some degree of excellence. The missionaries are carrying on satisfactory work. We are doing our best, with the few that we have, to reach the people, to carry the message of the Gospel to them, trying to find better means all the time of engaging the attention of the people.

Last night, when I read that our Station K-S-L was to become a fifty thousand watt station, my heart rejoiced, because I realized that it would be possible, at least in the Western States mission, and I am sure in many other missions, to hear not only the Tabernacle Organ concerts, which are now nationally broadcast, but to hear the sermons that our brethren preach, with some degree of certainty and clearness. Sometimes we hear them; sometimes we do not. If we could depend upon them—and I am sure we will be able to do so with that powerful station operating—it would be a simple matter for us to organize cottage meetings on Sunday evenings, and have small groups, directed by Elders or sisters, meet together to hear the sermon, and then perhaps continue the service by bearing testimonies and singing the songs of Zion, and thus increase in the hearts of people faith in God.

Many of our friends who are not members of the Church listen in on the radio and are delighted with the organ recitals and with the sermons when they are able to hear them. Truly the Lord is utilizing, through his servants, the wonderful instruments of this great day for publishing the Gospel.

I pray the Lord to bless you. I pray the Lord to bless those whose children are on missions, and who are making the struggle that they must of necessity make to care for them. I appeal to you fathers and mothers of missionaries—and I think you will hear this appeal—don't send them too much money. In spite of the hard times we do have a few parents who insist on sending their missionaries more than they need. They would be ever so much better missionaries if you limited them to forty dollars a month, or a little less than that, than they will be if you send them fifty. At least I am speaking for the Western States. I would rather know that our missionaries could have only forty dollars a month, than to know that they could have more. That should not be hard advice to take these days, and yet I know of some parents who say: "Well, my son or my daughter must not be deprived. We are willing to deprive ourselves but they must have what they need." I want to testify to you that they will do much better if you will accept this advice. I know one young man whose parents sent him so much money that it almost ruined his mission. Finally the father and mother came out to see him. They were convinced that they had been making a mistake. They rectified the mistake, and today the boy is humble and sweet in his spirit, as energetic as he can be, filling a splendid mission, and happy to know that his source of revenue has been cut off, so that he has to depend upon his own efforts for his blessings.

I want to say, with gratitude, that we are all well, with the exception of one Elder, and we think he is in no danger. We are grateful for the blessings of the Lord, grateful for his watch-care and his favor over us. I testify to you that he does bless us, that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, and that this is his true work. Amen.

ELDER JOHN V. BLUTH

President of the Canadian Mission

My brethren and sisters, it is a matter of delight to be able to meet with you in conference. When I look over this congregation I feel comforted by the assurance that I can say: "Brethren and sisters;" that your spirits are in harmony, that you have come here to worship, that in your hearts there is a prayer for the speaker and for yourselves, that the speaker may be inspired in his utterances, that your hearts may be receptive, and that you may receive strength and benefit from that which is spoken.

I bring you greetings from the Saints, the Elders and sisters laboring in the Canadian mission. We have a glorious day for our conference, and we have had practically this kind of glorious weather during the entire summer in the Canadian mission—only a few hot, sultry days: nothing like that which our people have experienced in the western part of Canada and here. We rejoice in the delightful climate and the delightful country in which we have to labor. Eastern Canada, to me, is a glorious land, a land of forest, lake and stream. The province of Ontario alone has a hundred and fifty thousand square miles of forest, and as the country is a rolling country it lends itself to a myriad of lakes and streams that are delightful to the eye. It is a paradise to the tourist, one who desires to see nature and to rest himself for a few weeks or months, as the case might be and his time permits, in that land. We rejoice in that glorious country, in the privilege of being there, and of drinking in its beauty and having it enter into our souls.

Recently we have completed our third missionary trip since we went up to Canada in January—my wife and I and the secretary of the mission covering thirty-two hundred miles in making the circuit, which represented the eastern part of the mission, the western having already been covered. We held thirty-five meetings, and mingled with the Saints. We took three weeks for the trip. Brother Ballard visited it in June in shorter time. He visited the same part in twelve days, but it was holding meeting and catching train, holding meeting and catching train; very little opportunity to get very close to the people themselves; and for that reason we took a little more time.

In our meetings we have devoted about one-half of the time in defense of the principles of the Gospel, answering attacks upon the doctrines of the Church. The other half we have devoted to the one thing that we think very essential: We feel that we are sent into the world to warn the people and to give them the message of the Gospel. When we have done this we must depend upon the Spirit of the Lord to enter into their hearts, convert them to the Gospel, and bring them into the fold.

We also feel that our duty lies with those who have already accepted the Gospel, and that time must be given to hold them in the faith and to point out to them that which many of them cannot understand. In the world a great many people feel that they are "saved," that by confessing the name of Jesus Christ they have already, at a certain hour, on a certain date, in a certain place, become saved, and therefore they need not investigate the truth anywhere else. Some of our Saints, after having entered into baptism, received the gift of the Holy Ghost, and become members of the Church, feel that by attending only a few meetings they are doing their full duty. To my mind it seems that they have only advanced a step ahead of those who are still outside of the pale of the Church, and their entire journey still lies before them, the straight and the narrow way, the continual repentance from things that are evil in their nature, bringing themselves nearer unto God. We have devoted a great deal of time in an endeavor to convince them that their mission is not finished, that their salvation is not secure, unless they continue faithful in the keeping of the commandments of God. We have told them that blessings come through obedience, that our Father has said: "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say ye have no promise."

We call their attention to the necessity of prayer, of living close to God, citing them the fact that in the early days the saints were afflicted because they did not keep the laws of God, did not seek him closely. I remember that the Lord has said, in one of the sections of the Doctrine and Covenants, that "in the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but, in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me."

We seek to teach them that they should so live that when adversity comes they can go to God with an assurance in their hearts that because they have sought to live his commandments, because they have been in touch with him in the days of their prosperity, he will answer their prayers; that they may not be like the man who, when in a dangerous position, knelt and prayed to God to save him, and, to make sure of an answer, said: "O Father, I have never troubled you before. Help me now."

Our idea is to be in touch with him continuously, seeking his help and his assistance, and giving unto him our praises, our rejoicing in the many blessings he has given unto us.

I rejoiced here today, while listening to the opening hymn of this afternoon's session:

"Come, come, ye Saints, no toil nor labor fear,
But with joy wend your way."

Compare the condition of the Saints some eighty-five years ago, when that was written, with the conditions under which we worship here! I think of them plodding over the rain-sodden plains of Iowa, some four hundred miles, in order to reach the Missouri river, half-clad, starved, weary. That song was written to cheer their souls while they surrounded the camp fires, and to give them new courage for their labors of the following day, knowing that when they reached the Missouri river they still had another thousand miles of land travel before them, and that in hostile country. Compare that with the conditions under which we worship here, and then talk about adversity and depression!

There are so many things which of late have become necessities that at one time were luxuries, and a few years earlier were not even heard of. If we really thought so, we could dispense with them today, and thereby lessen the depression we now suffer.

Brother McKay, in an earlier meeting, spoke of testing the spirits; and in our missionary meeting held on Wednesday there were many reports of the wonderful assistance of our Heavenly Father, as manifested in healings, in guidance under difficult circumstances, in providing for the missionaries on the highway, in their meetings, and in other capacities, showing that the Lord was with them and helping them; that there was power in the Gospel, and that the gifts and blessings follow the believers.

An interesting incident occurred in our mission, in which the blessing of God followed even a non-member, but the blessing did not benefit him. A man studying for the Baptist ministry became interested in the teachings of the Elders. He listened to them and declared his belief in what was stated as the truth. He learned that they had the gifts and blessings in the Church. He was afflicted with cancer, and his life despaired of. He lost all appetite and was unable to move about or to do anything much for himself. He asked the Elders—two of them—a young brother from Ogden and one from Salt Lake, to come and administer unto him. After questioning him, feeling of his spirit, probing his sincerity, they decided to administer to him. They did so and he was healed completely. Later on he was able to attend to his work, restored fully to his health, vitality, and the life that had been despaired of. A few weeks later, after having further investigated the principles of the Gospel, he asked for baptism, and was baptized. Several weeks later he fell out over some little money matter with a member of the Church, became possessed of an unforgiving spirit, and absolutely refused to make matters right. From that time until this he has become so possessed of the evil power that he will walk the streets where street meetings are held, and laugh and deride and make fun of the Elders. He has threatened them with violence, telling them that if they came near him he would mark them for life. He says that he does not believe in them and that the members of the Church are all liars and hypocrites. That spirit has so taken possession of him that he is far worse than he was before the time when he received this wonderful manifestation from God, and from what I learned in the conference held two weeks ago the affliction is coming back upon him. That is testing another kind of spirit than that of which we have heard today.

I pray God that he may bless us, that we may be faithful, keep our covenants with God, do everything that he desires, be ready to respond to every call and serve him so faithfully that when we have finished our work here upon the earth we may be counted worthy to dwell in his presence, and I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER GEORGE S. ROMNEY

President of the Northern States Mission

I have the privilege of representing seventy-four young men and women who are preaching the Gospel in the Northern States mission, also more than seven thousand Latter-day Saints who are there. I should like to tell you, if I can, something about the way these missionaries are meeting the great social problems which are confronting the people there.

Just a few days ago, a man from Toledo, Ohio, who claims a membership in the Church, came to my office to ask for some help. He said that he and his wife had been hunting over the city of Chicago for many days for work. I asked him the condition of the many men whom we see sitting on the park benches and other places, idle, in the city of Chicago. He said: "Come and go with me tonight, and I will take you down on the lake front and show you twenty-five thousand men or more—men who are willing to work and want work, and men who have nothing to eat." I went down through the subway under Michigan Avenue, and there I saw men in crowds, lying on the ground, with just a newspaper under them, keeping warm by the fires that they made from boxes that they had gathered from the stores.

This man said to me that he had made all the efforts that he could, and if it came to the worst, he had told his wife the day before that he would get a gun and go down-town and get food for her to eat. There are many of the larger steel mills, automobile factories and others, that are only employing now from forty to sixty percent of their men.

These social problems produce a feeling of unrest, and the thinking people are facing these problems and wondering how to meet them.

The feeling is growing, in the colleges and in the universities, that our problems must be solved, not by legislation, but by establishing character in the youth as they grow up, and in the people.

A minister of the Presbyterian church recently invited me to speak to his congregation. I asked him to suggest a subject and he said: "Tell us how the Latter-day Saints are meeting the social and economic problems which the world is facing at the present time." I had the privilege of explaining to them something about the law of tithing, and fast donations, and the way we take care of our poor through the wards and the Relief Societies. I also explained to them something of the character of the education which we give in our Sunday Schools, and Mutual Improvement, and other auxiliary organizations. After the meeting was over, the way that group of people gathered around and asked their questions indicated the interest which people are taking in these social problems.

Recently one of the boys (missionaries) wrote me that he had been traveling on the highway, and was picked up by the vice-president of one of the railroads. This Elder and his companion were invited to the home of this gentleman and had a long conversation. This official of the railroad expressed himself, as the boys were leaving, that he considered the type of work that they were doing was of the very highest nature. He said that if they could carry that spirit among the people, and get others to feel as they felt, (that they were willing to spend their time in teaching principles of such value) that it would help to solve the problems.

We have many other incidents which I thought I would tell you, but cannot, of men who have expressed themselves in a similar way. That is, that the teaching, by example, of young men and women who are willing to spend their time, sustaining themselves while they are doing it, makes an impression. It is an object lesson that impresses the people of the world.

Thinking men, so far as intellectuality is concerned, appreciate the work of the Latter-day Saints.

But there is another way by which men and women are impressed by the work of the missionaries that is in addition to and I think far greater than this intellectual way. It is illustrated by a gentleman with whom I rode a few days ago, who is now a member of the Church. For a long time his wife was a member of the Church, and had been actively working, but he was in opposition. He was a user of tobacco. There was scarcely an hour or minute that he did not have tobacco in some form in his mouth. He said to me that he used foul language, that he was in opposition to the Church and felt that he treated his wife all the time in a very undesirable way. He went to a Relief Society meeting with his wife, not at her request, but just through a suggestion of his own. He sat and listened to the testimonies—because it was a testimony meeting—of some of the sisters, and he expressed himself something like this:

“While I was sitting there listening to them, a feeling came over me that passed through me from my head to my feet. I can’t describe it, but it was such a feeling that it made the tears stream from my eyes. I felt myself crying. I felt ashamed. I did not know what was the matter with me.” He said: “I went home. I threw my tobacco away, and from that day to this I have never touched it. I have treated my wife as I should do.” He is now a president of the Mutual Improvement organization, and is a very fine man.

It is that type of thing, wherein men and women change their lives, because the Spirit of the Lord comes over them, that will solve our social problems.

I am appreciative of the work I am doing, and testify to you that I know that the Lord does inspire the hearts of people through his Spirit. I pray the Lord to bless us, that we may all have the spirit of missionary work, and I do it in the name of Jesus. Amen.

The congregation sang the hymn, “Lord dismiss us with Thy blessing.”

After the benediction, which was pronounced by Elder Edward C. Rich, President of the Montpelier Stake, the Conference adjourned until 10:00 o’clock Sunday morning, October 4, 1931.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

The Conference reconvened Sunday morning, October 4, 1931, at 10 o'clock.

The great tabernacle auditorium and galleries were filled to capacity, every seat being taken and all available space in the aisles and doorways being occupied by people who were unable to find seats. Thousands who could not be accommodated in the tabernacle congregated in the large Assembly Hall directly south of the tabernacle and on the tabernacle grounds, where they listened to the Conference proceedings as they were broadcast by radio.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

As an opening number the Tabernacle Choir and the congregation sang the hymn, "Praise to the man who communed with Jehovah."

The invocation was offered by Elder S. Norman Lee, President of the Box Elder Stake.

"An angel from on high," duet and chorus, was rendered by Cyril Martin and Ida Hepworth and the Choir.

PRESIDENT ANTHONY W. IVINS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren and sisters, I stand before you this morning in humility and humbly ask that during the few moments of time I expect to occupy I may have your sympathy, the support of your faith, and the help of the Lord, that I may clearly outline to you the thoughts which I have in my mind.

I am going to read from the Book of Isaiah, 19th chapter, 19th and 20th verses:

"In that day shall there be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the Lord.

"And it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt: for they shall cry unto the Lord because of the oppressors, and he shall send them a savior, and a great one, and he shall deliver them."

REFERS TO BOOK

I have read this scripture, my brethren and sisters, as a basis for the brief remarks that I expect to make in regard to a matter that has caused more or less discussion among members of the Church because of the recent publication of this small book which I hold in my hand. The title of the book is "Our Bible in Stone." The author is Francis M. Darter of Los Angeles, a member of the Church, in good standing, an experienced engineer and a mathematician of ability.

It treats principally the erection, symbolism and prophetic character of the pyramid of Gizeh, or in Greek, Cheops. Various other applications so far as the name is concerned have been applied to this structure. Because of its superiority over all other like structures it has come to be known and referred to as the Great Pyramid of Gizeh.

SITUATED IN EGYPT

The Great Pyramid of Gizeh is situated in Egypt, about ten miles west of the city of Cairo, and one hundred and twenty-five miles south from the city of Alexandria, which was founded by Alexander the Great 332 B. C. It is bounded on the west by the Libyan desert, and is therefore in the borders of the land. It is one of a group of nine other similar structures, which are known as the Pyramids of Gizeh.

It is a noteworthy fact that while many pyramids are found in Egypt, none is known to exist in other parts of the world except in America, where many such structures are known to have been erected, but no other pyramids can be compared with the unusual structure to which my remarks are to be confined.

The orientation of the great pile, as it applies to the points of the compass, and the accuracy with which its proportions are related one to the other, are a marvel to those who have made a study of it.

GOVERNED BY STARS

The relationship of the Pyramid to modern mathematics, by which scholars have endeavored to fix the date of its construction, indicates that in its erection the builders were familiar with and governed largely by the movement of the heavenly bodies, which science the moderns refer to as astronomy.

Sir John Herschel, from astronomical calculation, places the construction of the Pyramid at 2160 B. C., and Professor Piazza Smyth at 2170 B. C. Basil Stewart, in his recently published book, "The Witness of the Great Pyramid," after a careful study of the application of astronomy in its construction, says:

"The Great Pyramid therefore may be considered the earliest known record in existence wherein is embodied the fact of the immense cycle known as the precession of the equinoxes."

OF GREAT MAGNITUDE

The magnitude of the structure may be best understood by comparing it with something with which we are familiar. The area covered by the base of the structure is in excess of thirteen acres, or three acres larger than the block upon which this building stands, which is ten acres. The height of the Pyramid is 485 feet above the base, or more than twice the height of the temple to the east of us. The bulk of the building is more than ninety million cubic feet, and sufficient stone was used in its construction to build a wall four feet high and two feet thick, twenty-two hundred miles in length, or which would reach from Chicago to San Francisco.

THE BUILDERS

Who were the builders of the Pyramid no one knows. Khufu

(Cheops, in Greek) is given credit for having been the builder. This personage has been identified by some students as Seth, the son of Adam; others give Enoch, the son of Jared, credit for having been the builder; others Shem, the Son of Noah; while some believe that Melchizedek, that mysterious personage to whom Abraham paid tithes, and whom some of these scholars identify as the Patriarch Job, was the person who constructed it.

Herodotus, who lived nearly five hundred years before the birth of Christ, and who is referred to as the father of history, knew of the existence of the Great Pyramid, and wrote concerning it. He says that the Egyptians detested the memory of the kings who caused their fathers to erect these structures, and besides compelled them to close their own temples, and for this reason they were not willing to mention their names, but called the two first pyramids erected after Philition, a shepherd who fed his cattle about the place.

Manetho, himself an Egyptian, wrote as follows:

"There came from the east, in a strange manner, men of an ignoble race, who had the confidence to invade our country, and easily subdued it by their power without a battle. All this invading nation was styled Hyksos, that is, 'Shepherd Kings'."

He then relates how they departed for Judea and built a city there named Jerusalem. This he says was long before the exodus of the Israelitish people from Egypt under Moses.

OLD THEORY CHALLENGED

It is known that Hyksos, or Shepherd Kings, dominated Egypt at the time that Jacob and his family went into that country, during the period when Joseph ruled as vice regent of the reigning Pharaoh, and it was among this people that Joseph chose his wife, Asenath, who became the mother of his sons Ephraim and Manasseh.

The first definite suggestion that the Great Pyramid was other than the tomb of a king, or other merely temporal monument, was in a work written by John Taylor in London in 1859. He conceived the idea that it was a divinely planned and constructed monument, designed to be a witness to the human race, showing in advance the history of mankind from the creation to the period of the second coming of our Lord, who would establish dominion over the earth upon which we dwell and usher in a reign of righteousness and peace.

At a later date C. Piazza Smyth, astronomer royal of Scotland, wrote upon the subject, agreeing with the conclusions reached by Taylor. Sir W. M. Flinders Petrie, Professor John Edgar, D. Davidson, Joseph A. Seiss, Sir John Herschel, Basil Stewart and many other scholarly men, after making a study of the subject, became advocates of the theory advanced by Taylor, that the Great Pyramid has something more than human in its construction and symbolism.

THE INTERIOR

For ages after its construction the interior of the Great Pyramid

remained a sealed mystery. Obsessed with the belief that within the great pile hordes of treasure had been concealed, men finally determined to penetrate and explore it. A tunnel was driven into the structure far towards the center, but the work was so difficult that it was about to be discontinued when the workmen unexpectedly broke into the passageway, and the mystery was solved.

Nothing was found to indicate that the Pyramid had been constructed to be the tomb of a king, as was usually the case with the smaller structures of like architecture. It was discovered that the original builders had constructed a series of passages or galleries in the interior of the Pyramid, the entrance to which had been concealed and so strongly closed that it became necessary to blast around it in order that entrance might be made possible. This entrance is on the north side of the structure, and the first gallery or passage descends from the opening at an angle of about twenty-six degrees to a point far below the floor of the Pyramid into the solid rock upon which it stands, where it terminates in a chamber which is called the Pit.

A short distance from the entrance, at the same angle, another passageway leads upward and communicates with two other chambers, one referred to as the Queen's Chamber, near the center, and the other, higher up, as the King's Chamber.

CONCLUSIONS OF SCHOLARS

It is the accuracy with which these galleries are constructed and certain markings and steps which are placed at intervals along the way, that have convinced scholars who have made careful study of the subject that the Pyramid was intended by its builders to represent the history of our race, as has been stated, from the remote past to the time of the second coming of our Lord.

Discussion of the symbolism of the Great Pyramid is not a new thing in the Church. I well remember that Orson Pratt, during his lifetime, lectured on the subject and made mathematical calculations by which he reached the conclusion that certain measurements of the galleries and markings which were upon them had reference to the opening of the Gospel dispensation in which we live, and the final consummation of the purposes of our Father in heaven, by which peace would come to the world and happiness to mankind.

I remember also that his calculations brought conclusions which differed from others who had made a study of the subject, but were in the main the same. Soon after the World War students of the Pyramid announced that according to their theory, and it is only a theory, the year 1928 would witness the beginning of a period of tribulation which would continue with increasing intensity until 1936, and would bring sorrow and mourning to the inhabitants of the earth. At that date their symbols and measurements bring us to the King's Chamber, and the record of the Pyramid, if it has a record, will cease with the advent of our Lord and the establishment of a period of peace, happiness and good will among men.

QUESTIONS CONCLUSIONS

The Church has not at any time, nor does it now, accept the conclusions of pyramid students to be definitely correct. In fact there is great doubt that the arbitrary basis upon which their calculations and conclusions are founded is correct.

I do not wish to be understood to say that they are in error. Neither do I say that they are correct. But this much I desire to declare to this congregation: While I have not given profound study to the theories of men regarding the origin and symbolism of this miracle in stone, I have read and studied it in a general way and have found nothing in it to convince me that the record of the Great Pyramid definitely forecasts coming events.

OTHER SOURCES

The Church does not depend upon Pyramids of Gizeh nor the conclusions of scientific investigators, however helpful they may sometimes be in the study of these questions, for an interpretation of the scripture which refers to the return of Christ our Lord to earth and the millennium of peace and good-will which is to be enjoyed under his personal administration.

We believe in the literal gathering of the house of Israel, that Judah and Benjamin will be united with Ephraim and the ten tribes from whom they have been separated since the reign of Rehoboam, the son of Solomon; that Zion will be built upon this continent; that Christ our Lord will reign personally among his people; and that the earth will be restored to its paradisaical glory.

This declaration of our faith is based upon the words of our Lord as they are contained in the Bible, and have come to us through modern revelation.

PRECEDING HIS SECOND COMING

As Jesus sat upon the Mount of Olives the disciples came to him privately, saying:

"Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"

Our Lord warned them to take heed lest they be deceived. He told them that preceding the time of his coming there would be a period when war would prevail throughout the world; that nation would rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and that there would be famine and pestilences and earthquakes in divers places; that those who believed in him would suffer persecution, and that tribulation such as had never before been known would be experienced. But he assured them that those who had faith to endure to the end would be saved.

He told them that before his coming the Gospel which he taught would be restored to earth and preached among all people, as a witness, before the end should come. And then he said, "shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven * * * and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

At the time of his ascension, when the cloud received him, as his disciples gazed in wonder and astonishment, two men in white apparel appeared and said:

"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

The affirmation of the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ and the further fact that he would at a subsequent period of time return to earth to assume control over its affairs and usher in a millennium of peace are so definitely attested that no real believer in the Bible can deny them.

EXACT TIME NOT REVEALED

Conditions which would prevail prior to his glorious appearance are definitely stated, but the exact time when he shall appear has not been revealed. He himself says, referring to the time of his glorious appearance: "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father."

He does tell us that he will come in an hour when we expect him not and warns us that we must always be prepared to meet him. He warns us further that if at that time we are found oppressing our brethren and eating and drinking with the drunken he will cut us off, root and branch, which will cause weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

THE AUTHOR'S OWN VIEWS

Now, my brethren and sisters, I have referred to this little book and its contents as I desire that you might understand. It will undoubtedly go into the mission field and our Elders may make use of it. I simply want to warn you against sensationalism of any kind.

While the author, as I have stated, is a member of the Church in full standing, this work goes out as his own views. I do not wish to deprecate the amount of work he must have applied in the preparation of this book, in the study of the scriptures, and in the preparation of the charts which are contained in it. I do not say that his conclusions are wrong, but I do say that they do not come to us as the voice of the Church, nor are they to be accepted as such.

TROUBLES FORECAST

Brother J. Golden Kimball told us yesterday that he was a great believer in dreams that come true. I am reminded of the fact that immediately after the close of the World War these students of the Pyramids announced and published it that according to their measurements and calculations there would begin in the year 1928 a period which would bring tribulation and sorrow to the people of the world; that they would be required to humble themselves before the Lord, and that that period of tribulation would continue until the year 1936. This was based entirely upon the measurement of the galleries and the steps that are in the Pyramids.

We all know that a part of this dream at least has come true. Men come to us and tell us that there is no depression; that it is only our imagination. It is true that we are surrounded by plenty, but in the midst of plenty many are in want. Such talk to me is sheer nonsense. My father-in-law, Erastus Snow, used to say that such statements reminded him of a man trying to hold himself up by his own bootstraps. When Great Britain who has stood in the ages past as a financial master of the world sends out cries for financial help; when Germany who stands in the very forefront of the nations of the world in intellectual development, in music, in chemistry, in mechanism, sends out calls for help, and is on the very verge of dissolution and anarchy, it is obvious that there is something wrong.

TRIBULATIONS EVIDENT

When our own government is wrestling with problems which they hardly know how to control, but are doing their very best to meet them; when banking establishments are going down like block-houses, and hundreds of millions of dollars of the savings of poor people are being lost to them because of these failures, it appears obvious to me that we are passing through a time of tribulation. I believe it is better at any rate that we should think so. I agree with the Governor of our state in his declaration that we are in a period which requires our most careful attention and our best efforts to avert. If there are those who do not believe it they will find it out before we are through with it.

DEFENDS BANKS

While I am on my feet I want to say one thing: This condition naturally brings trouble to banking institutions, and men are referring to banks as heartless usurers. Banks are not money-lenders alone, they are the custodians of the funds of the people. They do not lend their own money, they lend the money of the widow and the orphan and the fatherless which has been entrusted to them. They make investment of it that it may bring returns to these people who so greatly need it, and it is their sacred duty to preserve those funds to save them from loss. When men go to banks and borrow money they must do it with the expectation that they are to pay it back. It is not their money, it is not the money of the bank; it is the money of the people. And so when banks are careful to preserve their resources and to keep them liquid, so they can meet the demands that are made upon them, they should be complimented and not found fault with.

This brings me right back to another thing that the Redeemer said. He told us, you know, that there would be weeping and wailing among the merchants—or the prophet told us that—because there would be no one to buy their merchandise. We have very nearly lived to see that. He told us that it will be the same with the giver of usury as it is with the taker of usury from him. This is not a condition which affects one class of our citizens only, it affects men from the wealthy of our country to those who are in the most humble circumstances.

Well, now, my brethren and sisters, what about it all?

TRUST THE LORD

Just be calm and turn to the Lord. It is not the result of any occurrence of the immediate past. We have been gradually drifting toward it for years and years, and personally I have known that it would come, and I bore witness of it from this stand to the people a year ago. I applied it to my own affairs. I pleaded with the people to put their houses in order and get out of debt, for I knew this was coming, because God himself through his Only Begotten Son had declared it.

There is nothing that men can do, nothing that we can do that will avert the fulfilment of those sayings, and it is not the design of our Father in heaven at all either. It is simply the result of our own lack of wisdom, of our own disposition to be selfish, of the accumulation of the wealth of the country in the hands of a few men, which prevents its equal distribution among the masses.

Now, my brethren and sisters, if the Church has anything to say to you it will come from them direct and not from the writings of other men. It will come to you in a manner that you will understand it. It will not be speculative. It will come to you philosophically, truthfully and governed by common sense.

God bless you, is my humble prayer, through Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT CHARLES W. NIBLEY

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

This is a wonderful gathering, wonderful from many angles, and from every point of view outstanding and remarkable.

I enjoy working in the ministry and always have done from my youth up. I have enjoyed working for the Church, but I must confess that of all the work I have to do and of all the duties I am called upon to perform I always approach this duty with fear and trembling. I pray that you will assist me with your faith and your sympathy, and that I may have the blessing of the Lord and the Spirit of the Lord to season my remarks.

OMINOUS SIGNS

We have fallen upon strange times, as have been outlined by President Ivins, and the end is not yet. The distress of nations, not this nation alone, this people alone, but the distress of nations and the perplexity of nations is here now at the present time. There are signs about us that are ominous, in some ways almost terrible.

President Moyle yesterday pointed out to us some of the difficulties, some of the obvious reasons that go to show how dreadful, and ominous, some of the signs of the times are. There is unemployment by the millions, men who would like to work, not the idler, but men who want to work and are able to work and can find no work.

Nearly one hundred and fifty years ago the great Scottish poet sang in a doleful refrain of this very condition in his day:

“See yonder poor o’er-labored wight,
So abject, mean and vile.
Who begs a brother of the earth
To give him leave to toil.
And see his lordly fellow-worm
The poor petition spurn.
Unmindful, though a weeping wife
And helpless children mourn.”

Then he passes on to say:

“Man’s inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn.”

TO ALLEVIATE DISTRESS.

And so we have that condition today. Committees are appointed, and well appointed, in every state, and the very head of the nation, the president, has appointed his committee, able men, the ablest men who can be found—good men, men who are desirous of the good of the people—to see if something cannot be done to mitigate these hard conditions. In our own state we have committees appointed by the governor and the mayor, and in small towns and villages of the country committees are at work to see if they cannot help out in this present situation. The work of these committees is to see that those who have, give up and contribute to those who are in need. That is the sum and substance of it all. We have heard that labor organizations are rather threatening.

ENGLAND’S NAVY

We have heard of one of the most ominous signs of the time that has occurred in England. President Moyle, I think it was, said that the dole alone, in England, stands between that country and anarchy; and one of the worst signs we have had in the last few weeks is a mutiny in the English navy. The chancellor of the exchequer, Philip Snowden, in paring down expenses, taxing to the last degree—twenty-five per cent of all the income of the people, and large incomes taxed much higher than that—trying to make ends meet, trying to get enough to stabilize the English pound and carry on with the government, and everybody is making sacrifices—in doing this he pared down a little on the English navy’s sailors’ compensation and the result was mutiny in the navy—in England’s navy—something unheard of, unbelievable. Hardly can we conceive that such a thing would transpire. That doesn’t have a good look, because it has been the English navy that has done more for the world than any one can imagine. From the days that the Armada of Spain came up the channel to overthrow England and take possession of the country, in 1588, when Drake and Hawkins and a few of the bravest sailors and leaders ever known came out to defend their country, and did defend it, and in the goodness of the Almighty a strong wind was sent to blow that Armada up the channel and help out the weak English contingent. The outcome of it was that the British navy from that day took possession of the seas, and from that day to this has held that possession. It made Elizabeth, who was then queen, mistress of the seas. Spain became a second rate or a third rate power a little later on.

And now, after such a wonderful record, a record that when the World War broke out seventeen years ago this summer the one instrument of war that was ready and right on the spot was the English navy, this thing has happened. These things do not have a good look. That matter of mutiny was just patched up. We have not heard of anybody being thrown into chains or prison.

THE LORD'S PLAN

Well, now, in all this distress are we left without the word of the Lord? Has the Lord not provided a way out? I think he has. A hundred years ago last March a revelation was given to the Prophet Joseph Smith. I read from Section 49, 19th and 20th verses:

"For, behold, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and that which cometh of the earth—"

"I wish you to get that in your minds: "that which cometh of the earth," for when we come to think about it everything in the world that we have "cometh of the earth." We have not had anything of a material nature handed down from any other planet. And so this revelation says:

—"and that which cometh of the earth is ordained for the use of man for food, for raiment, and that he might have in abundance.

"But it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another, wherefore the world lieth in sin."

The revelation on the United Order had not yet been given. This revelation was given one hundred years ago last March, and has been in print for about a hundred years, and we have taken practically little note of it. We go on in the same old way. Of course, we do in some respects try to do a little more, I think, for our poor than many other people do. Some of us pay our tithes, and that tithing is administered for the good of the whole Church, every cent of it. We go on missions, our sons and daughters go, and they spend two or more years, I may say, working as in the United Order, working without money and without price for the benefit and salvation of others. And everyone who works faithfully at his mission comes back testifying, as I testify regarding my own case, that never in all the experiences of life was there a happier time than the missionary time.

I have wondered if I would not be much happier, sleep better of nights, without trouble to a great extent, if I knew my family were provided for, just sufficient, not with riches, but sweet content, with enough. If that were the case why should I not give my whole time to the Church?

IN MOSES' TIME

In the days of ancient Israel, in the time of Moses, we find that the land, which we now mortgage and buy and sell, could not be alienated from the family to which it belonged, those who were born on it, so to speak. It belonged not only to those who were alive, but to the unborn generations as well. This is the law of Moses that I will read from Leviticus, chapter twenty-five:

"The land shall not be sold forever: for the land is mine; for ye are strangers and sojourners with me.

"And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a redemption for the land.

"If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.

"And if the man have none to redeem it, and himself be able to redeem it:

"Then let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession.

"But if he be not able to restore it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it, until the year of jubilee: and in the jubilee it shall go out, and he shall return unto his possession."

That was the law in olden times. People could not be dispossessed of their land. They did allow it to be sold, it seems, but there was a cloud on the title—it would revert back to the original possessor.

EQUAL POSSESSIONS

The Lord, in the revelation that I have read, given over a hundred years ago, states that it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another. I do not think that means that every man should have the same quantity of ground allotted to him. Every man shall be appointed to labor, just as our missionaries are now appointed to labor. The Presidency appoint presidents of missions, select the best men they can find who are qualified and who are willing and obedient, that is to say, obedient to righteous law, to take charge here and there. And so it would be if we had great, extensive operations. Every man could be called to the work which he is most fitted to do, and he could do it, and the proceeds, the surplus, should remain with the Church, not the individual.

NOT DESTRUCTIVE OF INITIATIVE

I know that some will say, Well that destroys initiative. Nothing of the kind. I was on a mission in the Liverpool office for two years on my last mission and I labored with William Budge and John Nicholson, two outstanding men. I labored under their direction. They had great initiative. They were men of ability and capacity far more than I because I was younger, only twenty-eight years of age.

while they had had much experience. In their minds they were planning and praying to know how to extend this work, in this direction and in the other. They were full of initiative, and yet I got just as much as they got. They got their board and clothes, what clothes were necessary, and I got the same. It was not given to them to possess that which was above me, and all were happy. We worked together and were like a happy family. It has been done; and with the tithing, as I say, and our fast offerings, expended for the benefit of the whole Church, we are ten per cent in the United Order. We should pay our tithes. Why could we not be twenty per cent, forty per cent, or all? Why couldn't I, I say again, if my family were cared for, work continually, helping for the benefit of others?

REGARD FOR OTHERS

Here is something more that was given to us January 2nd, 1831 (Doctrine and Covenants, section thirty-eight) :

"And let every man esteem his brother as himself—" That is pretty hard, I suppose, but there it is and it has been there for over a hundred years:—"and practice virtue and holiness before me.

"And again I say unto you, let every man esteem his brother as himself. "For what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter of them, and they serve him obediently, and he saith unto the one: Be thou clothed in robes and sit thou here; and to the other: Be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there—and looketh upon his sons and saith I am just?

"Behold, this I have given unto you as a parable, and it is even as I am. I say unto you, be one; and if ye are not one ye are not mine."

SELFISHNESS MUST BE OVERCOME

I do not know, I haven't the wisdom to understand, how we can take people who are still so selfish that they cannot part with ten per cent and make them so that they will part with all, being assured that they will share equally with all. We ought not to ask anything better than that, if we have assurance of that. What justice would there be in our asking for more than that? And that could be done. Just how to do it and when it will be done I do not know, but I do believe this that for many years past, for all the years past, I may say—I do not believe that while times were prosperous it would have been possible to organize the Saints into the United Order. If we did accept it, if we did go ahead and become powerful and great and rich I am sure it would be taken that we were a menace to the country, too powerful, too rich, too much of oneness. "And if ye are not one ye are not mine." Well, then, we were not his up to that point, and up to this point.

IF CONDITIONS MEND

But now, things are coming about so that we ask, What are we to do? We are waiting until things mend. How can they do so unless the farmers and working people get money to spend? If we go on in the old way, if we go on producing just as we have produced, in mass production, and if our labor-saving machinery that has been invented for the blessing of mankind, and which should shorten the hours of labor, shorten the work of the laborer, goes on producing and producing just as it has in the past two or three years, we will be flooded again and will be in the same old condition. I do not see any other outcome, even if times change so that we can go on a little way with the hire and salary method, and begging for a job to work. In the phraseology of the streets, we are right up against it. We really don't know what to do.

THE WAY OF THE LORD

I have only time to quote from another revelation that the Lord has given on this same subject. (Section eighty-two of the Doctrine and Covenants) This was given in April, 1832—one hundred years ago next April:

"For Zion must increase in beauty, and in holiness; her borders must be enlarged; her stakes must be strengthened; yea, verily I say unto you, Zion must arise and put on her beautiful garments.

"Therefore I give unto you this commandment, that ye bind yourselves by this covenant, and it shall be done according to the laws of the Lord.

"Behold, here is wisdom also in me for your good.

"And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just—

"And all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents, yea, even an hundred fold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church—

"Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

"This order I have appointed to be an everlasting order unto you, and unto your successors, inasmuch as you sin not."

The Lord has provided a way out. People all over the world are groping for a way out. I do not know anything that quite equals this that was given a hundred years ago for the benefit of this Church and the revelations tell us that the center stake of Zion cannot be built up on any other principle.

I see that my time has expired. The Lord bless you, my brethren and sisters, you faithful workers in the cause of Christ. O, how my heart and soul go out to you! You are the salt of the earth. The Church depends on you. God bless you. Amen.

The Choir and congregation arose and sang the hymn, "God moves in a mysterious way."

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I appreciate very much the honor and privilege of expressing my feelings on this auspicious occasion when many thousands of people are assembled and many thousands of others no doubt are listening in on the radio to the proceedings of this conference. While I appreciate this opportunity I want to say that there is no other labor I have to perform in connection with my ministry that gives me so much anxiety and concern as that of anticipating a call to speak in the General Conferences of the Church. Notwithstanding the anxiety I have had I have enjoyed this conference exceedingly and I feel in my soul that it is one of the best we have ever had.

I think that in considering the character of this vast audience I might conclude that there are present Latter-day Saints of every degree of faith and faithfulness, and others, good men and women, who have not identified themselves with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I desire with all my heart to be able to say something that will be of interest and profit to my listeners, and to this end I trust that the Lord will help me to bring forth some of the reflections which I have had while sitting here upon the stand.

"We believe the Bible to be the word of God as far as it is translated correctly; we also believe the Book of Mormon to be the word of God."

This, without any qualification or apology.

MORONI'S EXHORTATION

I want to read to you a few verses from the 10th chapter of the Book of Moroni in the Book of Mormon. It was Moroni who had the responsibility of hiding up in the Hill Cumorah, many centuries ago, the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated; and he had the responsibility of delivering those plates to Joseph Smith, and after they had been translated by the gift and power of God, received them back at the hands of the Prophet Joseph.

Speaking of the time when this work should come forth he said:

"Behold, I would exhort you that when ye shall read these things, if it be wisdom in God that ye should read them, that ye would remember how merciful the Lord hath been unto the children of men, from the creation of Adam even down until the time that ye shall receive these things, and ponder it in your heart.

"And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

"And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things."

THE REVEALED WORD OF GOD

We read in the scriptures of the New Testament that "no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of men: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

The things contained in the Book of Mormon are the things of God given to the children of men by the inspiration and power of the Holy Ghost, and so are the things contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, in the Pearl of Great Price, and in the Holy Bible, which books constitute the standard works of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. If we can enjoy that measure of the Holy Ghost which was felt by and which actuated those prophets of God who spoke the things contained in these books, and wrote them, we will understand as they understood, and they will not be mysteries unto us. Every Latter-day Saint who is faithful, having accepted the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel, having had the Holy Ghost conferred upon him, if he is true to these things, will know the truth when he reads it or when he hears it spoken.

MEN OF GOD

When President Heber J. Grant stood up before the congregation in the first session of the conference and spoke, every true Latter-day Saint who heard him knew that he was and is the Lord's anointed, his mouthpiece and prophet to this people and to the world, as well as being the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I bear testimony to you that I know that he is God's recognized leader of this people and that he is guided by inspiration from on high—a humble man who seeks to know the will of the Lord in all matters pertaining to his work. I am grateful for the association I have had with President Grant and his counselors and with President Joseph F. Smith and those who were associated with him and are associated now in the leading councils of this Church. I know that they are prophets, seers and revelators in very deed. They are men of God, worthy the confidence and the following of this people, and if the people will follow them they will walk in paths which are straight and narrow and which lead to everlasting life.

THE OFFICE OF THE HOLY GHOST

By the power of the Holy Ghost which we through righteousness have a right to enjoy we know that all of those who have spoken in this conference in our hearing have spoken by the power of the Lord. They have spoken words of truth, and words which will make for salvation if we will receive them in good and honest hearts and live by them. This is the office of the Holy Ghost, who is a personage of spirit, one of the trinity of the Godhead. It is his mission and office to bear witness of the Father and of the Son and of the truth of all things. "No man may know that Jesus is the Lord except by the Holy Ghost."

A MARVELOUS MANIFESTATION

I want to say something about these other personages. I desire to call the attention of my hearers to an event which took place more than a century ago—to be more exact, in the spring of the year 1820—when God the Eternal Father and his Son Jesus Christ, in answer to humble but fervent prayer on the part of the boy, Joseph Smith, whom they had raised up for the ushering in of this Gospel Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, appeared to him in vision. I would call your attention to and have you visualize that wonderful manifestation, the greatest perhaps that ever did transpire. I know of no record or account of an occasion when both the Father and the Son have appeared to any individual at any previous time. I would call your attention to the importance and necessity of that wonderful revelation. You have but to consider today the lack of knowledge on the part of religionists the world over, pertaining to God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ and the Holy Ghost, to realize how necessary it was.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY

In 1820 it was just as necessary that this revelation should be given to the world as at any other time in the world's history, I am sure, and more needed because of the ushering in of the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. We have had the revelation now for more than a century, and as members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which Church has been established by inspiration from the Lord through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith and those who have succeeded him, we have accepted the Gospel and with it the responsibility of preaching it in all the world as a witness before the end comes. For a century we have tried to present this message to the world, that God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ have revealed themselves anew to man on the earth, and that the children of men need no longer be in spiritual darkness pertaining to the personality and the attributes of these heavenly beings and the relationship which we sustain to them.

IMMORTAL BEINGS

You know the story of the appearing of the Father and the Son to Joseph Smith. Think of it, as the Father and the Son stood there we see them as men, not as women, nor as angels, nor anything else. They stood in the midst of a light although it was at midday, brighter than the noonday sun, and their countenances shone with a glory that was beyond description, showing that they were something more than are we mortal men. And what are they? They are immortal beings. And what are immortal beings? Immortal beings are those who have passed through the change by which there is a separation of the body and the spirit, and then the resurrection, which is a uniting of the body and the spirit, so that there will be no more any separation. And this inseparable connection of body and spirit is necessary in order that one may obtain eternal life. In these heavenly personages we see two immortal beings, two beings who are glorified and exalted, and one of them is the Father, and the other the Son—there can be no question about that, because the personage speaking said to the boy, "This is my Beloved Son, hear him."

CONTRARY TO SECTARIAN BELIEF

Now we come to the scriptures to find out if that is in keeping with the New Testament, and we find that it is. Yet the whole Christian world believe otherwise and have tried to disprove this for more than a century, but they have signally failed and they forever will fail, for they cannot prove the truth a lie. The Gospel which we have received, with its principles and ordinances, is just as foreign to the views and ideas of the sectarian world as is the fact of the personality of God the Father, his Son Jesus Christ, and the Holy Ghost, and yet it is scriptural and true. The belief that is almost universal is that God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ are not personages having bodies of flesh and bones, but that they are something having no body, no parts, no passions; and that Jesus Christ has done for us all that is necessary to be done except to believe on him. I want to say that that is a grave and serious mistake. There has been a falling away from the true Gospel of the Master. Ordinances have been changed, the laws of the Gospel have been transgressed, the Everlasting Covenant has been broken, as it has been predicted they would be.

GOSPEL TRUTHS REVEALED ANEW

The Lord has revealed anew the Gospel of Jesus Christ in its fulness, and it comprises faith in God the Eternal Father, in his Son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost. It includes repentance from sin and baptism by immersion in water by one having authority, for the remission of sins and the fulfilment of the law. It includes the laying on of hands by those in authority for confirmation to membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and for the bestowal of the Holy Ghost. It includes other ordinances; and we have the holy priesthood. No man can under present rulings go into the temple to receive the ordinances there administered, above those of baptism and confirmation, without bearing the holy Melchizedek priesthood. And there are ordinances there administered which are absolutely necessary for those who would enter into the celestial kingdom, which makes the holding of and bearing worthily the Melchizedek priesthood, a condition necessary for any man to obtain a fulness of glory in the kingdom of God.

Do the world understand that? They have not the priesthood; they have no power to receive it, only as they come into the fold of Christ and receive it at the hands of those who have authority to confer it. That priesthood is conferred upon those only who are proven to be worthy, if those who have the conferring of it follow instructions given and the established order of the Church of Christ.

MARRIAGE FOR ETERNITY

There are other blessings and ordinances necessary to man's exaltation, that the sectarian world know not of; for instance, the eternity of the marriage covenant. Those who attain to a fulness of glory in the celestial kingdom are to have an eternal increase and a continuation of the seeds forever. It is unthinkable and untrue that that condition could exist without sustaining the marriage relation in the other world. But in order that men and women may live there as man and wife they must enter into most solemn covenants that they will be husband and wife for time and eternity, and there must be a solemn ceremony performed by one having authority, sealing them as husband and wife for time and eternity, and then they must live worthy otherwise to enter into the celestial kingdom.

OTHER REQUIREMENTS

There are commandments to be kept, laws to be obeyed, and there is service to be rendered. We have to engage in this work of preaching the Gospel abroad. We have to engage in the work of redeeming the dead. This is a service of the very highest type, like unto that which God our Father and his Son Jesus Christ rendered when the Father gave the Son, and the Son gave himself, to be the Redeemer and Savior of this world. Yes, and there are sins to be avoided. We are to learn to love the Lord our God with all our heart, might, mind and strength, and our neighbor as ourself, and manifest it in our life.

Should we not be thankful, Latter-day Saints, for the light of the everlasting Gospel, and although it entails sacrifice, service, self denial, etc., we know that in the end our reward will be ample, even that of eternal life.

I am grateful above all that I can express, for the understanding I have of the Gospel, and of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, and the testimony I have of the truth. I praise God for these things. May he add his blessings, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Presiding Bishop of the Church

I am happy, my brethren and sisters and friends, to associate with you at this time in this splendid conference and to partake of the spirit of this gathering. But I tremble in the occupancy of this position.

We have met together in this conference to consider matters pertaining to the welfare and progress not only of the Latter-day Saints, but of all mankind. The principles of this Gospel which we accept, and the practices which we endeavor to carry forward are, we consider, not only beneficial to us but to all the people of the earth. We realize that this Gospel has come to us as a free gift. That is, we have not organized it, but the Lord has established it, and we have been offered the opportunity to accept it and enjoy the benefits which come from obedience to it. I am sure that all that has been said in this conference is profitable to all men everywhere.

LEADERSHIP OF MOSES

I am reminded of the time when Moses had endeavored to lead the people of Israel out of Egypt into the promised land. After they had rejected his counsels and instruction, and the Lord had declared that they, as a people, should not enter into the promised land, they were kept in the wilderness until that generation had passed away, with one or two exceptions, and a new generation had grown up.

But under the leadership of Joshua they were permitted to go into the land of Canaan. After they had been in the land of Canaan and had subdued that country and had become established therein, many of them neglected the observance of the commandments of the Lord and fell away and were led into strange ways and to the worship of strange gods.

CHOOSE WHOM YOU WILL SERVE

We are told that shortly before his death Joshua called the people together and presented these matters to them. I should like to read to you briefly what he said:

"Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord.

"And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

FAITH IN GOD NEEDED

It seems to me that if there ever was a time in the history of the world when faith in the living God was necessary it is the present time—faith which will produce works of righteousness; faith which will enable men to live in accordance with the will of God and be able to walk in his paths; faith which will cause them to desire to consecrate themselves to the advancement of the purposes of the Lord. This will enable them also to cultivate the spirit of repentance, to realize from time to time, their shortcomings, their mistakes, and the things which they are doing contrary to the will of God, and to endeavor to overcome those things and thereby to develop in power, righteousness and truth.

PURPOSE OF GOSPEL

The Latter-day Saints believe that the Gospel comprehends the worship of the living God—the Father and the Son—as has been testified to by Brother Richards who has just spoken. We believe that this Gospel is intended for the welfare of all mankind. It will enable all who accept and live it to learn how to live together in unity in this life, and to prepare for eternity. It comprehends within itself those things which will help to promote not only the spiritual welfare of mankind, which is the most vital thing, but also their temporal progress.

CONSIDERATION FOR OTHERS

If this is the Gospel of Jesus Christ, what does it do for us? It helps us first to improve ourselves, to put our own lives in harmony with the principles which the Savior declared at the time when he was upon the earth, and which have been revealed anew in these days; to live lives of fairness, of justice, of mercy, of sympathy and of righteousness. It enables us also to cultivate greater consideration for our fellow men and desire for their progress and welfare. Likewise, it helps men to cultivate that spirit of repentance which is necessary in order to be able to overcome past mistakes, and to resist highmindedness, pride and selfishness.

PRIESTHOOD FOR GUIDANCE

So also is it important that all who have accepted this Gospel should be able to keep ourselves free from the worship of strange gods, that will interfere with our progress, whether it be that of wealth, the desire for excessive luxury, incorrect principles, or what not. The Church has within itself the power to aid greatly in the solution of temporal as well as spiritual problems that trouble mankind, because it has that inspired leadership which leads to truth—the basis of all real progress. In this connection you will realize that when Joshua spoke to the people of Israel he spoke as one who had been ordained to lead the people by the authority of the priesthood, which Moses had conferred upon him. So, in these days, we have those who are called to lead this people by the authority of the holy priesthood and hold the keys of the authority thereof. They labor in all humility and faith, and with a desire to serve the people as their servants, as was expressed to us last night by President Nibley.

DEMAND FOR A MODERN MOSES

Recently, in a number of magazines and newspapers, articles have appeared calling for a modern Moses to lead the people out of the temporal depression which prevails throughout the world. When such a desire is expressed the question naturally arises whether the counsels of such a leader would be given any more attention than were those of that prophet by the people among whom he lived. Mankind is always much the same, except as it may be imbued with faith and the Spirit of God. You will remember that Moses himself could not lead the people over whom he presided out of the wilderness, because they refused to accept his counsel, even though he spoke to them in the name of the Lord. They rejected him and, because of the rejection of the Lord through his servant, they failed to enter the promised land. But, in the thousands of years that have elapsed since the death of Moses, people have come to honor him as a prophet. As the Savior said, they honor the dead, but they stone the living prophets. It is probably natural for people to fail to accept the counsel of those who are in their midst—wise men, great men—who may be inspired to declare what is helpful and good for them.

INSPIRED LEADERSHIP IN THE CHURCH

The Latter-day Saints have been blessed in the leadership of men who have had wisdom and judgment. We believe not only in the teaching of spiritual things, but also of things that affect the temporal welfare of the Latter-day Saints and of mankind at large. The Lord has inspired his servants who lead this people, to declare the things that are good for them in the midst of this prevailing depression. I would like to recite to you some of the things that have been said by the leaders of this Church today, yesterday, the day before, and for a long time past, which affect the welfare not only of this people but of all mankind for good; and would have helped them to relieve themselves of much of the trouble that prevails today, if they had accepted and lived in accordance with these things. When I say these things I speak to myself as well as to you.

Here are some of the things which I desire to call briefly to your attention because I think they are important. They are counsels that have been given us that would save us from trouble, distress and tribulation:

Live within your Income: It is the only way to progress, peace and prosperity. President Brigham Young declared:

"Learn to do without that which you cannot purchase and pay for; and bring your minds into subjection that you must and will live within your means."

Cultivate Thrift: It is just as important for us to realize that we should save out of that which we earn for times of trouble and distress as it was for Egypt in the time of Joseph to save during the seven years of prosperity and of growing crops, for the seven years of famine and distress that would come after them. It has been said that capital represents the savings of civilization. We should put aside our savings in the form of cash and place those savings where they will be taken care of and where they will be secure. That requires wisdom and judgment.

Get out of Debt: We were told that last evening by President Ivins, and we have been counseled to this effect repeatedly in the past. How many of us have accepted that advice? All of us would be far better off if we had accepted it and observed it.

Avoid Speculation: One of the important causes of the present depression and of every other panic is excessive speculation during prosperous times. In 1929 the fever of speculation spread everywhere. It has been said that periods of prosperity and of hard times will recur as long as the agencies of production and exchange are strained to the limit to meet demands stimulated to extravagance by a universal passion of speculation.

Pay as You Go: We have been counseled again and again not to mortgage our futures. We should not be misled by those high pressure salesmen who will sell us continually on the promise of our being able to pay during our lifetime. Shall we profit by such counsel in the future?

Patronize Home Industry: We heard the counsel from President Grant last evening to support local industries, and we have heard it repeatedly from many other leaders of the Church. As stated by him, thousands, in fact I have been told by the Manufacturers' Association that in this State alone twenty thousand men and women, could be employed in addition to those already employed, if the people of this State were to buy the products that are manufactured here. In these intermountain states particularly greater encouragement and patronage of home manufactures on the part of people who live here are necessary for our mutual welfare, because we are not so favorably situated as the coast cities and others advantageously located for transportation rates and markets. But we have the raw materials, and it seems to me there should be nothing go out of this intermountain country as far as it is possible to avoid that is not in manufactured form. There should be no good reason why the price and quality of all our products should not favorably compete with others.

Watch your Markets—Avoid Over-production: The people have been advised by Church leaders to study market conditions and to avoid excessive production, whether in farm products or in prepared commodities. Agriculturists have been urged to diversify, and to produce for their own requirements as far as possible. President Brigham Young told the people: "Learn to sustain yourselves. Produce everything you need to eat, drink or wear." Industries have been encouraged to cater particularly to nearby markets. One of the most powerful causes of the trouble that exists today is because of the difference between production and consumption. It has been declared that prosperity is a state of equilibrium between production and consumption.

Overcome Selfishness—Avoid Greed: This counsel applies less to the Latter-day Saints probably than to any other group. But the prevalence of selfishness and greed among mankind has contributed greatly to the present situation. The free operation of economic laws is interfered with by selfish human interests. It has been said that the fundamental cause of unrighteousness is the desire for power and for wealth, coupled with the character and purpose of that desire.

OVERCOME PAST MISTAKES

My brethren and sisters, if we as a people had in past years observed these instructions, referred to here very briefly, we should hardly have noticed the depression. It would scarcely affect us, certainly not nearly to the extent that it has done up to the present time. If we will learn from our mistakes and repent of our shortsightedness and our failure to observe the counsel and advice of these men who stand here to lead and guide us, we shall profit in the future. And if the people of this nation and the world would generally observe these instructions which have been given from time to time by the inspired leaders of the Church, all would be far better off and there would not be suffering nearly to the same extent as that which has occurred. Neglect to follow such rules has contributed very largely to produce the present unfavorable conditions.

CRITICAL ATTITUDE CAUSED BY ADVERSITY

A critical attitude is prevalent at present throughout the earth with relation to existing conditions. Such an attitude is probably to be expected because of the adverse circumstances and the suffering that many people are going through for lack even of the necessities of life. They are almost desperate. It is, of course, very important that everything possible should be done through cooperation, by donations and every other available means to prevent suffering and assure at least the necessities of life for people everywhere. It is vital, also, that everyone, as far as possible, shall be given opportunity to work.

PANACEAS SUGGESTED

Many panaceas have been suggested to avoid the recurrence of such conditions as prevail at present. Some are constructive; others are destructive. Some proposals are altruistic in nature; others are utterly selfish. There are those who would forcibly and unlawfully take the property of others in violation of the rights guaranteed to all citizens under the Constitution. Naturally, the representatives of the people in Congress can, with the approval of the President, proceed to change the laws wherever necessary to protect the citizens as a whole from improper aggrandizement of property by a few, and to promote the general welfare. You cannot legislate righteousness into people, but you can and should bring about, through the law-enforcing agencies general respect for and observance of law.

ALL THINGS IN COMMON

There are others who advocate the principle of having all things in common. That is a very fine doctrine. Any group that can subscribe to it wholeheartedly, labor unitedly, wisely and diligently for the welfare of the whole, and maintain loyalty, altruism and kindness constantly, can doubtless succeed in developing a splendid community. But it requires all of these qualities. There needs to be entire banishment of envy and greed from the hearts of those who would undertake it. How many are able to maintain the unselfishness necessary to bring about such a desirable condition?

Then, there is the doctrine of communism, which is more extreme. Under such a system the properties of others might be forcibly taken for its adherents, and control exercised in all matters pertaining to labor, religion, and social relations. Some English writer, in a satirical mood, has given the following definition of communism in the extreme:

"What is a communist? One who has yearnings
For an equal division of unequal earnings;
Sluggard or scoundrel, or both, he is willing To fork out his penny and pocket your shilling."

Such a description may not apply to many people, but it does apply to some who are selfish and covetous in their desires, and are not willing to do their part in helping to earn and to promote the welfare of the entire community.

CHURCH STANDS FOR GREATER EQUALITY

It is desirable, as stated by President Nibley this morning, that there should be greater equality of wealth, and greater consideration on the part of those who have means in giving for the benefit of those who are not so favorably situated. Consideration by men for their fellows must be ingrained in them by some power other than politics, and that must, apparently, be through religion. The Gospel of Jesus Christ as taught and practiced by this people is, in my judgment, the most effective means for the promotion of greater mutual interest. The Church stands for greater equality and cooperation among mankind, without in any way interfering with individual initiative. Any legislation that will help to promote the mutual welfare of all, and control the aggrandizement of wealth is, in my judgment, fully justified. Faithful Church members show continually their consideration for others by the spirit of brotherly kindness, and by material contributions for the temporal and spiritual welfare of their fellows.

GOSPEL PROMOTES SPIRIT OF CONSECRATION

The teachings of "Mormonism" are and always have been of such character as to stimulate in those who accept them the spirit of consecration of their time, means and efforts to the welfare of others as well as themselves. The observance of the principle of tithing, of fasting and fast offerings, relief of those in need, the missionary work, community building, all help to promote, through service to the Lord, the interests of our fellow members.

OBEY THE LAW OF TITHING

We have been continually encouraged to obey the law of tithing. It is a most effective test of our faith in God and his work. It helps to raise us to higher standards. It is a means for our temporal as well as our spiritual progress. Obedience to this law will aid us to conserve our property and to develop prudence and foresight in our affairs. The prophet Malachi declared anciently that if the Hebrews would observe this principle faithfully they should be materially blessed and the Lord would rebuke the devourer for their sakes.

If we accept the principle of tithing in a half-hearted way, fearing that we are going to give too much or are making too great a sacrifice, we shall not enjoy the blessings which the Lord has promised. But if we give liberally in the spirit of that principle we shall be blessed. President Brigham Young declared on one occasion: "I would not give the ashes of a rye straw for the man who feels that he is making sacrifice for God. We are doing this for our own happiness, welfare and exaltation, and nobody's else." Every principle of the Gospel is a privilege for us. It is a means for our growth and development, and if we shall observe it we shall enjoy the blessings that follow.

CULTIVATE CONTRITENESS OF SPIRIT

My brethren and sisters, I think we should accept and observe the counsels that are given to us by the Presidency of the Church and the other leaders who are inspired of God. In the spirit of humility we should cultivate the faith and repentance which is necessary in order that we may walk uprightly and in accordance with the will of the Lord. I am reminded of a statement in the Book of Mormon where the voice of the Lord declared unto the people: "Ye shall offer for a sacrifice unto me a broken heart and a contrite spirit." And Kipling, in that wonderful poem, "The Recessional," after the great celebration in England at the time of the jubilee of Queen Victoria, reminded the people:

"Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart . . .
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget,—lest we forget."

May the Lord help each of us firmly to resolve in our hearts and minds that "as for me and my house we will serve the Lord," I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Choir sang the anthem, "Jesus Only."

Elder Milton H. Welling offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

THIRD DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The closing session of the Conference commenced promptly at 2 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, October 4, 1931, the attendance being similar to that at the previous meeting.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

The Tabernacle Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning."

Elder Thomas E. McKay, President of the Ogden Stake, offered the opening prayer.

President Grant announced that the beautiful flowers on the stand in front of the great organ had been sent in honor of Brother Evan Stephens, who led the Choir for the last time one year ago, he having since passed away. He further announced that the Choir would now sing the anthem, "God of Israel," which anthem Brother Stephens considered one of his best compositions.

The Choir then sang "God of Israel."

ELDER REED SMOOT

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

In the first place, my brethren and sisters, I want to offer my sincere thanks and gratitude to my Heavenly Father for the privilege I have of attending this wonderful conference. I have never attended one in my life where I have felt the Spirit of the living God so strongly.

BLESSINGS THROUGH ATTENDING CONFERENCES

I cannot understand how any person could attend services such as we have had during this conference without feeling at least that God was directing and his Spirit was present at every session.

It is indeed a privilege to attend these semi-annual conferences, and it is also a privilege to attend the conferences in the different stakes of Zion. My duties as a senator of the United States have prevented me from attending many of them. Since the war my calling has kept me in Washington most of the time and I have had the privilege only a few times of attending these conferences.

Last night I saw in this building every seat taken by men holding the priesthood. It was a wonderful sight, and the instructions and the spirit present impressed me as I never was impressed before with the duties that devolve upon the men holding the priesthood. I also felt the response that was made at that gathering last night. I could feel it in every word that was spoken and the expressions that followed. I could see that they touched the hearts of the men holding the holy priesthood in this Church, in a way that the labors in the different stakes from which they come would be carried on with a great deal more energy and confidence than they have been in the past.

TESTIMONY THROUGH PRAYER

My mother taught me that the way to receive a testimony of this work, and the way to maintain it, is to never cease praying; and she promised me as my mother that if I would follow that course I should always have a knowledge that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, and that this work is his work. Brethren and sisters, I have followed that counsel, and notwithstanding the positions to which I have been called that have taken me away from the body of the people, notwithstanding the year before that happened my avocation called me to meet men who actually ridiculed our belief and the question of God ever revealing himself to man, as being unreasonable and indefensible, thank God I have lived through it all. I thank God for the testimony I have that this is his work and that every prediction made by any servant of God in relation to it shall be fulfilled.

As I see conditions in the world today and contemplate them I know that if the great principles as taught by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints were universal in the world no such conditions would ever exist.

I pray God to "give me clean hands, clean words, and clean thoughts. Save me from habits that harm. Teach me to work as hard and play as fair in thy sight alone as if all the world saw. Forgive me when I am unkind, and help me to forgive those who are unkind to me. Keep me ready to serve others at some cost to myself. Send me chances to do a little good every day, and so grow more like Christ."

If we all lived strictly to the laws of the Church and the requirements of the Church that prayer would be answered by everyone who offered it. There are no people in the world that I know of who are better capable and more willing and whose numbers are such that the worthy poor among them can be better cared for.

CONDITIONS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

We have had pictures today of conditions existing, not half so bad as they are in the balance of the world. God knows what will come out of it, but I believe with all my soul that the times people are passing through today, not only in our own country but in the countries of the world, will cause them to turn their thoughts to a supreme power, the Creator of the world, the God we worship.

NOT A PRAYING NATION

I am afraid that our America is not a praying nation. I do not believe that there is a people on earth, compared by percentages, that pray to God every morning and night such as do the people of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Wherever I go, outside of the families of the Church and the conferences that I attend in different places in which the Church gathers, there are few places where prayer is offered. And sometimes when I hear prayer in other places it is like a tinkling cymbal and sounding brass. It goes in one ear and out of the other. No power whatever is back of it. It is mere words and nothing else.

IN CONGRESSIONAL ASSEMBLIES

I am thankful to my Heavenly Father that the Senate of the United States and the House of Representatives never begin a session without the offering of prayer. As I read history I find that when the first session of our Congress was held, which was in Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, September 5th, 1774, the question then arose as to whether it was proper to open that session with prayer. Thank the Lord there was a majority present who had shortly before passed through the horror of war. I think it was perhaps for that reason there was a decision made that every session of the Senate should be opened by prayer. That has continued down to the present time, and I notice, as I have said, that a majority were in favor of it. They were such men as George Washington, Patrick Henry, John Rutledge, Colonel Fulton, Peyton Randolph, Richard Henry Lee, John James, Isaac Law. I am not going to give the names of those who opposed it. The question arose as to whether they should kneel or whether they should stand. My brethren and sisters, I am thankful to my Heavenly Father that that practice has existed down to this day, and it would be a Godless nation if that were not followed. I am sure that the spirit that is asked for many times in the opening prayer is not made manifest a few minutes after the word "amen" is said. But yet it has its influence and I hope and trust that this shall never be a Godless nation.

NOT IN UNCLEAN TABERNACLES

I suppose you all know that I am a firm believer in the Word of Wisdom. I have lived it all my life, thanks to the mother who gave me birth. I know, my brethren and sisters, that he who does not abide by that law, he or she who robs his or her mind of good judgment by the use of intoxicating liquor cannot enjoy the Spirit of God. The Spirit of God never will live in an unclean tabernacle. You cannot tell me that a man—and I am sorry to have to say, 'as it has been quite prevalent in the world, or a woman—who imbibes the damnable stuff can have the companionship of the Spirit of God.

There is no people, according to the numbers, that obey this law as well as do the Latter-day Saints. But I want to say that we are far from perfect, in fact I have witnessed since I have been home members of the Church who have forgotten themselves in this regard. The prophetic spirit was with Joseph Smith a century ago when the Lord announced through him his calling, because of "the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth," and which has come and is coming in our day. The "spirit of prophecy," which is "the testimony of Jesus," also was with him when the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was brought into existence. It brought not a new religion, but a restatement of the old, with its divine authority, gifts and blessings, "the power of God unto salvation."

MORE GODLINESS OR MORE GODLESSNESS?

And now, what are we Latter-day Saints going to do about it? Shall we awaken to a renewed effort to learn the word of God? Shall we teach our young men and young women more of godliness through actual, intimate knowledge of the scriptures, and less of the godlessness that comes through men's self-glorification in a presumed knowledge which really is not actual knowledge, but which holds the domain of speculation and skepticism? Shall we cling more closely than ever to God-given facts, whether in doctrine, in prophecy or in history? On our reply in practical service depends our own salvation and the salvation of many to whom our precept and example shall come.

THE SPIRITUAL FACTOR

Of the religious aspect, Sir Hubert Barker writes in the London Daily Mail: "The spiritual benightedness of modern men is the paramount evil of our age. Man must advance more swiftly on his spiritual side. It is always the spiritual factor that determines man's destiny. If the churches have become a by-word with thinking men, it is because they have turned from religion to ecclesiasticism."

The wise man said, Proverbs fourth chapter, seventh verse: "With all thy getting get understanding." My suggestion to those who would be instructors is that they lead their students to "get understanding;" otherwise there comes misunderstanding and unbelief.

Another feature to which our present attention may be called is that the prevailing atheistic instruction which permeates our universities, and our schools, and our social and other clubs, is the chief direct and potent cause of the great crime wave of which we hear and see so much in public discussions today. Israel's great Psalmist has said (Psalms 14:1 and 53:1): "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. They are corrupt and have done abominable works."

The criminals in our land today pursue their vocation in the thought that there is no God. The gangster that sometimes takes charge of things in our great cities and makes the police force seem pitifully helpless, has his chief potency in the thought that there is no God. He may be caught, serve in prison, but when released goes on in his career of crime. When protested with, he says: "What difference does it make? No one can touch me until I am caught at it. And I don't expect to be caught again." His thought clearly indicates by both word and act that there is no God.

It is the mission of the Latter-day Saints, in their Church designation, that by thought and word and action they testify to the world that there is a God who is mindful of his children if they will but heed his word. Where God lives in the souls and minds of men there is peace and righteousness; but otherwise not.

My brethren and sisters, God bless us. God prepare his Church and those who are directing the affairs of it that it shall fulfil the destiny that he has in store for it, whether it comes in this decade or in decades to come. It is the duty, and I may say the pleasure, of God's people to bring into the world the light, the life, the teachings of the Master, Jesus Christ. This I pray for, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER NOAH S. POND

Former President of the Northern States Mission

My brethren and sisters, I think of all the surprises that have come to me, this is the greatest one. I have rejoiced exceedingly in what it has been my privilege to hear in the sessions of this conference.

I am deeply grateful for the blessing that came to me of presiding over the Northern States mission, and I have earnestly desired that I should come home and be as happily engaged in the service of the Lord in the future as I have been in the past. Sister Pond and our sons have likewise enjoyed the blessings of our missionary experiences, in the growth of Relief Society and other activities.

I can but briefly refer to and give you a faint impression of the feelings that fill the heart of one laboring in the ministry. I know, my brethren and sisters, that all of us at home are missionaries. Responsibility in the Church, membership in the Church, the acceptance of responsibility in the priesthood, constitute us missionaries. But until we go out into the world we do not have a full realization of the importance of our testimonies.

It has been my privilege to stand where the prophets of God have stood. I have been in those memorable cities where the Prophet Joseph, Brigham Young, Sidney Rigdon, Oliver Cowdery, Orson Pratt, Parley P. Pratt and others of our fine leaders in the early history of the Church have ministered. I have stood where President John Taylor stood when he organized the first branch of the Church, nearly a hundred years ago, in the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, and I thought I could actually feel the spirit of that prophet of God. I remember when that Sabbath occurred. I had referred to the history of the Church for verification of time and place and to know that it was true to history.

Early in this past year when Justice Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, approaching the ninetieth year of his mortal life, rendered one of the decisions of the Supreme Court, indicative of the power of his mentality, and the statement was flashed over the country that he bore in his body the bullets that were fired into it by Confederate soldiers, I thought: Well, even this remarkable incident is paralleled in the history of our Church. Like Justice Holmes, President John Taylor, when he organized that branch in Indianapolis, carried within his body the bullets that the assassins had fired into it, and that grand President of the Church carried those assassins' bullets in his body to the grave, and died in exile. A beautiful chapel now stands in Indianapolis where President Taylor organized the first branch. Likewise five other chapels have been erected during the past three and one-half years in Detroit, Columbus, Cincinnati, Dayton and Chicago.

I have seen the sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters of those leaders of the Church following in the footsteps of their worthy ancestors and preaching as honestly and as sincerely the principles of the Gospel as they were preached fifty, seventy-five or eighty years ago. I have stood at the doorsteps of the homes of our leaders, Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Lorenzo Snow, John Taylor, the Pratts, the Snows—those brick houses are standing or falling into decay, but they are mute and silent testimonies of the substantial solidarity of the building of our people, even the homes that they inhabited. And those memorable cities of Nauvoo, Illinois, and Kirtland, Ohio, where the Saints erected temples in the name and honor of God, have greatly degenerated. I never could have believed that the hand of God would be manifested so powerfully, so positively upon such spots, people, sections and localities, as I have seen in these, the dearest spots in all the world—Kirtland, Ohio, and Nauvoo, Illinois—where temples of God were raised in this century of the existence of our Church and which were so glorious in the beginning of our history.

I bear you my humble testimony, and pray our father's blessings upon his servants. They are as true and as fine in their prophetic calling and leadership today as were those who were called at the inception of the Church. This is my testimony of the divinity of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, in the name of our Savior and Master, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I have called for several of the returned mission presidents a number of times, to come to the stand and speak to us, but they have not been present. I shall not call out again the names of those who have not yet spoken here for fear they are not present. But I would like that at any time any one of the returned mission presidents is in conference, who has not had the opportunity of bearing his testimony, he would notify me so that he will not be overlooked. With the exception of two we have now heard from all returned mission presidents.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have selected a text. This is not usual with me, but the experiences of this conference have been such that I would like to refer to it if I am so led. I feel very humble to stand in the presence of this great audience and very much do I desire an interest in your faith and prayers, that the delightful influences that have pervaded our conference, and the inspiration of the Lord that has been upon those who have addressed us may be with me.

ABSENT ONES

These beautiful flowers are the offering of Sister Sarah Daniels, the good woman who kept house for Evan Stephens for years prior to his demise. They were brought by her in remembrance of Brother Stephens who directed the Choir in our conference a year ago.

I have been lonesome during this conference for some of the absent brethren who were here six months ago. Since then Elders Orson F. Whitney and Rey L. Pratt have passed to the Great Beyond. They were two of the beloved leaders in Israel and nobody can take their places. Elders John A. Widtsoe and Joseph W. McMurrin are also absent in the mission field rendering service.

LOVE FOR THE BRETHREN

My heart is tender today and my feelings are subdued as I realize the bounteous blessings of the Lord bestowed upon me and mine. It is a priceless privilege to live in an atmosphere such as we enjoy in this Church and to associate with good men and women who are interested in benefiting all mankind. The companionship of the leaders of Israel is to me a blessing, the value of which cannot be measured. These leaders on this stand are representatives of our Heavenly Father and I love them as if they were my own flesh and blood.

As I associate with the General Authorities, stake presidents, high councilors, bishops, and the leaders in the various departments of the Church, from the depths of my soul I feel grateful for the opportunity that has been mine in life, to have as my companions the kindest, holiest and best men and women that this world knows anything about.

In I. John, 3rd Chapter and 14th Verse we read:

"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

What a wonderful thing it is to belong to an organization that teaches that very thing, and not only teaches it by word of mouth, but exemplifies it in so many marvelous ways. How grateful we should be to our Heavenly Father that those with whom we are permitted to associate are dependable, and that we can love them and have their companionship.

TEACHING THE WORLD

A number of years ago I was riding with a man in the East. I told him where I was from, that I was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and he asked: "Is that church still in existence in Utah?" I replied, "Yes, and growing rapidly." I thought then: Will it ever be possible for us to convince the world that this is the Lord's work? Although it encounters many obstacles it goes forward constantly. It would seem an impossible task to personally contact and teach the Gospel to all people, but with the radio countless thousands, many of them living far away, may hear the servants of the Lord teach the truth. I was recently in Winnipeg, Canada, and was there told that some of the finest programs they hear are those from Salt Lake City. Often they tune in on KSL and hear the sermons that are delivered on Sunday evening. In every case of that kind people have spoken appreciatively of what they are permitted to enjoy.

We are living in a marvelous age, at a time when the Lord has not only inspired his children to do wonderful things to make our existence more pleasant here, but has revealed his Gospel anew and established his Church to prepare us for the celestial kingdom. It is difficult to bring people to an understanding of the fact that this Gospel is not the work of man, but is our Father's work, given to us in this latter day for the blessing of all mankind.

INTEREST IN THE CHURCH GROWING

During the year I have visited four of the mission fields of the United States, three of them from one end to the other, and in every mission I have found delightful people who are interested in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

In the Texas mission one young man, who was the religious editor of a newspaper, came to our meetings, and then asked if he might come to the hotel and talk with us. We visited with him. That is less than a year ago now, and only within the last two or three days I have learned that he has joined the Church because of the blessing that he feels will come to him by such a membership.

In some places I found that our chapels are not large enough to hold the conference congregations. In several cities people came in such numbers that we could not make them comfortable, and the audiences, in many cases, were composed mostly of those who are not members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The work of the Lord is going forward. The teachings of our Redeemer are finding a lodgment in the hearts of the children of men. The spirit of prayer is abroad, and I would like to say that it is pleasing to me, as I go into the homes of non-members, to find that many are anxious to approach the Lord in prayer, and the servants of the Lord are asked to pray with them, showing their faith in the power and blessing of prayer. But it seems strange that it is so difficult for many people to understand the plan of salvation.

TEACHINGS OF THE REDEEMER

The discourses that have been delivered from this stand during this conference have been delightful to me. Nothing has been said that anybody could take exception to or that anyone would not be pleased to accept. What has been said has been in conformity to the teachings of Jesus Christ our Lord. We believe in faith, in repentance, in baptism by immersion for the remission of sins and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. These are the teachings of the Redeemer of mankind, and he has called upon us in this latter day to teach all people these glorious truths and others that have been revealed.

When I visit the sons and daughters of the Latter-day Saints in the mission field, and discover how they grow in strength and power and in grace before the Lord, and how they are able in their humble way to explain the principles of the Gospel to the convincing of many of our Father's children, I am thankful indeed. I wonder if the Latter-day Saints really appreciate what a contribution they are offering to the world when they send out these young men, and in many cases young women, who are giving their time and such information as they possess in order that others may enjoy the blessings of which we partake.

ALL CANNOT UNDERSTAND

The scriptures inform us that all will not understand the Gospel. (See I Cor. 1:18.)

"For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God."

Is that not true? Has your missionary experience not brought to you that realization, as it did to Paul, that those who refuse the truth are on the way to perishing? They do not comprehend, and the Gospel of Jesus Christ is but foolishness unto them. Many are good men and good women, but they cannot understand. To you who have been baptized into his Church and have been obedient to his requirements the Gospel of Jesus Christ is an anchor and brings to you a satisfaction that can come in no other way.

ANXIOUS TO DIVIDE WITH OTHERS

As I read the scriptures, not only the Old and the New Testaments, but the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price, I marvel at the goodness of the Lord to bless those who accept his teachings, for we find more comfort in these sacred records than in all the philosophies of the ages, as given to us by the wisdom of men.

Standing here as one of the weakest and humblest among you, I feel to praise my Heavenly Father for the testimony that he has given to me that this is his Church. Oh, how I wish that the good people of all denominations might really know what we are seeking to divide with them! I meet members of the Catholic, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, the Methodist, and all the other churches, and I find in these men and women virtues that are most beautiful to me. But I find that they are so rooted in the organizations with which they are identified that when I try to explain to them what we are doing, they seem mystified; they are not able to understand. One man said to me, "Would you have us give up all that we have had, all these blessings that we have enjoyed, to join your church?" I replied: "Not a blessing, not one good thing would we ask you to give up. But we do say to you, we will be glad to divide with you, if you will permit us so to do, without cost to you, some of the blessings of our Heavenly Father that have been kept from you in the past which are now at your very door."

It is not the purpose of this Church to make statements that would hurt the feelings of those who do not understand things. This Church is not one that goes about criticising and finding fault with others, but in the spirit of loving kindness and the desire to be helpful, its representatives carry the Gospel message to the nations of the earth. This unusual missionary service is attracting world-wide attention. By the thousands the sons of God, bearing the priesthood, and some of his daughters, have gone to the uttermost corners of the earth, paying their own expenses, for the purpose of sharing with our Father's children his precious truths which would be so helpful to them if they would but accept them and make them part of their lives.

THE WISDOM OF THE WISE

The scripture that I last read is followed by this:

"For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent."

And in another place we read:

"The wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

In analyzing the distressed condition of the world at the present time and realizing that the greatest minds of all lands in studying our problems are utterly helpless to meet the issue, I am persuaded that until they turn to him whose children they are and acknowledge the Father who is so anxious to bless, until they will give him an opportunity to inspire them, they will continue to grope in uncertainty and fail to solve the problems that afflict mankind. The difficulties for which we are now seeking remedies are the result of forsaking the teachings of the Lord and depending upon the wisdom of men.

THE PANACEA

If I were to voice what is in my heart it would seem egotistical to some, but I say to all men everywhere, examine the teachings of the Gospel of our Lord as revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith, search them prayerfully, and you shall find the panacea for the ills of this world, and it will be discovered in no other way.

I believe that, as I believe that I live, and when I speak thus it is with the fervent desire that in some way we may be able to interest our Father's children and bring them to an understanding of his truth, that the errors and mistakes of mankind may be neutralized, that the power of evil may be turned aside, and that his children everywhere may be induced to glorify his name.

OUR DUTY

Think of the great and good men who have taught the Gospel of Jesus Christ, from the days of Joseph Smith until the present time, and how often their words have fallen upon dull ears throughout the world. I realize that the time is coming, however, and our Heavenly Father has so decreed, that all shall know. But in the meantime, it is your duty and mine, not only to teach the truth but to let our light so shine, by our conduct in life, that others, observing our good works, may be constrained to glorify his name.

It is your duty and mine, as we go to and fro among our companions day by day, to radiate such an influence that they will be led to investigate the cause of the peace and happiness that dwells with those who serve God and keep his commandments. It is not necessary that we be called upon missions for that. Right here at home and in all nations there are hundreds and thousands of good men and women who are not yet touched by the Gospel of Jesus Christ, many of whom did they but understand what you understand, would be glad to conform to the requirements of our Heavenly Father and partake of his blessings. If in our homes and in our business affairs, if in our lives everywhere, we will go about radiating that love that should be in every heart, that kindness that should possess every Latter-day Saint, (and particularly in these times when conditions are so serious for many) many men and many women will rise up to call us blessed, not only for the creature comforts that we may bestow, but because of the hope of eternal life that we have been the instruments in the hands of God of placing before them in a comprehensive way.

Some of the greatest mission fields in all the world are the abiding places of the Latter-day Saints, the towns and villages where we live, and if we would but do what our Father desires us to do, the beauty of the Gospel of our Redeemer would be realized by the children of men, and we would all be made happier to see our Father's children—every one of them dear to him and precious in his sight—drawing near to him, that they might obtain the blessings that he has promised those who serve him and keep his commandments.

THE AUTHORITY OF THE LORD

I know that the authority of the Lord is here. I know that the man who stands at the head of this Church is inspired, and I wish that all of you might know of his willingness to sacrifice for the blessing of those to whom he ministers. I wish you could all know of the faith and devotion of his counselors, as they sit hour by hour giving the very best that is in their lives, to plan for the good of humanity, not only for us but for all mankind.

I wish you could be associated as I have had the privilege of being with the good men who lead the Church, the First Presidency, the Quorum of the Twelve, the Patriarch, the First Council of Seventy and the Presiding Bishopric, these men whose lives are devoted to the blessings of mankind. I wish you could know them as I know them. I want to say that if you did, no one would come to you with any suggestion of wrong-doing charged against them without being defended by you, realizing that they are indeed the servants of the Lord

GRATITUDE FOR BLESSINGS

I am grateful for my fellowship in this Church. I have never asked for positions of honor. I have always been pleased to work wherever I have been called, and in the mercy of the Lord he has given me strength, thus far, to carry out in part the requirements that have been made of me. I stand here my heart filled with gratitude to him who rules and reigns on high, for the privilege that I enjoy at this moment, being with this marvelous congregation, and of talking to you as I am permitted to do, and I hope that his children who may be listening in will feel the blessing that we enjoy, as this service proceeds under the direction of the Prophet of the Lord.

GOD'S WORK

This is God's work. It is not the work of any man. No man or set of men could have carried it forward and made it successful in the face of the opposition of the world. Many times they have felt that the end of the Church had come, and each time by the majesty of his power, the Lord has lifted it up, and it has gone forward from city to city, from village to village, from nation to nation, and here in the tops of the everlasting hills he has fulfilled his revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith, that the people were to become a mighty people in the midst of the Rocky Mountains.

Our work has only just begun. As I look into the future and realize the possibilities, the prayer that is in my heart is Father in heaven, help us that we may resist evil, that we may banish from our lives selfishness, that we may love one another, and wherever we may go, that those to whom we minister may feel that love and be touched thereby, that they may desire to be members of such an organization as this.

I pray that the Lord will bless him who presides over us and bless his counselors, that they may live long to direct us, that they may continue to labor under the inspiration of our Heavenly Father, for I know that they have labored that way in the past. May we who labor under their direction, we who serve in the various departments of this Church, live so near to him who rules and reigns on high that we will know our duty when the word is spoken by those whom he has called to preside and that we may not be swayed by the fallacies, the foolishness and the philosophies of men.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters, and his children everywhere in the world, that his power and the inspiration of his Spirit, and the knowledge of his truth may come to them, that this world may become filled with the glory of righteousness, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn "Come, let us anew."

ELDER MELVIN J. BALLARD

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

A hundred years ago this last June the Lord Jesus Christ delivered a message to the Church that I consider most important and applicable just now, and I desire to read a portion of it from the fifty-sixth section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants:

"Wo unto you rich men, that will not give your substance to the poor, for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of visitation, and of judgment, and of indignation: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved!"

The only security that rich men have today comes out of obedience to law and order, and unless there is a liberal giving I am sure that great uncertainty may be experienced by those of great wealth.

THE RICH MAN'S OBLIGATION

What should a rich man give? His tenth. That belongs to the Lord, for man is but a steward of it. I do feel to rejoice in my heart that in this Church we do have men of means who give their tenth.

But, oh, how difficult it is for some to pay an honest titling when they make much money! They can do it very well when their income is small, but when they get to the point of giving a hundred dollars it is about as far as many can go, no matter what their income may be.

I wish that throughout the whole length of the land today every man of wealth would feel his obligation to the Lord Almighty for his stewardship, and that he would give one-tenth at least of his income each year for the charity that is so necessary to provide for the hungry. As I have seen in various sections of this country great groups of hungry and idle men who seek work, it would seem to be but a simple thing that they, like in Russia, would reach the point where they would take possession of property unlawfully and illegally. There is only one way by which that may be averted. They must be fed, they must be cared for.

EVERY MAN A BEGGAR

There may be an objection, however, that these have been unwise men and are suffering for their own sins. But nevertheless, let me read what the Lord has to say on that subject also, because the people referred to in the Book of Mormon, I presume, had times very much like ours. In the fourth chapter of Mosiah I read the following:

"And also, ye yourselves will succor those that stand in need of your succor; ye will administer of your substance unto him that standeth in need; and ye will not suffer that the beggar putteth up his petition to you in vain, and turn him out to perish.

"Perhaps thou shalt say: The man has brought upon himself his misery; therefore I will stay my hand, and will not give unto him of my food, nor impart unto him of my substance that he may not suffer, for his punishments are just—

"But I say unto you, O man, whosoever doeth this the same hath great cause to repent; and except he repenteth of that which he hath done he perisheth forever, and hath no interest in the kingdom of God.

"For behold, are we not all beggars? Do we not all depend upon the same Being, even God, for all the substance which we have, for both food and raiment, and for gold, and for silver, and for all the riches which we have of every kind?

"And behold, even at this time, ye have been calling on his name, and begging for a remission of your sins. And has he suffered that ye have begged in vain?"

Every man needs the pardon of God. Every man is a beggar, because he is pleading for that which he does not have himself, though he may be possessed of all the wealth of the world. One thing the Lord has clearly indicated is that no matter how worthy or unworthy, every one of his children should have food and shelter. Beyond that, however, we may not be able to go.

A WORD TO THE POOR

And now, a word to those who are in need, the poor. I am reading again from the fifty-sixth section of the Doctrine and Covenants, the balance of that admonition:

"Wo unto you poor men, whose hearts are not broken, whose spirits are not contrite, and whose bellies are not satisfied, and whose hands are not stayed from laying hold upon other men's goods, whose eyes are full of greediness, and who will not labor with your own hands!"

Their attitude is equally as objectionable in the sight of the Lord as that of the stingy rich. Let the poor, therefore, not be possessed of the spirit of Bolshevism that would unlawfully take possession of that which does not belong to them.

I am pleading that the Latter-day Saints will respond to the appeals that are made. Last night the Presiding Bishop of our Church informed the brethren that every bishop in a ward where Latter-day Saints are in a majority should care for the hungry and see that none goes without food or shelter, whether he belongs to this Church or not; and that is why we need the support of your tithes and offerings, that the poor may not lift up their appeals in vain. And the poor who receive these blessings must be patient. This is not the time for them to be possessed of other men's goods. They must be wise and prudent in the future, to store up against such a day as this, and consider themselves fortunate that they are provided with food and shelter during these trying times. They should not become envious and jealous and full of the spirit of anarchy. That is not the spirit of the Christ.

THE LORD'S PROMISE

"But blessed are the poor," the Lord continues—and I would add, and I feel sure it is in harmony with the spirit of this text—blessed are the rich too—"who are pure in heart, whose hearts are broken, and whose spirits are contrite, for they shall see the kingdom of God coming in power and great glory unto their deliverance; for the fatness of the earth shall be theirs.

"For behold, the Lord shall come, and his recompense shall be with him, and he shall reward every man, and the poor shall rejoice;

"And their generations shall inherit the earth from generation to generation, forever and ever."

Such a promise will be realized and that through the coming of the kingdom of God.

DEVELOPMENT IN ADVERSITY

I believe that these experiences through which we are now passing all have their lesson. What is the lesson the Latter-day Saints should learn from the experiences of today? But three or four years ago, in the midst of our greatest prosperity, I was attracted by a question propounded to Mr. C. W. Barron, who owned the Wall Street Journal—I think he has since passed away—one of the greatest financiers of our country. Some man had declared that there would be a hundred years of uninterrupted prosperity in the United States, and to that proposition Mr. Barron answered:

"Will there be a hundred years of uninterrupted prosperity?" I asked. He shook his head.

"Why not?"

"I expected him to show me a chart or say something about the 'business cycle,' or 'economic fundamentals,' or to use some of the other well-worn phrases. But to my relief he took an entirely different approach.

"There will not be a century of uninterrupted good times, because the universe is not arranged on that basis," he said. "What is taking place on this earth is a great experiment in the development of human character. The Creator is not interested in money or markets, but in more enduring men.

"Such men are not developed when everything is easy. They never come out of the countries where the sun shines every day. Trials develop them; problems develop them; suffering develops them. As long as the present Divine plans continue to operate, we shall continue to have enough setbacks to keep the race from growing altogether soft. Years ago, Roger Babson made a chart on which one wavy line represented national prosperity and the other wavy line showed church membership. It was decidedly interesting. When money rolls in too easily and too long, men drift away, not only from their churches, but from hard work and simple living; they form extravagant tastes; they take long chances.

"Then came the panic. Their easy wealth evaporates. They clear their lives of rubbish and start in again on the sound basis of economy, worship and work. Sometime the race may develop to a point where it can stand prosperity all the time, but in our present state hard times still have their needed work to do."

GOD'S PLAN TO BE ESTABLISHED

Yes, I believe there will come a time when we can stand prosperity all the time, and that time will be when that order which God established in the heavens before man lived upon the earth, is set up.

Upon various occasions in the past the Lord has endeavored to establish that order—in the days of Enoch, as referred to by President Nibley this morning, and in the days of Christ himself while he ministered among men upon the eastern hemisphere and upon the western hemisphere also. He has revealed to this Church his plan for the equitable distribution of the wealth of the world, which is his. We have gone forward marvelously in mass production; and now, brethren and sisters, it is essential that we shall have mass distribution. We will have these recurring periods until the people learn, as learn I believe they will in time through these experiences, to let the Lord's plan become established.

THE LORD'S RENTAL

I am happy that the Church, a hundred years nearer the solution of this problem than anyone else, is making headway. Sometime after the order referred to was revealed to the Prophet the Lord gave the law of tithing. That is the thing that concerns us now. It is the schoolmaster to prepare us for this greater, this bigger thing. The law of tithing is just and righteous. We need the blessing of the Lord today, of a material character. No man would think for a moment that he was not under obligation to pay rental to the owner for land that he tilled; and yet the owner cannot guarantee that the rain shall fall, that the snow shall come in the mountains, that the moisture so essential shall be provided, that the sun will shine, that the grain will germinate, that the harvest will come. Someone else must provide these essentials without which your farm is of little more value than an ash heap.

Who provides these other important blessings? The Lord Almighty. Is he entitled to recognition and rental? Yes. The earth is the Lord's. It belongs to him, and we are but tenants. We owe him a rental, and he has enjoined upon us that a just rental is ten per cent of that which we obtain from the soil and from our labor. You expect, I am sure, to live in an eternal world with an eternal possession. How can any man who understands this law hope to have an eternal inheritance in this world, celestialized by the power of Christ, unless he has paid his tithing? It is the law of inheritance. He will establish a right to an eternal inheritance if he has paid his rental.

CHURCH GROWTH

The Lord's work, however, is making progress. It is going forward. I am not disturbed by the things that are now occurring. In the beginning of this Church he declared that the time had come when everything would be shaken that could be shaken and that that which he had established would stand. The Lord has been shaking to the very foundation the fortresses of evil, of error, of darkness, of skepticism, and of apostasy. The Lord has been building up the truth by the same process. Just a slight reference to it: A recent report of the census of the United States reveals the fact that in the last decade, of the twenty-three religious denominations of the United States six of them show a loss of membership. This Church is one of the twenty-three, but there is not another one in the group whose percentage of growth is equal to the growth of this Church.

The Christian Herald of recent issue calls attention to the fact that last year, 1930, the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of this Church, for the first time in one hundred years the Methodist Church of the United States lost membership. Its loss was 42,211 souls. The Presbyterian Church's loss was 22,763 souls, while the great Catholic Church, the largest Christian religion in the United States, had a growth of only 17,526 souls, a growth that this Church exceeded last year. The growth of total membership in the year 1928 in the United States was a million souls, the next year it dropped to 242,000, and the following year, last year, it was 88,000. The Lord Almighty is shaking the foundations of error and man-made institutions, while this, his work, stands all the tests that have been applied to it, the test of mob violence, the test of persecution, and now I am sure it will stand whatever test the future holds for we are founded upon the truth.

PROPHESIES GOOD FOR ZION

God help us, my brethren and sisters, to see our glorious opportunity, to adhere more closely than ever before to these Gospel principles. Don't you brethren become discouraged. Don't you leave your farms. This is no time to sell your land, no time to desert your flocks and herds. I prophesy good for Zion if the Latter-day Saints will only serve God and keep his commandments. You shall be delivered financially, delivered from that which oppresses you, but among the wicked there shall be times of trouble. The devil is in the earth to try to reclaim his kingdom. God is here to help the progress of his work, for that glorious day of the coming of his Son must arrive, and the Lord Almighty is at work to that end.

The Lord help us to be wise and learn the lessons out of the present and profit by them in the future, and listen to the counsels of this glorious conference, for I bear witness that the Lord is here, the light is in the ship. It is with the leaders of this Church. I know it. You have had witness of it this day and during the other sessions of this conference that shall remain with you forever and ever. God grant it, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I regret exceedingly that we have not had the pleasure of hearing from President B. H. Roberts of the First Council of Seventy, and from Brother Joseph W. McMurrin, both of whom have, for many years at the various conferences that I have attended, lifted their voices in testimony of the divinity of the work in which we are engaged.

The General Authorities and Officers of the Church and the Auxiliary Officers and Boards were then presented, and by unanimous vote of those assembled were sustained in their various offices and callings as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH

FIRST PRESIDENCY

Heber J. Grant, Prophet, Seer and Revelator and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Anthony W. Ivins, First Counselor in the First Presidency.

Charles W. Nibley, Second Counselor in the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Rudger Clawson

COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Reed Smoot
George Albert Smith
George F. Richards
David O. McKay
Joseph Fielding Smith

James E. Talmage
Stephen L. Richards
Richard R. Lyman
Melvin J. Ballard
John A. Widtsoe

Inasmuch as some people say that we always present the name of the person nominated to fill a vacancy in the leading councils of the Church, in a group with those previously chosen and ordained, so that the people do not have an opportunity to vote against him, I shall put this separate motion: All those in favor of sustaining Brother Joseph F. Merrill as a member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, filling the vacancy in that Council caused by the death of Elder Orson F. Whitney, will manifest it by raising their right hands.

(All present raised their right hands)

The vote is unanimous in favor of Brother Merrill.

PRESIDING PATRIARCH

Hyrum G. Smith

The Counselors in the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles and the Presiding Patriarch as Prophets, Seers, and Revelators.

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

Heber J. Grant

As Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

FIRST COUNCIL OF THE SEVENTY

Brigham H. Roberts

Joseph W. McMurrin

Jonathan G. Kimball

Charles H. Hart

Rulon S. Wells

Levi Edgar Young

It is moved and seconded that we sustain Elder Antoine R. Ivins as a member of the First Council of Seventy. All in favor manifest it by raising their right hands. (All present raised their right hands) Contrary, if there be any, indicate it in the same manner. (No hands were raised)

The vote in favor of Brother Ivins is unanimous in the affirmative.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

In case any person fails to fully appreciate the plain statement of President Ivins that the book to which he referred is to be considered as the personal opinion of the author and not as having been approved by the Church, I wish all the members of the Church to know that when any book has the approval of the Church it will have the stamp of approval of the Presidency of the Church. Therefore, no agent selling any books is justified in quoting the Church as approving a book that does not carry the stamp of approval in it.

I believe that for the first and only time since I became the President of the Church it is not four o'clock when the time has arrived to call upon the choir to sing and for the final benediction to be pronounced.

It has fallen to my lot on more than one occasion to make a few remarks after four o'clock. We are all willing to stay here after four o'clock, I am sure, to hear the choir in the closing anthem. Therefore, there are ten full minutes left for me, for which I am grateful.

GRATEFUL FOR CONFERENCE

First, I am thankful for this wonderful conference. I believe sincerely that today we have had as many if not more in attendance than is usual at our Sunday morning and afternoon meetings. It seemed to me that we were more crowded this morning than at any other time I can remember.

I am grateful that what to me was the most marvelous sight I have looked upon in this building was that which I witnessed last night when the building was nearly filled with members holding the priesthood of the living God. Let me say that with all our faults and failings I believe we are the best people in the world. It sounds a little egotistical, but I believe every word of it, and I believe firmly that our sisters are better than the brethren. I haven't any doubt of this, none whatever. There was a magnificent showing here last night of the priesthood, and from the bottom of my heart and in the authority of the priesthood of the living God that I hold I have great pleasure in blessing the men who hold the priesthood of God, the power from heaven, and in blessing our wives who, on an average, have been more devoted, I am sure, to the work of the living God than we have been.

LOYALTY TO PRESIDENT HOOVER AND ASSOCIATES

I rejoice in the splendid work of the Latter-day Saints. I desire and feel to pray for the blessings of the Lord to be and abide with the President of the United States and his cabinet in this time of great trouble, in a time when we should be loyal. "We believe in being subject to kings, presidents, rulers and magistrates." Let us be loyal to those who in the providences of the Lord stand at the head of our nation at the present time, in this great time of trouble. I am sure nobody will accuse me, seeing I am counted as a Democrat, of being guilty of mixing politics with religion here; but I believe that no truer, better, finer man has ever sat in the presidential chair than the man who is sitting there today. That is my opinion of President Hoover.

A STRAW VOTE

Some years ago for the first and only time in my life I paid some attention to a straw vote. I do not think such votes amount to a straw; that is my opinion of them. I think that if there is ever any "stuffing" in ballot boxes it is when a straw vote is being taken. I think it is properly named "straw vote." It is as weak as a straw. But I could not resist the temptation way back many years ago, when the Literary Digest asked for a straw vote, and lo and behold, I voted for Hoover. That was my opinion of the man who had done so much, such magnificent and wonderful work during the war, in feeding the people in Europe. I believe that he is absolutely honest and conscientious and that his heart is as firmly set upon doing the right thing for the people of this country, as the hearts of the leaders of this Church are set upon doing the right thing for the Latter-day Saints.

I am happy indeed in a knowledge of the divinity of the work you and I are engaged in. I humbly pray for the blessings of the Lord to be with each and all of you, with the Latter-day Saints the world over, and the honest in every land and every clime. God bless you, Amen.

As a closing anthem the Choir sang the Hallelujah Chorus, by Handel.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Taylor Nelson, President of the Oneida Stake.

Conference adjourned for six months.

Prof. Anthony C. Lund, assisted by B. Cecil Gates, conducted the singing of the Choir and congregation at the Conference meetings. Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Edward P. Kimball and Frank W. Asper.

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON,
Clerk of the Conference.

WILL FIND THE BOOK

An Introduction to the Study of the Book of Mormon

By J. M. SJODAHL

To be mighty interesting and illuminating

"Some of the contents of the book has appeared in the IMPROVEMENT ERA and other Church publications during the last ten years, and friends have been good enough to say, repeatedly, that they would be glad to have those contributions in some form more convenient for reference. Acting on their suggestion, I have collected some papers previously published and others that now appear for the first time, and respectfully submit them in this form to the public. In doing so, it is my sincere prayer that the testimony here offered may be of benefit to the reader, and especially to honest seekers after the truth."

Sunday Night Talks by Radio

In answer to an insistent demand the 1930 series of L. D. S. Radio Addresses given by Dr. James E. Talmage has now been issued in regular book form under the title of "Sunday Night Talks By Radio." It is printed on a good grade of book paper from type especially set for this edition, and durably bound in beautiful marbled cloth.

This book will make a beautiful as well as practical and useful addition to the library of any member of the Church. It will be especially valuable to missionaries or prospective missionaries.

A veritable epic of empire-building

The Life Story of Brigham Young

By SUSA YOUNG GATES AND LEAH D. WIDTSOE

WITH A FOREWORD BY HONORABLE REED SMOOT

"This book presents the life story of a New England cabinet-maker, who, well into his thirties, entered upon a career that made him an empire-builder of the West; the founder of a hundred cities; the governor of one of the territories of the United States; and one of the outstanding figures of the nineteenth century."

Thus does Senator Smoot begin his enthusiastic foreword to this notable biography. "A graphic, gripping story," he terms it, and every reader undoubtedly will agree with his definition of this life of the indefatigable, indomitable Brigham Young, which was written by one of his daughters and her daughter. The entire record of the great Mormon leader is unfolded from his birth in a little Vermont town to his death at the age of seventy-seven as head of the church, the success of which was due to his courageous and arduous leadership.

A Thrilling Story of CENTURY ONE OF CHURCH HISTORY

HERE is a new story of "Mormonism," told with a completeness and charm that will thrill Latter-day Saints with a pride of achievement and at the same time win the admiration of the critic, be he friend or foe. In a COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH, B. H. Roberts has done a masterful piece of research and has set down the record of Century One—1830 to 1930—in a brilliant appraisal of momentous events. The reader with a sentimental interest will be fascinated with this narrative of truth stranger than fiction; the reader who approaches the new work with the critical vision of the historian will find it fair in statement, authentic in fact, copious in detail and sound in judgment.

A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH was written by Elder Roberts at the instance of the First Presidency of the Church, with a commission to make it exhaustively complete, from the remotest beginnings to the close of the Centennial Conference of April 6, 1930. The final volume ends with an account of the Conference itself, making the history technically inclusive of all that happened in Century One of the organized existence of the Church. Thus it is a fitting commemoration of one hundred years of struggle and achievement.

This monumental work is not to be confused with any former history, journal or chronicle. Though its nucleus is the history of "Mormonism" published a few years ago in AMERICANA, running serially for six years through that magazine, yet this History is NEW—new in its wealth of material, new in method of treatment and new in its physical representation of the book maker's art.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The opening session of the Conference commenced promptly at 10 o'clock, Friday morning, April 8th, at which time the great Tabernacle auditorium and galleries were almost completely filled with people who had assembled from all parts of the Church.

President Heber J. Grant presided and called the Conference to order by announcing the opening hymn, "Now let us rejoice in the day of salvation," which was sung by the congregation.

Elder Willard Young offered the opening prayer.

Sister Edith Grant Young sang a solo "The City four square."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

I rejoice exceedingly in having the opportunity of again meeting with the Latter-day Saints in General Conference.

It has been customary for many years in the opening of these conferences to give a statement regarding the expenditures in the various stakes of Zion, and for other purposes.

The expenditures by the Church for the year 1931 are as follows:

Stake and Ward Purposes:

There has been returned from the tithes to the stakes and wards for the construction of ward and stake meeting houses	$ 545,630.69
For ward maintenance expenses	647,194.36
For stake maintenance expenses	254,025.41
	$1,446,850.46

Education:

Expended for the maintenance of Church school system..$ 751,200.28

Temples:

Expended for the construction, maintenance, and operation of temples 201,833.50

Charities:

For the care of the worthy poor and other charitable purposes, including hospital treatment 224,556.38

Missions:

For the maintenance and operation of all the missions, and for the erection of places of worship and other build-

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Birth rate, 29 per thousand.

Marriage rate, 12.8 per thousand.

Death rate, 6.6 per thousand.

Families owning their own homes, 65.2 per cent.

HOME OWNING URGED

Our records show that in years gone by over 75 per cent of the people owned their own homes. There is a spiritual growth always when people own their own homes. The owning of a home creates a spirit of loyalty to the Church and also, really, to the government. It is illustrated somewhat in an incident that I heard regarding a nobleman in France who was very wealthy. His butler, who drew a large salary, attended socialistic meetings. The nobleman noticed that the butler had discontinued attending these meetings and asked the reason.

Said he: "At the last meeting a report was made of how much per capita everybody would receive when all of the wealth was appropriated and distributed, and already I have more in the savings bank than would come to me."

It cured him completely.

LAUDS THOSE DEAD

I am sure that those of us who had the opportunity of attending the funeral of President Charles W. Nibley felt very grateful for the remarkable spirit that was present and for the very splendid tributes that were paid to him. I had that privilege and I rejoice in the spirit of the occasion, and in the excellent remarks.

I regret that I was in the East at the time of the funeral of the Patriarch. But from what I have read of the services I am very pleased indeed with the tributes paid to him.

In addition to these officials of the Church whose names I have read, who have passed away during the time since our last Conference, the editor of the Improvement Era, and former president of Liberty stake of Zion, Brother Hugh J. Cannon, has also passed away. Brother Cannon presided over the Swiss and German mission many years ago when I was president of the European mission.

He subsequently returned to Germany and Switzerland and fulfilled a third mission, he having been there originally as a young missionary, not presiding. Brother Cannon, as you are all aware, filled a mission with Brother David O. McKay, taking a trip around the world, visiting all the missions of the Church, I believe, with the exception of South Africa. I rejoice in the splendid record that Brother Hugh J. Cannon made in every Church position that he occupied. He was a man of God, a man worthy of the respect and admiration of all people.

RECEIVES LETTER

I received this morning a letter from Brother Robert I. Burton, president of Mount Ogden stake. Among other things he says:

"The Gospel of Jesus Christ is the source of the greatest comfort and joy to me, and I never tire of its message. Attendance at the Conference thrills and stimulates me more than I am able to tell. I count it as one of the great blessings of my life, that I have been permitted to become personally acquainted with you and other General Authorities of the Church and to labor with you in a humble way in the great cause of our Heavenly Father. I know of the cleanness and purity of your life, and I am filled with righteous indignation when I read such scurrilous attacks as are made against you in a little four page sheet recently issued. It seems to me that something should be done with men who send such slanderous vilifications through the mail."

MALICIOUS COMMUNICATIONS

I received the sheet to which he refers and it found its place in the waste basket. I did not read a word of it. When men have so lived that they are unworthy to be in the Church and are cast out, they are wasting their time sending me printed matter or written matter. The waste basket is large and capable of holding all such communications. It is a little disappointing in one sense not to take action against pre-meditated falsifiers.

I am tempted to ask the government to prosecute the people who use the mails to circulate malicious falsehoods. But there is something about the fact that when you handle a smoky, sooty stove-pipe you get your hands soiled, and it is a question whether such lies are worthy of any consideration.

DENIES CHARGES

In all my travels I have never paid any attention to a certain Lulu Shepherd, perhaps the greatest female liar who ever drew the breath of life. I cannot help but wish that some of her falsehoods were true. In a synopsis of one of her lectures in Brooklyn, she is reported to have said I owned Union Pacific and other railroad preferred stocks and bonds amounting to one hundred million dollars, and I did not have a dollar of such securities. I could wish I had the millions of dollars' worth of stocks and bonds for which she gave me credit. In this lecture she is reported to have named nine states of the Union that I controlled politically, and to have said that no man could be the president of the United States without my consent. The states as I remember were Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Washington, Oregon, Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico. Instead of controlling those states I did not know the names of the governors of any of them except Idaho and Arizona, and of course our own state. And I do not know that I would have known personally the governor of Idaho if the president of the United States at that time—Warren G. Harding—had not introduced me to him when he came into the President's car as I was riding up to Idaho Falls and Pocatello—not as a guest of the President, but as a guest of the vice president and general manager of the Oregon Short Line Railroad company in his private car.

"MORMONS" LAUDED

I do not know that I would have known the Governor of Arizona were it not for the fact that we had had a convention of governors here at the Capitol and Governor Campbell was one of those who did us the honor of calling at our office. When I met him I shook hands with him and said:

"Governor, I heard a very interesting story regarding a statement made by your predecessor. It was that among the best of the citizens of Arizona in early days were the 'Mormon' pioneers, and that in one particular the 'Mormons' were being robbed out of a share of the public funds of Arizona. They were losing from twenty-five hundred to three thousand per cent of their share of the criminal taxes; as they were entitled to have, in proportion to their number, twenty-five or thirty inmates in the state penitentiary, and had but one. When I went to Arizona I mentioned this fact in a meeting in St. Johns, and the District Judge arose and said: 'That one has since been pardoned.'"

The Governor smiled and said: "Mr. Grant, that is correct. He was pardoned."

INTEGRITY PLEASES

I rejoice in the integrity of the Latter-day Saints, I rejoice in the absolute honesty of the men who have held positions as the General Authorities in this Church, the falsehoods of any human being to the contrary notwithstanding.

I rejoice in the fact that when I was in England I carried a letter from non-"Mormon" bankers in Salt Lake City vouching for me as a gentleman of unquestioned integrity and honesty, and from bankers in San Francisco, Chicago and New York, containing the same kind of recommendation. I remember calling on a newspaper that had published seven to ten columns, I am sure, of vile misrepresentations about us, carrying with me a letter of introduction from the shipping firm with whom we had done business for over sixty years, not only vouching for my honesty and integrity, but for that of every president of the European mission during that period. And yet the assistant editor of the paper positively refused to publish one word of refutation. I pleaded with him to no avail.

ANSWERS EDITOR

I walked to the door, turned and said:

"By-the-way, my letter was not to you. It was to the editor. The boy who came down stairs announced that the editor was absent but that the assistant editor, Mr. Robinson, would receive me. Is your name Robinson?"

"Yes."

"Do you know Phil Robinson?"

"Why everybody knows Phil Robinson."

I said: "Was he the correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph during the Boer War, one of the two greatest [and I emphasized "greatest" because his paper was not one of the two] newspapers in Great Britain?"

"He was."

"And would you believe anything that Phil Robinson said?"

"I would."

"Is he editing the Court and Society Journal here in London?"

"He is."

CHALLENGES PROOF

"Seeing that you believe anything this gentleman says, buy his book entitled 'Sinners and Saints,' it will cost you two shillings, and you will find that everything you have published in your paper about the 'Mormons' is a lie pure and simple. Phil Robinson traveled from Idaho in the north to Arizona in the south, through all of our settlements, with the late John Henry Smith, and he met our people, and you will find if you will read his book that you have published a lot of falsehoods. I defy you to get a letter of introduction vouching for the honesty of any person who has furnished you the information that has been printed in your paper against us, and I have in my valise letters from bankers in Utah and from bankers in New York, Chicago and San Francisco, vouching for my honesty, and I brand your publication as false."

"Well," he said, "you surprise me, that Phil Robinson would vouch for your people."

ASKS FOR HALF COLUMN

"Oh," I said, "you are not the first person that has been surprised when he ran up against the 'Mormon' question."

He said, "Write us a half column."

I said, "Small favors thankfully received; large ones in proportion. Seven to ten columns of misrepresentations and a half column of refutation. You shall have it within the next two hours."

He received it all right and kept it thirty or sixty days and returned it with the usual printed slip that I have seen very often: "The editor regrets that he cannot find space for the enclosed manuscript, which is returned."

ATTITUDE CHANGES

What a change has come about! Today reporters attend our meetings in all parts of the British Isles and make fair reports of everything that goes on. Three whole years in England without one single line of refutation in any newspaper when I presided there. The wonderful work accomplished by Brother Talmage, and that is being accomplished by Brother Widtsoe, in getting us before the public honestly and fairly, in our missions in Europe, has filled my heart with joy and gratitude.

SEVENTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED

It may not be out of place today for me to make a few remarks that are personal in their nature. I never expected when I was a young man to live to announce that I had celebrated my seventy-fifth birthday. I often said in my youth that if I could live twenty-five per cent longer than my father who died when he was forty, I would be perfectly satisfied with life, which would be until I was fifty years of age. Today I have lived fifty per cent longer than that, and to be perfectly frank with you, I am not quite satisfied with life now, but would like to live a little longer.

THANKFUL FOR HEALTH

I rejoice in what I have seen in the seventy-five years of my life. It may sound a little egotistical, but few men reach the age of seventy-five years in perfect vigor of health of body and mind, and I desire in this Conference to express to my Heavenly Father and to the people composing the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, my gratitude for this vigor of body and of mind, and for the health that I possess. I am grateful, beyond all of my ability to express my gratitude, for the prayers and the faith and the good will of the Latter-day Saints.

APPRECIATIVE OF LOVE AND CONFIDENCE OF SAINTS

There is nothing in the world, I am sure, that a man should value so highly as the love of those with whom he is associated, and I appreciate very greatly the love and confidence of the Latter-day Saints and of the officers of the Church. That this has been extended to me fills my heart with gratitude beyond all my ability to express it, and the blessings that have come to me from my Heavenly Father and the honors that have come to me in being permitted to stand here representing his Son Jesus Christ in the restored Gospel, fill my heart to overflowing.

FAITH IN THE GOSPEL

I am grateful beyond expression that from the time I was a boy of fifteen, and entered the office of a non-member of the Church—working for non-members of the Church from then until just before I was twenty, when I went into business for myself—I am grateful that I have never found anything at home or abroad, in all these sixty years, that has in the slightest degree lessened my faith in the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

But, on the contrary, I have been constantly finding additional evidences of the divinity of the work in which you and I are engaged. This is a source of the keenest gratification to me. Evidences of the divinity of the work have come to me from time to time, some of them very strong.

STRANGE EVIDENCE

I have often mentioned it in public, that while I was being entertained at a dinner in London by one of the managers of the great New York Life Insurance Company I met a gentleman who had been connected with the British Legation in Constantinople and who had spent years in the Holy Land. He had been to America a number of times. I spent the evening, after dinner, chatting with him because of his remarkable experiences and the interesting things he had to say. Finally he said to me:

"Mr. Grant, do you know that I ran across the most inexplicable thing of my life the last time I visited Canada. I went way up into the northern wilds of Canada, beyond all civilization, visiting with those heathen Indians. I found among them the exact pattern, woven in colored beads, of Holy Land rugs, and in no other part of the world that I have visited have I seen any rugs of the same pattern as those oriental rugs in the Holy Land, and in some sections certain patterns have come down for hundreds, almost thousands of years, in one family. They have no fabrics up among those Indians with which to do weaving, but they had the exact patterns, yet they had never heard of Jerusalem, and it is the most inexplicable thing of my life."

I said: "That is very easy to a Mormon. Have you ever heard of the Book of Mormon?"

"No."

"I will send you a copy. It is the Bible, so to speak, of the American Indians, their sacred history, and you will find that the forefathers of the American Indians and other peoples who have been on this continent came from Jerusalem."

He said: "What! That explains the inexplicable."

Now that may not be counted by some as much of a straw of evidence, but to my mind it is a very great evidence regarding the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon.

INTIMATE WITH BRIGHAM YOUNG

I am grateful to bear witness to this audience that from the time I was a little child not more than five, I am sure, until the day of his death, when I was nearly twenty-one, I was very intimate with Brigham Young; that when the bell would ring for family prayers, quite frequently I would run through our back lot across through Brother George A. Smith's lot and across the street, and kneel down in President Brigham Young's home at family prayers.

I knew him intimately, as I say, from the time I was five or six years of age. I was born where the Z. C. M. I. store now stands. Father's lot was 165 feet front by 330 feet deep, the lot just like it on the south was occupied by Edward Hunter, and a lot of the same size on the north was occupied by Daniel H. Wells, two of as God-fearing, kind, splendid men as ever drew the breath of life. I grew up under their tutorship to a certain extent.

RECALLS LAST INTERVIEW

The last interview I had with Brigham Young was on the very day he was taken sick. I met him coming out of his office with a cape on his arm and I said:

"President Young, I was elected yesterday the assistant cashier of Zion's Savings Bank, and I have been told this morning that I must give a bond of twenty-five thousand dollars to vouch for my honesty. It occurs to me that it would be very appropriate and a nice thing for the president of the bank to sign the bond of the assistant cashier."

He smiled and said: "Heber, I have had a very strenuous day. I am just going for a ride. I shall be glad to sign the bond. I do not see how I could get out of it because I said so many good things about you in the directors' meeting yesterday, (or the day before, I have forgotten which) about your integrity and honesty and favoring you for this job; and if I refuse to sign your bond now, the directors would say, 'What did you say all those good things about him for if you are afraid to sign his bond?'"

He came home, was taken sick and passed away. I am sure, from my own experience and all of the symptoms that were published in the paper, he died of appendicitis. During all those years of my acquaintance with him, fully fifteen, I learned to love and respect him as a man of God, a man of great ability.

GREATNESS RECOGNIZED

I remember saying to the vice president of a great bank with hundreds of millions of dollars, that the day would come when Brigham

Young would be acknowledged as one of the greatest pioneers and colonizers who ever lived.

He said: "Why say the day will come? No man who knows anything of the accomplishments of Brigham Young but what could say the day has come."

WANTED LARGE STATE

Do you know that all this trouble about the Hoover dam and the division of water never would have come about if we had got all that President Young tried to get.

All that he asked for when he knocked for admission into the Union as the State of Deseret was all of Utah, fully one-half of Colorado, a little patch down in New Mexico so as to take in the San Juan River, all of Arizona, Nevada as far as the Sierra Nevada Mountains, Idaho way up into the north, and one-third of what is now California.

Los Angeles and that whole section would have been included. Every drop of water that goes into the Hoover dam would have been in the State of Deseret. Texas would not have been in it for size. This shows the great capacity of the man. He sent scouts into the various sections of the country, realizing as he did that irrigation was what was going to count, through the inspiration of the Lord, in this country, and he arranged to get all of the watershed of the Colorado River.

LAUDS PREDECESSORS

As you all know I was chosen as one of the Apostles during the administration of John Taylor, a God-fearing, inspirational man. I can vouch absolutely from my intimate association with him from the day I was made an Apostle, two years after he became the president, to the day of his death, for the inspiration of the living God that came to him and the nobility and uprightness of his life.

I can say the same of Wilford Woodruff during his administration, and of Lorenzo Snow. I can say the same thing of President Joseph F. Smith, than whom I am sure no man has lived more in the hearts of the Latter-day Saints from the days of the Prophet Joseph to his day as the president of the Church. I rejoice in my knowledge of the integrity of their lives, their honesty, and their devotion to God, and that the first and foremost thing with them was to labor for the Gospel and the spread of truth upon the earth.

LETTER PLEASES

I rejoice in a letter that I received from the general manager of one of the greatest life insurance companies in the world when I was made an Apostle. He said:

"I owe an apology, Heber, to your fourteen associates in the Presidency and Apostles. I have always thought they were a designing lot, that they were getting rich because of the religious enthusiasm and the ignorance of the people of your Church, gathering in their tithes, etc. But now that you are one of the fifteen, I apologize to the other fourteen. If they were not honest and upright men they would not dare invite you into their councils, because if there were anything crooked you would give the whole thing away. I know you are fundamentally honest from the crown of your head to the soles of your feet."

No truer statement was ever made by mortal man than that by Josh Billings: "Never judge a man by his relatives, he cannot help them, they are crowded upon him; but judge him by the company he keeps, because he picks his own."

PRAISED BY MILLIONAIRE

I met a millionaire on the street—the late David Wood—the next morning after Anthony W. Ivins was made an Apostle, and he said:

"Hold on, Grant, don't walk so fast. I want to tell you something. I am glad you are running your Mormon Church just to suit me. If you had come down to my office yesterday and said, 'Dave Wood, you have lived among this people for twenty-five years; you have been a friend of the 'Mormons' not only in the United States but in foreign lands; you have spoken well of them; you have a 'Mormon' bishop managing your business in Idaho—now I have been told to come down here, as you have met the leading men of the Church from Canada on the north to Mexico on the south, to say that the Apostles want to express their gratitude for your friendship, and we will let you name the very best man to fill the vacancy in the quorum of Apostles,'—do you know, Grant, I would not have batted an eye or taken a breath, but I would have just hollered, 'Ivins.' I am glad you are running your Church to suit me. Good day."

REJOICES IN GOOD WILL

I rejoice in the good will of those who know us. I have said many times that a man who so lived that those who knew him best, loved him most, and whom God loved, was entitled to be crowned with the wreath of success although he might die in poverty; and I do know that the Lord has seen fit to love, and did love and did inspire all of my predecessors.

I am happy in the good will that exists, I believe, for this people. Not only in the United States, but wherever I go today I am treated with respect. When I think of going to Kansas City some years ago and there speaking before the Knife and Fork club which is claimed to be the second greatest dinner club in the United States, and speaking on the accomplishments of the Latter-day Saints for a full hour—the other speakers, one of them the president of a great university, being limited to thirty minutes—and I being advertised as the guest of the evening, and receiving applause, and then being invited to come back again and speak before the Chamber of Commerce in Kansas City, my heart is filled with gratitude. Where was this? It was within ten miles of Independence, from which place the Latter-day Saints had been expelled under an exterminating order of the acting-governor of the state.

EARLY PERSECUTIONS

I have been reading again lately the wonderful record of the Missouri persecutions and the fall of Nauvoo, by Elder Brigham H. Roberts, and as I think of those terrible things that happened—imprisonment, the sentence of death passed upon the Prophet, the Patriarch and others; the murders at Haun's Mill; the battle at Crooked River; the driving out of the remnant of the Saints from Nauvoo in the dead of winter and their crossing the river on the ice—when I think of all these things that the early Saints had to endure, it seems to me that this depression is a good deal in the nature of a flea-bite in comparison.

QUOTES POEM

I see the time has expired. You will pardon me for being personal, but you know they say when a person gets beyond 75 years of age he cannot talk about anybody but himself, and likes to deal in reminiscences, that he has no thought for the future. I want to quote a few lines entitled "Age" and say that they are my sentiments, although not original with me:

"Age is a quality of mind;
If your dreams you've left behind,
If hope is cold;
If you no longer look ahead,
If your ambitions' fires are dead—
Then you are old.

"But if from life you take the best,
And if in life you keep the zest,
If love you hold;
No matter how the years go by,
No matter how the birthdays fly—
You are not old."

I do hold love for the Latter-day Saints. I do love my God, and I do love the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I hope to accomplish more in the next five years of my life than I have accomplished during any previous five years. May the Lord help us one and all to be loyal and true to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, is my humble prayer, and I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The congregation sang the hymn, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet."

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

In nearly all of our Conferences we have been obliged to limit the time allotted to our mission presidents to five or six minutes each. We are going to start this Conference by giving the mission presidents ten minutes each.

ELDER CHARLES A. CALLIS*President of the Southern States Mission*

When our beloved President was speaking, these words of the Lord came to me: "And thy people shall never be turned against thee by the testimony of traitors." This is a continuing promise, fulfilled in the life and administration of every President of the Church.

We are thankful for President Grant. His seventy-five years have been blessings to the people of God and to all the people among whom he has moved.

One of the most comforting and sustaining thoughts and influences in our lives is the love that the Lord Jesus Christ has for us. I believe that in these dark hours of gloom and trouble he weeps, because of the distress that exists among the children of men. And what shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation? No.

The testimony that Jesus is the Christ is the precious heritage of every faithful Latter-day Saint. How is this testimony secured?

"This doth not spring from earthly soil,
Nor from its wisdom grow;
'Tis not evoked by student's toil,
Though years hath crowned with snow."

This testimony comes through obedience to the principles and ordinances of the Gospel. The Lord says:

"Therefore, in the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is manifest.

"And without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh."

A vision may grow dim with the flight of years, but the companionship and testimony of the Holy Ghost, that sustaining power that forever abides with the faithful children of God, no length of time can dim; no length of time can silence the voice which says: "This is the way; walk ye therein." No length of time can extinguish the lamp which is a light to our feet and a guide to our path. The testimony of the Spirit is clearest and strongest when we live close to God.

The gift of the Holy Ghost is the spirit of revelation. This gift is enjoyed by the missionaries in their fields of labor, those splendid young men and young women whose sacrifice is sacred in the sight of God. Their loyalty to God and the Church leaders cannot be questioned. It is as firm as the rock of ages. These missionaries love their leaders. They are guided by that spirit of revelation which the Lord grants unto them for guidance in their own fields of labor, but not for the direction of the work of those who are in other parts of the vineyard.

I testify unto you that as Moses possessed the spirit of revelation which enabled him to bring the children of Israel through the Red Sea on dry ground, so the spirit of revelation, the presence, the companionship, the guidance of the Holy Ghost is with our leaders, and they are leading us by that spirit. If we will follow them they will bring us through this mortal probation, into the celestial kingdom of God, therein to be the sons and daughters of our Heavenly Father and joint heirs with Jesus Christ.

God bless our leaders. They are inspired of God, and we will follow them, with our Father's help, for he will bless the man who sustains those who preside over him. No man who has the gift of the Holy Ghost will ever be found criticising the oracles of God, entertaining a spirit of rebellion against them, or refusing to follow in their footsteps.

This is my testimony, and I bear it in the fear of God and in humility of soul, and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER SAMUEL O. BENNION*President of the Central States Mission*

I am very happy, my dear brethren and sisters, to be in attendance at this Conference. It has been my privilege for a good many years, as a representative of the Central States mission to attend the Conferences of this Church, and these Conferences have always been a great source of inspiration to me. They have been to me, in part, a guide during the time I have been in the mission field. The instruction and doctrine that come from the leaders of this Church are inspiring and when reproduced in the different magazines of the Church have been encouraging and beneficial when I reviewed them later in the mission field.

I am not at all alarmed over the attacks that are being made upon the President and the leaders of this Church. It has always been the heritage of the Lord's anointed from the very beginning of time, that men who have held the authority of God in the earth have been subject to criticism and attack by men and women who are not well informed and who have wicked intentions.

There are individuals, who because of their own transgressions, have ever found fault and criticised and persecuted our leaders from the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith until now.

Often we find the more bitter enemies coming from within the Church membership. If such individuals ever had a testimony of the Gospel of Jesus Christ they have forfeited their right to it, and as a result they do not apparently recognize the gravity of the position they take and the attack they make upon the leaders of the Church.

People who slander have never hindered the growth of the Church in the least, but my observation has been that it has increased the faith of those who are diligent in the work of the Lord.

In my experience during the time I have lived in Missouri, in a period of twenty-five years, I have been able to observe that those leaders who were faithful in the discharge of their duty have made history that has always established faith among the children of men; while those who fought the work of God in the early history of the Church, departed from the truth and were thus disloyal in their conduct, not only destroyed their own possibilities, but I have never found the descendants of those who fought the work of God, from then until now, to be faithful in the work of God. On the contrary, I have found them to be generally bitter enemies of the Lord's work. Those who stood by the Prophet Joseph Smith and Brigham Young and the rest of the Presidents and leaders of the Church from then until this present time, their descendants are found generally faithful and active and true to the trust in the organizations of the Church. The leaders of the Church have established the word of the Lord in the earth as instruments in his hands and will stand as witnesses for God, while those who oppose the authority of God in the earth will not have such a record.

Most all of the places where the Church settled in Missouri and other places nearby are practically deserted. Places where once industrious men and women of this Church were building great centers in that land and where everything pointed to greater industries and activities are now found to be almost desolate.

One has only to make observation in these valleys of the mountains to recognize where the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ is vested. Those places in Missouri where the people once lived are nothing to compare with these cities and settlements in the valleys of the mountains. Any one who makes a study of the growth and development of the Church membership can readily observe that the life and light of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is found in the present membership of this Church.

It has been an inspiration to have known President Grant these many years. I have been closely acquainted with him. To me, he has been as a father. I knew his predecessor, President Joseph F. Smith; he was as a father to me as well. They have been men that have guided me in many, many things with which a mission president has to deal in the mission field, and I know they are men of God.

I have known the Apostles in this Church from the beginning of my ministry in 1904 until the present time. I have traveled with most of them in the mission field. They are men of great inspiration and power, and my testimony to the world is that these men are of God and that they are entrusted with the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ in the earth. They will stand in the presence of our Eternal Father as his witnesses some day, to give testimony concerning the lives of men with whom they have lived.

I know that men live after this life. I know that President Joseph F. Smith lives and that President Charles W. Nibley lives. I have seen them in my dreams since they have left us, and they are counseling in wisdom at the present time.

I know that these leaders of the Church who sit on this stand are examples to all people with whom they come in contact.

I listened to President Grant deliver a speech in Kansas City some years ago before the Knife and Fork club. Two hundred and fifty people at least were in attendance. He gave one of the most inspirational sermons I have ever heard. Men who were on the program to talk that night gave him as much of their time as he wanted.

I heard President Ivins speak in a Boy Scout meeting in St. Louis and his was an inspirational and instructive address. I saw a man there who counted his money by the millions, yield his time to President Ivins. No finer tributes could be paid to these leaders of ours than were paid by those people who were not of our faith in the places where these two brethren were entertained at that time, and I know that men do have faith in the leaders of this Church.

There are thousands of men and women in the world who love the truth and there are many of them who are searching for it earnestly. There are many preparing themselves to receive the Gospel. I know this is the work of God,—that this is his Church, that his priesthood is the governing power in the earth, and that the leaders in this Church, with President Grant who presides at this time, hold their offices with authority.

Ours is an individual responsibility. I bear this testimony to you and close with the words of William Ernest Henley, the poet:

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishment the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.

And this is the condition of every man and woman in the world. I pray the Lord to bless us in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER WM. R. SLOAN

President of the Northwestern States Mission

To face this body of representative men and women of the Church is indeed an inspiration, and to bear witness of this great work that we are engaged in, my brethren and sisters, is a joy unspeakable.

I have rejoiced in my acquaintance with the leadership of this Church. I am thrilled beyond all words of expression for this acquaintance with them and bear witness that they are men of integrity and men of God.

Last summer it was our pleasure to visit Alaska. We took the inland route, and you who have enjoyed that wonderful voyage know that the channels you go through, in many cases, are very narrow. One evening the pilot invited Sister Sloan and myself into the pilot room. As we sailed along the narrow channel he pointed out to us and said, "I want you people to note that just on the opposite side, on the right side of the boat [and the boat was moving very slowly] a few feet underneath the water, about eight or ten feet from the vessel, there is a great ledge of rock. Many a ship has struck the same and been sunk." Oh, it was a wonderful feeling of security and safety to know that we were under the leadership of a pilot who knew the course the ship was sailing.

So it is an inspiration to know in this Church that God is at the helm, and that his servants are inspired, directed and led by his influence. Zion is growing. Let the world say what it will, do what it may, yet this work will go on and on unto a perfect day.

The Apostle Paul in II Timothy, chapter 3, verses 1 to 5, said of these times:

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.

"For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,

"Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,

"Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;

"Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

I admonish you, my brethren and sisters that this is a day that demands the best that is within us. God demands service of us and loyalty to his priesthood. Let us give it.

I rejoice in my ministry in the Northwestern States mission. We have a wonderful mission. I believe our people are imbued with the spirit of the Gospel, so much so that they are trying to live it. I am happy to report that the tithes of the mission for the past year show a substantial increase over the previous year, and that the tithes for the first quarter of this year exceed the corresponding period of a year ago.

We do a lot of good things up there, and God has blessed us. The honest tithe-payer and the men and women who observe the Word of Wisdom are being blessed, and it is an evidence of his promise unto his children.

Last evening another blessed privilege was enjoyed by our returned missionaries. We made a call six months ago that our returned missionaries should enlarge their scope of activity, and we called our brethren and sisters who have filled missions and are now at home to all unite and go to the temple and there assist in extending blessings to the thousands and millions of people who are unable to help themselves. Oh, the thrill that came to my soul, and I sat almost speechless, as I met five hundred returned missionaries, their wives, and friends—all in the temple to do this splendid work, vicarious work for our kindred dead.

This is God's work. I bear this witness. I give my allegiance, my brethren and sisters, to the men who preside over this Church. I love them.

God bless you, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ELIAS S. WOODRUFF

President of the Western States Mission

What a glorious privilege every Latter-day Saint enjoys through membership in this Church! The Holy Ghost, which emanates from the presence of the Father, and fills the limits of space, is available to every one who will seek it, and is particularly the heritage of the Saints who have earned the right to enjoy it by obedience to the ordinances of the Gospel.

We are told that in the latter days false prophets shall arise, who might confuse some as to whether they were true or false. But the Savior said: "By their fruits ye shall know them," and in our judgment, we only need to apply that measuring rule to ascertain whether men are true or false servants of God. And greater than that, let us apply the rule to ourselves. The fruits of the Spirit, if they are enjoyed by you and by me, are love, joy and peace. When you have within your heart a burning desire to love your brethren and sisters, and particularly those who preside over you and direct the affairs of this Church, you may know that that is the influence of the Holy Ghost.

If there is happiness and peace in your heart, as expressed in the joy of your life, you may likewise know that you are influenced by the Holy Ghost; and if you have peace and love within your soul, then you know that you are in the line of your duty. If you are disturbed in your hearts, if you are angry with your brethren, if you allow yourselves to criticise them, you are not happy, you are not at peace, there is no joy in your soul.

What a glorious thing it is, brethren and sisters, to have this wonderful key by which to measure ourselves! I pray the Lord will bless his Saints, that they may always keep that in their hearts. I try, as far as I am able, to keep that message in the minds of the people in the mission where I labor, that they may be a happy people, that they may be a loyal and a lovable people, that they may enjoy the gift of that spirit which enriches the souls of men.

I bear you my testimony that the Lord pours out his Spirit upon us in great power, that we feel its blessing, and that the hearts of the Saints rejoice in the testimony of the missionaries, and in their own testimonies, as they meet together to worship the Lord. They do sustain the First Presidency, the Twelve, and the other General Authorities of the Church. They sustain them in their hearts and in their souls. They sustain them by their actions. They pay their tithes and their offerings. They say their prayers. They attend their meetings. They strive to gain an understanding of the Gospel and continually improve in knowledge, to increase their testimonies. The Spirit burns in their hearts, and when we meet together we have some glorious meetings—not large meetings, of course, but we have small gatherings of Saints in our district and branch conferences, in which the souls of the people overflow with joy and happiness, and with love of each other.

I believe I can say truthfully that there is peace and harmony existing almost without exception throughout the mission. The missionaries themselves are rendering faithful service. They are making their sacrifices, trying to curtail their expenses according to the incomes of their parents who are so distressed at home; trying to realize that the sacrifice of the parents is a wonderful thing; and they wish to make their parents feel that they appreciate it, and are trying to fit themselves to the conditions.

You may be assured that so far as the Western States mission is concerned, your children, your sons and daughters laboring there, are all in good health, all in good habits. They are prayerful; they are humble; they are diligent in their work; and the Lord is blessing them greatly. His power is manifest among us, and we can testify continuously to his loving kindness and blessing.

May God bless you. May God bless the work of the Church everywhere, and above all, his chosen servants who preside over it, and that we may follow their example and have the influence of the Holy Spirit to dwell in our hearts. I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER MILES L. JONES

President of the East Central States Mission

I am very thankful, my brethren and sisters, to be able to report progress in the East Central States mission, in which I have had the honor and privilege of laboring during the past three years. I am very pleased to state that the missionaries are enjoying good health, with the exception of one, who has been confined to his home for some little time, but he will soon be out again and be able to carry on his work. From time to time as I meet the missionaries who have returned home, I find that they have the missionary spirit with them still, and every one of them exclaims: "I wish that I were able to go back again and take up the work where I left off."

President Grant has referred, this morning, to some opposition. If I recall right the scriptures say: "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake . . . for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you."

Persecution always has been, and perhaps always will be the heritage of God's people in the earth. I sometimes wonder if the change is almost too much, when I consider that today in practically all walks of life, and among all classes of people, we find those who are willing to listen to the message that we have, and to give consideration to it.

I am very pleased to state that men of influence and women of influence, with whom we come in contact today, are giving consideration to the teachings of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and are agreeing with our teachings. So I am wondering if there is a little lull at the present time. But nevertheless, we are pressing on in the work, and as I hear those people express themselves it fills my heart with joy and thanksgiving to my Heavenly Father for the progress that is coming, especially in the East Central States mission; and from all reports, from all of the other missions.

During the past year four hundred and eleven honest souls have entered the waters of baptism in the East Central States mission; and since the first of the year more, in proportion, have been baptized than in the previous year. The outlook for the coming season is very encouraging indeed.

It may be that some who are under the sound of my voice today, both of the seen as well as the unseen audience, are earnestly seeking after truth, but have not as yet put themselves in a position to receive a testimony of the divinity of this great latter-day work. If there should be such, let me say to you, as I have said upon other occasions, that if you will go into your chambers by yourself, and there kneel down and pour out your soul to the Lord in humble prayer, he will not turn you aside, but he will cause a feeling to come into your soul that will bear witness to you of the divinity of this great latter-day work; and by following the admonition that will come to you, and complying with the commandments of the Lord, you, with us, may rejoice in the knowledge of this great latter-day work.

I rejoice in the testimony that I have, because I do know as I know that I live that God lives, that Jesus Christ is the Savior and Redeemer of the world, and that the Prophet Joseph Smith was the instrument in the hands of the Lord, raised up in this day and age of the world, for the purpose of establishing his work upon the earth for the last time, which will never more be thrown down nor given to another people, but will stand unto the end.

I know that President Heber J. Grant and those who have preceded him as prophets and presidents of the Church are men of God, and that President Grant today is God's mouthpiece upon the earth; and if we follow his admonition and teachings God will bless us and prepare us for every emergency in life and for every calling that may come to us.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER A. WILLIAM LUND

Former President of the British Mission

I trust, my brethren and sisters, that I may have the Spirit of the Lord to direct my remarks. It is indeed a pleasure for me to be in your midst once again, and to report the splendid condition of the British mission.

I bring to you the greetings of President and Sister Widtsoe, and of President and Sister Douglas. They asked me, as I left, that if I were permitted to speak at Conference, to extend to the Saints assembled their good wishes and their blessings. They are doing a wonderful work in that land. The Lord is blessing them in all of their labors.

The Saints throughout the British mission are a wonderful people. They are imbued with the Spirit of God, and are trying to live the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Elders are a splendid group of young men. I am pleased to report that in all of my missionary experience the greatest joy that came to my heart was to see the Spirit of God take hold of these young men, these boys, so to speak, and make men out of them. As they studied the scripture, as they prayed to God for his help, I could see them grow in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I could see the testimony of the truthfulness of this work rest upon them. As they stood in the halls and upon the street corners, it brought joy to my heart to listen to them bear testimony that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, that this work had been restored by him, and that he had given his life as a testimony of its truthfulness.

I rejoice in the testimony that I have that this is the Church of Jesus Christ; that within it is the power of everlasting life: that the priesthood of God has been restored through the Prophet Joseph Smith to men in this age of the world, and that the keys of this priesthood are vested in the President of this Church at the present time. I am reminded that on one occasion, at a time when a number of the disciples were leaving the Master, the Savior asked his apostles this question. "Will ye also go away?" Then Peter answered, "Lord to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

So I ask, my brethren and sisters, if we should turn from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, where would we go, for in this Church, and only in this Church, are the words of eternal life. Here is the power or priesthood which makes the Gospel the power of God unto salvation. The priesthood is here; and when men go about reviling the President of the Church they revile the Church to which I belong. I resent it, because I know in my heart that this is the Church of God; that these men who stand at the head of this Church are inspired of God, are our leaders, and have the words of eternal life.

I rejoice in the testimony that has been given to me that God lives, that Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of mankind, and that through him and only through him can eternal life come unto the children of men.

In the British mission we have established priesthood and genealogical classes, and have all the auxiliaries. I rejoice to report to you that they are doing splendidly in their work. We have 6,640 members of the Church who are divided into 16 districts containing 74 branches. There were, at the end of 1931, 68 Relief Societies, 71 Sunday Schools, 71 Mutuals and 37 Primaries. The Saints rejoice in the privilege of having a patriarch in their midst. Brother Wallis is doing a good work among the people. I am happy to report that last year we had two hundred and forty-five baptisms in that mission. It may seem only a few, but brethren and sisters, the people there are not turning their hearts to God as we would like to see them do. I wish that they would. I wish that they would turn unto him; that they would come back to him; that they would follow in his footsteps; that instead of so much belief in man-made philosophies they would come back to the teachings of Christ; that they would repent and turn unto him.

In conclusion let me plead with the younger members of the Church who may be present, as I am a younger member of the Church, that we devote our lives to service in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; that we remain loyal to this Church, to the leaders of this Church. The Church will go on, and the only way that we can remain with its progress is to be loyal to it and to continue faithful to all the duties that are assigned unto us. We need not fear for the welfare of this Church. It is the Church of God, and it will go on and on and fill its destiny. Let us, the younger members of the Church, rise up, do our duty, keep the commandments of God, pay our tithes, keep the Word of Wisdom, and God will bless us with a testimony of the truthfulness of this Church and the faithfulness of its leaders, I testify to you, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ARTHUR WELLING

President of the North Central States Mission

I earnestly pray, my brethren and sisters, that the Spirit of the Lord may guide the few remarks that I may make, as has been the case with those who have preceded me.

I know that my Redeemer lives, and that this is verily the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I am grateful for membership in it, and for the privilege of acting as a missionary abroad.

"Go ye into all the world," declared the risen Lord to his disciples, "and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16:15-16.)

Whatever the Savior may have meant by "damned," the responsibility of those thus commissioned to deliver the Gospel message to the world is here made clear and emphatic. Every missionary knows, however, that Paul may sow, and Apollos water, but only God giveth the increase; (I Cor. 3) and he knows that without this testimony of the Spirit there is no increase, never was, nor ever will be. It was the Master himself who, in answer to Peter's inspired declaration: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," said: "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my father which is in heaven. And I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock [Revelation] I will build my Church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:16-18.)

I testify to all the world that this Church is built upon the rock of revelation. Now as always, "not flesh and blood, but my Father which is in heaven" reveals its truth to men. Our task as missionaries is to bring the truth to the favorable attention of men in every possible way, and leave the rest to them and to the Lord.

Now, a word about our missionary work. The North Central States mission, though comparatively young and numerically small, is approximately a thousand miles square, lying west of the Great Lakes and east of the Rockies, half in the United States and half in Canada. We have fifty missionaries, about twenty-six hundred members, and a population of approximately ten times the total membership of the Church in all the world.

Our missionaries are well and busy and happy in their work. They are a credit to their parents and to the Church. So are our members. Last year more of them paid tithing than ever before in our history, and more of it than for any previous year except 1930, which was our banner year.

Conversions and baptisms, however, though surpassing all previous records, come but slowly. Our people are honest, industrious, and I am sure, more than ordinarily religious; but there remains much to be done to bring them to an acceptance of the restored Gospel of Jesus Christ. As I think of these good people, and listen to the testimonies offered here, I wish, in the language of Philip to Nathanael, that they might all "Come and See." Philip, you remember, had reported to Nathanael: "We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see." (John 1:45-46). Such is Mormonism's invitation to the world: "Come and see."

Come and see what? First, I wish they might find here what I believe to be the greatest need of the world today; namely, a real faith in a real God, our Heavenly Father. This is the first essential of any worthwhile religion; and the second is adherence to the laws of morality, good old fashioned virtue and honesty and honor in the lives of men. These ought observers to find here.

I would invite attention also to the organization of this Church,—led by prophets and apostles,—its hundred stakes and thirty missions calling into active service literally thousands of people in positions of responsibility,—its more than a thousand wards and branches with their tens of thousands of officers,—its multitudes of men holding the priesthood, and of men and women engaged in the various Auxiliaries of the Church,—all laboring gratuitously and enthusiastically for the welfare of others, under conditions best calculated to hold men always at their best. All my life I have been engaged, as student or teacher, in character education. In my opinion the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the greatest instrument known to man for the development of its members, for the character education of those who participate in its blessings. It is God's own plan "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." (Eph. 4:12.) All this I would have our friends to "Come and see."

I would have them examine also the law of tithing operative in the Church. In these times of financial distress and perplexity of nations, when state legislatures, national congresses and parliaments, and international conferences are frantically wrestling with mounting deficits, let them inquire God's way of balancing the budget in his Church and kingdom, a device so simple and equitable as to require neither explanation nor justification, the ancient law of the tithe.

The public budget in balance. I would have them observe how the individual poor and needy of the Church are cared for by the simple but effective device of the fast offering. Then might follow analysis of the benefits of the Word of Wisdom, and of our missionary system, etc.

Thus, I believe, my brethren and sisters, that there is much in the fruits of Mormonism which should challenge the attention and command the respect of men. But after all these so-called fruits of the Gospel are of relatively minor importance,—a few acorns, so to speak, from the great oak tree of truth. It is the testimony that God lives, and that we are his children; that Jesus is the Christ, and that the Gospel is his plan of life and salvation; that his priesthood and authority are here; and that the promised gifts and blessings do follow the believers,—these are the fundamentals in the faith of the Latter-day Saints. All these and more are here if the world will but "Come and see."

I sustain and uphold those who preside in this Church. I know that the priesthood is here; and that in the Gospel as here taught resides the power of God unto salvation.

I am glad, I repeat, to be a missionary, and to assist in bringing this message to the attention of men. I pray God to bless the youth of Zion and keep us true to our heritage of truth; and may he bless the world, and in his own due time, bring to pass his righteous will and purposes in the salvation of the children of men. To all of which may he add his blessings, I humbly pray, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The hymn, "Do what is right," was sung by the congregation. Elder Franklin S. Richards pronounced the benediction. Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON MEETING

The second session of the Conference commenced promptly at 2 o'clock p. m.

President Heber J. Grant presided.

The congregation sang, "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Andrew Jensen, Assistant Church Historian.

A sacred solo, "Arise! Shine!" was sung by Brother John Wood.

ELDER JAMES H. MOYLE

President of the Eastern States Mission

My brethren and sisters, I am happy in the work of the ministry, and pleased to say that our missionaries are in good health and active in their work. The past winter has been one of the mildest in the history of the East; while you have had so much snow here, we have had practically none.

There are two features of our work which have greatly interested me, one—the enlargement of our radio activities. We have obtained two more free stations, one in Buffalo, where there are more people than in Utah; and the only station in Paterson, New Jersey. During President Grant's last visit, we secured the largest station in Washington, D. C. President Grant opened the service over it with an address, notable in the history of the Eastern States mission and the preaching of the Gospel over the radio. This makes eight stations over which we broadcast weekly. We have reports from over the mission, and from the East Central States mission, that President Grant was heard clearly. In Massachusetts, the bishop of the Reorganized Church at Brockton, with a number of followers, listened in. We are guaranteed that we can preach to people over that station from Florida to Canada. Thus, literally, the Gospel is being proclaimed from the housetops, as predicted in the Book of Mormon.

Another event of marked interest to me is the opportunity that has been afforded during the past three months to preach to the Jews in their synagogues. The subject thus far has been the Relationship of Mormonism to Judaism. It was something of a remarkable experience to witness the interest which these educated Jews have manifested, and especially the Jewish students at Ithaca, New York, where the Cornell University is located. About a quarter of the students are Jews, and they, with their Rabbi, constituted substantially all of the audience which gathered in their synagogue. In fact, it was some of these young Jews that induced the Rabbi to invite me to speak to them. They remained after the service, wanting to learn more, until eleven o'clock, and then several followed me to the hotel. Two have since written letters, promising to visit me at the end of the school year, and inviting me back.

As I say, we have now several invitations to speak at other synagogues and Jewish organizations, one at Newark, New Jersey, presided over by the father of one of the Cornell students, who was not only present at the Jewish synagogue at Ithaca, but it was he who induced his father to invite me to speak to the Newark Jewish Club over which he presides.

I do not know of anything that presents a more marvelous and satisfying demonstration that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God than the fact that he, a boy not twenty-four years of age, translated the Book of Mormon, and published it to the world very shortly after his twenty-fourth birthday, and that that book should arouse the interest that it does among all classes of Jews.

On the title page of the Book of Mormon—written by practically a boy—is found among other things, the remarkable statement that it, the Book of Mormon, was “to come forth by the gift and power of God * * * in due time by way of the Gentile * * * to show unto the remnant of the House of Israel what great things the Lord hath done for their Fathers; and that they may know the covenants of the Lord, that they are not cast off forever—And also to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations.”

Bear in mind that this was over a hundred years ago, that this country frontier boy, without education, and with only extremely limited opportunities of access to books or libraries, or contact with learned men, translated the Book of Mormon, which is now translated and published into sixteen languages, and about 50,000 of the same sold per year, with an ever-increasing demand for the same.

That book, as previously outlined, and particularly in the prophecies found in Second Nephi, in the 30th and 10th chapters, foretells in unmistakable language, vital future events and conditions which have already been fulfilled, and still more which are being fulfilled. It says:

“And now, I would prophesy somewhat more concerning the Jews and Gentiles. For after the book of which I have spoken shall come forth, and be written unto the Gentiles, and sealed up again unto the Lord, there shall be many which shall believe the words which are written; and they shall carry them forth unto the remnant of our seed. * * *

“And it shall come to pass that the Jews which are scattered also shall begin to believe in Christ; and they shall begin to gather in upon the face of the land.”

The Prophet then says that they of Jerusalem “who shall not be destroyed shall be scattered among all nations.

“But behold, thus saith the Lord God: When the day cometh that they shall believe in me, that I am Christ, then have I covenanted with their fathers that they shall be restored in the flesh, upon the earth, unto the lands of their inheritance.

“And it shall come to pass that they shall be gathered in from their long dispersion, from the isles of the sea, and from the four parts of the earth.”

When the Book of Mormon was first published, there were extremely few Jews in all of Palestine, and they were not permitted the privileges of citizenship in that land, or the right to hold title to land, and were greatly mistreated by the Turkish government, of which Palestine was a part. In fact, the Jews throughout Europe, even including liberty-loving England, were denied many of the privileges and the freedom enjoyed by other people.

All must know something of what has been taking place altogether subsequent to the publication of the Book of Mormon.

In about a quarter of a century after the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, there commenced some real agitation among Jews for their restoration in Palestine. The first material effort in that direction was led by Baron Rothchild, in the 70's. That was personal, and the first organized movement was led by Baron Hirsch. Then followed in the 90's, and the early part of the twentieth century, the more general Zionist movement, which has become a real power in the world and influenced the British Empire. Since the great World War, millions and millions have been contributing, and Jews by the thousands have been aided in their migration to and settlement in Palestine and their establishment therein in making it a homeland for scattered and down-trodden Jews.

Another notable fact, showing how clearly the youthful Prophet understood the hidden but foretold predictions of the prophets of the Lord, is shown in the first publication of the Church, other than that of the Book of Mormon which was published before the Church was organized, namely, the "Evening and Morning Star" printed in June, 1832, in Independence, Mo. In its first issue, setting forth its mission and the object of its publication, is the statement that it was to be "a Messenger of truth in these the last days, to present to the world the revelations and commandments of God which have been given, and those which may be given, etc., and good tidings of great joy to all—but more especially to the House of Israel scattered abroad, that the day of their redemption is near, for the Lord has set his hand again the second time to restore them to the lands of their inheritance."

I would like to call your attention to the fact, that at the dedication of the Kirtland Temple in 1836, in the prayer of the Prophet Joseph, (found in the Doctrine and Covenants) among other most significant things he said: "We therefore ask thee to have mercy upon the children of Jacob, that Jerusalem, from this hour, may begin to be redeemed; and the yoke of bondage may begin to be broken off from the House of David; and the children of Judah may begin to return to the lands which thou didst give to Abraham, their father."

Then in April, 1840, the Prophet called Orson Hyde and John E. Page on a mission to go to Jerusalem and there dedicate that land to the return of the Jews—at a time when they were not permitted ordinary civil or political privileges, including the right to hold land in Palestine. It took Orson Hyde a year and a half to get there, traveling without purse or scrip. The trials were so great that John E. Page failed on the way, and gave up the struggle; but Apostle Orson Hyde arrived on the Mt. of Olives, and in Oct., 1841, dedicated that land to the return of the Jews, praying, among other things, to the Lord "to remove the barrenness and sterility of this land, and let springs of living water break forth to water its thirsty soil, let the vine and olive produce in their strength, and the fig tree bloom and flourish. Let the land become abundantly fruitful and possessed by its rightful heirs; let it again flow with plenty, to feed the returning prodigals who come home with a spirit of grace and supplication. Upon it let the clouds distil virtue and richness, and let the fields smile with plenty; let the flocks and the herds greatly increase and multiply upon the mountains and hills."

I see my time is up, but I commend to your consideration what we call in the mission "The Redeemed Hebrew," written by President B. H. Roberts in 1927. It sets forth in much greater detail the whole story, with quotations from the Book of Mormon, and the changed attitude of the Jews toward Christ, hundreds of thousands of whom are accepting Christianity. We are distributing that paper, and it is being read eagerly by thousands of Jews. You know that New York City is the great Jewish center of the world. I understand that about one-fourth or two million of the people living in and near New York City are Jews. At our street meetings they take this paper eagerly. It was printed in a Jewish-Christian periodical. The Jews are interested in it. It is a common experience to learn from well-informed Jews that they have read or are familiar with the contents of the Book of Mormon.

Thus the work is going on, and may God bless it and those who are seeking to further the purposes of the Lord, is my desire in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER JOHN V. BLUTH

President of the Canadian Mission

I esteem it a great privilege, my brethren and sisters, to be permitted to come back to Salt Lake City every six months and participate in the Conference proceedings. It is a wonderful inspiration unto us who are absent in the mission field, and we can carry back that inspiration unto those with whom we are laboring.

I rejoice in the testimony of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, that I obtained by listening to the teachings of the Elders many years ago. I rejoice that year by year that testimony has grown stronger and brighter; that in all the vicissitudes of life, and the floundering and the stumblings through which we go, and through which I have gone, I have been able to retain that testimony. I cherish that as one of the greatest, if not the greatest gift that God can give unto us. I do not know of any gift I can think of now that would be worth so much to me if I were to lose the testimony that this is the work of the Lord; that it is divine; that his power and authority are here upon the earth; that he speaks through that authority; that we are led and guided by his Holy Spirit in all that we do; that we are seeking in our humble way to carry on his work; that he in reality has given unto us the privilege of being his humble assistants in carrying out the great task that he has set for himself, to bring about the immortality and eternal life of man.

I know of nothing more glorious than to have the privilege of working in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in high position or in low. I feel it such an honor, such a help, such an opportunity for growth and advancement, that I feel that all Latter-day Saints should hunger for the privilege of serving in some capacity in the kingdom of God. It gives us joy; it gives us happiness.

I do not know that at any time in my past life I have realized as fully as I do now what that second commandment means: "Love thy neighbor as thyself." In contemplation of that so many other things that occupy our lives fade away into insignificance. The philosophy of that commandment, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," seems to me to be made clear in the Book of Mormon. I remember reading in the book of Mosiah the story of King Benjamin. As he felt age creeping upon him he desired to deliver over the kingdom to his son. He called the people together for the purpose of counseling them, to advise them, and to deliver the kingdom into the hands of his son. When they had gathered together he began to recite some of the things that had been done and accomplished. What he particularly impressed upon them was this one fact, that though he were a king and ruled over them, yet he had labored with his own hands for the accomplishment of God's purposes, that he might not be a burden unto them. "And this," he declared, "I do not desire to boast of, but I tell you these things that ye might learn wisdom; that ye may learn that when ye are in the service of your fellow beings, ye are only in the service of your God."

This truth is impressed upon us in the mission field; and the privilege of carrying the Gospel to those who are honest in heart, giving unto them the word of the Lord, giving unto them greater opportunity for advancement, progress, knowledge, understanding, gives us joy. Grief we feel when we find that apparently our words fall on deaf ears, when that which is so plain unto us seems as a fallacy to them. They believe in Jesus Christ but they have already been saved, they say, and, being saved, there is nothing else that they need look forward to; the fact that we cannot deceive them in this thing brings us grief. In a small way it gives us a little understanding of what our Savior must have felt when he came unto his own and his own would not receive him. He gave them the opportunity for salvation and exaltation, but they looked upon him as a blasphemer.

I desire to bear my testimony to the goodness of God, and to his mercy, to the joy that has come into my heart since we heard the Gospel some 56 years ago, and the satisfaction and the happiness that are ours in doing the work of the Lord, in working in his cause, in helping to deliver unto the rest of the world that same message that has given us joy and happiness.

May God help us to cherish the testimony that we have received, that we may do nothing that will mar it or cause it to fade away, because these testimonies that have come unto us by doing the will of the Lord cannot be taken from us by any power on earth, except that of our own transgression. Let us cherish it and keep it. It is a wonderful thing to know, not only that we are in the way, but to know where we are going, and that at the end of this life we still continue in the service of the Lord, with the vistas of progression and advancement outlined before us. O, that testimony! There isn't anything in the world that I can think of for which I would give that testimony.

May God help us to serve him, to do his will, to be faithful, honest and loyal to his cause, not paying so much attention to the things of this world, because they fade away, but to look more for the things that are of eternal worth and that we can carry with us, that we may find stored up there for us when we go there, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CHARLES E. ROWAN, JR.

President of the Texas Mission

My brethren and sisters, I appreciate the opportunity I have of laboring in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I bring you greetings from the Saints, the missionaries, Sister Rowan, and my family. I am happy to say that the missionaries are all well, enjoying the spirit of the Gospel, enjoying their labors, and getting great satisfaction from bearing testimony of the restored Gospel to the people of Texas and Louisiana.

I find there are many faithful Latter-day Saints living in those states, and as missionaries we appreciate very much the splendid cooperation they are giving us in helping to disseminate the Gospel truths. Many of our best converts are being contacted through the very fine personnel of those who have membership in this great Church.

It gives me great joy to report that we have fifteen branches, with a membership of eighteen hundred fifty-nine souls. We have five districts having a membership of thirty-six hundred five. Making a total in the Texas mission of five thousand four hundred sixty-four souls. We have thirty-four Sunday Schools, seventeen Relief Societies, and many Primaries. Our Primaries, however, you realize, are not entirely stable, because the lady missionaries establish temporary community Primaries, while they are laboring in the various cities; yet they are accomplishing a wonderful work.

I am happy to report that the people in these states are very friendly and hospitable. It is a source of gratitude to me to find the confidence that the business and professional men have in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The conduct of our people whom they have met has thoroughly convinced them that those who have membership in this church are honest, honorable, straightforward, God-fearing men and women. I appreciate telling you, that many of the leading doctors in those states treat our missionaries absolutely free of charge because of the wonderful work they are doing.

We are not quite so fortunate in giving addresses over the radio, since those in charge say: "We will be delighted, if you will pay, to give you a reduced rate,—but we expect money from all other churches and receive it; consequently you will have to pay to get on the air." Hence few radio programs have been given.

During these hard times we are finding great consolation and solace in the words of the Redeemer of the world, wherein he said:

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

"For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

We are putting this to the test, my brethren and sisters, and I am frank to confess that the Lord is blessing his people with his Spirit.

I believe that the Christian people generally throughout the world are depending more on the Lord than they have done in the past. I recognize and appreciate that the Lord has given us an invitation to come unto him and find rest to our souls, but I am also mindful of the fact that the Lord has said there is something of vastly more importance. He said,

"Not every one that sayeth unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my father which is in heaven.

"Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

"And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

So I say to you there is a certain way prescribed by Jesus the Christ through which his children must come unto him. The plan is outlined completely in our Articles of Faith.

I am happy to be engaged in the work with my missionaries in calling upon mankind to repent. I find myself in perfect accord with this Church. I honor, revere and respect these prophets; I bear you my witness, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, that I know that God our Eternal Father has spoken in this dispensation of time, that Jesus the Christ has reappeared and that Joseph Smith was an instrument in the hands of Almighty God in establishing anew the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I am also thankful to know that his successors have all held the keys of the authority to bind on earth and it shall be bound in heaven, and to loose on earth and it shall be loosed in heaven. I certify to you, in words of soberness, that President Heber J. Grant is a prophet, seer and revelator, and an inspiration to all who are familiar with his life.

May I make one appeal before closing. Send us the names and addresses of your friends or relatives in Texas or Louisiana and we will be glad to get in touch with them. I want to thank the Bureau of Information, and all others who have furnished us with information. Your sons and daughters are well and happy. They are receiving testimony upon testimony that this is God's work.

I pray God to bless all of us, that we may live and prove faithful to the end, and I do it in the name of Jesus Christ our Redeemer. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE S. ROMNEY

President of the Northern States Mission

I have been thrilled, during this Conference, with the testimonies of my brethren. I am happy to report to you that the missionaries in the Northern States mission are carrying the message of the Gospel, and the testimony that the Lord has spoken again to his people in this day, and that they are doing it well. They are faithful young men and women. They grow very rapidly in the testimony of the Gospel when they come to the mission field.

This last Sunday I listened to the testimony of a young lady who has been only a few months in the mission field. She was a very timid girl when she left home, and was extremely frightened when she arrived in the mission field. It seemed almost beyond her strength to go up to the doors of the people and announce that she was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Last Sunday, in her testimony, she stated that she had never known much about the Gospel. Just the other day, however, she was invited into a home of very intelligent people. They asked her questions for an hour and a half, and it seemed to her that she did not lack for an answer to any of the questions that previously she had no idea she could answer.

Such is the testimony of the young men and women. I received a letter from one of the boys not long ago. He, too, was just a young man who had had no experience at home. He said:

"A non-member of the Church called for us to administer to a young lady who had been sick for some time. We administered to her. We were very timid and frightened—scarcely knowing what to say. In two hours after the administration the young lady was up and out at play, and has been well ever since."

We are very glad to have the young men and women come into the mission field, and we trust that they will come filled with the spirit of testimony.

President Grant spoke this morning of the things that are said and have been said against him. I believe that sometimes, even in the words of those who write and speak against the prophets of the Lord, we have some of our strongest testimonies.

Just recently a book came from the press in Chicago, written by Mr. Beardsley. Its newspaper review was entitled: "A Drunken Fiend, or a Prophet, or Mouthpiece of God." The title of the book is "Joseph Smith and His Mormon Empire." In this book we have rehearsed again many of the old stories that have been told about Joseph Smith, the Prophet, derogatory of his character. He is pictured as one of the vilest of men. In fact, Mr. Beardsley seems to find him the "drunken fiend." I was surprised, when I read that book, to notice some of the inconsistencies in it. After picturing the prophet of the Lord as he does, he makes statements concerning the time just following the driving of the Saints from Missouri to this effect:

"At that time what talent the little town of Quincy could boast! There was Abraham Lincoln, the future President of the United States, and the great martyr of the American people. There was Stephen A. Douglas, who has written his name so prominently across the pages of history. And there was Mr. Browning, a senator and cabinet officer. There was Brigham Young, whose name was to become a common word upon the lips of the American people, and there was Joseph Smith."

And he said:

"In this company of people who was the dominating personality? Was it Abraham Lincoln? No. Was it Stephen A. Douglas? No. Was it Mr. Browning, or Brigham Young? No. It was Joseph Smith, the Mormon Prophet, a fugitive from justice."

It seems to me that such contradictions in the writing of those who would speak evil of the prophets of the Lord are but testimonies to the truth of this great work. In the beginning of the book Mr. Beardsley refers to the statement of Joseph Smith which the Prophet made when he was fifteen years old, when he said that an angel told him that his name should be known for good and evil among all nations of the earth. It seemed strange to me that Mr. Beardsley should raise his voice and take his pen, trained in literature as he is, to write a book to help fulfil that prophecy, wherein he is doing his part in making the name of Joseph Smith known among all the nations of the earth. I feel that he would be much safer if he were on the right side rather than on the wrong side.

I have a testimony that the prophets of the Lord came in this day, and are here yet; and I know, as my friends who have spoken before me, that our leaders are men of integrity, men of honor and honesty; and that this, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, is the truth. I trust that the Lord will bless us, that this testimony may sink into our hearts, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER ALONZO A. HINCKLEY

President of the California Mission

It is my prayer that the Lord will calm my spirit and lead me by the influence of the Holy Ghost. I am so new in my field of labor that I feel that I can hardly speak with the same assurance relative to the mission, that my associate presidents speak in regard to their missions. It was only late in January of this year that by divine appointment, by prophecy and by the laying on of hands, I was set apart to preside over the California mission.

It was my great pleasure to be led into that mission and introduced to my labors and installed under the direction of Elder David O. McKay. As he traveled through that mission rapidly, spending some two weeks visiting all of the districts, the people flocked to hear him. Along his route the chapels were filled. The inspiration of the Lord was upon him. The Saints were built up in their faith. The Elders were instructed and given new high hopes, and impressed with the great responsibility that rests upon them, and entered into their labors with renewed diligence.

But when the two weeks were ended, and I saw Brother McKay disappear through the gate at the railroad station, on his way back to headquarters, headquarters seemed farther removed from California, to me, than they had seemed just a day or two earlier. To me that two weeks was, of course, a schooling under a prophet. I have never quite understood, as I have read the history of the Church, the operation, in its entirety, of the school of the prophets. I have always thought that it must have been most remarkable. But I do know, in a measure, what it is to be schooled under the prophets.

It has been my great privilege, all the years of my life, to be rather close in contact with the Authorities of this Church. My father was a president of a stake for twenty-five years, and I followed him as a stake president in the same locality for twenty-seven years. So in all those years, into our home—into my mother's home first and later into my own home—came the Authorities of the Church, and thus I became acquainted with all of them as they traveled among the people to direct, admonish and bless them; and their coming into our home was a blessing. I have appreciated it all my life. I appreciate it more today, I think, than at any other time in my life. And as I stand here, thinking of what a blessing it is to be well born, to be born into the Church and kingdom of God, of goodly parents, today I bless my mother, today I bless my father, prince of a man that he was, carrying in his heart a reverence for the Authorities of this Church. I thank the Lord that his reverence for the Authorities carried over into the hearts of his children.

I thought when the President was speaking this morning, that never have I heard in my mother's home, never have I heard in my own home any of the Authorities of this Church lightly spoken of. Oh, ye Saints, beware, if in your homes ye speak slightly of the servants of the living God! Rather that our children should hear our lips uttering prayers that come from the heart; that they, the servants of God, in a world of wickedness and strife, shall be sustained and led and inspired, so that this people shall be and continue to be an exceptional people, chosen of the Lord and led by his servants.

As I minister with my young brethren down in the California mission, and with the lady missionaries, oh, I stand before the Lord and express my gratitude for those young men and young women, clean and sweet and undefiled; that down in that country of rapid and continuous growth, down in that place where everything seems to thrive, they are not drawn away to the right nor to the left. They are not afraid. The courage that comes unto those young missionaries to stand up in defense of the truth, and declare Jesus Christ and his ministry, and the restoration of the Gospel, and the call of the Lord unto salvation unto all those who will hear it,—I say my soul thrills.

It is a new experience to step down into that field of labor, among these young men and young women, just out of a class where I had been associated with high priests, mature and sweet, ripened in their experience; and to touch these young lives and to witness their giving of all that they are, the strength of their young manhood and womanhood, to the service of God; it is one of the greatest testimonies in all the world.

As I have gone through that mission, that country, that beautiful country, from the summit of the hills down in and through the valleys, everywhere today it is a garden spot, following the rainy season. I have driven past the homes of the rich, the estates of the wealthy, and then walked into the homes and sat down with the meek, the Latter-day Saints; and I have questioned in my soul, I have queried: "When shall the meek inherit the earth?" Not now, that is certain. The meek are pushed aside. The grasping, the selfish—they rule and dominate.

But if you wish to find sweetness, if you wish to find contentment, if you wish to find love, just assemble with the meek who love the Lord and keep his commandments, who love the children of the Lord. Then you will say: Blessed are the meek now, and what must their blessings be when they shall inherit the earth? For the earth and the fulness thereof belong to the Lord, and he who bought it, redeemed it and paid the price, opened the way for you and me to become sons and daughters of God. When he comes, when he rules whose right it is to rule, what will be our joy? The promise will be fulfilled, "The meek shall inherit the earth."

Recently in going through that mission, I have gone into the mining camps, where thousands have found their livelihood heretofore. There is no whistle that shrieks now and calls men to work. The smelter smoke does not ascend from those smoke stacks, and their towns are like deserted villages. And I say in my soul: I wonder if this kind of experience will not bring to men's minds the invitation of the Lord, when he said unto the people:

"Lay not up unto yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

"But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal."

Uneasy is the head of the man of great estates and holdings today. That for which he has struggled, and from which he has hoped to inherit ease and comfort and the power and influence that come from wealth, is now threatened and is insecure. He is under anxiety today. No peace there. But I bear testimony that there is peace in the hearts of the Latter-day Saints.

It was my privilege not long since to go into one of our branches, and as I was met at the depot I was asked: "Did you know that Brother Allen had died?"

"Oh, no. When was that?"

"Just now, in the hospital."

"All right."

The fact of that death caused me to remain there for three days. For three days, here and there, in the parks, in the lobbies, in the stores, on the streets, I heard people speaking—not our people, as we have only two hundred and fifty of our people in that city. They said: "That Mormon, that man Allen, was a good man." There was a man that went about doing good. My soul rejoiced.

Oh, the power and the influence of a righteous life! The president of a branch had died. He was a Latter-day Saint.

I walked up to one place and I saw a magnificent building, and I said to Brother Johnson: "I wonder, while we wait, if we couldn't go through this institution?"

"Surely, Brother Hinckley. They let me in there any time."

At the head of the institution was a man named Seaman. I thought: "Perhaps that could be George A. Seaman's kinsman. I will go in."

The first thing he said when I was introduced was, "Do you know President Allen?"

"I have never known him, but I am here to be in attendance at his funeral."

"Great was that man," said this head of that institution. "He came in here and held meetings with us."

This is briefly the story that he gave: "All of the sects and the denominations are permitted to hold meetings in this institution on Sunday. When President Allen brought his people in," he said, "they prayed, they sang, and they preached the Lord Jesus Christ. We had been used to seeing them, when others were here, play cards and let the radio go on; but this room became a chapel when the Mormons held services here. But it stirred up opposition, and my board was petitioned to prevent the Mormons from holding meetings in this institution. What did your president say? President Allen said, 'No war, no contention with us. Our mission is peace. We have preached unto you the truth, and when you shut us out you shut out the word of God and the message of salvation.' Result: The inmates said: 'Where are those Mormons?'"

"They are not coming."

"Why not?"

"The Board has said they cannot come."

"Result: Five hundred people signed a petition and said: 'We want the Latter-day Saints to come in here and hold their service.'"

The privilege was renewed and we continue to hold services there, and when the funeral of that righteous man was held the chapel was filled; the archway dividing two rooms was opened, chairs were put in; hundreds were there to pay their respect to the life of a righteous man.

That is the kind of message that reaches the world when a righteous man manifests before God in daily life the fruits of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Down in the California mission, under the wise leadership of President Joseph W. McMurrin—perhaps the only mission where one of the General Authorities has been permitted to preside for years and years, covering a period of thirteen years—he has wisely established branches all over Nevada, Arizona and California. Twelve thousand people in their daily lives are manifesting unto the world the fruits of Mormonism, and they are leavening the lump. And while our missionary force has dropped from its high peak of two hundred and twenty in 1929, to fifty-nine now, and while the depression is forcing fathers and mothers to write daily: "Can you not honorably release my son or my daughter? We have gone the limit"—in other places, presidents of stakes have written to the president of the mission and said: "Send no Elder home for the want of funds. When they have reached their limit notify us, for in this stake no lady missionary and no Elder has ever returned for the want of funds."

I bear my testimony to the quality of the men, the quality of the women, who minister in that mission. It is the choicest of the choice. I love them as I love my own sons and daughters. They are wonderful. I love those Saints, and I want to bear testimony that in that mission are some of the best Latter-day Saints I have ever known. And now in answer to this call for local missionary help the presidents of those branches have said: "We will give you help;" and I expect that a hundred or more will be installed and divinely appointed to labor part time to help in this emergency.

I know the truth. I love the truth. I hope to live it to the end, and to be found worthy to sit down with my father and my mother, saved in the celestial kingdom of God. May this blessing be mine and be yours, is my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Congregation arose and sang the hymn, "God moves in a mysterious way."

ELDER GEORGE F. RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Up to this point in this General Conference I believe that our meetings have been on a par with the meetings of previous General Conferences of the Church, in spirit, instruction and interest. I have been greatly edified myself and have been made to feel very grateful and thankful for my membership in the Church, the fellowship that I have with the Latter-day Saints, the knowledge that I have of the Gospel and the testimony I have of its truth; for I do know that this is God's work, the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and I rejoice exceedingly in this knowledge.

INTEGRITY OF STAKE WORKERS

The brethren who have spoken in this conference, excepting the President of the Church, have been the mission presidents, and they have spoken of conditions that obtain in the world, of the faithfulness of our young missionaries and the integrity of the Saints in the mission field. From my knowledge in visiting the missions I can bear testimony to what they have said, and in thinking of it I am reminded of the integrity and devotion of the Latter-day Saints in the stakes of Zion. We as General Authorities of the Church, visit them quite frequently. We are always received cordially, and are given a generous welcome. We are treated, I may say, as kings might expect to be treated, given the very best that the people have to give, and there are evidences that they sustain the Authorities of the Church, evidences of faith and faithfulness as members of the Church.

A great many faithful workers are laboring in the stakes of Zion, men and women who are setting a worthy example before the people, living their religion, paying their tithing, keeping the Word of Wisdom, doing things that they are asked to do, and rendering service to God, to the Church and their fellow men. I am proud of this people, thankful that I am numbered with them, that I have association and fellowship with them, and I believe I have their confidence and support as do all of my brethren of the General Authorities of the Church.

NEED FOR IMPROVEMENT

I praise the Lord and thank him for these blessings, yet I realize that there is much in Zion that ought not to be. There are things that we engage in and do as members of the Church that we ought not to do. There are duties that ought to be performed that we neglect. I do not know whether the Lord is altogether pleased with us. I feel sure that he is pleased with the Church as a church, and with many of the individuals, but with some I am afraid he is not pleased. I am afraid that there will be disappointment on the part of some members of the Church when this life's work is finished, when our opportunities are past. Disappointment is something to be dreaded if not to be feared.

SATISFACTION IN BEING RIGHT

There is always a satisfaction, my brethren and sisters, in having been right on any question that has engaged our attention, especially if the wisdom and judgment of others have been brought to bear upon that question and we have not all agreed. You know how prone we are to say, "I told you so." The more important the question that is involved in a consideration of this kind, the greater satisfaction there will be in the end when we find that we have been right; but if on the other hand it is found that we have been wrong there will be correspondingly great disappointment. The importance of the question involved determines the amount of satisfaction or disappointment. The greatest question that man has ever considered, according to my judgment, is that of religion, or salvation, of what it consists and how it may be attained. There is no other question I suppose that has engaged the attention of so many people or upon which there has been such diversity of opinion. That accounts for the numerous creeds and religious denominations that there are in the world today.

Those of us who know the truth of the Gospel as it has been revealed in these last days through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith, know that there are millions of people who, in the end, when it shall be universally known of what salvation consists, how it may be attained, will be tremendously disappointed, and only the disappointment of the wicked or those who have fought against the work of God will be greater or supreme. We who know the truth and know the will of the Lord and the law of the Lord, understand that we are to love the Lord our God with all our heart, with all our soul, and with all our might; that this is the first great commandment. And the second is like unto it: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

DISCHARGING OUR RESPONSIBILITY

We ought to desire above everything else, except our own welfare and salvation, the welfare and salvation of our fellow men. We are organized as a Church. We have received responsibilities from on high to preach this Gospel of the kingdom in all the world as a witness before the end shall come. For more than a century we have been trying as a people to discharge ourselves of this responsibility and prove our love of God and man by making sacrifice in the preaching of this Gospel. You have seen the results, and yet there are but very few of our Father's children in this dispensation who have embraced the Gospel, but that is not to be wondered at. It was ever so. Only a few in the days of Isaiah, as we read in the fifty-third chapter of the book of Isaiah accepted the truth. The prophet said: "Lord, who hath believed our report?" Only a few. And in the days of the primitive church we find this expression:

"But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord who hath believed our report?"

This dispensation is a time of warning, just as much, I understand, as it was a day of warning when Noah the prophet of God was commanded to warn the people of his day that if they did not repent of their sins and obey the Gospel they would be destroyed. We are told that for a hundred and twenty years the prophet of God labored among that people, but in vain except for the saving of a few souls. A great flood was sent to destroy the people. I say for more than a century we have been preaching this Gospel of the kingdom to the people of the world, and the people of the world are rejecting the message in large measure, excepting a very few. They will meet with disappointment and in some instances condemnation, according to the law that has come to those who have heard and have rejected the Gospel.

SACRIFICE BRINGS BLESSINGS

Now in these times of financial stress and business troubles the Latter-day Saints, I suppose, are feeling these things the same as other people. The Lord rains on the just and the unjust alike. But the Latter-day Saints have more to encourage them than have the people of the world. We are here not for the gaining of wealth. That is not the end in view, but a means to a nobler end, that of serving God and working righteousness, striving to save our own souls and the souls of others; and we can afford to make the sacrifices that the Gospel entails upon us.

Brethren and sisters, we know that we have the promise, and God's promises never fail, that we shall be rewarded abundantly in time and in eternity for all the sacrifices made for the accomplishment of his purposes. For the past number of years we have maintained in the neighborhood of two thousand missionaries in the field; the report is made today that we have seventeen hundred and two missionaries out. You have heard the report of these mission presidents, how the numbers have been depleted in their mission fields. What are we going to do to keep up our record and do the work the Lord requires at our hands? I have a recommendation for our mission presidents.

LOCAL SAINTS AS MISSIONARIES

Some of the presidents told us in our meeting with them a few days ago that they were using the local brethren and sisters, some in one way and some in another. In the closing remarks of President Hinckley of the California mission, who has just addressed us, he said he expected the branches in his mission to furnish a hundred local people to assist in this work. I want to relate to you a little experience I had in presiding over the European mission during the World War. I was there from August of 1916 until July of 1919. During that time in the British mission the number of missionaries from home was reduced from seventy-five to seven, including those who were in the mission headquarters. We had seventy-five branches that had formerly been presided over almost universally by Elders from home. Those were now presided over by local men. Men who were able to bear arms had been drafted into the service, and those who were not entered the factories for the manufacture of munitions of war. There were very few men left at home. We called as missionaries young men who were not old enough to bear arms.

When I left that mission there were twenty-two local brethren laboring in the manner referred to, some of them giving part time, presiding over districts or branches, others giving their entire time as missionaries. We called into the service young women and married women, and at one time, as I remember it, we had three hundred and seventy-five of these good sisters working. They rendered their reports to mission headquarters the same as the missionaries had done who were from home. They distributed tracts, they held cottage meetings, loaned books, and did all the work that regular missionaries did. The result was that these missionaries were more faithful than ever before. The tithing of the British mission just about doubled itself in three years. We had almost as many baptisms as had been the case when we had seventy-five or more missionaries in the field.

It shows what can be done with these local men and women in the world. They are just the same kind of people we have here in the stakes and wards. In every nation he that fears God and works righteousness is approved of him. I see no reason why men and women in the mission field should not labor in the Church as missionaries or in any other capacity where they are needed, just as well as the people in organized wards and stakes. They are doing it in some places. There are some missionaries called from one mission to another. Why not the mission supply its quota of missionaries and send them out into other missions? These lady missionaries are doing a splendid work in all the missions where they are used. There are ladies locally who are just as efficient as those who go from the stakes and are willing and could be used to advantage if we would make use of them.

I remember two years ago when I was going through the Canadian mission with President Hart, at Hamilton we called for volunteer lady missionaries to accompany those who were there from Zion. Instead of sending out two lady missionaries from Zion who were there at such great expense, it was suggested that we take one of these lady missionaries and a local missionary, and have two sets of missionaries where formerly we had but one. Several sisters volunteered. We blessed these people and set them apart and we have reports that a splendid work was accomplished by those local sisters. Why can we not do this, and double the number of missionaries? Suppose a woman cannot give all her time, if one sister would go out one day and another another day, if it took seven sisters to do a week's work along the side of a regular missionary, the work would be accomplished. Why not do the same with our brethren?

I heard an Elder reporting his mission recently who said he tried out the plan of taking a little boy and giving him a tract and letting him lead up to the doors of homes, and it had a splendid effect. They would not shut the door on him or deny him. They would hear what he had to say, and his message would be an introduction for the missionary. I say that in that case the little boy was the equal of the Elder from home. When they go into a home there is no need for two Elders from Zion in that home to preach the Gospel, one can do all the talking; all he needs is a companion and a witness, and here we have one.

There are ways and means, and I believe that God expects us to be thoughtful men who have charge of this work in the mission field and at home. I think we can perhaps do better than we have been doing, and, brethren and sisters, all this means that we wash our hands clean of the blood of this generation, for we are as watchmen upon the towers. Our responsibility is to warn the wicked and to call them to repentance and to preach this Gospel of the kingdom to those who are in spiritual darkness.

A wonderful work is being accomplished. May God be praised for it and the Saints for the work they have done, and may this work go forward to the entire satisfaction of the Lord, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE ALBERT SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am glad to know that there are people in the world who are not discouraged. For months it has been my privilege to be in different parts of our country and it is rare that one finds those who are not exceedingly pessimistic, because of conditions over which we seem to have no control. Men and women are unemployed and in many cases they will be in dire distress unless ways and means be prepared for them to earn their living. The wise men of the earth are seeking to find some way whereby this difficulty may be overcome. Quite recently the most terrible war of all time occurred, and when that was finished many people thought that would be the end of war. At present there is suspicion and jealousy among the nations of the earth. There are groups that are preparing to take by force what they cannot obtain by honest toil, and "Men's hearts are failing them for fear."

These things have been predicted. We have been told that in the last days serious difficulties would arise, and before that time the true Gospel would be preached.

BLESSINGS FOLLOW OBEDIENCE

In the year 1830 this Church with which we are identified was organized. It was patterned after the Church that had been organized by Jesus Christ our Lord on the other side of the mighty ocean. It was intended to prepare people for the things which were to come, and hundreds and thousands have rejoiced in the blessings that have followed obedience to the teachings of our Lord and obedience to the laws that govern his Church.

IN THE DAYS OF NOAH

It has been remarkable to me as I have read the history of the world, both religious and secular, that the children of men so easily forget the Lord and turn away from him. In ancient times it became necessary for Noah to go about teaching the truth for more than a hundred years, and yet people rejected him and his message and the prediction that he made that they would suffer the penalty that always follows disobedience to God. They were drowned in the flood. History discloses the fact that whenever people have served God and kept his commandments they prospered, and when they turned away from him and lost their faith they fell into transgression and they suffered the punishment that they merited by reason of their disobedience. That is not only true of the nations that have dwelt upon the European lands and in Asia and in Africa, but it has been true of those who have dwelt upon this hemisphere.

THE ANCIENT INHABITANTS OF AMERICA

When the Lord prepared to people this land, Ether and his group crossed the mighty ocean. This was soon after the confusion of tongues at Babel. They were not able of their own wisdom to cross the ocean, but the Lord taught them how they might make barges, how they should provide themselves with food; and then under the guidance of his Holy Spirit they migrated to this great western hemisphere and were prospered. Then they forsook the Lord and fell into transgression, and the result was that as a people they were destroyed. Then another people came, about six hundred years before the birth of our Savior, under Lehi. They came to this western land led as had been the other people by the power of God. When they observed the commandments of the Lord they were happy, and when they transgressed they suffered the penalty which always follows disobedience of the laws of our Heavenly Father. They separated into two groups after they arrived here, and while they became numerous upon the face of the earth there was a large portion of them who did not serve the Lord, and eventually they became so wicked that the Nephites or fair-skinned people perished, being destroyed by the Red Man. They had builded great cities and wonderful things were accomplished by those who kept the commandments of the Lord, but those who would not obey him dwelt in idleness, or in a way that compelled them, if they would live, to take that which belonged to others. The Lord blessed those who honored him and kept his commandments as long as they were faithful, but eventually they were entirely destroyed, leaving their records buried in the earth, where they remained until they were delivered to the prophet Joseph Smith. History has repeated itself many times.

THE RESULT OF DISOBEDIENCE

In several places in the scriptures we read that "the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid," and in the day and age in which we live that is very plainly manifested to the children of men. The condition that has come upon the earth is not the result of righteousness; it is the result of disobedience to the laws of our Father in heaven, and we as members of this Church have been warned of what was to come. We have not only been warned by the scriptures that were given in the days of the Savior and prior to his time, and those that were given after him, but in our own day and age the Lord has spoken and the revelations of our Heavenly Father are found in the Doctrine and Covenants. If we will read these revelations we will learn that the experiences through which we are passing were predicted, that the very promises that the Lord made are now being fulfilled.

It does seem strange that so many of our Father's children think they are finding satisfaction in doing things that are wrong. The distress of the world today is very largely because men have turned from the teachings of the Lord. Men are seeking the wealth of the world, and it appears to make little difference to some of them how they obtain it. They cannot take it with them. The things that they obtain by selfishness will not be beneficial to them. For thousands of years the Lord has been teaching this lesson, yet today it seems to me that men and women are as disobedient, as unthankful and unholy as they have ever been in any period of the world's history.

THE ONLY REMEDY

The message that the Lord has given to the earth, that we have been asked to disseminate, is the only rule of conduct whereby this difficulty may be removed. By following the teachings of the Lord, by turning unto him and repenting of sin, by going about doing good—that attitude will bring happiness and prosperity. Mankind will love one another, and the hatred and the unkindness that have existed so much in the world will pass away. The Lord has not required something that is impossible. On the contrary, he has given us commandments and advice and counsel that it is possible for all of us to follow in this day and age in which we live. The daily press brings to us accounts of disasters that are everywhere—the sea being tempestuous and loss of life upon it, earthquakes, great tornadoes, such as we have been told would occur in the last days—and it does seem to me, brethren and sisters, if men are thinking seriously, if they are reading the scriptures, they must know that the happenings that the Lord said would occur in the last days are occurring. The fig tree surely is putting forth its leaves, and those who are thoughtful must know that the summer is nigh, that those things that the Lord has predicted as preceding his second coming are now coming to pass.

As we sit in this comfortable house today and enjoy the teachings that have been given to us under the influence and power of our Heavenly Father, how grateful we ought to be for our blessings, for the fact that the Lord has removed from us uncertainty. There should be no doubt in the minds of this congregation as to what the Lord desires. There should be no uncertainty in our minds as to how we may be happy. There is only one way that we can enjoy our lives, and that is by being obedient to the teachings of an all-wise Father who knows the end from the beginning and has given to us understanding and the opportunity to add to that understanding and to prepare for every vicissitude of life.

COMFORTS IN ABUNDANCE

Isn't it a singular thing that what the world has struggled for from the beginning, wealth, power, all those things that make men comfortable, are to be had in abundance today—better and more clothing than ever before, more food than can be consumed, more wealth of all kinds than the world has ever had before. Our homes are more comfortable. The conveniences of life have been multiplied marvelously since the Gospel came upon the earth, and today everything that we have struggled for we have. Education has arrived at its highest point. More knowledge of the things of this earth is possessed by men than ever before. Everything mankind has struggled for from the beginning of time that is considered most desirable is upon the earth today; and notwithstanding that, there is doubt and dread of what the future has in store.

THE CAUSE AND CURE

What is our trouble? It is that we have sought the creature comforts, we have sought the honors of men, we have sought those things that selfishness puts into our souls. We have sought to set ourselves up and have preferred ourselves to our Father's other children. I am speaking now of the world. We have ignored the commandments that we should honor God and keep his commandments, that we should love our neighbors. We have failed to pray in the way that we were taught to pray, and men and women have set their judgment up against the teachings of an all-wise Father, and of course we are paying the price.

Now if we would enjoy the blessings that the Lord has prepared for us, the things that we have struggled for, there is yet something else for us to do, and that is to love one another. That is to honor God and keep his commandments, obey the laws of the land in which we live, be considerate of one another, observe the teachings that have been given to us from the beginning of the world; and if we will do that all our problems will be solved. The wisdom of men will be added upon, the power of God will come upon his children, and this earth will be cleansed and purified from the evils that exist that are rapidly destroying humanity.

Knowing that, brethren and sisters, we ought to be faithful. The land that we live in should be sanctified by our lives of righteousness, and we should go about doing good. There should be no doubt in our minds as to the power of God to safeguard our interests. We know that he can do that, and in this wonderful Church, with its marvelous organization, with the authority of the holy priesthood bestowed upon thousands of our Father's sons, with these marvelous organizations that are given for the training of our youth—our Primary, our Mutuals, our Sabbath Schools, our Relief Society organization, our educational facilities—there is everything that should prepare us to know what God would have us do here. All that we need is to repent of our sins, turn from the error of our ways, cleanse our lives of impurity, and then to go about doing good. It does not require that we shall be set apart for that purpose. Every man, woman and child in the Church of Jesus Christ may go about doing good and receive the blessing that results therefrom.

OUR MISSION

Looking back through the experiences of those who have lived upon the earth, and remembering the privations and afflictions of those nations that have turned away from our Heavenly Father, let us not be among those who unwisely and foolishly set our judgment up against the wisdom of the Lord. Let us acknowledge his wisdom, let us set our hands to the work that he has entrusted to our care, let us bless our Father's children wherever they may be, and our lives will be enriched and this world will be made happier. This is the mission that has been placed upon our shoulders. Our Heavenly Father will hold us responsible for the manner in which we fulfil it. God grant that in the humility of our souls we will go about with the desire in our hearts to do good to all people wherever they may be, and bring to them the joy that can only come through observing his laws and keeping his commandments. That peace may abide in our hearts and in our homes, that we may radiate sunshine and cheer wherever we may go, that we may prove to the world that we do know that God lives, by the lives that we lead, and receive his blessings therefor, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT HEBER J. GRANT

The auditor's report was not included in the statistics given by me this morning. It is as follows:

Salt Lake City, Utah,
April 4th, 1932.

President Heber J. Grant and Counselors,
Dear Brethren:—

It gives us pleasure to state that our examination of the reports of the First Presidency's office, which cover the Presiding Bishop's department, discloses the fact that the Church is entirely out of debt. The accounting system of the Church is modern and complete.

Respectfully submitted,
HENRY H. ROLAPP,
O. W. ADAMS,
JOHN W. HART,
Auditing Committee.

The hymn, "Zion stands with hills surrounded," was sung by the congregation, after which the closing prayer was offered by Elder John M. Baxter, former president of the Woodruff Stake.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock, Saturday, April 9th.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Saturday morning, April 9th, at 10 o'clock, with President Heber J. Grant presiding.

The hymn, "Come, come, ye Saints," was sung by the congregation. Elder Abel John Evans offered the opening prayer.

A sacred solo, "The Penitent," was sung by Sister Bertha Sessions.

ELDER SYLVESTER Q. CANNON

Presiding Bishop of the Church

I can assure you, my brethren and sisters, and friends, that I feel keenly the responsibility of this position. I rejoice with you in the spirit of the Conference sessions that we have had and the instruction and testimony that have been given to us.

GUIDANCE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

I appreciate the fact that we are living in important times, and that it is proper for us so to live and act that we may be guided by the influence and power of the Holy Spirit. The Lord has promised to all of us who have taken upon us his name, who have been baptized in water and by the power of the Holy Spirit, that if we will live in accordance with his commandments we shall enjoy the light of his Spirit to guide us. Surely there has never been a time in the history of the Church when that guidance was so necessary for every individual.

We have our free agency. We shall be responsible for the deeds that we perform and for the failure to perform those things that will be for our progress and development. The Lord is desirous that every one of us shall go forward, do his will, keep his commandments, and enjoy his blessings.

I realize the fact that if we will listen to the whisperings of the Holy Spirit, and be alert to follow promptly that inspiration that may come to us from time to time, we shall be enabled to avoid difficulties and troubles, and have joy, satisfaction and contentment in our daily lives.

CHURCH ADVANCEMENT

I rejoice in the leadership of this Church. I realize that they are men who are inspired of God to advise and counsel us in the way of truth and progress. I am sure that if we will listen to them and observe to do what they suggest to us, we shall be able to make satisfactory progress.

I was impressed with the instructions and the report given by our President at the beginning of this Conference. As was stated by him, the Church is growing in membership, and it is growing in activity. It is true that the tithes in total have not been so large this past year as the previous year. Yet there are instances in various stakes and missions where there has been an increase in tithes. There has been an increase in the number of tithepayers in the Church. There has been quite a material increase in the fast offerings donated for the benefit of the poor. I am quite sure that the spirit of the present prevailing conditions has influenced many who may have been neglectful, possibly, or inappreciative of conditions of unemployment, in the realization of the fact that we should donate more liberally for those in need in these times. The result has been somewhat more evident in the observance of the fast offerings.

PRIESTHOOD ACTIVITY

It is to be noted that the activity of the priesthood is increasing. I am particularly familiar with the Aaronic priesthood, and that interest is evident. We are striving in cooperation with the stake presidencies, ward bishoprics, mission presidents, and all others who are concerned with the welfare and progress of this important work, to stimulate the young men who receive this priesthood, to greater faith and activity and an appreciation of the blessings that come through the fulfillment of their responsibilities in the Aaronic priesthood.

Also, in other respects, the work of the Church is increasing. In the matter of ward teaching, this important labor has been carried on to a larger extent, month by month, in all of the various stakes and wards throughout the Church.

BUILDING CONSTRUCTION

With reference to building construction, the Church spent, as was reported by President Grant, over a half million dollars last year in the erection of ward buildings. That amount has been matched by the labor and the cash subscriptions of members of the Church and others in the various wards that have built meeting houses; so that, in total, the expenditures for this purpose aggregate a very considerable sum. I believe that there has been more care exercised on the part of those who have had charge of building construction in the various wards, to see that the funds were efficiently expended. I am sure that, throughout the various wards and stakes, consistent efforts are being made to exercise the greatest economy possible in this, as in every other phase of material affairs in the Church.

CLARITY OF CONSCIENCE

In connection with the matter that I have referred to, of cultivating the Spirit of the Lord, I am reminded of a maxim, adopted by George Washington, whose two-hundredth anniversary we are celebrating this entire year, as a rule of conduct for him as a young man. I think the last one of the rules of conduct that he adopted is as follows: "Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience." The development of conscience is one of the most helpful means to promote right living and fair dealing. I am sure that the Latter-day Saints are possessed of that spark of celestial fire. As a result of developing the spirit of frankness, of stimulating the sense of right and wrong, of not allowing their consciences to be dulled by those things which interfere with straightforwardness and uprightness, they are in a position to have that sense touched by the influence and power of the Holy Spirit, to lead them in righteousness and faith and truth.

A TIME OF TRIAL

We live in times when we are being tested and proven. All the dross, all that is not pure metal is, so to speak, being burned up or skimmed off, leaving the pure metal. To the extent that mankind have had to undergo trials and suffering, and that they have, in courage and faith, made sacrifice of material things that they have previously enjoyed, they have emerged so much stronger and finer. I believe adverse conditions are bringing men generally to an understanding of the elements of life; and to a better appreciation of the measure of the values of things which really count in life.

THE POWER OF TRUE RELIGION

I am impressed with the fact that the acceptance of this Gospel involves our willingness to deny ourselves, if necessary, of anything that we may be called upon to sacrifice. I am reminded of a statement made in one of the Lectures on Faith in the Doctrine and Covenants. Though the lectures are not accepted by us as revelation, yet we are told they were prepared by the Prophet Joseph, and were for the benefit of the people of the Church. This statement is as follows:

"A religion that does not require the sacrifice of all things never has power sufficient to produce the faith necessary unto life and salvation."

ABRAHAM'S WILLINGNESS TO SACRIFICE

Now, that is a very strong saying. Yet, the experiences of some of those of whom we have record, who have developed great spiritual power, demonstrate the fact that sacrifice has produced such results in their lives. I am reminded of Abraham, who was told by the Lord to take his son—the son of promise—born to him in his old age, through whom the divine assurance to Abraham regarding his posterity should be fulfilled, and offer him as a sacrifice. When this son was grown to be a youth his father was told by the Lord to offer him as a sacrifice upon Mount Moriah. Abraham did so. He took his son to that place and there was prepared to do what the Lord had commanded. He had proven his determination to carry out the will of the Lord, even though it meant the taking of the life of his son.

There are those who would utter condemnation against such a course, as being contrary to all equity and righteousness. Yet Abraham recognized that the Lord had the power to give and to take away. He had that confidence in the Lord that the course of life that he was pursuing, and the instruction he was receiving from God, were such that the Lord could save his son's life if it were necessary. So he proved his willingness to sacrifice the life of his beloved son. But when it came to the final test, after he had proven himself, the Lord did not require that sacrifice at his hands. However, he did greatly magnify Abraham, and he became, we are told, the friend of God, because of his sacrifice and his faith. He mingled with the great of the earth at that time, and was recognized by them as a power. Among the Mohammedans today Abraham is recognized as the greatest prophet of all. Likewise, among the Hebrews and Christians, he is recognized as a wonderful man.

THE SAVIOR'S GREAT SACRIFICE

Now, another example is that of the Savior himself. He was called upon to sacrifice his life because it was the will of God. It was his mission. He had the assurance that the course of life he was pursuing was pleasing to God. The final achievement of his mortal life was to undergo that atoning sacrifice for the redemption of mankind. He realized the terrible agony that he would have to suffer, as well as the mental crucifixion that he must endure through the shame and ridicule that was to be heaped upon him. Yet he was prepared to accept and undergo the sacrifice that was before him. Thereby he became the Redeemer of the world; and the mediator between men and God. He is the one who stands between us and our eternal Father. Through him alone can we gain the resurrection and come to salvation by the acceptance of his teachings, and the observance of his commandments.

MARTYRDOM OF THE PROPHET JOSEPH

There have been others who have been called upon to make great sacrifice for their devotion to divine truth. The Prophet Joseph Smith demonstrated in his life the very thing that is contained in the statement, that only that religion which has the power to call for the sacrifice of all things, even of life itself, if necessary, has the power to produce the faith necessary to bring mankind to life and salvation. The Prophet Joseph went to his martyrdom assured that the faith he possessed and the principles that he had adopted were of God. He had had the assurance from the Lord himself, from his personal visitation to him, that he should become an instrument in his hands for the accomplishment of divine purposes. Through his faith and sacrifice we understand that he is appointed to stand at the head of this last dispensation.

I do not assume that the Lord is going to require of every one of us such sacrifices. But I do maintain that the living of the Gospel will develop the spirit of sacrifice. If we are to gain salvation we must first have assurance that the course of life we are pursuing is in accordance with the will of the Lord. In other words, we must have a testimony of the divinity of this work. If we do not, we cannot, of course, be willing to make sacrifices. So it is important that every one of us should gain assurance of the divinity of this work, and of the fact that the Prophet Joseph Smith was ordained of God for the establishment of this work. To him were consigned the keys of divine authority to direct the work. All who have succeeded him have been appointed to bear the keys of authority in the Church, and have been inspired of God. That authority permeates the entire body of the Church.

REAL VALUES OF LIFE

Do these sacrifices really mean loss in the real sense of the word? In the mortal or human sense, probably yes. From the standpoint of the pleasures of the world, probably yes. The people of the world consider anything a deprivation that would restrain them from indulging their appetites of whatever nature. But those who have an appreciation of the values of life will realize that the things that the people of the world refer to as the pleasures of life and the satisfying of their appetites, are the petty things. They are the things that will pass. They are the dross that will be thrown away. It has been aptly said that to do without and like it is the first lesson in the art of being happy. The principles that the Lord has revealed are the things that will count as realities in this life and in eternity.

DEVELOPMENT THROUGH SACRIFICE

These principles are known to us. I do not need to enumerate them. All that the Lord has commanded us to do are for our benefit. We receive the blessings. There is no sacrifice in the final and permanent sense of the word. The rewards obtained are so much greater than the self-denial necessary. We gain through the observance of divine commandments, because every principle and any deprivation that may be entailed thereby is for our greatest welfare, growth, and development in life, here and hereafter.

TITHING REQUIRES FAITH

I have been impressed with the testimonies at various times in these conferences of the Church relative to the results of the observance of tithing, that have been borne to us, and the evidences shown in our investigations. I think probably that tithing may be considered a principle that from a pecuniary and selfish standpoint requires more power and faith to observe than some other commandments. Yet it brings blessings far outweighing the sacrifice itself.

TITHING IN OTHER CHURCHES

I am reminded, too, of a statement made showing the way in which this principle is growing among other people. I have an article clipped from a magazine of the Protestant Episcopal Church, known as "The Diocesan Council," in which the subject of tithing is discussed. It refers to a booklet called "The Church has Tithers," written by a Dr. Louis B. Franklin. He writes of the observance of tithing as they understand it. His comment in regard to the principle of tithing is rather interesting: "The practice of tithing is extremely simple. One-tenth of all income, plus one-tenth the rental value of a house wholly owned and used as one's residence, should be set aside as God's property to be administered for him. Help to dependent relatives is a family obligation and should not be taken out of the tenth. Exercise the same care in administering God's portion as you do in running your own business, or budgeting your household expenses. Whatever the reason, many have recorded it their judgment that it is easier to live on nine-tenths than on ten-tenths. The readjustment of a family budget so as to provide for setting aside the tithes may demand a reconsideration of the whole question of standards of living. Many have found in such a consideration the dawning of a new and happier day."

That is the testimony of people who do not belong to this Church. Does that indicate that the principle of tithing is a natural, divine principle? Surely if it is divine it will produce results for all who practice it in the spirit of it, as far as they have understanding.

FAITHFUL TITHEPAYERS GENERALLY EMPLOYED

From the reports given by some of the mission presidents, and by the stake presidents and bishops, and from our own investigations, it appears that generally the people throughout the Church who pay tithing are making their way forward financially as well as spiritually. Those who need help are largely not those who have been faithful tithe-payers. On the other hand, most of the faithful tithepayers have been able to maintain themselves even under this most extended period of depression. Surely this is a splendid evidence of some of the results of faith and sacrifice. Let it be remembered, however, that faith in the divinity of this or any other principle alone can bring the blessings.

My brethren and sisters, I desire to testify to you that this and every other principle of the Gospel is for our welfare and progress, and that the Gospel itself is the greatest thing that has come to mankind, both for this life and for the life hereafter. I pray that I may be able to stand, with you, firm and faithful, be prompt to accept instructions given, alert to follow the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and to measure up to the finest standards of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER GIDEON N. HULTERSTROM

Former President of the Swedish Mission

My dear brethren and sisters, I am indeed glad and happy for this opportunity to be in attendance at this General Conference of the Church. I humbly pray that while I stand before you I may have a rich portion of the Holy Spirit of God, to direct my report that I am to give of the Swedish mission.

I bring you greetings and good tidings from your sons in Sweden. They are performing a faithful labor in that far-off land. They are laboring earnestly for the building up of the church and kingdom of God. There seems never to have been a time when there has been a better opportunity to do missionary work than at the present time, and I am pleased to report that the work of the Lord is gaining headway in Sweden.

We are proclaiming the Gospel in the usual way, but also by illustrated lectures about Utah and the pioneers, and also lectures about the Book of Mormon. In connection with our conferences held we are giving concerts and religious pageants, and I am happy to state that all these new methods have had a wonderful effect for good in behalf of the Lord's cause in Sweden.

In one of our conferences in the city of Stockholm we had the honor to have with us the U. S. Consul General, Mr. John Ball Osborne. We took the opportunity to call upon him to speak. In his address he said among other things, that the Latter-day Saints are trustworthy men and women. He praised the work accomplished by our Elders, and he spoke highly of our Church leaders, especially of those that he had become acquainted with, namely, Dr. John A. Widtsoe, Dr. James E. Talmage and Senator Reed Smoot. Much good came from the results of this conference, especially for the reason that we had this distinguished gentleman with us, taking part on the program.

On the 14th of June, this year, it will be eighty-two years since the Gospel was first introduced in Scandinavia by the late Apostle Erastus Snow. This was the most outstanding event in the history of the Scandinavian countries, and the proclaiming of the restored Gospel in those lands since the year 1850 has brought nearly fifty-five thousand souls into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. What a wonderful harvest! I rejoice when I think of the progress of this great latter-day work in all parts of the world.

I am pleased to state that a change has come about in the world, because in the past our message has been somewhat misunderstood. I am pleased to report that the newspaper press in Sweden is more favorable now than it has ever been before. Our meetings are advertised free of charge in nineteen of the newspapers over there, and a friendly spirit exists today. Whenever prominent Church members visit us we arrange for an interview, and the good things thus published in the papers have a wonderful effect for good. I can truthfully say that we have been blessed indeed by the Lord in our work in Sweden.

I take this opportunity to greet you from President and Sister John A. Widtsoe, presiding over the European Mission. By the way, they are doing a most wonderful work, and under their able direction we are trying to build up the branches of the Church in the Swedish mission, and to keep in step with all new things and new methods introduced by the Church, here at home and in the missions.

I can state that more responsibility has been placed upon the local brethren, and our auxiliary organizations are working; they are active and they are doing a most splendid work. The Primary work was introduced in the Swedish mission about a year ago and five such organizations are now functioning. I am also happy to relate that we have organized, during the past two years, three genealogical societies in that mission, and they are doing a considerable lot of good for the members of the Church, in their research work, preparatory to sending their genealogical work to the Salt Lake Temple.

The Book of Mormon has its mission to fulfil,—a great mission, by the way. It contains the fulness of the Gospel, and the Elders have done their best to distribute this book. It has been placed in the libraries of Sweden, and in some of the leading book stores, and thereby several copies are being distributed. During my visit in Finland, a couple of years ago, I presented the Book of Mormon to Mr. Uno Thurman, of the public library in Helsingfors. He was very glad to receive this sacred volume.

In conclusion I wish to testify to you that Mormonism is the true Gospel of Jesus Christ, and I am grateful indeed to my Heavenly Father for the privilege I have had to spend ten years of my life as a missionary abroad in the ministry of the Gospel. This wonderful privilege has come to pass in fulfilment of a patriarchal blessing that I received about thirty years ago.

I rejoice in this work, and my desire is to keep on working in this Church during all the days of my life. I know, as surely as I know that I live, that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God, and that President Heber J. Grant and his associates, who stand at the head of this Church today, are true servants of the living God, holding the keys of the priesthood and having authority to build up the Kingdom of God in all the world.

This is my testimony, and I bear it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Sister Pearl Kimball Davis sang, "O Love Divine."

ELDER FRED TADJE

Former President of the Swiss-German Mission

The poet, on seeing weather-beaten trees, and remarking their shape and outline, wrote reflectingly:

"Is it as plainly in our living shown, by slant and twist Which way the wind has blown?"

The answer to this query is yes; we do, in our living, reflect the way the wind has blown. Every influence that we have known registers some mark upon us. Each one leaves its impress, and one day finds expression in our conduct or attitude.

As you have heard, I come to you from the mission field, where it has been my privilege to associate with many of your sons. I have had the opportunity to observe them; to study their actions and reactions; to appraise their character. I have seen them in discouragement and in enthusiasm, in defeat and in victory, confused by problems, and triumphing over them. I have seen their works. I have recognized their efforts. I have looked into their lives—their souls were bared to me. I have known their faith; and I wish to say to you mothers and fathers of missionaries, there are no finer young men in all the world than those you send to us as missionaries. I congratulate you as parents, and I congratulate the Church for such splendid types of young people. Their character is an honor and a credit to you, for they reflect the influences that you have exerted over them.

Just as surely as weather-beaten trees show the way the wind has blown, so do these young men disclose the kind of training they have received. In the lives of these young men we can see the shaping power of the Church and of the home, and the influence of their parents.

One of the most potent factors in molding an individual's life is the power of example, particularly the example of the parents. The child naturally looks to his father as a perfect model. His son will copy his walk, his speech, his manners, his every action. Father is his model, his rock on which he stands. Unconsciously, perhaps, but nevertheless surely, the child patterns his life after his father. If the father is a man of faith and virtue, if he cultivates the good qualities, then every fine trait is accented in the child. But if he is careless and negligent, if his habits are bad, his influence, just as strong, is for the worse.

Fathers and mothers, what a tremendous responsibility is ours! How vigilant we must ever be to guide our children right. How we must foster the spirit of faith and love in our homes. There it is that we can inculcate a love of the Gospel, an unshakable faith, in the breasts of our children. Let every influence be an uplifting one. Cultivate religious expression.

I believe one reason why the Gospel means so much to me is, because it meant so much to my parents. We were brought close to the Gospel as children in the home. Not a day passed that some phase of the Gospel was not discussed. Family prayers were observed regularly, and then early in the evening, before any one was over-tired. The motto in the home was: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." The spirit of the home, the discussion of the Gospel principles, the family prayers, and above all, the example of the parents, who endeavored to live real Gospel lives, imbued a desire into the hearts of the children to serve the Master in whatever capacity they were capable.

A father confided to me, at one time, that when his children passed through the critical period of their lives he had fasted and prayed a day every week for years, for divine help to rear his children properly in the Church. He wanted them to grow up in faith and in love of the truth. He said: "I cannot bear to see my children go astray, or disinterested in the Gospel. Should that happen it would shorten my life, and with the help of the Lord I will do all that lies in my power to instil into their hearts a desire to serve him." What a devotion to a righteous cause! Were his efforts in vain? Indeed not, for thus far his children are firmly grounded in the faith, and no matter what call is made upon them by the Church, they respond joyfully and whole-heartedly.

I have three boys whom I love dearly. If I can inspire them with the same high faith that my parents bequeathed to me, if I can instil into their hearts a fervent love of God and his work, if I can be a worthy example in all things, then I shall be content. If I can create in them an earnest desire to know God's will and to do it, to serve him and to love his Gospel, then I shall be indeed gratified. Some day, I hope, they may take their place as missionaries, thoroughly qualified to carry on in the all-important work. And I hope that some future mission president; looking upon the lives of my boys, and of yours, may read in them the reflection of good influences and proper example. May he never see child-like faith dulled by parental indifference, or potential virtue marred by parental neglect.

Let our every influence be for good. Let our example be a shining light to guide our children in the paths of truth and righteousness. Let us bring the Gospel close to our children, that they may learn to know and love it, and that they may respond to its uplifting influence.

My experience has proven that, generally speaking, the most faithful and successful missionaries come from families here at home where the Gospel receives first consideration. I have observed, too, that the families where the Gospel is the predominant thought are ever responsive to the call of the Authorities of the Church, no matter what sacrifice it might entail.

Let us all place ourselves in tune with this great cause by making the Gospel a substantial part of our home life and training. I am exceedingly grateful for my membership in this Church. I prize more highly than I can express the privileges I enjoy as a bearer of the Melchizedek priesthood. My earnest desire is to be able to show my appreciation for my many blessings by rendering at all times, and under every circumstance, acceptable service in the sight of the Lord. This Gospel has brought me joy and gratification beyond description. I have tasted of the fruits of the Gospel, and I want to testify to you that I have found them most delicious.

May the Lord continue to bless us all, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

At the request of President Grant the congregation arose and sang two verses of the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

ELDER MELVIN J. BALLARD

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

BENEFITS OF CONFERENCE

It has been my great pleasure now for nearly forty years to be in attendance at the General Conferences of the Church. I count it a liberal education in the science of life to have had this distinguished privilege, not alone from the things that were said, but the spirit that prevailed during those many sessions has brought to me understanding, light and knowledge that I have prized most highly. I have observed that there has always been something suited for the occasion, for the times demanded certain instructions; and that those instructions were forthcoming at the conference, for the profit, the guidance and the blessing of the people. I am sure this Conference is proving to be full of fruitful benefit to the membership of the Church.

KINGDOM OF SATAN TO BE SHAKEN

In the beginning of the foundation of this work the Lord said—I am reading from the hundred and thirty-second section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants:

"Everything that is in the world, whether it be ordained of men, by thrones, or principalities, or powers, or things of name, whatsoever they may be, that are not by me, or by my word, saith the Lord, shall be thrown down. * * *

"For whatsoever things remain are by me; and whatsoever things are not by me shall be shaken and destroyed."

I read a statement similar to that in the Book of Mormon, Second Nephi, reading from the twenty-eighth chapter. Speaking of these days, which Nephi undoubtedly saw, full of all their peril and their trouble, he said:

"For the kingdom of the devil must shake, and they which belong to it must needs be stirred up unto repentance, or the devil will grasp them with his everlasting chains, and they be stirred up to anger, and perish;

"For behold, at that day shall he rage in the hearts of the children of men, and stir them up to anger against that which is good."

He expressed the same thought in the last chapter of First Nephi, and I read as follows; describing these very events such as we are now passing through, he observed:

"The righteous need not fear, for they are those who shall not be confounded. But it is the kingdom of the devil, which shall be built up among the children of men, which kingdom is established among them which are in the flesh—

"For the time speedily shall come, that all churches which are built up to get gain, and all those who are built up to get power over the flesh, and those who are built up to become popular in the eyes of the world, and those who seek the lusts of the flesh and the things of the world, and to do all manner of iniquity; yea, in fine, all those who belong to the kingdom of the devil, are they who need fear, and tremble, and quake; they are those who must be brought low in the dust: they are those who must be consumed as stubble; and this is according to the words of the prophet."

These marvelous declarations that the day would come, in the history of the world, when everything that was set up by man, that was not in harmony with God's will and purpose, would be shaken and destroyed, indicates a new epoch in the history of this world.

As we look back over the hundred years that have passed since these prophecies in the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants were made known to us, we see evidences of the Lord fulfilling these very predictions; everything to be tested, to be tried and to be shaken, and only that which is the truth and that which was set up by the Lord shall survive.

A CENTURY OF PROGRESS

What marvelous things the Lord has been doing in the earth, outside of this Church! Next year, in the city of Chicago, there will be a centennial exposition celebrating the hundredth anniversary of the founding of that great city, for it was established three years after this Church was organized. It has been named "A Century of Progress."

using the exact title of a very fine manual which the Young Men's and Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Association adopted in 1930. The exposition will set forth what has happened in human progress during the past hundred years.

I was impressed recently by reading a book entitled "A Century's Changes in Religion," and the observation made that the last fifty years have shown greater changes in religious thought and practice than all the ages of time. But what changes have been wrought! What changes have occurred in the science and the arts! How human thinking has been modified!

When Joseph Smith came forth declaring the restoration of this Gospel, with its clear-cut notions concerning the salvation of men, concerning the doctrine of deity, they were so diametrically opposed to every existing religious denomination that there is no wonder he had the hatred and enmity of religious bodies. But how the truth he taught has survived! Belief in miracles was necessary to accept Joseph Smith's statement, and that was not a miracle-believing age. But how the Lord has changed human thinking in these hundred years!

Let me read two items that I secured recently. One of them is a statement which occurred in the very year that Joseph Smith received his first vision, the year 1820.

J. R. Howard, former president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and now head of the National Transportation Institute, stated in a recent address that back in 1820 the head of a school board at Lancaster, Ohio, wrote the following letter to one who had applied for the use of a school house for a debate on the practicability of the railroad and telegraph. Here is his letter:

"You are welcome to use the school house to debate all proper questions in, but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossibilities and rank infidelity. There is nothing in the Word of God about them. If God had designed that His intelligent creatures should travel at a frightful speed of fifteen miles an hour, by steam, He would have clearly foretold through His holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls down to hell."

Even as late as 1870, here is an item that appeared in a Boston newspaper:

"A man about forty-six years of age, giving the name of Joshua Copper-smith, has been arrested in New York for attempting to extort funds from ignorant and superstitious people by exhibiting a device which he says will convey the human voice any distance over metallic wires, so that it will be heard by the listener at the other end.

"He calls the instrument a 'telephone,' which is obviously intended to imitate the word 'telegraph' and win the confidence of those who know of the success of the latter instrument without understanding the principles on which it is based.

"Well-informed people know that it is impossible to transmit the human voice over wires, as may be done with dots and dashes and signals of the Morse Code, and that, were it possible to do so, the thing would be of no practical value.

"The authorities who apprehended the criminal are to be congratulated, and it is to be hoped that his punishment will be prompt and fitting, that it may serve as an example to other conscienceless schemers who enrich themselves at the expense of their fellow creatures."

Have we made any progress in a hundred years? When my voice is now traveling over radio—not over wires—to those of you who are listening, at the speed of light, one hundred and eighty-six thousand miles a second, almost eight times around this globe in one second—have we made any progress?

I listened to an international broadcast honoring America's greatest inventor, who passed away last year, Thomas A. Edison, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the invention of the electric light; his voice coming instantly, and the voice of Dr. Einstein from Berlin, on the other side of the world, in the smallest fraction of a second. Then I fell to thinking of what had happened in the fifty years that I could remember, and I concluded that more human progress had been made in these fifty years than in all the ages of time; and I asked myself: Why have I been permitted to live to see more than all my fathers, back to the day of Adam, had seen, all combined together?

THE HAND OF GOD MANIFEST

Why this marvelous change, and how it has changed human thinking! Now we live in the age of miracles! There are a thousand of them that we see with our eyes. They are demonstrated, and yet we, many of us, cannot comprehend them. They are miraculous, and yet they are realities.

How all this mighty flood of truth has been an ally to this Church, perhaps its greatest ally! But I count it all as having come from God. He was fighting the battles of truth. When it was his good pleasure, as Joel saw, the day would come when the Spirit of God would be poured out upon all flesh, and young men would dream dreams, and old men would see visions, the vision of the things of God. These were all his secrets. It was not that the age that preceded ours was lacking in intelligence, that they did not discover these marvels that have brought us such great human transformations. It was that God had not willed it. When the hour came that he was willing that a new order of things should be established in the earth, he unlocked the secrets he had held, and let man come to know them.

Hence these have been our allies, for we find ourselves in no contradiction to any of these scientific truths that have come. We recognize the vast difference between the theories of scientists and the facts of science. I have failed to find this Church, or its teachings, in conflict with a single fact of science.

GROWTH OF CHURCH

It used to be said that Mormonism flourished where ignorance was most profound, but in the age of the world's greatest enlightenment there is no church on earth whose percentage of growth equals this Church. While others are losing ground, how we rejoiced to hear yesterday the report of the continual progress and growth of this Church, and that in the age of the world's greatest enlightenment!

There was published in 1929 a volume entitled "The Story of Religion," and I read this regarding Joseph Smith and Mormonism:

"The incredible thing about Mormonism is that such a respectable religion could have been derived from such a disreputable person. Mormonism is barely a century old, and yet it is one of the most successful religions on the American continent. If we are to accept the dictum of Jesus, 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' we must rate Mormons high. There is no disputing the fact, however, that Joseph Smith, the undoubted founder of Mormonism, was not only a psychopathic case, but also a shrewd schemer whose ethical sense was poorly developed.

"America has no better citizens than the Mormons. At first sight it is difficult to account for the evolution of present-day Mormonism from the teaching of such an erratic person as Joseph Smith.

"There are several factors of importance, however, in the situation. In the first place, in spite of his visions and vagaries, Joseph Smith was undoubtedly a commanding and attractive personality. That fact has been testified to by friend and enemy. In the second place, there were elements of power and worth in Smith's message."

We are making some progress, that we are counted to be among the most enlightened, and no religion more acceptable. Still they cannot understand how it could have come from such a disreputable person. How long shall we live until the whole truth shall be known, until out of the bigotry of that age that had conceptions such as I have just read to you, Joseph Smith shall yet arise gloriously, when the truth he taught shall be more fully understood by men?

We know that they had not understood him. They have not understood us. But we shall yet win the world to pay honor and respect to that prophet of God, and know that those who traduced his character did not tell the truth. So I rejoice in that which is happening. I rejoice in what God is doing today, for he is moving among the nations of the earth.

HOPEFUL OF FUTURE

Yes, I see him even in this depression, brethren. I know that greater human progress will be made in the future than in the past. I am looking for greater progress in the alleviation of the economic distresses of the world in the next ten years than the last hundred years have seen. The men of this age are awakening to the need of it. God is preparing for the coming of his Son, Jesus Christ. He would not come to a world that was in the condition this world was in a hundred years ago. Neither is he ready to come just yet. There are many things that must yet be done in the battle for truth and right. There shall yet be wars, certainly; but out of each conflict, no matter how deadly, will come victory for truth and for human emancipation, for it is in God's program.

You Latter-day Saints need not be afraid, if only you will continue to adhere to these principles that have brought us through in the past so successfully, and shall deliver us from the trials of the future. Do not become alarmed nor disturbed. It is said of human beings, when they are confronted with disaster, the great majority lose their heads and go temporarily insane. If a fire breaks out in a theatre, the majority of people will trample each other to death. How few there are that in the majesty of their souls arise to the occasion, undefeated, and walk out calmly!

ADVICE TO LATTER-DAY SAINTS

In this time of panic and distress there are many who lose their heads and rush on banks, to wreck them. That ought not to be a characteristic of the Latter-day Saints. They ought, in majesty and in peace and in self control, to be sane and not insane. There are those who lose their faith, some allow their spirit to be broken, and some even commit suicide. It should not be so with the Latter-day Saints. Our position should be to study our problem and discover what led us into our present difficulties. Then go to work, and see to it that we solve our problem and let not this lesson be repeated unto us.

Let us not become ramblers. If we have failed in one place we need not go to the ends of the earth to try again. Right in the same community where you are you will discover another chance. You need not leave your farming occupations either. If you will be patient, and stay by the enterprises that you have undertaken, and practice self-denial, God will deliver you. The greatest losses are not financial. They are spiritual. Our financial losses will all be recovered if we will only be patient and see the hand of God working for the furtherance of his holy purposes. We have reached the day, thank the Lord, when his truth is triumphant, when it is going to succeed, the greatest day truth has ever known.

TESTIMONY OF THE TRUTH

My soul rejoices to be identified with the Church that has the truth. I am more interested in seeing the truth succeed than any organization to which I belong, but thank God, the organization to which I belong has the truth, and everything that has come forth in this age is demonstrating it. It will stand every test, and it will stand forever.

God help us to be loyal to it, support it; there never has been an opportunity, in the history of this world, for the Gospel of Jesus Christ to really demonstrate its power, its virility and its strength. Now its day has come. Live our religion, and let our light shine, and we shall see God's work going forward to greater and holier accomplishments than in the past.

This is my testimony to you, my brethren and sisters, for I believe with all my soul that God has not deserted us, but he is moving forward to the accomplishment of his purposes. May they speedily be accomplished. May we keep the faith and be found with God's work in the day of its victory, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER DAVID O. MCKAY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

As I stand before you this morning I find my mind still occupied by an ever recurring thought suggested by a conversation I had recently with some students, more particularly with one student, who within a day or so, came to inquire for guidance and to seek possible help.

This particular young man was very much perturbed in his feelings. He had heard in one of his classes several imputations that seemed to conflict with his ideas of religion. One of the latest, for an illustration, was this: His teacher had said that the principle of "Fasting is a relic of asceticism." I immediately asked him if he had ever thought that asceticism as related to fasting might be the prostitution of a worthy principle. He said he had never considered that phase of the question.

ASSOCIATION WITH LEADERS AN INSPIRATION

Before I comment further upon this conversation I desire to express a few thoughts in relation to the adequacy of this Church in supplying the needs of every human heart. An appreciation of the whole will make more impressive the importance of any particular part. I am happy that this one hundred and second annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints finds me in absolute harmony with the teachings and ideals of the Church. My confidence in the First Presidency as noble men and inspired leaders is secure. My association with the Council of the Twelve, with members of the General Sunday School Union board, with members of other general boards, with stake and mission presidencies, and with the priesthood generally throughout the Church is a constant source of inspiration and delight.

CHRIST THE IDEAL

The teachings and life of the Master never before seemed to me more beautiful, more necessary and more applicable to human happiness. Never have I believed more firmly in the perfection of humanity as the final result of man's placement here on earth. With my whole soul I accept Jesus Christ as the personification of human perfection—as God made manifest in the flesh, as the Savior and Redeemer of mankind.

"He stands alone," as one has said, "in unapproachable grandeur. Nineteen centuries roll away, and his character so lives that he inspires millions of men with impassioned love.

"Other men may seem to be children of their surroundings. He became what he was despite his surroundings, and he is the only one who can say, in truth: 'Do as I have done.'" His eyes looked beyond the present, peered into eternity, and comprehended the infinite. He is the image of God.

CHRIST'S GOSPEL A PERFECT PLAN

Accepting him as my Redeemer, Savior, Lord, it is but logical that I accept his Gospel as the plan of salvation, as the one perfect way to happiness and peace. There is not a principle which was taught by him but seems to me to be applicable to the growth, development and happiness of mankind. Every one of his teachings seems to touch the true philosophy of living. I accept them whole-heartedly. I love to study them. I like to teach them.

CHRIST'S CHURCH A COMPREHENSIVE PLAN

So it is with the Church which Christ has established. Since it is founded by the Perfect One, it follows that when properly interpreted it too approaches perfection. Every phase of it therefore seems to me to be applicable in some way to the welfare of the human family. When I consider the quorums of priesthood, I see in them an opportunity for developing that fraternity and brotherly love which is essential to the happiness of mankind. In these quorums and in the auxiliaries I see opportunities for intellectual development, for social efficiency. In the judicial phase of the Church I see an ample means of settling difficulties, of establishing harmony in society, of administering justice and of perpetuating peace among individuals and groups. In the ecclesiastical organization I see an opportunity for social welfare such as cannot be found in any other organization in the world. Thus do Christ and his Church become my ideal, my inspiration in life. I think it is the highest ideal for which man can strive.

FAITH AN ANCHOR TO THE SOUL

Such faith in the Great Teacher and in his Church I consider a safe anchor for young people to possess, especially during the formative period of their lives, and I freely take issue with any man who deliberately destroys such a faith without offering something better in its place; and I know of nothing else in the world that can even approach Christ's Church as an anchor for the soul.

MORE FAITH NEEDED

One great need in the world today is more faith, less skepticism, more confidence, less doubting. As Bruce Barton expresses it: "Faith in business, faith in country, faith in one's self, faith in other people,—this is the power which moves the world. And why is it unreasonable to believe that this power, which is so much stronger than any other, is merely a fragment of the great power that operates the universe?"

FAITH SHOULD BE INCREASED NOT UNDERMINED

Now, at the opening of my remarks I referred to my conversation with a student because it illustrates two things: First: Insinuations made to the young who are yet undecided as to what are the most important things in life may shake the faith of youth, and "Youth without faith is a day without sun."

Secondly, I cite that instance to bring home to us today the necessity of parents and officers in the Church teaching more earnestly and diligently the principles of life and salvation to the youth of Zion and to the world in order to keep the latter properly balanced through the formative period of their lives.

"Our civilization is imperiled today," writes an American statistician, "simply because it is ill balanced. Our spiritual culture lags so far behind our material culture, in its development, that we have no adequate control over the latter. Our science, our education and our government can do much to help correct this lack in our spiritual development, but in the main this must be done, if done at all, by religion and by the Church, for religion is the creator and the conservator of our social ideals, and the church is their chief propagator."

The confidence and faith I have expressed this morning in the First Presidency, the Twelve, and others of my associates, as well as in the Gospel and especially in the Savior, applies also to the tenets and teachings of the Church. Every one when properly interpreted and applied has in it a saving power and blessing for all who will accept it.

PRINCIPLES TO BE APPROACHED FROM PROPER VIEW POINT

There is not time this morning even to mention further these various phases of the Church, each one of which will apply to the needs, to the education, to the peace of individuals. I should like to take, as an example, however, the principle already named. Considering this will illustrate also how even a teacher may himself become warped in his attitude toward what he might consider merely a dogma. You know there are occasionally men in the profession of teaching—as that is my profession I can speak plainly—who pride themselves on being iconoclasts; but unfortunately, when such teachers break their so-called images they supply nothing to replace them. They destroy ideals but offer no others, thus leaving the young boy in doubt and uncertainty. Such a one seems to me to be heaving anchor and starting out on the ocean of life before his course is even charted. It is well not only for church people but for educators everywhere when teaching the young to have in mind the three “C’s” as well as the three “R’s” mentioned so proverbially. By those three “C’s” I mean character, conduct, citizenship. The teaching of religion in public schools is prohibited, but the teaching of character and citizenship is required.

PRINCIPLE OF FASTING APPLIED TO HEALTH

Every principle and ordinance of the Gospel may be attacked from one angle or another as a mere “ism,” but it may also be considered as possessing elements of soul growth, beauty and sublimity.

Consider for a moment this principle of fasting. It is as old as the human race and undoubtedly when first practiced was related to health. It is generally conceded that most people usually consume more food than the body requires. Overeating clogs the system with deleterious waste products. When such a condition exists a short fast is useful as a means of restoring the body to its normal active state. One authority referring to this says, “The great thing about the fast is that it sets you a new standard of health.” And an eminent Scotch physician adds, “Fasting for a longer or a shorter period is often a beneficial practice especially in the case of those who have been living too freely.”

TO SELF-CONTROL

But besides this there is the spiritual strength derived from the subjecting of the physical appetite to the will of the individual. “He who reigns within himself and rules passions, desires and fears is more than king.” As in eternal life, so in self-mastery, there is no one great thing which a man may do to obtain it; but there are many little things by observing which self-control may be achieved. And a subjecting of the appetite to the will and a refusal to satisfy desire are two of these little things. Writing on this very question, the subjection of appetites and desires to the will, the psychologist William James admonishes "To do each day something which you do not like to do." If there were no other virtue in fasting but gaining strength of character, that alone would be sufficient justification for its universal acceptance.

AS AN ECONOMIC BENEFIT

But associated with this practice in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the giving of a fast offering, the underlying purpose and far-reaching benefits of which make the monthly observance of fast day one of the most significant features of this latter-day work. Besides the benefits already mentioned there are: First, all the spiritual uplift that comes from a Christ-like desire to serve one's fellowmen; and Second, an economic means which when carried out by a perfect and active organization will supply the needs of every worthy poor person within the confines of the organized branches of the Church.

The regularly constituted fast consists of abstinence from eating two meals once each month. The value of these two meals is given as a voluntary donation for the relief of those who are hungry or otherwise in distress. Sincere observance of this rule means spiritually that the divine principle of service is expressed and the resultant promise of the Master is merited, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Let us apply this principle to some local condition. Recently there was carried on in Salt Lake City, as in other progressive cities, a campaign to raise $155,000 to be used for charitable purposes. Suppose that at the beginning of 1931 everybody in this city had observed the fast for the special purpose of aiding the needy through the Community Chest. There are 140,000 people in Salt Lake City. That would be 280,000 meals a month. At an average cost of 10c a meal, $28,000 a month or $336,000 a year would be made available for the relief of the poor, or more than twice as much as was collected for this worthy purpose during this year.

THE CHURCH TRIUMPHANT

So you may take any phase of this Church and prove its potency in its particular field in the advancement of the individual, in the happiness and peace of the home, in the progress, safety, and perpetuity of society.

God help us to contribute our might and influence to the perpetuation of the Church of Jesus Christ, of which we can truly say: "Persecution has not crushed it; power has not beaten it back; time has not abated its force; and what is most wonderful of all, the abuses and treason of its friends have not shaken its stability." May neither prosperity nor popularity hinder its progress any more than these other forces, and may teachers and parents unite in impressing youth particularly to be loyal to that which we know is good for humanity and contributive to eternal salvation, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The congregation joined in singing the hymn, "O ye mountains high."

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Elmer F. Taylor, President of the Young Stake.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

AFTERNOON MEETING

The fourth session of the Conference commenced at 2 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, April 9th.

President Heber J. Grant, who presided, announced that the Relief Society Ladies' Chorus, under the direction of Sister Lottie Sackett, would sing "Recessional," as the opening number.

After the singing of this selection by the Chorus, the opening prayer was offered by Elder Harry L. Payne, President of the St. Joseph Stake.

The Relief Society Ladies' Chorus sang the anthem, "Within this sacred dwelling," solo part by Brother Cornelius G. Van Os.

ELDER RULON S. WELLS

Of the First Council of Seventy

There is one thing that has always been evident to me, since I have made a study of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that is this, that there has been a constant, progressive divine purpose in all of the dealings of God with man, and the history of the world is replete with evidence of this fact; that divine purpose is manifest in the coming of all the servants of God, the prophets, the apostles, and in the revelations that have been given in every dispensation of his providence.

That divine purpose has been stated in the writings of the prophet Moses when he said: "This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." That purpose was promulgated before the foundations of this earth were laid. It was considered beforehand, and we are now in the process of the development of that purpose. It is now approaching its great climax, the accomplishment of God's purposes with his children that have dwelt upon the earth.

It is true that we have only glimpses of these things that took place before the foundations of this earth were laid, but, oh, what light and understanding are contained in those few glimpses that have been given to us. We read in the scriptures:

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

"And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

"And God said, Let there be light; and there was light.

"And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.

"And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day."

In holy writ reference is made to a council held in heaven before the foundations of the earth were laid. The Lord said to his servant Job:

"Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding. * * *

"When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?"

These words are very significant. They tell of a time when the sons of God were assembled together and shouted for joy. That particular phrase does not state exactly what it was they shouted for, but in modern revelation that is made clear. It was the promulgation of that divine purpose that God had in relation to his children, and the very plan by which that purpose might be accomplished.

I am going to read again from the scriptures:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

"The same was in the beginning with God.

"All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.

"In him was life; and the life was the light of men. * * *

"That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

From these passages of scripture we must concede that Jesus Christ is the light of the world and the power thereof by which it was made. The whole plan then centers in that Son of God that was chosen in that primeval day to carry out the divine purpose. He was sent into the world,

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us."

This revelation of the Son of God, who was with the Father in the beginning, and by whom all things were made, came and dwelt among us in a mortal body of flesh and bones. That was a vital part of the divine plan.

The coming of the children of God to this earth was fundamental, for it was to bring to pass their immortality and eternal life that this world was created, that God sent his Only Begotten Son. From the very beginning we see the purpose in the course of its development. This Son of God was born of the virgin Mary. An angel of the Lord appeared unto her and told her that she was greatly favored among women; that she had found favor with the Lord; that she would conceive and give birth to a son, and should call his name Jesus, and he should be called the Son of God. Said Mary unto this angel, "How shall this be, seeing that I know not a man?" And the angel replied, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

Thus is recorded the coming of that Son of God in mortal body to dwell among us, the Only Begotten Son of God in the flesh. None other was born of God in the flesh, and yet we were all the children of God, but not born of him in the flesh. Let me read again from the scriptures.

"He came unto his own, and his own received him not."

No, they crucified him.

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name:

"Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

Here we have it plainly stated that they were not born and begotten of God in the flesh, not by the will of man, but of God, clearly pointing to the fact that we were the children of God born of him in the spirit before the foundations of this earth were laid. But he gave unto even them that believed on him the power to become the sons of God, even as Jesus Christ is the Son of God, of the flesh and of the spirit. For it was to them who are thus born of the spirit that he gave the power to become the sons of God. What was that power? That power was the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, for it is in the divine purpose that all the children of God shall be begotten sons and daughters unto him in body and in spirit, these two component parts of our eternal souls, before they can be received into his celestial dwelling place, before they can become members of his household and the divine purpose be accomplished.

But, although we were born of God in the spirit before the foundation of this earth was laid, when the sons and daughters of God sang together and shouted for joy upon the promulgation of the divine purpose, it still remained necessary in order to be in very deed his sons and daughters, that we should be born in these mortal bodies of the blood and of the flesh, which were not begotten of him but of our natural parents. Therefore, when Nicodemus asked the Lord: "How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?" he made it plain by answering: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Thus it will be seen that the second birth is necessary, which symbolizes the first one—born of the water, quickened by the spirit, and through the atoning blood of Jesus Christ, we are made the sons and daughters of God throughout the endless ages of eternity. Thus is brought to pass the immortality and eternal life of man, and the Gospel becomes the power of God unto salvation. Such is the divine purpose.

The children of Abraham have been called "God's chosen people." That too was in the divine purpose, and people oftentimes ask the question, how is it that God shows such preference to any particular family? Why is it that we who also claim to be the children of Abraham should be preferred before others when it is clearly stated in holy writ that God is no respecter of persons?

Neither is he a respecter of persons, but this process of choosing the great and the good in order to carry out the divine purpose was predicated on their faithfulness and did not begin here, but before we came to the earth; and these were chosen for their integrity and because they were valiant for the truth in order to carry out his divine purpose. So it appears that even in that primeval day before the foundation of the earth was laid, God chose the great and noble ones from among his children and elected that they should come through the lineage of Abraham, because he knew Abraham before he was born and that he loved the Lord and would teach his children after him; and also in order to maintain their solidarity as a nation or as his chosen people.

Let me read from the Book of Abraham:

"Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones;

"And God saw these souls that they were good, and he stood in the midst of them, and he said: These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, and he saw that they were good; and he said unto me: Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born."

Thus Abraham was chosen to become the father of the faithful, and he received the promise that in him and his seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed. This was truly a natural selection, or, if you please, a survival of the fittest. In this respect, at least, it seems to be in accord with modern scientific thought.

This does not mean that all the children of Abraham will be chosen; neither does it mean that none other will be chosen. The children of God are again on trial in this their second estate, and the natural selection is still in progress. There will be many of Abraham's seed cast out on account of their evil deeds and many who are not of that lineage, on account of their integrity and obedience to God's plan, will be grafted into the olive tree and become likewise sons and daughters of God and members of his household.

But before we shall become the sons and daughters of God in body and in spirit we shall have rendered obedience to his glorious Gospel which is indeed the power of God unto salvation. This reconciles the coming and development of the house of Israel, the children of Abraham, as God's chosen people. It also explains the motive for the scattering of that seed that all nations might thereby be blessed, for it was through that seed that the knowledge of the only true and living God was perpetuated in this world. It was through that seed that God has communicated to mankind; through them he has sent his apostles and prophets and they have been endowed with power from on high. They have been the messengers of God to teach the people the way of life. God's chosen people, then, are the children of Abraham through Isaac the son of promise and Jacob to whom the Lord gave the name of Israel; with them he established his covenant. Jacob became the father of twelve sons who became the heads of the twelve tribes of Israel.

We live in a day when the children of Israel are again to be gathered after their long dispersion. We have heard something of the return of the Jews, the tribe of Judah, to the land of their inheritance, even Palestine; but we are not of that tribe but of the tribe of Joseph, "that bright and glorious morning star," and particularly through Ephraim, his son, and are now being gathered on this the land of Joseph, given to him and his seed as an everlasting inheritance—a land choice above all other lands, the land of liberty, even the land of America. We are of that lineage and are now being gathered, having given heed to the call of the Gospel, hearing the voice of the true shepherd, even as we did in our former estate when we were counted among the great and noble ones; but now as then, many are called but few are chosen. The natural selection still goes on.

And now comes the great responsibility that rests upon that chosen few. The Savior said, "In my Father's house there are many mansions * * * I go to prepare a place for you * * * that where I am, there ye may be also." When the Lord makes up his jewels which shall constitute the membership of his household you may be sure it will not be limited to those who happen to live upon the earth during a Gospel dispensation. Nevertheless the same requirements will be made of all before they can become members of his household, his sons and daughters both in body and in spirit. This must be accomplished through obedience to his Gospel and by being born of the water and of the Spirit. Those who have died without a knowledge of the Gospel may, if they are honest in heart, be converted and brought to repentance when the Gospel is preached to them in the spirit world, but even as the question arose in the mind of Nicodemus with reference to the living, "How can a man be born when he is old," the question now might naturally arise: how can a man be born when he is dead? Provision is likewise made for this in the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Hence baptism and other ordinances for and in behalf of our dead kindred by their living representatives; "For," as we read in the scriptures, "for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." Therefore before that final judgment shall overtake the world, that dreadful day of the Lord, he has sent Elijah the prophet as predicted by Malachi, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children and the hearts of the children to the fathers lest he, the Lord, should smite the earth with a curse.

It would indeed be a calamity if we should fail to do the part assigned to us in the accomplishment of the divine purpose as children of Abraham and descendants of Joseph and Ephraim, namely, performing the work for and in behalf of our ancestors who died without a knowledge of the Gospel, the work which they are no longer able to do for themselves, namely, baptisms and other ordinances in order that they too may become the sons and daughters of God, both in spirit and in body; all this, of course, being conditioned on their acceptance and obedience on the other side. Here again it is seen that God is no respecter of persons but every child of God shall hear the glad tidings and those who believe on Jesus Christ shall be given power to become sons and daughters unto God, even as many as shall believe on him from father Adam until the latest generation of his posterity. May we be numbered among that grand assembly I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

The congregation arose and sang the hymn, "O say, what is truth?"

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Mexican Mission

I am very pleased, my brethren and sisters, to stand before you this afternoon and represent the Mexican mission, as well as the Council of the Seventies. You understand, of course, that in the last six months, since I first stood before this congregation, my entire time has been spent in the Mexican mission. Because of that I shall take the liberty of telling you just a little of what we have done in that mission and what we would like to do, and then I shall take my seat.

Judged from one point of view we may say that the Mexican mission is in good shape. From another point of view we must say that it is not in good shape. Our Mexican people depend entirely upon the service that they can render others for their food and clothing, and at times like this, when industry is at a standstill, they are usually the first ones to go out of employment. Because of that fact there is considerable suffering among the members of the Church of that race, and because of that fact also thousands and thousands of the people with whom we were wont to make contact in our missionary labors have found it expedient to return to Mexico.

I think close to a hundred thousand Mexicans, perhaps, from the United States, have been repatriated, as they say, within the last year. I passed one afternoon between Laredo and San Antonio more than twenty vehicles of various sorts and sizes, laden with Mexicans who were homeward-bound, all, almost without exception, poverty-stricken and forced to retreat because of the lack of employment. That has taken out of our territory just that many prospective candidates, just that many people with whom we would like to make contact, with whom we would like to leave Books of Mormon and tracts explaining the principles of the Gospel. They are gone now from our territory, leaving, however, a great many people.

Our headquarters are in Los Angeles, and it may surprise you, just as it did me, to learn that the city of Los Angeles is reputed to be the second largest Mexican city in the world. It is, or was just recently, second only to the city of Mexico in number of Mexican inhabitants. It is quite natural then that we should retain for the time-being at least, under existing laws of Mexico, our headquarters in Los Angeles.

The Mexican people whom we have been able to baptize, most of them are a faithful and good people. Those of you who know Mexicans know that they come to us, almost without exception, addicted to the use of tea, coffee, tobacco and liquor. Many of them are converted, really, who do not ask for baptism, because they feel as yet too weak to give up those vices; but almost without exception when they come into the Church they do leave off those habits, and they are to be congratulated for that fact. They come to our conferences in great numbers, and we never see them using tobacco. We see none of them, while they are with us at least, under the influence of liquor, and we are told that they leave off the use of tea and coffee. I think that you will all agree with me that any people of their habits, their past, and their history, who can do that, are a worthy people.

Our missionaries are enjoying health and strength at the present time. We have had one case of very serious sickness in the last six months. Very fortunately that young man is now well and strong, carrying on his missionary labors again. The Elders, however, many of them are struggling, just as the Elders of other mission fields, with a lack of funds. Some of them have had to leave their missions even before completing a full year of service, because of that lack. The boys who have come to us from Mexico, especially, of whom we had a few, have had extreme difficulty, because their parents had no market for their crops and their money had to be divided by three when it was sent into the United States. Some of them have remained in the field with utmost difficulty but with great loyalty. They have done excellent service for us, and we thank them for it. Others of them have had to return home for the same reason—their parents were unable longer to find the funds to keep them there.

We don't need a great deal of money in our mission to get by, but some money is necessary. We were pleased beyond expression, just a short time ago, to receive a communication which has been referred to here already, from a certain stake presidency in the Church, to the effect that before any missionary from their stake should be released we were to confer with them, because it was their desire that every missionary they had in the field should complete his full and customary term of service. It made me weep almost to think that I didn't have a single missionary from that stake, because I would like to have availed myself of that good offer.

The most outstanding thing that has happened to the mission, from a missionary standpoint, in the last six months, was the visit of Elder Melvin J. Ballard with me and my wife throughout the mission. We held a series of conferences which began at San Diego and terminated at Albuquerque, New Mexico. We covered the entire distance from San Diego and Los Angeles, to San Antonio, Texas, almost on the Gulf of Mexico.

When I visit my Elders I travel two thousand miles before I find the Elders in Brownsville and Corpus Christi. You see, it is a long, extenuated district, and there are only thirty-four men and women to serve that territory now. We need more help; we will accept it graciously; but we are going to strive with all our power and all our zeal to carry forward with what men and women we can get, and be thankful for them at this time.

The trip of which I spoke carried us to the City of Mexico. The last time I was in the City of Mexico I was there as a student, and I left there, as I remember, in the year 1905. It was my pleasure, on this trip, to meet some of the old Saints who were there at that time, still faithful and energetic in the performance of their duties. Some of them wept when they realized that they were looking upon the son of my father, who baptized them there in about 1881, and who are still faithful; and though not strong physically, they are strong in the faith.

We were really astounded and surprised at the success those people down there are having in carrying on their organizations without our help. Many of you perhaps know that before a man can function as a priest or minister in Mexico, under the present law, he must qualify as a native-born Mexican citizen, and we have few of such among our race. There are a few young men now in Mexico who bid fair to be prospects for that service, should they declare themselves; they are eligible to citizenship by birth; but as yet we have none of them functioning.

I think, however, it may be considered as an advantage to those people that the law was passed and the missionaries were taken out of Mexico, for the responsibility fell directly upon the shoulders of the native brethren and sisters, and they have carried it on well and faithfully. We dropped in on them as a surprise Sunday morning. We found the Sunday School in session, which was conducted very much like ours here at home, the same subjects being treated, and the classes divided, so far as their numbers would permit, in the same way. We attended a meeting as visitors only, for we were not allowed to do it in the capacity of our calling. We listened to eight or ten of them bear their testimonies and talk, and it was an excellent service. After its dismissal we were allowed to visit with them, to discuss some of their problems and advise them.

I can't say too much in commendation of the way those brethren, who have come right out of the jacales, as they are called there, the poorer houses of the peasants, are carrying on this work. They are faithful; they are true; they are intelligent. They represent the Indian blood of Mexico almost in purity. You will remember that all of the outstanding leaders of Mexico, almost without exception, owe their prominence and preeminence, I think, to their Indian blood. The greatest of all their statesmen, perhaps, Benito Juarez, was a pure-bred Indian. Porfirio Diaz had a large infusion of Indian blood. Their present president has also. He is almost pure Indian, I am told.

We are very expectant that great things some day may be realized from these Indian people. They are very typical. They are very much alike, and they are very, very interesting.

We had also the privilege of visiting the ruins of Mexico at San Juan, Teotihuacan, and the pyramid which is called the Snake pyramid. They are full of possibilities, from an archaeological standpoint. However, in using them to substantiate the Book of Mormon we have to be extremely careful, because while they apparently give evidence of certain things, archaeologists are not all agreed as to their value. They are, however, extremely interesting.

Not the least interesting thing to me on that trip to Mexico was my visit to the American Embassy. It is the first time in all my experience that I have ever been in the United States in Mexico. That really is the case, because by fiction of the law the American Embassy is considered American territory. We found the embassy occupied by one of our own people, a man whose faith is unquestioned, and whose friendship we found to be pure and unalloyed. We enjoyed for three days the hospitality of Brother and Sister J. Reuben Clark, and I want to tell you that I learned to love them while I was there, for they are indeed Latter-day Saints right through to the core. The work Ambassador Clark is doing in Mexico is a wonderful work and a wonderful advertisement for our people. They know who he is. They know what people he represents. They honor and respect him for his stand.

I don't know that I should take more time this afternoon. I have extremely enjoyed the remarks of my predecessors. I wish to bear out, by testimony, the things that they have spoken. I support and sustain and uphold the President of this Church and those who are in authority under him. It has been my privilege to know him and his first counselor, at least, all my life, and I can bear testimony that I have never received, in all those years, which are past fifty now, a single word of counsel that I could not pass on in public to this congregation. I know their motives are pure and unsullied, regardless of all the things that may be said. I bear you this testimony and I stand here to uphold it, and I do it in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of Seventy and President of the Temple Block Mission

I realize the responsibility this afternoon, for I not only represent the First Council of Seventy but the great mission here at the Temple Square as well. Presiding over this mission as I do, having been called by the First Presidency, I am glad to say something about the mission and also to bear my testimony of the truth of this Gospel of our Lord and Savior. Connected as I am with the University of Utah, I come in contact with hundreds of the boys and girls of this State and other States, and I feel that I appreciate something of the struggles they are making.

Here at the Temple Square thousands of people come to us yearly. They come here as travelers, as tourists; and the Bureau of Information which has been erected for them is the place where they obtain literature and information concerning the doctrines of the Church. A different type of people come to us now as compared with those who came a few years ago. People came with criticism in their hearts and a great deal of hate of what we believe. But today it is seldom that people do not appreciate something of the beauty of the grounds, the greatness of the buildings, and above all, the message which we missionaries give to them. There are fifteen missionaries connected with this mission and they are a choice lot of brethren and sisters and are doing a wonderful work here. We try to approach all people with the attitude of mind as expressed by the old prophet Malachi when he said: "Are we not all children of the same God? Is not God the Father of us all?"

Every day letters come to us expressing gratitude for the message that people have received, and I have in my pocket now a letter that I received only this morning from Dr. Teeling of London, a graduate of Oxford University and a representative of one of the departments of government in London. Dr. Teeling was our guest here for a few days and made a careful investigation of the history and the doctrines of the Church. He wrote us a very lovely letter thanking us for what he had obtained here and asking us to visit him in London. So we receive such letters every day. People are appreciative and we appreciate them.

Not long ago some prominent students from one of the great universities of America came through. These students were on their way to Southern Utah to study the geological formation of the canyons. They came here and spent the day and I had the pleasure of taking them through the grounds and buildings, and as they went back through our little museum—which by the way one of the attendants of the British Museum says is one of the smallest museums in the United States, but for quality one of the finest—they read those lovely mottoes we have in the museum. There are fourteen. I want to read them to you because they were carefully chosen:

"God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him."—Genesis.

"God ever works with those who work with him," is a saying of Aristotle.

"Reverence for God is the basis of immortality."—The Talmud.

"Seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom."—Doctrine and Covenants.

"With malice towards none, with charity for all."—Abraham Lincoln.

"Yea, truth and justice then will down return to men."—Milton.

"My strength is of the strength of ten because my heart is pure."—Tennyson.

"What a piece of work is man; in apprehension how like a god."—Shakespeare (Hamlet).

"The grace of God is all powerful."—Stevenson.

"The glory of God is intelligence."—Doctrine and Covenants.

"Reverence is the chief joy and power of life."—Ruskin.

"Faith is happiness, illumination and strength."—Balzac.

"A gentleman is a man of truth; lord of his own actions."—Emerson.

"What is true and just and honest, all of virtue shall endure."—Browning.

These students read these inscriptions, and letters came back from the university that they represented, asking that we send copies of them. In our conversation with one of the students, this remark was made, that "a people who profess a firm faith and belief in Jesus Christ and could accept the truths of the great philosophers of the world are certainly on the road to a greater faith and religion than any other people he has ever known. Said he: "There is a rare combination among you in your lives of heart and intelligence."

So we feel that we are getting some results at this mission. The high and low, the rich and poor come to us, but with us there are no high, low, rich or poor. All people are children of God and they come here and take away with them something of the spirit of the Mission, something of the spirit of Christ, the spirit of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Now in speaking and thinking of the youth, we have great faith in the youth of the land, and faith in the youth of this State. Personally, the boys and girls in our State university and all other institutions of the State and elsewhere are to me fine types of character. Naturally they need directing and at times they do hear things that shake their faith in God to the very foundation. They hear expressions they cannot understand. They sometimes come with all the honesty of heart and ask what to do under certain circumstances. I have them almost daily in my office. But those girls and boys are precious souls, they are lovely characters naturally, and if they can only be touched with divine truth they will be honest, they will be truthful; if we can only get them to realize above all things that while it is good to know the truth, it is far greater to be a man or woman of the truth. So I feel encouraged when I meet them. Jesus Christ came into the world as described in the second chapter of St. Luke, he died for you and me, and the night before he went to his crucifixion he announced to his disciples and to all the world that he is the way, the truth, and the light. "I am the way, and the truth, and the light," said Jesus, and through him we come to the final understanding of life, a joyful understanding, and as a result of it a happiness that we are all seeking. This is life, and life eternal to live the Gospel because of an understanding of Jesus Christ and him crucified. It was an old prophet, Zachariah, who said: "I will stir up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece." That conflict between Greece and Zion began far back in the centuries and it is going on today. We mean by that the conflict between the people who have faith—God-given faith in Almighty God—and the people who without the faith are seeking truth by science and philosophy. What the youth need today is to be stirred to a knowledge of God; to understand that the sublimest thing of all life is the simple faith in God the Father, in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost—the greatest truth for you and me and yet the simplest. This is fundamental, and if the youth can only get to see that after all, civilization has always been based on religion and always will be, and that the religion of God comes from one great fundamental source, namely, revelation—God is understood through knowledge, God is known through revelation; and those two great principles, if they are known and can be seen and understood, the faith of the youth then will grow and they will always know that after all, morality, the richness of life, the sublimity of all things, lie in the simple Gospel of Christ. It is beautiful this Gospel, for truth is beauty, and beauty is truth.

Now if we can come to know the youth, this buoyant youth, we will be better able to teach them, and their faults and failings will be eradicated one by one. They will stand supreme before God as his children, and be masters of selves and servants of each other. "I am the way, the life, and the truth," spoke Jesus. When we come to realize this greath truth, we will open our hearts more and more to the lesson that life has a meaning, and a meaning for good; that the moral world is governed by the purpose and a purpose of love; we will bend to God's will, and everything we experience will speak to us of a Father's heart. Let us look forward with hope and confidence and place our lives in the hands of God. My brethren and sisters:

"We know the arduous life, the eternal laws
To which the triumph of all good is given;
High sacrifice, and labour without pause
Even to the death."

May the Lord bless us all, I ask in Jesus name. Amen.

ELDER J. GOLDEN KIMBALL

Of the First Council of Seventy

I am very anxious as well as desirous that I be under the influence of the right spirit, the Spirit of the Lord. I have no ambition, no desire but to serve the Lord and to keep his commandments and to fulfil and complete my labors.

I have been very much impressed with one thought, and I have had quite a number, and that is: the number of speakers that have spoken during this Conference. If they have not reached pretty much all the people then they have not fulfilled what I believe. I believe that in this Church and among the children of men there are people—there may not be very many—who understand me. Perhaps I may be the only one among you who can reach my kind of people. Well, if that is true, why not let me be natural and talk to them? You who do not like my talk can go to sleep if you want to. As long as I can reach a soul when under the influence of the Holy Spirit and plant a seed of truth in his heart, it seems to me, with all the experience I have had, it would be a wonderful thing.

I remember that not many Conferences ago I was called to the stand just before the Conference adjourned. President Grant told me I had seven minutes—I took three—and I think it is the only time that President Grant ever shook hands with me after one of my talks. (Laughter) President Grant did not shake hands with me because of what I said; it was because I left him four minutes, and that is more than any of the other brethren had ever done.

I have had another idea quite a while, and I think I will express it.

You see that great big clock over there. I cannot see the hands, my eyes are not as good as they used to be. Well, with that great big clock before me and this microphone in front of me then tell a man to get the Holy Spirit! (Laughter)

Now, what I am trying to get at is this: it takes intelligent people to understand what I am trying to get at. I do not do your thinking for you, you have to do your own thinking. If I give you a little chaff to get you to take a little wheat, my trouble has always been you choose the chaff and lose the wheat.

I remember a long time ago when the Mutuals launched the Era. I was on a trip with Apostle Francis M. Lyman—we started in at Sevier and went to Panguitch and the surrounding settlements and to Kanab and St. George; and when we got to St. George, Brother David H. Cannon, the President of the Stake, and Brother Edward Snow, superintendent of the Mutuals, with their buggies transferred us to Panacca. The people had not seen an Apostle for twenty years, and it was Sunday, a fast day. Meetings were begun in the morning and they kept them up all day, and we were fasting. I was pretty nearly dead at four o'clock. After four o'clock Brother Lyman said, "Now, Brother Kimball, get up and tell them about the Era." He had done a good deal of talking himself about the Era. During that trip I think we got four hundred subscribers—$800.00. I wrote out all receipts. It was in September. Brother Lyman at this meeting told me to get up, so I did, and I said: "All you men that will take the Era if we will let you go home, raise your right hand." There was not a single man who did not raise his hand and subscribed and paid $2.00 cash for the Era. (Laughter) Brother Lyman said: "That is the brightest thing you ever did." I do not claim that was inspiration; it was good psychology. Really they paid $2.00 to get out.

I am trying to say this to you because we never know, if we listen to the whisperings of the Holy Spirit, just what it will do for us.

I am going to tell you a story that I have never told before. When I was president of the Southern States mission, after a year's time I concluded that I would try to hold a conference in a city. Up to that time we had always kept out of cities. So I made my arrangements with the president of the conference to hold such a meeting and to secure some place where we could hold it. We had no money. The only place they could secure was the court house. I told the Elders: "I will do the preaching, and if they kill me you need not bother any further." The people were very prejudiced. When the time came I met these Elders, a fine body of men, wonderful, courageous men, men of faith—they had to be in the South. We went to the court house—all those present were men; there wasn't a woman among them, and we all knew what that meant. When there are no women there is a great deal of danger. It is dangerous enough when they are present. At any rate I made up my mind to deliver my message as fervently and humbly as ever a president of a mission preached. I intended to do all the talking. I went there determined to preach the Gospel. I had my Bible, and I am well acquainted with my Bible. I cannot find anything in anybody else's Bible. I have owned this Bible for forty years and it is well marked and every subject traced in my own penmanship. I would not take money for this Bible. I went there believing that the Spirit of God was on me as the president of the mission. I was humble as a child. It was the only time in my life that I have ever been far enough away that I could do as I pleased. Ever since that time I have been close in.

I got up to preach the Gospel, faith and repentance, etc. All at once something came over me and I opened my mouth and said to that body of men: (The building was crowded; among them were some of the leading men) "Gentlemen, you have not come here to listen to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I know what you have come for. You have come to find out about the Mountain Meadows Massacre and polygamy, and God being my helper I will tell you the truth." And I did. I talked to them for one hour. When the meeting was out you could hear a pin drop. There was no comment; there was no noise or confusion, and we went to the hotel. We had arranged for lodgings at a cheap hotel. After a short time a brass band played. Elder Willard Bean was the president of the conference. I sent him out to find what it all meant. I thought it meant trouble. So he inquired and they told him: "We are serenading that big long fellow." That is the only brass band I have ever had dispense music after one of my talks. What I want to ask you good people is this: Was I moved upon by the right spirit? The next day when we went to the woods to hold our priesthood meeting, which we always held in the woods—we had no other place—I said to those Elders: "Don't one of you dare preach that sermon; it will cost you your life." And I have never preached it since.

What I am beating around in the brush to put over is this: Does the Lord God direct his servants? He certainly does. If he doesn't we are a failure and we are no better than others. We do not know just what to say. I don't. I don't know just how to say it, but the Lord being my helper as long as I live I am going to try to be natural and I am going to try to have my mind open with the hope that God will give me his Holy Spirit when I open my mouth and use the talent which the Lord has given me.

Now, brethren and sisters, I know what that feeling is. I have not had it very often, but I know that there is such a thing as "the still small voice." I have heard it.

My time is up. But if you people do not believe that I sustain the Authorities of this Church and uphold God's work, I do. I don't know how I could prove it to you any better than I have in my own way. God bless you. Amen.

An anthem, "Holy Redeemer," was sung by the Relief Society Chorus.

Elder Samuel F. Smith, President of the Snowflake Stake pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock a. m., Sunday, April 10.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Sunday morning, April 10th, at 10 o'clock President Heber J. Grant presiding.

All the seats and every available space in the large auditorium and galleries were occupied long before the time arrived to commence the meeting. Thousands of people who could not find accommodation in the Tabernacle congregated in the Assembly Hall directly south of the Tabernacle and on the Tabernacle grounds, where they listened to the services as they were broadcast by radio.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for this session, and joined with the congregation in singing the opening hymn, "Praise to the man who communed with Jehovah."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Arthur W. Horsley, President of the Carbon Stake.

The Choir sang the anthem, "Grant us peace, O Lord."

PRESIDENT ANTHONY W. IVINS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

"And Sarah was an hundred and seven and twenty years old. These were the years of the life of Sarah.

"And Sarah died in Kirjatharba; the same is Hebron, in the land of Canaan; and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah and to weep for her.

"And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying,

"I am a stranger and a sojourner with you; give me a possession of a burying place with you, that I may bury my dead. * * *

"And Abraham stood up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth, * * *

"Saying, * * * hear me, and entreat for me to Ephron, the son of Zohar,

"That he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field. * * *

"I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

"And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

"My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead. * * *

"* * * and Abraham weighed to Ephron the silver, which he had named * * * current money with the merchant. * * *

"And * * * Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah, before Mamre." (Genesis Chapter 23).

Sarah died B. C. 1872, 3,800 years ago. Fifteen years after the death of his wife, Abraham was carried by his sons Isaac and Ishmael and buried by her side, in the cave of Machpelah. Later the remains of Isaac and Rebecca were interred there; and after the death of Jacob, the grandson of Abraham, who passed away in Egypt, his body was embalmed and carried by his son Joseph up to Hebron, in the land of Canaan, and interred in the same spot that contained the remains of his father and grandparents.

FIRST REFERENCE TO USE OF MONEY

I have quoted this scripture, not alone because of the fact that it refers to Abraham, the founder of the Israelitish race and our ancestor, but because it is the earliest date, so far as I am aware, at which money is referred to as a medium of exchange and legal tender for debt among men.

This is a General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, an occasion when the members of the Church assemble together to be taught the way of the Lord, that they may walk in his paths.

TEMPORAL THINGS

It is a time when the elders of the Church, who are selected to address the assembled congregation are expected to treat subjects which have to do with the spiritual things of the kingdom, rather than with temporalities.

Notwithstanding this fact, and at the risk of being considered somewhat out of place, with your faith to assist me, I am prompted because of the occurrences of the past several weeks to confine my remarks to the temporal interests of my brethren and sisters of the Church, and the people of the state at large, because it is a subject that affects all of us, men and women, members of the Church, and those who are not affiliated with it.

THE ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT OF MAN'S OCCUPATIONS

To trace the development of man from the beginning, and the origin of the various occupations and professions which he now follows in our intricate and complex life, would take us over a long and winding trail.

I suppose that in the primitive and far distant past, man first became a husbandman. His first indispensable necessity was food, for the sustenance of his body, and this he learned could be provided by cultivation of the soil. He learned that as the seasons came and went there were periods of seed time and harvest; that in order to reap he must sow, and that his crop must be gathered and garnered to provide for future necessities. Thus he became a farmer.

Food to sustain his body was not his only requirement, he must have clothing with which to cover it. This could be provided from the wool and hides of animals, and so he became a tender of flocks and herds, as well as a tiller of the soil.

As time passed he discovered that he had other necessities. He was subject to sickness and accident; a limb might be broken, a skull fractured, or because of improper diet his stomach might become deranged.

In the beginning, with the assistance of his wife and neighbors, he attended to these human afflictions as best he could; then it occurred to one of these neighbors that the application of simple remedies would bring relief to a disordered stomach, that by binding a broken limb with splints it would more quickly heal and become normal, that by removing the fragments from a broken skull and taking the pressure from the brain, the patient was relieved.

Men began to study the anatomy of the human body and provide means for its proper care. People were willing to pay for the service rendered, and thus the profession of medicine and surgery, which today does so much to prolong human life and relieve suffering, became one of the professions of man.

PROFESSIONS ARISE

As society developed laws became necessary for its government and protection. Men violated these laws and were punished under them. One day a man said to his neighbor, who had been adjudged guilty of an offense: You were not guilty of a violation of the law, the statute under which you were punished was not properly interpreted. If you are in trouble again come to me, and for a consideration I will defend and free you.

Thus a new profession was added to the occupations of man, which has developed until men have become so profound in their knowledge and interpretations of modern law and its proper application, that the judge himself, when criminals are arraigned before him, can scarcely determine whether they are innocent or guilty.

MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE CREATED

In the beginning, trade was carried on by exchange of commodities, rather than by purchase and sale, with a recognized medium of exchange. In fact, in my time I have been in countries where this was almost the universal custom.

As civilization developed it became apparent that for the convenience of commerce and trade some medium of exchange, with a fixed and recognized ratio of value, must be created; and at a very early date gold and silver were used in the beginning counted by weight, as dust or in bars, as shown in the scripture which I have quoted, when Abraham weighed to Ephron, the son of Zohar, 400 shekels of silver, about $250.00, 3,800 years ago. At a later date minted coins, of specific weight, came into use.

BANKING SYSTEM DEVELOPED

As people, by industry and economy accumulated more than was required for their personal necessities, and merchants began to penetrate new countries with their caravans, and ships to sail the seas, it was common practice for those who had a surplus of money to lend it to those engaged in trade, in order that commerce might be carried on between different peoples and nations.

The borrower was required to pay a reasonable interest on the money obtained, but excessive usury was strictly forbidden.

It was from this simple beginning that our present system of banking has developed, until it has become the most important business occupation of the world.

This may appear to be an extravagant statement, but it is nevertheless true.

The business of the banker brings him in closer contact with every field of human endeavor than that of any other occupation.

He is the custodian of the hard-earned money of the husbandman, the widow, the fatherless, the doctor, lawyer, merchant, manufacturer, and the man who has no occupation at all, of whom I sometimes think we have too many, for it was written long ago that the idler shall not eat the bread nor wear the apparel of the laborer.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE BANKER

As custodian of the savings of the depositor, the banker assumes the responsibility of investing the funds entrusted to him in a manner that will bring to the depositor a reasonable return in interest upon his savings, and at the same time compensate the banker for the responsibility he assumes as the agent of the depositor, which is very great.

Banking is a partnership between the stockholder, who provides the capital upon which the bank is founded and the reserves which guarantee the security of its deposits, and the depositors who, for their own protection, become obligated to support the bank in which their money is placed.

The bank becomes a debtor to its depositors, and at the same time the creditor of the world. It is through banks that all nations maintain their financial standing and credit, one with the other. Through bank credits the railroads which thread the world and make possible the quick transportation of people and things from place to place, by which our surplus products are transported to profitable markets, and the products of other people which we require brought to us, are made possible.

It is by means of bank credits that our ships sail the seas, that the forces which protect us from the invasion of foes from without and enemies within, are maintained.

As stated, the occupation of the banker brings him in closer contact with every field of human endeavor than that of any other occupation. Thus it will be seen that the success of the banker depends upon the stability of all other occupations and business activities, consequently it becomes his duty to strive for the stabilization of all.

He must be constantly alert, constantly in touch with all of these various interests to which reference has been made, in order that he may know just when to extend credit, when to withhold it; having always in mind that his first duty is to the people who have entrusted their money to his care; never forgetting that while it is his duty to help those who need assistance, his business is not so much one of sentiment as of duty.

The greatest of all teachers said: "What mattereth it if a man gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Permit me to paraphrase this scripture by saying: What mattereth it if a man do a large banking business and assist many needy individuals and enterprises, if in doing so he wreck his own credit, lose the money of his depositors and stockholders, and bring discredit to the officers of the bank and to the banking business in general?

MAN ONLY UNIT

Whatever the occupation of man may be he acts only as a small unit, in a sphere which at first thought may appear to be independent, but which, after all, is merely a cog in the wheel of human progress and development, one of the many pillars which support the tremendous structure that our modern life has builded; and the progress and development of this intricate system requires that each of these pillars be kept in place, lest the structure fall of its own weight and thus bring disaster and chaos to all.

We cannot say to the husbandman, we have no need of you. His occupation is still the one indispensable vocation of man. We cannot say to the manufacturer, we can dispense with your service. He takes the raw material which exists and converts it into the things which add to our comfort and convenience. The merchant is indispensable to our modern system of business. He provides for us the things which we need, brings them to us from afar to add to our happiness. The doctor and lawyer are indispensable to our modern life.

The miner takes from the earth the treasure which lies hidden there, and brings into circulation new money which before was not available. His contribution to the commerce of the world cannot be overestimated. To all of these occupations the banker is a necessary, in fact indispensable, adjunct.

HOW THE DEPRESSION MAY BE OVERCOME

Every intelligent person who is familiar with current events, knows that a cloud of financial depression, the like of which has never before been known, hovers over the world, so dark and ominous that the sunshine of hope can scarcely penetrate it.

Like the great World War, it has found its way into the most remote corners of the world.

It can be met and overcome by the united effort of all of the people who are affected by it. A beneficent and willing government cannot accomplish the task without the loyal support of its citizens. The citizens cannot do it without the support of the government.

Banks cannot do it without the cooperation of the depositors. Depositors cannot do it without the cooperation of the banks. United together the task can be accomplished.

If the government, the states, the counties and municipalities will exercise rigid economy in the expenditure of public funds; if citizens will loyally support and patronize the industries and business of the nation, state and community in which they reside; if bankers will carefully and wisely protect the money of depositors; if depositors will loyally cooperate with the banks to which the care of their money is entrusted; if families and individuals will live within their income and avoid debt, the clouds of adversity will roll away, and the sun of prosperity and peace will shine again upon a happy and prosperous people.

CHAOS THREATENS

If we are to continue the lavish, unnecessary expenditure of money, and dissipated habits, which have characterized the past ten years, in both public and private life, chaos awaits us.

A few days ago a person asked me this question: "What of 'tomorrow?'"

I answered: "You may better ask me: What of yesterday? I have had the experience of many yesterdays, while tomorrow is a sealed book to me." Then I remembered that I had seen as many tomorrows as anyone else. Tomorrow is a sealed book to all of us, except as we are able to penetrate it by the eye of faith. And I discover, too, that while I have endeavored to profit by the experiences which the past teaches, and cheerfully perform the tasks which the present brings, I have lived largely in the future.

Tomorrow has always been full of promise to me, and the future has beckoned me on with the assurance that as the days, and months, and years, come and go, they will bring to me greater happiness, and added experience which I may apply to my own affairs and in service to others—acting today according to the light and wisdom which I possess and believing that each tomorrow has something better in store for me, and when this mortal life is ended and I stand upon the threshold of another world, I shall still be looking forward toward the better life to which I aspire.

PRAYS FOR WISDOM

I pray God our Heavenly Father that he will give wisdom to those who direct the affairs of our government, and particularly to you, my brethren and sisters, and those who preside over you in the Church, and to all others who desire and seek his blessings and serve him, that the clouds of adversity may roll away, and the sunshine of prosperity and peace bring happiness to the people of this troubled world.

God bless you, my brethren and sisters, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

ELDER RUDGER CLAWSON

President of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, I would that I had the gift of eloquence with which to give expression to the thoughts in my heart. But since I have no such gift I must be contented to speak as best I can, with the hope that if I speak the truth it will be sanctified for the good of those who are present and of those who are listening in.

TESTIMONIES THRILL

I have been deeply impressed and thrilled with the opening address of President Grant and with the sermons of the brethren which followed, and I have also been very deeply impressed with the singing of the choir and with the solos that have been given at this Conference, which have been inspiring.

In listening to the spirited remarks and fervent testimonies of the mission presidents on Friday, I was thrilled and led to reflect with respect to the nature of their ministry and the responsibility resting upon them, which requires that they should carry the Gospel message to the nations of the earth, and particularly to this nation in which there are thirteen grand divisions, including the Temple Block mission, numbering in population considerably over one hundred million people. This responsibility requires that they should lift up their voices, calling the people of this nation and others to repentance, to reformation, and asking them to give heed to the teachings of the Gospel.

They are to call upon the people to repent, which if they do will lead to the acceptance of the Gospel doctrines, even those of baptism and the laying on of hands. But the people must remember that repentance precedes baptism, and faith, the great foundation principle of the Gospel structure, precedes repentance. These thoughts and reflections passed through my mind.

PROGRESS REPORTED

On Wednesday last, the Council of the Twelve and the First Council of Seventy met with the mission presidents, who reported their labors in some detail, which showed that progress is being made in Gospel conversations, conversions and baptisms. They reported that the tithing in the branches of the mission fields for last year kept up very well indeed.

It was shown that the Gospel message is being declared upon the streets of the various cities of the country, in halls and chapels, in the newspapers, and last, but not least, by radio. And thus the voice of warning is going out to the world. For remember that in speaking of these particular mission presidents I did not mention the presidents of other missions, numbering about fifteen in all.

THE CHARACTER OF GOD'S WORK

In respect to this very important matter, my mind rests upon a saying in the Pearl of Great Price, Book of Moses, which saying was mentioned by Elder Stephen L. Richards in his address yesterday, and also Rulon S. Wells; and it is this: "This is my work and my glory," said the Lord to Moses, "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man."

Truly, this is a wonderful saying. In just a single sentence we learn the character of the special work in which God is engaged, and are justified in believing that he could not be engaged in a greater work, and possibly there is no greater work. One reason is that man, who is the child of God, has within him the attributes of Deity, and he may become in time like unto God, his Father, in this work of salvation. The accomplishment of such an undertaking by our Heavenly Father involves the important work of salvation. You will remember the saying of Paul the Apostle, that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation unto all who will receive and obey it.

REVELATION EXPLAINS

The word of the Lord given to Joseph Smith by revelation June, 1829, as follows, is pertinent to this important matter:

"If thou wilt do good, yea, and hold out faithful to the end, thou shalt be saved in the kingdom of God, which is the greatest of all the gifts of God; for there is no greater gift than the gift of salvation." (Doc. and Cov. 6:13).

Also the word of the Lord given to Joseph Smith by revelation in June, 1829, for the benefit of John Whitmer, indirectly emphasizes the value of human souls and calls attention to the importance of seeking their salvation. The wording of said revelation in part is as follows:

"Hearken, my servant John, and listen to the words of Jesus Christ, your Lord and your Redeemer.

"For behold, I speak unto you with sharpness and with power, for mine arm is over all the earth.

"And I will tell you that which no man knoweth save me and thee alone—

"For many times you have desired of me to know that which would be of the most worth unto you.

"Behold, blessed are you for this thing, and for speaking my words which I have given you according to my commandments.

"And now, behold, I say unto you, that the thing which will be of the most worth unto you will be to declare repentance unto this people, that you may bring souls unto me, that you may rest with them in the kingdom of my Father." (Doc. and Cov., Section 15).

MORE LIGHT GIVEN

In a further revelation from the Lord given to Joseph Smith, the Prophet, Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer, in the same month, viz., June, 1829, greater light is thrown upon this interesting and most vital subject. Listen to these solemn, impressive words:

"Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God;

"For, behold, the Lord your Redeemer suffered death in the flesh; wherefore he suffered the pain of all men, that all men might repent and come unto him.

"And he hath risen again from the dead, that he might bring all men unto him, on conditions of repentance.

"And how great is his joy in the soul that repenteth!

"Wherefore, you are called to cry repentance unto this people.

"And if it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring, save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father!

"And now, if your joy will be great with one soul that you have brought unto me into the kingdom of my Father, how great will be your joy if you should bring many souls unto me!

"Behold, you have my gospel before you, and my rock, and my salvation. "Ask the Father in my name, in faith believing that you shall receive, and you shall have the Holy Ghost, which manifesteth all things which are expedient unto the children of men. "And if you have not faith, hope, and charity, you can do nothing." (Doc. and Cov., Section 18:10-19).

DUTY TO PROCLAIM GOSPEL

Permit me to call your attention to the fact that the prophets of old, and Jesus and his disciples during their ministry, were constantly engaged in preaching to the world, thus seeking the salvation of the people. They had received a dispensation from God and seemed to feel the weight of it. They had little of worldly goods but were rich in the knowledge of God and preached the Gospel in power.

So it is in this age of the world. The Latter-day Saints received a dispensation of the Gospel from the Lord—even the dispensation of the fulness of times. Divine authority was sent down from heaven and sealed upon the head of Joseph Smith, by which he organized the Church of Christ among men.

Having received from on high, without money and without price, the Gospel with its saving power, Joseph Smith and his people were in duty bound to give the Gospel to the world freely without money and without price, that all might have equal opportunity of securing the blessing of salvation, and that it might be said of God that he is no respecter of persons and that the righteous in every nation are acceptable unto him.

RESPONSIBILITIES EXPLAINED

The nature of the responsibility that goes with a Gospel dispensation is set forth forcibly in a revelation given to Joseph Smith the Prophet, in September, 1832, a portion of which reads as follows:

"Behold, I send you out to reprove the world of all their unrighteous deeds, and to teach them of a judgment which is to come.

"And whoso receiveth you, there I will be also, for I will go before your face. I will be on your right hand and on your left, and my Spirit shall be in your hearts, and mine angels round about you, to bear you up.

"Whoso receiveth you receiveth me; and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money.

"And he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in nowise lose his reward.

"And he that doeth not these things is not my disciple; by this you may know my disciples.

"He that receiveth you not, go away from him alone by yourselves, and cleanse your feet even with water, pure water, whether in heat or in cold, and bear testimony of it unto your Father which is in heaven, and return not again unto that man.

"And in whatsoever village or city ye enter, do likewise.

"Nevertheless, search diligently and spare not; and wo unto that house, or that village or city that rejecteth you, or your words, or your testimony concerning me.
